'January 22. there being a Petition presented by Sir William Scot of Harden, desiring some Enlargement in his Prison in Edinburgh, where he continues for his Fine imposed on him by the Council; upon Debates and Consideration had of that Affair, it was proposed that the State of the Affair might be remitted to the King's Majesty for his Ap- probation, and to know his further Pleasure as to their Procedure for the future, in the Case of Husbands being made liable for their Wives withdrawing from publick Worship: Resolved

Resolved, that a Letter be sent with Instructions, by the Earl of Perth, and that the Lords of the Clergy, such Members as are Lawiers, with Duke Hamilton, meet to Morrow, and draw them. We have seen this was done, and sent up, and what Answer was returned. However, they resolved to abate nothing to Sir William of the 1500 Pounds Sterling they had modified his Fine to.

The same Day, anent a Petition presented by James Scot of Brissol, shewing, That Sir William Scot of Harden being decerned by the Laird of Meldrum, in the Sum of Forty six thousand Pounds Scots, as the Fines of Conventicles, and withdrawing from Ordinances, he obtained from the Council a Suspension, wherein the Petitioner became Caution for him, which being called before the Council, they turned the Decreet to a Libel, in respect that Sir William Scot's Lady hath not deponed as to her withdrawing. And the Council having thereafter taken her Oath, they found the Letters orderly proceeded in, ay and while Sir William Scot made Payment of Fifteen hundred Pounds Sterling; and therefore humbly supplicating the Council to compassionate the Petitioner's Family, and sist Execution. The Council sists Execution till the First of April.

Sir William was long in Prison, and 'tis but a few more Hints I can give of him. May 5. he is sent to the Tolbooth of Jedburgh. Upon his Petition, July 24. he is brought back again to Edinburgh Prison. August 19. the Council having given some Hope of Sir William Scot's Liberation, Sir Patrick Scot of Ancrum gives Caution to present Sir William Tuesday next, under the Penalty of Fifteen hundred Pounds Sterling; and August 26. Sir Patrick and Sir William Scot being called, and not compearing, the Bond is declared forfeited, and Letters of Horning direct for Fifteen hundred Pounds Sterling.

The next Gentleman I meet with before the Council, is Mr. Thomas Hamilton of Raith. His Process last Year was very ill grounded and iniquous, and the Council are so sensible of this, that they interpose for a Remission. February 21. the Council write the following Letter, and send his Petition inclosed to the Secretary.

Mr. Thomas Hamilton of Raith.

Right Honourable,

THE inclosed Petition from Mr. Thomas Hamilton, forfeited by the Sentence of the Justice-court, for his Accession to the late Rebellion, being addressed to his Majesty's Privy Council, they, in Consideration of several favourable Circumstances in his Case, and of his Loyalty, have thought fit to recommend him to his Majesty, for a Pardon as to his Life only, and that to be expedie the several Offices gratis, because of his great Poverty.

Aberdeen Cancel.

The humble Petition of Mr. Thomas Hamilton Prisoner, Second lawful Son to Mr. John Hamilton of Raith, Advocate.

Sheweth,

THAT whereas your Petitioner, by Sentence of the Lords of his Majesty's Justiciary, in Justice-air holden at Glasgow June last, was forfeited in Life and Fortune, for his being alledged present at the Rebellion 1679. and for being Art and Part thereof, and for Reset and Converse with those Rebels: And true it is, that the Petitioner's Mother's Dwelling-place and Residence, when he was attending her in her old Age, is nearly sited unto Boothwell-bridge; and that the said Rebels did ligger and camp in and about the said House, during the Time they continued in Arms; and that your Petitioner was never seen actually in Arms, as is evident by the Probation adduced against him, and that his being present with them, harbouring and resetting them, did rather proceed out of the Vicinity of his Mother's Residence to their Camp and Ligger, and out of youthful Unexperience, Ignorance, Mistake, and Error, than out of any Disloyalty, Disaffection, or evil Principles towards his Majesty's Person and Government, which he ever accounted his Duty to maintain; and for his saying he was forced, and his owning the King in some of the Rebels hearing, he was in Hazard of being murdered by some of them, as was certified by the Minister of the Parish to his Majesty's Advocate: And that your Petitioner is sensible of, and most sorry for his said Guilt, Ignorance, or Error, and Mistake; and as heretofore he never carried Arms against his Majesty or his Authority, so he is willing to engage for the future, that he shall never take up or bear Arms against his Majesty, or his Heirs, or lawful Successors; as also it is known, that the constant Duty, Sufferings, Loyalty, and Affection of the said umquhile John Hamilton, Advocate, Father to your Petitioner, in the late rebellious Times, towards his Majesty, and his dearest Father of blessed Memory, and

‘ toward their Government and Service, were very great : May it therefore please your Lordships, to take your Petitioner’s Case to your Consideration, and recommend him to his sacred Majesty, for a Remission as to his Life, and your Lordships Petitioner shall ever pray, &c.’

Tho. Hamilton.

This good Man got a Remission, but when his Father had been a Sufferer for the King and his Father, and himself evidently loyal, as the Council themselves bear witness, and was not in Arms, but only with the West Country Army when encamped about his Mother’s House, it was a new Instance of the unparalleled Severity of this Period, that his Estate and Moveables were forfeited.

Gentlemen in
fined.

March 13. The Case of some Gentlemen of Renfrew Shire, who had been most iniquously fined for Irregularities, and not keeping their Parish-church, by the Sheriff-depute there, came to be considered by the Council, when enquiring into the Fines, as we heard upon the former Session, and I shall give a Hint at their Process, that the Iniquity of this Period may further appear.

James Pollock of Balgray.

James Pollock of Balgray, a religious and sensible Gentleman in the Parish of Merns, had a Decreet palled against him for a prodigious Sum. When he came before the Council, nothing was found proven against him, except one Conventicle, which he confessed. The Council reduce the Decreet, and fine him in Fifty eight Pounds Scots for that one Conventicle, at which he had been many Years ago. A neighbouring Gentleman in the same Parish, James Hamilton of Langtoun, was in the same Circumstances, and was, for one Conventicle, fined likewise in the fourth Part of his yearly valued Rent. We shall afterwards meet with Balgray this Year.

James Hamilton
of Langtoun.

Matthew Stuart and John Pollock of Lawside.

At the same Diet, two other Heritors in the same Parish are before them, Matthew Stuart Portioner of Newtoun, a knowing and religious Gentleman, and John Pollock of Lawside, not far from him in the same Place. I am in case to give some fuller Account of this iniquitous Process, from the original Suspension of their Charge before me. Both of them are charged to pay to Hugh Wauace his Majesty’s Cath-keeper, the just fourth Part of their yearly valued Rent, and for each Time of One hundred and fifty six Times, they are alledged to have been present at House and Field-conventicles, for the Space of three Years preceeding the Date of the Letters of Horning, and the eighth Part of their said yearly Rent, for their alledged withdrawing from their Parish-kirk the former Number of Times, during the said Space, and the fourth Part of their yearly valued Rent, for their having a Child irregularly baptized every one of these three Years, ilk of them toties quoties; and that conform to a Decreet pronounced against them by Andrew Atchison sometime Sheriff-depute of Renfrew, in which he decerns the yearly Rent of the said Matthew Stuart to be One hundred and seven Pounds Scots, and that of John Pollock to be Sixty three Pounds Scots.

This was the Case of those two Gentlemen, and the ordinary Method now taken with all Heritors of the Presbyterian Persuasion : And from this we may easily guess the terrible Nature of the Fines now imposed, and observe how they are accumulated, and the very Letter of the present Law is stretched, and Fines counted up above the real Value of their Estates for mere Nonconformity during three Years. Those accumulate Sums, indeed ordinarily ended in Composition ; but then such DECREETS were a terrible Handle for exorbitant Oppression in those Compositions.

However in this Case the Council were so just, as to grant Letters of Suspension to this Charge, upon Reasons I shall insert here as further Documents of the Iniquity of this Period. The Council find the said Decreet was pronounced for null Defence and Noncompearance without any lawful Citation, as appears from the Decreet it self, where the Council finds the Citation only to have been at the Parish-church of the Merns, whereas it ought to have been at their Dwelling-house, or the Market-cross of the Head-burgh of the Shire. Again the said Decreet was pronounced partially, unjustly, and plainly out of Pique at the Laird of Blackball Superior to those Lands ; that Gentleman being one of the five commissioned by the Council, by whose Advice the Sheriff-depute was ordered to proceed. And because Blackball would not give Way to the Sheriff’s Extravagancy, and allow him to exact upon People at his Pleasure, the Sheriff pickt out those two Vassals of his from among some Hundreds of Fears through the Shire, in the very same Circumstances with them, but Vassals to other Gentlemen and Noblemen, and denounced them ; yea, those Two were never at any Field conventicles since the Indemnity, nor had they any Children born to them in the Space libelled ; and when there was a Minister in the Church of Merns, they kept the Church in Terms of Law.

Thus we see Justice done them, but every one had not so good Assistance to get the iniquitous DECREETS of inferior Courts rescinded, as those two Gentlemen had, tho’ under the same Oppression. I formerly notice that this was a general Case. Heritors upon their Noncompearance (and all Methods were taken when the Sheriffs had a mind to decern them, to prevent their Compearing) were found guilty in all Points of their Libel, and the Fine they were decerned in was summed up from the whole.

‘Lastly. It might have been noticed, that the Sheriff had most extravagantly reckoned their valued Rent, Mr. Stuart's Rent in that Place, being but Forty Pounds, and John Pollock's only Twenty five Pounds.’ This Instance may give us a View of the Methods now commonly used. Upon all these Reasons the Council suspend the Charge, and yet obliged the two Heritors to give Bond and Caution for the whole Sum charged, till the Business was discussed, altho’ the Matter was so obviously illegal. And when the Decreet was discussed, I am informed the Complainers were liberate, and the Decreet found iniquous.

April 11. I find a long Decreet in the Council Books, against some of the Magistrates of Air, Provost Brisbane and others, with their counter Complaints. It consists of a great many Sheets of Paper. I shall give a short Abstract of it, as containing some Hints, relative to this Time, I have not met with elsewhere.

Decreet against Magistrates of Air, Provost

‘Anent our Sovereign Lord’s Letters, at the Instance of Sir George Mackenzie, &c. his Majesty’s Advocate, and Robert Hunter late Bailie in Air Informer, it is of Verity, that William Brisbane late Provost of Air, in the Year 1682. to the Contempt of his Majesty, and the Encouragement of the fanatical Interest in the Town of Air, where the Growth of Fanaticism is much to be feared, did officiate as Gild-brother of the said Burgh, and the Year thereafter as Dean of Gild, with a Company of other Fanaticks as Gild-brethren, without taking the Test; and that in the Year 1680. he did go to Mauchlin, where there was a pretended Presbytery of irregular and indulged Ministers, and procured Three or four unlicensed Ministers, to preach, pray and catechize in the Town of Air, who accordingly came; which, if it had not been narrowly looked unto, had been the utter Ruin of the Church in that Place, the People being more inclined to follow Presbyterian Ministers, than to wait upon the Ordinances of orthodox Ministers.

‘And the said William always encouraging the Presbyterian Party, being a present Magistrate named by his Majesty’s Privy Council, in August or September, 1682. did invite and persuade Mr. James Lawrie a Presbyterian deposed Minister, and Mr. Matthew Baird an unlicensed fanatical Preacher, to wait on, preach, and pray to a Malefactor condemned in the Burgh of Air, wherethrough the Malefactor on the Scaffold did express her self in a most disrespectful Manner of the orthodox Ministers.

‘And the said William did fine exorbitantly several of his Majesty’s Subjects, who had committed Irregularities, out of Curiosity, and exemed many notoriously guilty, and committed many Irregularities in the Election of the Magistrates of the said Burgh, in a violent and seditious Way, 1682. and made an Election, without any Regard to the Orders of his Majesty’s Privy Council, and chose several English Fanaticks, who had served under the Usurper; and he suffered Thomas and John Bowies, declared fugitive for the horrid Crime of Rebellion, to live in the said Burgh, and hath overthrown the Set of the Burgh.

An additional Libel was likewise produced by the said Robert Hunter, ‘bearing, The said William Brisbane Provost of the said Burgh, and Robert Dalrymple Bailie, have suffered several disorderly Persons to go unpunished, tho’ their Children were six or eight Months unbaptized; that 1680. he perswaded Mr. James Rowat a fanatical and Field-preacher, to preach in the Church of the said Burgh, then plenished with orthodox Ministers; and they suffered the Inhabitants to withdraw from the Church.

A counter Libel is given in by Provost Brisbane against Robert Hunter, ‘that he and William Cunningham late Provost did, 1680. dispense with several of the Members of the Town-council their not taking the Declaration, as had been their Practice for some Years; and at Michaelmas 1680. did lay it aside, and neither took it themselves, nor offered it to the Council; that the said William did give Billets to the Rebels before Bothwell, signed with his own Hand, and called one Mr. James Brown, a Conventicle Preacher, who was in the Rebellion, and had been declared Fugitive, to preach in the Kirk of Air; and that he did entertain one James Paterson a Rebel, now declared Fugitive, after he had let him out of Prison; that at Michaelmas 1681. he himself refused the Test, and prevailed with the Council to desert the Magistracy, and refuse it. And the Privy Council by their Act, December 1681. having named Magistrates, the said William made it his Work to weaken their Hands, and raise Faction and Division.

‘And when the Council, by their Act January 1683. appointed the Trades in Air to take the Test, he dissuaded them from it, and promoted a mutinous factious Paper in name of the Trades, protesting against the Council’s Act, and gave false Representations to his Majesty’s Council thereanent.’ This Libel and Counter-libel was the effect of Party and Heat in the Place, and, as I take it, most Part of the Articles on both Hands were Fact, and both Parties in their Turns had favoured the suffering Presbyterians. However, the Council exculpate the first, and find, ‘the first and additional Libels against William Brisbane not proven, and absolve him; and for the stopping of all Heats in that Burgh, declare at Michaelmas next they themselves will make Election of Magistrates and Counsellors for next Year, and discharge the present Magistrates to make any Election at that Time. And they delay

to determine anent Robert Hunter at this Time, but find the said William Cunningham guilty of several Disorders, and the Occasion of much Disturbance in the said Burgh, and declare him incapable of publick Trust therein, during Pleasure; and ordain him to pay the said William Brisbane Five hundred Merks for the Expences of this Plea, and the Charges of Witnesses, and that the said William ly in Prison till he pay it.

By the following Petition given in to the Council April 22. we may see upon what Grounds People were forfeited in Life and Fortune. And when the Injustice is fully discovered, Remissions as to Life are only granted. Henry Boswel in Dunfrystoun represents, 'that where- as on the Third of March last, he was found guilty by an Assize of being among the Rebels, the Truth of the Matter was, he was only seeking his Horses which they had violently taken from him, June 2. 1679. and that he recovered them, and returned to his own House that Day, and that he hath taken the Test at Glasgow. The Council recommend him for a Remission, as to his Life, gratis.' Many Instances of this Nature might be given.

By an original Bond before me, dated June 13. this Year, I find James Hasty in Harelaw, in the Parish of Carstairs, paid Two hundred Merks to Meldrum, for his Nonconformity, and his alleged being at Bothwell, tho' he was not there. Meldrum came and drave his Goods, and they were not restored till this Bond in common Form was given, and he was very soon forced to pay it. This Person was brought to no small Trouble, for his adhering to his Principles, before this Time and after. By original Documents in my Hand, I find he paid the second Half of the Fine imposed by Middleton's Parliament, without any Reason at all, being only then a Tenant in Sandiholm in Dalserf Parish. Sir William Bruce's Discharge before me, is dated March 27. 1666. and acknowledges his receiving an Hundred and fourscore Pounds Scots from him, as the last Half of his Fine, and discharges him.

Such Oppression as this, as well as Conscience, made this Person joyn in the Rising at Pentland. And December 18. 1666. Raploch, Sheriff-depute, goes to Sandiholm, and inventars James Hasty's Goods, and delivers them over to the Laird of Neilsland, as appears by a signed Inventory of them before me, to be kept for Duke Hamilton's Use. June 1667. the Duke disposes all Goods and Gear belonging to James Hasty, fallen into his Majesty's Hands by his being in the Rebellion in November last, to Patrick Hamilton of Neilsland, by his Grant signed by himself June 3. 1667. June 6. Neilsland gives a blank Assignment to James Hasty's whole Goods and Gear upon a Bond granted him for an Hundred Pounds by Marian Clelland Spouse to the said James. And indeed his whole valued Goods are not much above that Sum. He paid likewise Two hundred Merks as another Fine for Ecclesiastical Disorders, to John Somerwel of Spittle, and gets a Discharge for his not keeping the Kirk, and all other Disorders Ecclesiastical; but it mentions not the Sum paid. This is dated Lanerke 15. 1687. This good Man was frequently imprisoned upon those and the like Accounts, and brought to great Hardships and Loss by Quarterings; many Times he had Ten or Twelve Soldiers, with their Horses, quartered upon him. But Particulars would be endless.

Upon the former Section we heard of the Trouble brought upon several Heritors in the Parish of Cannethan from the People's coming by them from the Conventicle at Blackloch. June 19. the Council order Stuart of Allantoun, Stuart of Hartwood, William Cochran younger of Ochiltree, Walker of Hacwood-burn, and Mr. William Violant indulged at Cannethan, to be cited against July 1.

Those Two excellent and religious Gentlemen, Brothers, William Stuart of Allantoun, and James Stuart of Hartwood, in the Shire of Lanerke, were most iniquously fined, the First in 3000 Merks, and the other in 1000 Pounds. These Gentlemen never gave any Disturbance to the Government; they were chargeable with the Breach of none of the Laws. Indeed they still owned themselves Presbyterians, and were eminent for Piety, and conscientious Nonconformists from Prelacy, but had behaved themselves with that Caution and Temper, that they could not be reached, and always demeaned themselves as dutiful and loyal Subjects. It was their Happiness to live under the Ministry of the Reverend Mr. Violant, and so they were not chargeable with Church-irregularities.

Yet a Handle was taken hold of against them, one could scarce have expected, except in such a Time as this, when nothing almost could prevent Presbyterians sharing in the Rigour of this Period. There had been a Conventicle kept, as hath been noticed, at a considerable Distance from their Houses, and some armed Men, in their own Defence, came from that Meeting through the Parish where they lived, in their Road homeward. Allantoun was only accidentally looking out of a Window in his own House, on the Evening of the Lord's Day, and saw them passing by. Hartwood met them on the high Road, as he was coming home from hearing Sermon at the Church of Cannethan. This they both acknowledged, and there was no more could be laid to their Charge; it was not so much as alleged that they had conversed with any of them, or supplied them any way. And precisely, because the Gentleman did not raise the Hue and the Cry, as the Proclamation of Council formerly mentioned, required, and raised not the Country to seize them on the Lord's Day, they are arbitrarily fined; yea, this Hardship was extended to several others in that Parish.

Mr.

Mr. William Violant, indulged Minister in Camnethan, a singularly learned and worthy Person, endued with the greatest Temper and Meekness of many Men in his Age, and exceedingly useful in that Parish and the Country round, this excellent Minister did not escape the Fury of this Time. The foresaid armed Men, who kept together in their own Defence, as long as they could, happened in their Road likewise to come by Mr. Violant's House, and because he did not raise the Country on the Sabbath, the Bishops, whose great Eye-sore he was, for Learning, Moderation, and Temper, got him cited before the Council, where, after some Time's Imprisonment, he was banished for no other Fault but what is above, and he continued under this till the Liberty: Yea, such was the Rigour of this Time, that a good many of the substantial Tenants, and other Country People in this Parish, were harried upon this same score. David Russel Tenant in Stone, Archibald Prentice and John Clelland Portioners there, and John Smith in the same Parish, were apprehended and carried Prisoners into Edinburgh, and kept in Prison about Three Months, and fined in an Hundred Pounds, for no other Reason but their not raising the Hue and the Cry against their People, when they came by their Houses. But I come to give this Process from the Registers.

July 1. the Council pass a Decreet, which is very long, and narrates the Proclamation against the Hue and the Cry, July 1682. and find Hackwood-burn, Allantoun, and Hartwood, guilty, and to be fined in the Terms of that Proclamation. July 2. I find, the Council order Allantoun and Hartwood to be let out of Prison, upon their Engagement to satisfy the Cashkeeper as to their Fines. That same Day, the Council find the Libel not proven against Mr. Curry Minister at Shotts, and Mr. Peter Kid indulged at Carlouk, and absolve them.

The Sheriffs of the Places through which those People went from the Black-loch Conventicle, had been cited, and some other Heritors; and so, July 17. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having considered the Libel raised by the Advocate, against the Sheriffs of Lanerk, Stirling, and Linlithgow Shires, and the Heritors there, with the Defence propounded by the Laird of Dundas, that he knew not of the Rebels passing through his Grounds and Lands, for several Days after they passed, and that he was not on the Place for several Days after that Time; the Lords repel the Defence as conceived, and allow his Majesty's Advocate Diligence, for proving that the Rebels appeared upon, and went through some Part of his Lands, as they passed.' We shall hear just now, that in a parallel Case this very Day, they sustain the same Defence in the Earl of Tweeddale; for it was now, Shew me the Man, and I'll shew you the Law.

And having considered the Case of Mr. William Violant, indulged Minister at Camnethan, with his Declaration taken at Glasgow, and Deposition taken before the Committee of publick Affairs, find that he ought, upon Advertisement given him that the Rebels passed by his Kirk on Sabbath Night, of June last, to have made Trial and Enquiry after them, and thereupon given Advertisement, conform to the Council's Proclamation, and that he hath most undutifully contravened the same, and declare his Indulgence to be at an End, and void, and discharge him to preach at Camnethan hereafter; and ordain him to find Caution, against the Day of to remove off the Kingdom, and not return without Licence, or to find Caution, in case he stay, not to preach or exercise any Part of the ministerial Function, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks; and grant Diligence against him to compear before the Council, to hear and see the said Sentence pronounced against him. And they leave James Walker of Hackwood-burn to further Consideration.

That same Day, July 17. I find another Process against the Earl of Tweeddale, Lord Torphichen, and a vast Number of others, upon whose Lands Conventicles had been kept, and through whose Lands the Rebels had past from the Conventicle at Cairnhill. The Earl of Tweeddale appears and depones upon Oath, 'that he was not in the Shire when the Conventicles were kept, and had no Knowledge of the same for some Days after; and that, to his Knowledge, his Deputies were free of the same. And the Council absolve the Earl and his Deputies.' This is perfectly the same Case, as far as I can judge, with the Laird of Dundas, and we see what a vast Difference is made. And the Council order General Dalziel to send a Party out to bring in the rest of the Heritors. But I observe no more about them in the Registers.

As to Mr. Violant, 'he appears, according to Citation, July 30. and being asked, why he did not inform against the Rebels; he answered, because he thought a Minister not instructed so to do; and that he, as a Minister, was not to inform in a sanguinary Matter. And being interrogate as to the other Part of the Libel, whether he had broke the Council's Instructions, confessed he had preached without his Parish-church, and had baptized Children belonging to other Parishes, but refused to depone thereupon. And further added, he, as a Minister, had his Instructions from his great Master Jesus Christ, and, as to those, behoved to obey him, and answer to him.' The Council repeat the former Sentence, July 17. and order him to Prison, till he find Caution as above, and to remove out of the Kingdom within a Month after his Liberation.

Dargavel.

John Maxwell of Dargavel in the Shire of Renfrew, had been fined most irregularly like other Gentlemen of that Shire. In his Absence his Fine had been accumulated to a great Sum. Some Interest was made for him, and I find, July 22. his Fine is sifted by the Council, by reason of his exact Regularity, for some Time.

John Brisbane of Freeland.

Next Day comes on the Process of John Brisbane of Freeland, in the same Neighbourhood; and this Gentleman is quite ruined by this excessive Fine, near the Value of the Lands of Freeland. His Decreet runs in the Council-books. 'The Lords find John Brisbane of Freeland, by his own Confession upon Oath, guilty of being present at Twenty five House-conventicles, at some of which he hath deponed there were more present than the House could hold, so as some of them were without Doors, which by the Law is declared to be a Field-conventicle, and of constant withdrawing from his own Parish-kirk, since his Majesty's most gracious Indemnity in the Year 1679. and fine him in Five hundred Pounds Sterling, and ordain him to pay Six thousand Merks presently, and ly in Prison till it be paid, and supercede the other Three thousand Merks, till they see how his future Behaviour shall be.'

and Arthur Tackett.

July 22. I find Patrick Walker, a Boy of Eighteen Years or under, before the Council. He confesses he was present at the Murder of Francis Garden one of the Earl of Airly's Troop, and refuses to discover his Accomplices. Arthur Tackett confesseth he was in the Rebellion, and lately with the Rebels in Arms in the Shire of Lanerk. The Council ordain them both to be questioned by Torture, to Morrow, before the Committee for publick Affairs, at Nine of the Clock. Patrick Walker was ordered, July 23. to the Plantations, probably after he had undergone Torture. The other we shall meet with at his Execution.

is confined.

August 1. that excellent Person Lord Neil Campbell, Brother to the noble Earl of Argyle, had been cited before the Council, for no other Cause I can hear of, but that he was the Son of the excellent Marquis, and Brother to the Earl of Argyle. Nothing worthy of Death or Bonds could be laid to his Charge. 'The Clerks of Council are warranted to receive Caution for him, under the Penalty of Five thousand Pounds Sterling, that he confine himself to Edinburgh, and Six Miles about, and compear before the Council in a Charge of Six Hours.'

banished.

August 6. I find Robert Goodwin Maltman in Glasgow, is before a Committee of the Council, the Justice-general, the Advocate, the Bishop of Edinburgh, and some others. There was no Probation against him, but what resulted from his Examination. He would not own the King's Supremacy, nor promise to attend upon Ordinances dispensed under the Bishops, nor term Bothwel Rebellion, and thereupon is banished to the Plantations, and remitted to Prison. This religious worthy Person had been cited to some Courts, and did not compear, that way he came to be insert in the porteous Roll, and was taken April 6. this Year, in a Search at Glasgow, with James McIntoch, who was banished to Carolina. After he had continued some time in Prison at Glasgow, he was brought into Edinburgh. He remained in Prison till next Year, with many others, he was sent to Dunotter, and when brought thence back to Leith, he found Means to escape. He was upon his hiding since the 1676. merely for Nonconformity.

Doctor James Welwood.

August 25. Mr. James Welwood, Doctor in Medicine, well known since to the World, by his curious Memoirs and other Writings, is ordered by the Council to be sent to Cowpar, there to satisfy the Sheriff's Sentence for his Nonconformity.

John Forbes of Lesly in Aberdeen
Shire.

A new Instance of exorbitant Fining, offers from a Shire whence we have not very many Examples. August 19. John Forbes of Lesly, in Aberdeen Shire, complains of his Treatment by the Sheriff-depute, to the Council; and their Act about it follows. 'Anent the Petition presented by John Forbes of Lesly, bearing, that he is fined by the Laird of Kinmundie for alledged Irregularities, and particularly for his and his Lady's withdrawing from the Kirk, in the Sum of Twenty two thousand three hundred and twenty Pounds Scots, by a Decreet dated February 24. 1684. whereas the Petitioner's Practice was out of Dislike at the Minister Mr. Alexander Mowat, placed there contrary to his Inclination, he being Patron, and that he frequented Ordinances elsewhere.' The Petitioner depones, that his withdrawing was not from any Dislike or Disrespect to the Government in Church or State, and the Council suspend the Letters. It appears indeed Mr. Forbes was no Whig, Mr. Mowat had gone out for the Test.

Alexander Nairn
of Sautford and Lady Abden.

That same Day the Council go in another Road, as to some Fines imposed in Fife. Alexander Nairn of Sautford in Fife, complains, that the Sheriff had most iniquously fined him in Three thousand three hundred Pounds for House-conventicles. The Council refuse his Petition to have it suspended, and order it to be exacted. And Dame Jean Melvil, Lady Abden, complains, she was fined in Absence by the Sheriff of Fife, in Two thousand Pounds, but hath no Redress.

John Campbell now
of Overwelwood.

This same Day, ' John Campbell, Son to William Campbell of Overwelwood, is ordered by the Committee appointed to consider the Case of the Prisoners, to be prosecuted before the Council, in order to Banishment.' This is all I meet with about him in the Registers, and and his Escape with that of many other good People, August 21. prevented further Process. But it is worth the Reader's while to take here a well vouched Account of the Treatment of this worthy Gentleman, now Captain John Campbel of Over-welwood in the Shire of Air, yet alive, and able to attest every Branch of this hard dealing with him and his worthy Brother. The Captain is so generally known for his Piety, good Sense, Uprightness, and Bravery, that he is far above any Character I can pretend to give him; and I know well his extreme Modesty will be grated by my saying this much of him. He gave very publick Evidences of his excellent Spirit after the Revolution, when he was deterveally made a Captain of Horse, and did good Service to his Master King William in many Parts of the Kingdom. And the very same Cause, and Revolution Interest being at Stake, he is just now treading the same Steps, and distinguishing himself by a most active and vigorous Appearance for our only rightful Sovereign King George. When I am writing this (1715) during the present unnatural and unaccountable Rebellion, I'll take Liberty here to give all his Sufferings together, tho' some of them were in the after Years.

Toward the Beginning of August, this young Gentleman, scarce yet eighteen Years of Age, and his elder Brother William Campbel, about Twenty, were living peaceably in their Father's House, an excellent Gentleman, who after all his Tollings and Troubles got safe to Heaven in a good old Age, and a full Gale of Joy, March 5 last, 1715. They had never been engaged in the least Disturbance to the Government, and when both together in the Fields upon the Welwood hill, they were seized by a Party of my Lord Ross his Troop, and carried into the House of the Welwood near by, whither a good many of the said Troop were come to search for their Father.

He was happily out of the Way at this Time. When the two Youths were brought in, the Commander of the Party, Bonsbarw, cursed the Soldiers because they had not shot them in the Place they had found them, though there was nothing offensive about them, except it were two Bibles found upon them, which, it seems, put him in a Passion, and was looked upon by the Soldiers as a certain Mark of Disloyalty.

There they were kept Prisoners till their Father's House was rifled, and three good riding Horses seized and taken away. And tho' nothing was, or could be laid to their Charge, and the ordinary Catechism was not so much as put to them, yet they were carried away Prisoners that Night to Newmills, and lodged in the Guard. Next Day they were carried to the Dean, a House belonging to the Earl of Kilmarnock, where a Garison was.

It was like a begun Hell to these religious young Gentlemen, to be among the impious and profligate Soldiers, their Ears were grated, and Souls vexed at the horrid Profanation of God's holy Name. Here they were kept till Sabbath next, the ordinary travelling Day to the Soldiers, when they were carried in to Glasgow Prison, and thrust into a little Room, and put into the Irons from Eight at Night, till Eight next Morning, with two Centinels upon them.

Upon Munday they were examined by the Lord Ross, and Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, who were civil enough to them, and afterward by Lieutenant-colonel Windram, upon the ordinary catechetick Questions. Captain Campbel remembers that the last asked him, if he would pray for the King. He answered, that he both did, and would, that the Lord would give him a godly Life here, and a Life of Glory hereafter. Windram said, That is not enough, you must pray for King Charles II. as he is Supreme over all Persons and Causes, Ecclesiastick as well as civil. The other said, In his Opinion, that was praying for him as the Head of the Church, which belonged only to Christ, and he reckoned it Arrogance in any Creature whatsoever to claim it.

They were kept in the Irons eight Days, with two Centinels watching them Day and Night with drawn Swords, as if there had been somewhat very extraordinary in their Case. And when at some Times they would lift up their Heads to ease themselves a little being fore crushed with the heavy Irons, the Centinels threatened to stab them. Thus they bore the Yoke in their Youth, and I am perswaded it was good for them.

After this Treatment, they were committed to Lieutenant Murray, Brother to the Laird of Stanhope, to be carried into Edinburgh. He was very severe and savage to them, and caused tie their Legs together very strait with Cords beneath the Horse Belly, and carried them into Edinburgh that Day, in this uneasy Posture, where they were put in the Long-loft, as it was called, in the Can ngate Tolbooth.

Several Times they were brought before Committees of Council, and examined upon the ordinary Interrogatories of the Time. The Captain remembers, among the other Questions he was posed with, after he had told his Age, a Day or two beyond Eighteen, he was asked, if he was at Bothwel. He answered, No; for he went but to the Grammar School the Martinmas thereafter. The Clerk wrote down, As to Bothwel, the Prisoner answers, I was but young then, but had I been old enough, I would have been there. This was horrid Injustice; and from it we may guess at the ordinary Methods used with Country People. Mean while, it may be, this was the inward Sentiments of the Prisoner, but he could not let it pass. When read to him in order to his Signing, he roundly told them, the Clerk was unjust, and wrote down a Lie, and what he had not said, and appealed to the Lords present. The Matter was shuffled off, and he sent back to the Canongate Prison.

His Brother had dissatisfied the Committee very much in his Answers, and he was separated from the rest of the Prisoners, and sent to a little, vile, nasty Hole, where the Vermin were so thick, as they might have been swept away.

The Captain was some little Time after brought before the Council, and re-examined upon the fore said Questions. And when he gave them no great Satisfaction, the old Lord Collington told him bitterly, He would face the Grass-market. When Threats moved him very little, some others of them changed their Stile, and calmly asked him, What is the Reason you will not comply as your elder Brother hath done, and abundantly satisfied the Council. This was a flat Lie spoken in Judgment, and yet somewhat worse than the Clerk's Treatment of him. It was extremely vexing to him, however he stood his Ground.

When he was remanded to the Canongate Prison, his Soul was sore distressed with the Account the Counsellors had given him of his Brother's Compliance. He had no other way to disburden himself, his Brother being now in close Prison in the High-town Tolbooth, but to write an unsigned Letter to him, giving an Account of what was said of his Compliance, and signified to him in warm enough Expressions, that tho' he was his dearest Relation, yet rather than he should relinquish the Cause of Christ, he would chuse to see him suffer. This Letter with a Bible was sent in by a Woman to William Campbell, and was caught at the Door; whereupon the poor Woman and his Brother were immediately brought before the Council, and strictly questioned who was the Writer of the Letter. The poor Woman, Margaret Aird, who most probably did not know from whom the Letter came, was tortured in Thumb-kings, and the Boots were brought before William, and he threatned with them if he would not discover the Writer of the Letter; but nothing would prevail.

This Letter put them in such a Fret, and indeed it was abundantly tart, that they ordered a Committee of their Number to go upon Saturday and examine the Prisoners in the Canongate Tolbooth upon it, particularly the Captain, and his Cousin John Campbell Prisoner there. Somewhat or other fell in, which diverted the Counsellors from coming, only they sent an Order to remove these two from the Room they were in, to the Iron-house in the Canongate.

This was a strange and unexpected Step of Providence in the Captain's Eye; for just the Day before, he had fallen on Methods to convey some Instruments to the Prisoners there, for breaking Prison, without the least Prospect of having any Share himself in the designed Escape. The Orders were most welcome to them both, and to the Iron-house they came.

Upon Saturday's Night, they began about Eight of the Clock, and wrought close till next Morning. All their Instruments were two Gimlets and a Chisel, and a Board-iron. To Morrow they got more Time to work, than upon any other Day, and continued boring the Jests, and having Cobwebs in Plenty, they covered all when ever they heard the Jaylors coming in. Thus they continued Two Days and Nights, until they got a good large Breach made in the Flooring above them, and on the third Night they got another Passage made in the Flooring of the Loft above the Woman-house; and having got a good Quantity of small Cords, Sheets and Bed-clothes conveyed to them, Thirteen of them made a Shift to get out underneath the Palm of the Canongate Steeple, and got all safe to the Ground by the help of the Cords and Bed-clothes, and escaped, save William Young, who was retaken upon Tuesday, and suffered in a Day or Two, and another who was wounded by a Fall he caught.

The Two Cousins travelled till they met happily next Night at the Hill of Tintock, and from that got into Airshire, where the Captain's Father, and William Campbell of Middle-welwood, joyned them, and they spent that Winter, and Part of the next Year together in the Fields very privately, always lying in the open Air, perfectly exposed to Rain, Snow, and Cold.

In April 1685. they had made a little Lodge for themselves, in a very retired Place in the Middle of the Mountains. In a little Time after, the Highlanders came to that Country, and discovered their Hiding-place, and they were forced to remove, and separate one from another. In a few Days Middle-welwood and his Brother were taken by Claverhouse, and cruelly treated, and with others were sent to Dunotter.

When Argyle was coming in, the Captain fell in with that excellent Gentleman, afterwards Lieutenant-colonel Clelland, and passed much of the Summer 1685. with him, and John, afterwards Lieutenant-colonel Fullarton, and that great Man Mr. Robert Langlands, Mr. George Barclay, and Mr. Alexander Pedin, and met with many wonderful Deliverances, Preservations and Provisions.

When the noble Earl of Argyle's Attempt was disappointed, the Captain was almost over-wearied with his long Difficulties, and took up Resolution to go to Virginia, but was in a very remarkable way detained at home, God having Service for him in his native Country. At first he was put back by Stress of Weather, and when attempting a second Time, was detained by his Brother's Sicknefs, and lastly by his own.

In April 1686. that excellent Youth, his Brother William Campbell, died of a Decay, contracted tracted by the terrible Severities he met with in the Prison of Edinburgh. He fell asleep in Jefus, in much Peace and Joy. And tho' there was as great Endearment 'twixt them, as perhaps ever was 'twixt two Brothers, yet the Captain durst not appear at his Burial. Thus he continued wandring up and down under no small Hardships till the Revolution, when he ventured out and levied a Troop of Dragoons, Man and Horse, without any Charges to the Government, and mustered the same in the excellent Lord Gardroft's Regiment, where he was very useful.

To return to the Register, August 26. the Council order a Party to bring in the under-written Persons Prisoners to Edinburgh, who were present lately at a Field-conventicle kept within Half a Mile of Greenock, by Mr. James Renwick, where there was a Child baptized. Patrick Lang Maltman in Greenock, James Holm, William Baird, William Andrew, James Warden, William Scot, Marian Muir there Linning who lived at Pohnadie or little Go-

Decree against 22 Persons in Calder.

I find a Petition given in to the Council, containing a most unaccountable Oppression committed in the Parish of Calder, by Thomas Kennoway Depute to Meldrum; which, with other Facts of this Kind, we may afterwards hear of, provoked some Persons to bring him to an untimely End, November this Year. I have no more about it but what is in the Registers.

Anent the Petition presented by Robert Aitkin, and about Two and twenty Men and Women, (whose Names I insert not) in the Barony of Calder, among whom are Two Minors and a Cripple, bearing, that they are charged with Letters of Horning, at the Instance of the Fiscal to the Laird of Meldrum, and Thomas Kennoway his Depute, for alledged not keeping the Kirk, and not deponing for themselves, Wives, Children, and Cottars, being fined in a Hundred Pounds per Piece, whereas, generally speaking, they pay but Six Pounds for their House, according to their respective Charges, by a Decree April 6. last, of which they complain as most wrongous. 1mo. Because they were summoned only against the 23. as the Summons produced bear, and yet the Decree passed in Absence upon the Sixth Day. 2do. All of them who got Advertisement of that Day, at their Appearance declared they were ready to bring Testimonials of their Behaviour, under the Minister's Hand, which were absolutely refused, and each of them were required to depone for themselves, Family, and Cottars, and because they would only depone for themselves, they were decreed. 3tio. If the Council would please to call for and see the said Decree, the said Fiscal and Depute would be holden ridiculous for acting the Petitioners in such extravagant Fines, although they had been guilty, as they are not, they being yet still willing to bring to their Lordships Testificates under the Hand of their Minister, for their orderly Living. 4to. Michael Graham, who lived not in Calder these Seven Years, is fined for not keeping Calder Kirk. 5to. The Laird of Meldrum, by a special Act under his own Hand, acknowledged, that his Fiscal and Depute had committed several Abuses among the Petitioners, and stopt Diligence till he heard them, which is not yet done.' Upon the whole, they crave the Fiscal and Kennoway may be called before the Council, and examined, and they discharged. The Council ordain the Laird of Meldrum to take the Petitioners Oaths, as to their keeping the Kirk, being at Conventicles, and their Wives orderly Carriage, and sist Execution till Report be made.

Almost at every Sederunt of the Council, new Complaints are given in of exorbitant Fines by Sheriffs, and such as had a Council Power. August 26. Robert Alexander of Corfclays, complains that he was fined by Ardmillan upon the 7 of February last, in 2803 Pounds, for withdrawing from Ordinances, by a Decree passed in his Absence when sick. The Council reponne him to his Oath. And by another Complaint, I find Thomas Kennedy of Grange, by a Decree fined in Twelve thousand Pounds, he is reponed ut supra.

Corfclays, and Kennedy of Grange.

September 4. the Laird of Ferviswood is fined, for alledged Reset and Converse, in Six thousand Pounds Sterling, as we shall hear, when I come to his Case in particular. And September 10. I find the Committee for publick Affairs make their Report to the Council concerning Fines, 'That the Lady Graden is fined by the Sheriff of Teviotdale, in Twenty six thousand and odd Pounds, the Lady Greenhead in Sixteen thousand and odd Pounds. The Committee find Reason to sist Execution as to her, and the Council approve. And John Watson of Dunikeir in Fife, and his Spouse, fined in 1050 Pounds for Irregularities, and the Committee order Execution.' This is all I meet with in the Council-registers; but I have before me an Extract of the Fines imposed upon the Heritors of the Shire of Roxburgh, for not keeping of the Church, and exacted, taken from the Letters of Horning, as the Extract bears, dated August 11. 1684. I have not taken that particular Notice of the exorbitant Fines in each Shire and Parish, my Materials lead me to, designing, if I can bring it to any bearing, to give a general Estimate in the different Parishes I have Accounts from; but this is such a prodigious Sum from one Shire, that I thought it deserved a Room here, and give it as I find it in Two different Copies of an Extract of the Decree foresaid.

Those Fines imposed by inferior Courts are not indeed to be compared with those imposed by the Council, toward the End of the Year, from which there was no Appeal. I have formerly pointed at the Methods by which Fines for Irregularities were screwed up to this prodigious Sum. In some the whole was exacted, especially in meaner Persons, who had less Ability to debate with the Sheriff in his Oppression; all by the Decreet were made liable in Law, and Execution followed, unless a Sift were got; but, generally speaking, Compositions were made, and those were severely uplifted.

By those the Reader may guess what an incredible Sum an exact Account of the Fines imposed upon Heritors in each Shire of the West and South would come to; and if we add to those the prodigious Sums most arbitrarily levied from Tenants, Cottars, and Tradesmen, for mere Nonconformity, of which it is scarce possible to recover any tolerable Accounts, since they were all pocketed, and no Account was to be given of them, we may form some Notion of the dreadful Oppression at this Time.

Hay of Park,
Alexander Monro,
and the Laird of Arkinglass, sent to Blackness.

George Brown in Edinburgh.

September 16. The Council order Hay of Park, Alexander Monro, and Campbel of Arkin-glass, to be sent to Blackness Castle, and kept close Prisoners. The Occasion is not insert in the Registers. The last worthy Gentleman was a Campbel, and probably laid up upon Suspicion of the Earl of Argyle's Designs of making some Attempt which was now talked of.

September 25. The Committee for publick Affairs, having considered the Examination of John Brown Taylor Journeyman in Edinburgh, who declares he lived in Edinburgh those Six Years, was taken lately in Libbertoun's Wynd, will not acknowledge the King's Authority without his own Limitations, will not pray for the King since it ought to be done in a devout Manner and Place for Prayer. Declares he thinks it lawful to take up Arms against the King in Defence of the Covenant, and that the Covenant will be yet owned. Refuses to answer as to the Archbishop of St Andrews, and whether it be lawful to hear the present Clergy. Thinks Bothwell-bridge lawful, because those who were there were in self-defence, and refuses to subscribe. The Committee order him to ly in the Irons till further Order. It is a Wonder he was not straight sent to the Julticiary, and the Gallows; perhaps there was not a Quorum of the Justices in Town.

James Hamilton,
of Aikenhead.

William Niven
and John Hodge.

October 9. The Council allow Physicians to visit James Hamilton of Aikenhead in Prison. This Gentleman was only confined for Nonconformity, and it was hard enough after all he had endured, that when standing in need of Phycians he should not have been let out, at least on Caution. The same Day William Niven in Pollock-shares, whom we shall afterward meet with, and John Hodge, are ordered to be sent to the Plantations, because they would not take the Oath of Allegiance, or engage to Regularity, or own Bothwell-bridge to be Rebellion.

Gentlemen in Roxburgh Shire Sued.

November 7. The Council have before them a Petition from several Gendemen in Roxburgh.

burgh Shire, who had been exorbitantly fined. I give it as it stands, as a further Evidence of what is above. It is but some of them who apply, who were in the Decreet, and Persons are here named who were not in the Extract. And this Application is only from such as were fined for their Ladies Nonconformity.

The following Persons being fined, for their Wives alledged withdrawing from their Parish Kirks, and other Irregularities, by the Sheriff of Roxburgh, in the following Sums, Samuel Morison of Massindieu in 2285 Pounds, Christopher Ker Spouse to William Turnbull of Sharplaw, and the said William in Nine Hundred and Fifty Pounds, Eupham Turnbull Spouse to John Douglas of Tinpandean, and the said John in 1288 Pounds, Lord Cranstoun for his Lady in William Ker of Chatto in 31000 and odd Pounds, Sir William Ker of Greenhead in 16000 and odd Pounds, Walter Scot of Colstoun in 5000 Pounds, Adam Scot of Haysenden in Andrew Edmiston of Ednam in and being charged, and having represented they were not legally cited, and divers other Reasons, desiring they might be reprieved. The Council sit Execution, and delay the further Consideration till the first Thursday of December.

That same Day John Scot of Wall petitions the Council, but met with less Favour, ' that whereas in March 1683. he was fined by Meldrum, and in October last, by the Lords of Justice, for his Wife's withdrawing from the Church, which she did, not knowing the Consequences of it, and that he himself hath lived most regularly, and is a zealous Keeper of the Church, and, with the rest of the Heritors of Teviotdale, has lately given a Proof of Loyalty received by the said Lords, craving that Execution may be stopped. ' The Council repel his Alledgances, and ordain the Letters to be put in Execution.

John Scot of Wall.

The Partiality of the Managers in this Matter of Fines, appears at every Turn; for notwithstanding of this Refusal to the Laird of Wall, the Council, December 4. act quite otherwise in the Case of the Laird of Balcanquhal in Fife. ' Anent the Petition of David Balcanquhal of that Ilk, whereas the Petitioner is required by the Sheriff of Fife, to pay the Sum of 15000 Pounds, upon the account of his Wife her not keeping the Church, being Three Years valued Rent; and seeing his Loyalty and Regularity is notourly known, and may be attested; and seeing it was never his Majesty's Intention, that his dutiful and well-affected Subjects should be ruined by the mad and wilful Opinion of their fanatick Wives, without any Fault of their own; humbly supplicating the Council, to take the same under their Consideration, and discharge any further Diligence against him, for the foresaid Fine, seeing it is not in his Power to perswade his Wife to go to Church, notwithstanding all the Endeavours, for that effect, he has used with her, and he is willing to deliver her up to the Council, to be disposed of at their Pleasure. ' The Council having heard and considered the Petition, discharged, and hereby discharge the within written Fine, and grant Order to relax him; the Petitioner nevertheless being always obliged to deliver up his Wife to Justice, when required by the Ordinary, to answer for Church-irregularities.

Balcanquhal of that Ilk.

December 24. ' the Council order the Lady Cavers to be liberate, upon her Bond to leave the Kingdom, and her Payment of 500 Pounds Sterling, formerly imposed by the Council. ' This is all I find in the Records. But, as I promised before, I shall now give some further Hints of this excellent Lady's Case, from other Papers, and likewise of a Process against her Tenants, which was indeed most unaccountable, and both of them from authentick Papers.

Lady Cavers

We have before heard of her heavy Trouble and Imprisonment, November 1682. in Stirling Castle, where she continued till the Close of this Year, excepting a few Weeks now and then she was liberate for her Health; and such was the Rigour of our Scots Managers, that had not her Son, this Year as he came Home from his Travels, prevailed with some about Court for this Favour, and the Liberation come that way, she had continued longer in Prison.

Larger Account of her Trouble, and that of her Tenants.

Her Case was indeed very hard, to say nothing of her shining Virtue and singular Piety, and her being chargeable with nothing but simple Nonconformity with Prelacy, and no ways concerned in any Thing against the Government, nor could once be supposed to be. She was only a Liferentrix, imprisoned now more than Two Years for an exorbitant Fine of 500 Pounds Sterling, a Sum exceeding Three Years Rent of her Estate, without allowing any Part of her said Liferent, for her own Maintenance, or that of her Children. The Diligence used against her Tenants bound them up from paying her Money, and her rigorous and close Imprisonment deprived her of the Use of any Means for her Livelihood and Subsistence.

This brings me to the Case of her Tenants, which deserves a Room here, as it was a Proof of the Injustice of the ordinary Magistrates, and the palliating of it by those in higher Stations, and was indeed a very general Case to all the Tenants who favoured suffering Heritors. February 1683. an Arrestment was used in the Tenants Hands, and January this Year, a Decreet was pronounced against them by the Sheriff of the Shire, not only for what was due by them, in the Time of the Arrestment, but also for the full current Year's Rent.

The Tenants urged for themselves, very reasonably, that the Arrestment was used in February, and they took not their Land till Two Months thereafter, it could not be supposed that at the Time of the Arrestment, they were Debtors for that Year's Rent, when then they had not taken the Land; and no other Diligence had intervened till Martinmas, which was the first Term of Payment; they had then paid to the Lady near the Half of their Year's Rent, from which at least they craved to be absolved, in regard that from the Time they took the Land to the said Term of Payment, there had been no Diligence used by Arrestment or otherwise, to put them in mala fide to pay the same. Meldrum's Power with the Sheriff prevailed, contrary to Law and Reason, to repel this just Defence, and the Decreet was extracted for the haill, and Letters of Horning raised.

By a Paper of the Tenants presented to the Council, dated April 1. this Year, I find William Douglas, James Harkness, James Turnbull in Kirkcoun, William and Jean Stewarts, James Lyden, and James Laing in Earlsfide, Tenants to the Lady Cavers, informing the Council, that an Arrestment had been used in their Hand, February 1683. at the Instance of Hugh Wallace the King's Cash-keeper, sequestrating all then resting by them to the Lady, till her Fine of Nine thousand Merks was paid; that they were moveable Tenants, and renewed their Tack for the next Year in April thereafter, and had no new Arrestment laid on after the first, and therefore thought themselves safe to pay Eleven hundred Pounds of that new Rent, at her Call next Term, for which they had Discharges; that upon the 8 of January last, they were summoned before the Sheriff of Roxburgh, and compearing, deponed on what was resting in their Hand in Time of the Arrestment; and further gave Account of what they had paid since, and urged according to the very Nature of all Arrestments, that it could reach no further than what was in their Hand, and could never look forward to a new Tack; that the Sheriff delayed to pronounce his Interlocutor upon that Head, till he had advised the Case: However a Decreet was passed in their Absence, without ever receiving Summons to hear and see Sentence pronounced, and upon a Friday, which was never the ordinary Court Day, and they have Ground to doubt whether the Decreet was pronounced in the ordinary Place of Judgment; and upon this pretended Decreet without Citation, they have now received a Charge to make full Payment of the whole Year's Rent, upon the 21 Instant, while the Term of Payment of the last Half is not due till Whitsunday, and the Petitioners are like to be distressed before the legal Term of Payment.

I need scarce remark, that such Stretches as these were very frequently made now before the most Part of the ordinary Courts, in Cases wherein any of the persecuted Party were concerned; and this confirms the general Remark which occurs frequently, that Oppression upon civil Liberties still goes along with Oppression in Matters of Conscience.

Together with the foresaid Information, the Lady Cavers Tenants petition the Council, That since they had done nothing in this Matter, but what they thought was the Part of dutiful Tenants, and if they were forced to pay the Half Year's Rent over again, it would ruine them and their Families, that the Decreet might be discharged, at least till they should be fully heard before their Lordships. This Petition was rejected, tho' indeed very reasonable.

About the Middle of May, the Tenants were by virtue of a Caption apprehended by a Messenger, and by a Party of Meldrum's Troop brought down to Jedburgh Tolbooth. They were afterwards allowed some few Days to go home, in order to make up their Money; and I find they were all so discouraged by the Finings and Harassings they were put to, that had not the Laird of Cavers returned that Year, and got the Prosecution stopt, they had all left the Ground.

I have no further anent this excellent Lady, save her Petition and her Son's given in to the Council this Year, the particular Date is not added, but probably the Act of Council liberating her followed upon them. They deserve a Room in this Place, as containing a further Account of the State of this worthy Person's Case.

Her Petition
to the Council.

The Lady Cavers's Petition bears, 'That whereas by their Lordships Sentence upon the Day of November 1682. she was fined in Five hundred Pounds Sterling, and committed Prisoner to the Castle of Stirling, until the same were paid, precisely upon her refusing to give her Oath upon the Points of her Libel, which did not proceed from any Contumacy, but out of a Tendernefs she hath ever had to give her Oath, in any Case almost, but will not decline the most exact and strict Trial in the Matters whereof she is accused; and is so conscious of her own Innocency, that she doubts not it will be evident to the Council, she was misrepresented to them by Misinformations, proceeding either from Malice or Mistake, to which she is the more exposed, being a Person who lives abstract from all Company, imploying her Time in the Education of her numerous fatherless Children.'

She begs, 'that the Lords may consider the Meanness and Smalness of her Estate, a Jointure not not exceeding an Hundred and Fifty Pounds Sterling a Year; that she is in Debt, and bound to aliment her younger Children, Five in Number; and pleads, that unless the Council relieve her from the Fine, she and her small Children, the Issue of a Family, who for many Years have served their King and Country faithfully and honourably, will not only be reduced to Ruin, but Starving.

That by her long and tedious Imprisonment, her Health and Estate are impaired exceedingly. She adds, that in Time coming she resolves to live inoffensively to the whole World, educating her Children, and enjoying her self in her reclus and desolate Condition, without meddling with any Persons or Affairs in the World. Upon the whole she craves, that their Lordships may, in Compassion to the Widow and the Fatherless, remit her and them the said Fine; and if they think it necessary, favourably to represent her Cause to his Majesty, who, she submitively hopes, will grant her humble Desire; and in the mean Time, that they will permit her to intromit with her Jointure, for alimenter Five poor fatherless Children, which she thinks it will scarce be able to do, in respect of the Meanness of it, and the Debts wherewith it is already burdened.

By any Thing appears to me, this reasonable Petition, very pathetically drawn, had no Weight with the Council, till her Son Sir William Douglas of Cavers, now come home, presents another Petition to the Council, representing, 'That his Mother being several Years in Prison for Nonconformity, and not keeping the Church, he, though desirous of her reclaiming, yet out of Respect to the King's Laws and Government, will propose nothing that may be of evil Example to others; and therefore only begs she may be allowed to come to her Friends and Relations, and that he may be received Cautioner for her, that she shall live regularly, or, within Three Months after the Date of her Liberation remove forth of the Kingdom, and not return without special Allowance; by which, adds he, the Country will be freed from any alledged Prejudice she may do in case of Noncompliance, and the Law be salved, and sufficient Terror given to others. And he urges, that the Justices or untruly allow this even to such as are denounced Fugitives; and the Council hath already granted it to the Lady Longformacus, Lady Morissoun, and others. And concludes, with representing that this will be a far more effectual Remedy than Imprisonment, which being within one's native Country, becomes familiar and easy in a short Time.'

Her Son's Petition.

The former Sentence of the Council is all I know of in answer to this Representation, and we see the Managers have no Mind to part with the Lady's unaccountable Fine, after so long Imprisonment, and she is obliged to take on a voluntary Banishment from her native Country and small Family. No further Accounts have come to my Hand of this worthy Person's Sufferings; but sure Matters were at a miserable Pass, when a Son was necessitate in such Terms, to petition for so good a Mother and so honourable a Family; and many others were treated much the same way, merely for Nonconformity, and not counteracting the Light of their own Conscience.

John Linning Dyster in Glasgow, was this Year imprisoned Fourteen Weeks, merely for alleged favouring of the Sufferers. The Case of this good Man was singular, and aggravated the severity used towards him. He had lost his Sight intirely, and had been frequently incarcerated and threatened with Imprisonment, but because of his Blindness, was soon let out; this Year he was kept close Prisoner near Four Months. And to such a Pitch did the Inhumanity of his period run, that when a Child of his came to be very near Death, and frequently and passionately cried for her Father, he made earnest Application to the Magistrates of Glasgow, for Liberty to converse with his dying and affectionate Child, were it but for an Hour or Two: But so reasonable a Favour could not be granted, though he offered Bond and Caution under what Penalty they pleased, to return to Prison at whatever Hour they should appoint. The Child died without the Satisfaction of seeing her Parent, neither was he allowed to come forth to her Burial, tho' he repeated his Offer of Bond and Caution to them; all this was the more unaccountable that he was blind, and consequently out of Case to flee from their Rage. He is yet alive, vouching every Part of what I have set down.

John Linning
Dyster in Glasgow.

A great deal more might be added in this Section, as to the particular Treatment of Gentlemen and others, were it not that I have left the Prosecutions with relation to the last Year's Plot, and those fined to the Value of their Estates, in the Close of this Year, to Sections by themselves. I shall only add, that at the same Diet of Council, the Laird of Pitlochrie is let out of the Bass, upon Promise to go to the Plantations. In his Petition to the Council he promises to take Mr. Archibald Riddel with him, and offers to be Caution for him in Five thousand Merks. We shall meet with him again next Year.

from the Bass.

And that same Day, Dame Margaret Weems Lady Colvil, petitions the Council for a better Room than she hath in Edinburgh Prison; which is granted her. I have been told, she met with very unworthy Treatment for a Person of her Quality, when imprisoned upon her Refusal to pay a Fine, which was extravagant, for her Nonconformity; but having no distinct Accounts of her, I end this Section.

Lady Colvil.

S E C T. III.

IT is Time now to come forward to the Sufferings of a considerable Number of good Men unto Death this Year, and the Forfeiture of others, some absent, and others of them in Heaven before this Time, and the publick Executions. The Procedure of the Justice Court against those alledged to be concerned in the Plot, I shall give altogether next Section, and that will considerably shorten this.

Gentlemen before the Justice Court,

To give the Reader an Account of all that were relaxed, deserted and continued before the Justice Court, for the three or four last Months of the last Year, and a good part of this Year, for alledged Refet and Converse, and State Crimes, would be almost to copy the whole Criminal Books. Indeed for many Months, I meet with no other Business before them, save two or three Deforcements of Messengers. I shall only notice some of the more remarkable Processes.

Auchinleck, Riddel, Stevenson,

January 18. the Laird of Auchinleck, Sir John Riddel, the Laird of Stevenson, Hartwood, Aikenhead, Dunlop, and a good many other Gentlemen, who had been remitted by the Circuits to the Criminal Court at Edinburgh last Year, and continued till now, are delayed till March and April. We shall hear more of some of them afterwards.

George Martin

February 18. I find three Persons before the Justice Court, and all of them condemned to die. The first is George Martin, sometimes Notar, and Reader at Daltay in the Shire of Air; by other Accounts, I find this Person had endured most patiently, a very long Tract of Sufferings. He was taken towards the End of the 1679. and perhaps was at that Rising, though my Accounts are not positive in this; and for four Years, and some Months, he continued under very great Severities; for much of that Time he was in the Irons Night and Day, and mostly without Fire and other Necessaries, in the hardest Seasons. The Grounds of his Sentence, which he speaks of in his Speech at his Death, are much the same I find in his Trial, 'his not allowing the King's Authority as now established, that is, the Supremacy, 'his refusing to pray for the King in a superstitious Manner, as his Words are, his refusing 'to declare his Opinion about King Charles's Death, which, he said, he would not meddle with, 'his saying Bishop Sharp's Death was a just Judgment of God upon him, whatever the Actors were, and his refusing to call Bothwel, Rebellion, and to renounce the Covenants.'

His Indictment

But to come to his Trial as it stands in the Justiciary Books, he is indicted for Treason, the Probation adduced is his own Confession when examined. 'February 11. being interrogate if 'if he owns the King to be lawful King, and will pray for him: Declares, he will not say he 'disowns him, but owns all lawful Authority according to the Word of God. He will not 'answer whether Bothwel-bridge be Rebellion; he will not judge of other Folks Actings, he 'owns the Obligation of the Covenant, and will adhere to it while he lives. He will not call 'Bothwel-bridge, Rebellion, but says, if it was a Rebellion against God, it was Rebellion, if 'not, it was not Rebellion. He will not subscribe. Being interrogate if the late King's Death 'was Murder, declares, they that did it had more Skill than he, refuses to call it Murder, 'and says, he does not think it pertinent to give a Declaration anent it.

John Ker in Hownam.

With him was in the Pannel John Ker Wright in the Parish of Hownam, in Roxburgh. His Examination and Answers are likewise all the Proof brought against him. 'John Ker refuses 'to own the King's Authority. He says, the King lays Things on his Subjects contrary 'to the Word of God, and so he cannot own his Authority; that Bothwel-bridge was lawful, as a Defence of the Truth. As to the Bishop's Murder he says, it is not his Part to judge. 'As to the late King's Murder, he refuses to answer. He owns the Covenant, and adheres to 'the Ends of it. Refuses to sign.'

James Muir.

The third Person before them that same Day, was James Muir at Cessford-boat. The Proof is the same as to him. 'He refuses to own the King's Authority, but owns all lawful Authority, but says his is not lawful. He refuses to call Bothwel-bridge, Rebellion, and refuses 'to call the Bishop's Death, Murder, but says he was not there.

Their Sentence.

All those Confessions are judicially owned before the Lords, and George Martin adds, If 'the King would invade him, he would defend himself by Arms. The Assize bring them in guilty of treasonable Positions, Expressions, and Opinions, conform to their Confessions. And the Lords sentence them to be hanged at the Grass-market upon Friday the 22.

Nothing appears to me, but all the Three were accordingly executed at that Time, though the Cloud of Witnesses speaks only of George Martin and another, of whom just now. George Martin's Speech is set down in that Collection, and he delivers himself in a great many good Directi-

Directions, and ende vours to guard his Hearers against needless and uselefs Disputations, and preſſes them to ſtudy the Spirit of Meekneſs, and to exa mine their own ſelves more. He declares he owns Magiſtracy and lawful Authority, agreeable to the Will and Command of God, the one Lawgiver, as much as any in Scotland. He dies, forgiving all Perſons all the Wrongs done to him, and wiſhing them Forgiveness, as he himſelf deſires to be forgiven of God, and enters Eternity in much Peace and Joy.

The Cloud of Witneſſes ſays, John Gilry, Wright in the Pariſh of Hownam in Teviotdale, was executed with George Martin. This Perſon muſt be the ſame, by ſome Miſtake or other, with John mentioned in the Registers. I have before me two original Letters ſigned John Gilry, from the Iron-houſe, December 27. 1683. which ſavour much of Humility, Self-diffidence, and Meekneſs; wherein he offers many ſolid Grounds of Support to Sufferers, and preſſes them to obſerve Providences, and believe well of God. I doubt not but it is the ſame Perſon here mentioned, and know no more about him, but what the foreſaid Collection gives, that the Grounds of his Sentence were much the ſame with George Martin; and that he died in much Serenity and Peace, adoring free Grace, and adhering to the Truths of Chriſt, and firmly truſting in him for Salvation.

It is probable James Muir likewise ſuffered with them. I ſhall only notice further here, that it muſt remain an indelible Stain upon this Period, that ſo many good Men, whom the Lord owned ſo much at their Death, were butchered, and led to the Slaughter for their Principles, and Conſcience ſake, and merely becauſe they are not able, without going over the Belly of their own Light, to expreſs their Loyalty and Approbation of Magiſtracy, in the large and ſometimes ſinful Terms now required.

In the Beginning of March, that excellent Man Mr. John Dick, before ſentenced to die, and having made his Eſcape, is now appointed to be hanged at the Grass-market, March 5. This is all about him in the Records this Year. Let me give ſome larger Account of him, from the Criminal Records, the laſt Year when he was condemned, and other Papers.

There is a printed Account, called the Teſtimony of Mr. John Dick, published ſome Years ago, in every Body's Hands; but the Errors and Blunders in the Papers of this pious and zealous Sufferer there printed, are ſo many, that had not the Papers left by him been very large, I would inclined to have inſert here a correct Copy of them from a Copy in my Hands, taken from the Original in his Siſter the Lady Greenhill her Hand; but theſe being prolix, and the Appendix ſwelling very much, I ſhall give but a ſhort Abſtract of them, and intermix what I meet with in the Registers about him.

Printed Account of him
incorrect

Before I come to this, I cannot but obſerve, that the Publiſhers of the Cloud of Witneſſes, after a Commendation of this excellent Perſon, diſmiſs him, not without an innuendo as not coming up fully their length; and leave this Blot, as they take it to be, upon him, that he owned the Hamiltoun Declaration, and the King's Authority, in a reſtricted Senſe. Which one would think they might have ſpared, conſidering his Freedom and Faithfulneſs.

Innuendo upon this excellent Perſon in the Cloud of Witneſſes.

Mr. Dick was taken at Edinburgh, upon the Information of a poor Woman, being bribed, who after his Execution fell in Diſtraction. His Father was a Writer there, and Mr. Dick after his taking his Univerſity Degrees, was proſecuting the Study of Divinity. Upon the 29 of Auguſt 1683. I find him examined by the Committee of publick Affairs. His Examination is printed very incorrectly, and, in his Answers, Mr. Dick hath the better in point of Reaſoning with the Biſhop. Upon the laſt of Auguſt, he was brought before the Council, who, after the Clerk had read the Subſtance of his Examination to him, and he had made many Reflexions upon it, at length he ſigned it in preſentia. When they had got this Evidence againſt him, they failed not to improve it. And,

His Examination
Council

September 4. he is brought before the Criminal Court, and with George Lapsley, as we heard, indicted for Treason. In as far as he had been at Bothwel in Arms, and owned it as lawful, before the Council, and reaſonably aſſerted before them, that Episcopacy was unlawful, and the Laws eſtabliſhing the ſame; that ſince the Reſtoration, there hath been no free Parliament; that Episcopacy and Erastianism ſince eſtabliſhed, are contrary to the Word of God; that the Supremacy, as eſtabliſhed, is moſt horrid Blaſphemy; that Perſons aſſaulted at Conventicles may defend themſelves; that Field-conventicles are lawful, and turning out Presbyterian Miniſters, unlawful; that the Covenants are binding, and the Teſt is an unlawful Oath. Wherethrough he is guilty of high Treason.

His Indictment
September 4.

For Probation the Advocate adduceth his own ſigned Confeſſion, which was read, and is inſerted in the Juſticiary Books; though it be printed, yet giving a ſhort State of his Caſe, I inſert it here.

Mr. John Dick, Son to David Dick Writer in Edinburgh, being called and examined, declares, he owns the Work of Reformation, as the ſame is contained in the Confeſſion of Faith and Catechiſms, conform to the Covenant againſt Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, &c. and is reſolved by the Lord's Strength to abide by the ſame.

His Confeſſion

Declares as to Episcopacy and the Laws eſtabliſhing the ſame, he cannot underſtand it to be lawful, becauſe ſince the King's Reſtoration, there hath been no free or lawful Parliament, as he thinks, by reaſon, that alſo the Members thereof were elected in the ordinary Way, yet when they met, there were unlawful Oaths imposed upon them, whereupon several of them left the Parliament, and so he understands that it is not a free and lawful Parliament. He thinks that Episcopacy and Erastianism established in that and subsequent Parliaments, were contrary to the Word of God, and that the Supremacy therein established, is most horrid Blasphemy. He observes in his own written Account, that he added, directing himself to the Chancellor, that he hoped his Lordship would not take this ill, seeing he had sworn the same in the Test. He pressed this might be added to what he was to sign, but it was not allowed.

Being interrogate, if he owns Hamiltoun and Sanquhar Declarations, he declares, he does not own the Sanquhar Declaration, as containing somewhat contrary to his Principles, such as the cutting off of the Wicked.

As to Hamiltoun Declaration, having himself read it, declares he owns it; and when they were invaded and assailed in the Exercise of the reformed Religion, by any whomsoever, that they were obliged to stand to their own Defence, and owns the Lawfulness of Field-conventicles, and their being in Arms to defend themselves in case of being molested; and that he himself was always ready to own and defend his Brethren in Arms, when invaded for Religion; and declares, that the Invasion made against them at Pentland and Bothwell, they being in the Exercise of their Religion, was Service done to the Devil, and the Resistance made by them in their own Self-defence, was Service done to God.

Confesses, before Bothwell he hath ridden in Arms with Mr. John Welsh through the Country, and blesses God for it. Confesseth, he was at a Meeting at Leshmabago before Bothwell, where Lieutenant Dalziel came with a Party upon them, and was one of those who engaged against the Party. Denies he was at Drumclog, but confesseth he was at Bothwell, and thinks Mr. John Welsh stayed about Half a Year in the Country thereafter, that he was only about Eight Days in Company with him after Bothwell, in this Kingdom.

Confesseth, the King is lawful born King, and came lawfully to the Crown of these Kingdoms, and owns the King's Authority conform to the Word of God, that is to say, that he is in Power to govern for the Glory of God and the Good of his People, and to be a Terror to evil Doers, and Encourager of those that do well.

He declares, the Act of Supremacy, as explained by the Parliament, and the turning out of the Presbyterian Ministers, and overturning of the Work of Reformation, most unlawful Acts, and being expressly contrary to the Word of God, cannot be binding upon the Declarant.

That the Covenants are binding to the Nations, and shall be so while Sun and Moon endure; and that that Oath called the Test, is a most horrid and unlawful Oath, and that he is not obliged to take the same.

He declares, as to the killing of the Archbishop, he cannot give Judgment anent it, it not being an Act of his own, but some of those who were called the Actors, whom he knew were godly and just Men.

John Dick.

When this was read to him before the Justiciary, he judicially owned it, and being asked if he had any Thing to add; he answered, 'he had only one Clause to add to his Declaration, now turned to his Libel, and that was, that he was of Opinion, all the Blood of Presbyterians shed those Years bygone, merely for their Principles, was Murder.' This he pressed might be added to his Confession, and held as a Part of it.

The Assize inclosed, and brought him in guilty by his own Confession, and the Lords ordain him to be hanged at the Grass-market, September 28. His Father and Friends procured the Delay of the Day longer, than was at first designed. The printed Narrative will let the Reader into a fuller View of Mr. Dick's Carriage before the Justices, and theirs toward him; and particularly that the Lords would not hear his Defences, but caused the Assize to inclose, who soon brought him in guilty, and then called him in, and intimated the Sentence to him. When he heard it, he told them, 'That to pass such a Sentence upon him, without hearing him in his own Defence, was a Practice never paralleled among Heathens.' And going on, he was interrupted and ordered off.

We heard last Year how he and a great many others escaped, very remarkably, out of Prison, upon the 16 of September. In his printed Case, or Testimony, there follows a very long Paper, containing a large Account of his Case, and Reflections upon the present Persecutors; which by written Copies before me bears the Date of October 1. 1683. and probably it hath been written after his Escape, and for his own private Use, and not with any Design to have it published to the World.

Mr. Dick was taken again in the Beginning of March this Year, and when brought before the Council, he declined to give Account how he got out of Prison, adhered to his former Declaration, and was remitted to the Justiciary, who, March 4. ordered him to be executed to Morrow. His Carriage before the Council and Justiciary, and in the laigh Council-house before he came to the Scaffold, and his last Words there and upon the Ladder, are all printed ed in the above specified Paper. This excellent and zealous Man, tho' frequently interrupted by the beating of the Drums, hath many excellent Things in his last Discourse, and died in perfect Serenity and great Allurance. 1684.

There are several pious and pleasant Letters of his, writ before his Execution to his Friends, before me, which indeed deserved a Room in the printed Account. I shall only insert here his Letter to his Father the Morning before he suffered, as I take it, for it is not dated, being but short, and breathing out much of his pious and fervent Temper.

Dear Sir,

His hath been one of the pleasantest Nights I have had in my Lifetime, the Competition is only betwixt it and that I got Eleven Years ago, at Nioftal in Northumberland, where and when in a Barley Ridge upon the Saturday's Night and Sabbath Morning, before the last Communion I did partake of in Furd Church, the Lord firmly laid the Foundation Stone of Grace in my Heart, by making me with my whole Soul close with him upon his own Terms, that is, to take him to be my King, Priest, and Prophet, yea, to be my All in all, to renounce my own Righteousness, which at the best is but as rotten Rags, and to rest upon his Righteousness alone for Salvation: As also to give my self intirely without Reserve, in Soul, Body, Heart, Affections, and the whole Faculties of my Soul, and Powers of my Body, to be by him disposed at his Pleasure, for the Advancement of his Glory, and the upbuilding of my own Soul, and the Souls of others; inserting this Clause (being conscious to my self of great Intirmity) that the Fountain of free Grace and Love should stand open for me, so long and so oft as my Case should call for it.

This my Transaction with my whole Soul, without the least Ground of Suspicion of the Want of Sincerity, which I found had been a missing in Endeavours of that Nature formerly, now my blessed Lord helped me to, or rather made in me, and solemnized that Night and Morning ere I came off that Ridge. I confirmed it no less than Ten or Twelve Times, and the oftner I reiterated, the Gale continued so fresh and vigorous, that I was forced to cry, Hold, Lord, for the Sherd is like to burst; so that I hope my dearest Lord is now a coming, and that the Hands of Zerubbabel, who hath laid this Foundation, is now about to finish it; and indeed he is now building very fast, for which my Soul blelleth him, desiring you may joyn with me in so necessary a Work. I hope ere long the Copstone shall be put on, the Result of all which shall be Praises and shouting to him that sits upon the Throne, and to the Lamb throughout all the Ages of Eternity, of long lasting Eternity. This, with my earnest Prayers while in the Body, that the Lord would help you to mind his Glory, and your own Soul's eternal Welfare, is all the Legacy you can expect from him, who is both

Christ's Prisoner,

John Dick.

P. S. I hope, ere I go home, to get another Sight of you. Let none see this till I be in my Grave. The Lord gave me to you freely, so I intreat you be frank in giving me to him again, and the more free this be, the less Cause you shall have to repent.

This dying Martyr's Words upon the Scaffold, and when he was upon the Ladder, are printed at large. I shall only add his last Words from the Manuscript before me. They seem to be enlarged upon in the printed Copy. His last Words upon the Scaffold.

I am come here this Day, and would not change my Lot with the greatest in the World. I lay down my Life willingly and cheerfully for Christ and his Cause, and I heartily forgive all mine Enemies. I forgive all them who gave me my Sentence, and them who were the chief Cause of my taking; and I forgive him who is behind me (i. e. the Executioner.) I advise you who are the Lord's People, to be sincere in the Way of Godliness; and you who know little or nothing of the Power thereof, to come to him, and trust God, he will not disappoint you; I say, trust in the Lord, and he will support or strengthen whatever Trouble or Affliction you may meet with. I remember, when Abraham was about to sacrifice his Son, Isaac said, Here is the Wood and the Fire, but where is the Sacrifice? Now blessed be the Lord, here is the Sacrifice and free-will Offering. Adieu, farewell all Friends.

To return to the Justiciary-records, March 5. the Court have before them the Process relating to Henry Hall of Haugh-head deceased, Mr. John Menzies of Wintercleugh or Hangingshaw, younger of Windycage, Henry Boswel Portioner of Dunsfstown, Robert Steel Portioner of Stain, John Mack Portioner of Hanselwood. They are all of them indicted, and found guilty (in Absence) by an Attize, of being being in Arms with the Rebels, at Bothwel 1679. and are adjudged, except Haugh-head, to be executed and demeaned as Traitors, when apprehended, and are forfeited. Perhaps it is peculiar to this Period, that Persons, a good many Years after their Death, should be proceſſed, Witneſſes led againſt them, and forfeited; and yet there are ſeveral Inſtances of this now.

Thomas Bogle
of Bogles-hole, and Wetherſpoon of Heathbryknow.

We heard before of that good Man Henry Hall. His Eſtate was about Six hundred Merks yearly, and the Laird of Meldrum poſſeſſed it many Years, while his Wife and Children were caſt out and reduced to Straits. I find, by atteſted Accounts before me, that Thomas Bogle of Bogles-hole, and Gavin Wetherſpoon of Heathbryknow, were forfeited for being at Bothwel. Whether it was this Year or formerly, I cannot ſay; if their Names were in the Registers, I have overlooked them.

Diet deſerted
againſt Car-ſairs, Dalſwinton
and others.

March 11. the Juſtices and Advocate are in a good Mood. Anent the criminal Proceſs in Dependence, againſt Sir William Lockhart of Carſairs, Mr. Hugh Maxwell of Dalſwinton, (who, towards the End of this Year, got not ſo well off) John Campbell of Horſecleugh, James Campbell of Greenock-mains, and about Eighty Country People, who are preſent, the Advocate declares his Maſteſty hath ordered the Diet to be deſerted againſt them; and the Lords deſert it ſimpliciter.

Upon the 17 of March, the famous Trial of Ceſnock comes on, which I leave to the next Section. The laſt of March, about Thirty ſix, moſtly Tradeſmen, are deſerted; and that ſame Day, James Spreul Apothecary in Paiſly, now proſecuted for being in the late Rebellion, was declared Fugitive, becauſe he does not compear.

But let us take Notice of what is doing at Glaſgow, by thoſe Perſons, we heard, were clothed with a Juſticiary Power. There are no Records of the Proceedings of theſe Commiſſioners, either at Glaſgow or Dumfries, that I have ſeen; and I ſhall give ſome Account of them from other Papers and Narratives come to my Hand.

Five condemned
and executed
at Glaſgow,
March 19.

March 19. Five worthy and good Men were executed at the Croſs of Glaſgow, upon a slender a Probation as ever was ſuſtained in any Caſe, far leſs in a criminal Proceſs for Perſons Lives, John Richmond, James Winning, Archibald Stuart, James Johnſtoun, and John Main.

John Richmond.

We have, upon the laſt Year, heard how ſome of them were ſeized. John Richmond was pretended to have been at Airs-moſs, but no Probation was ever brought. He was taken in Glaſgow as he was walking in the Street, giving no Provocation, by Major Balfour. When he offered to ſeize him, John endeavoured to eſcape, but was ſoon apprehended, and moſt cruelly uſed, tho' they knew not as yet who he was, and had nothing to lay to his Charge, ſave his fleeing when they offered to apprehend him. He was thence carried to the Guard, and moſt unmercifully bound, his Heels and his Neck together, and left lying on the Ground bleeding of his Wounds and Bruiſes. In this Poſture he lay a good many Hours, and declared afterward, he never enjoyed a ſweeter Time, and felt no Pain. Next Day he was put in Priſon, where he continued till he got his Indictment with the reſt.

James Winning.

James Winning Taylor in Glaſgow, February this Year, upon ſome Information or other, was called out of his own Houſe, to compear before one of the Bailies, by a Town-officer; and being interrogate anent Bothwel, and the Biſhop's Death, and not giving ſatisfying Answers, he was ſtraight ſent to Priſon, and indicted with the reſt. Archibald Stuart was a Country Man in the Pariſh of Leſmahago, James Johnſtoun lived in the Pariſh of Calder, near Glaſgow, and John Main belonged to the Pariſh of Old-monkland.

Archibald Stuart,
James Johnſtoun,
John Main.

Their Proceſs.

Upon the 17 of March, theſe Five were tried for their Lives by the ſpecial Commiſſion given, above narrated. The Perſons preſent were Lieutenant-colonel Windram Preſes, Sir William Fleming, Sir James Turner, Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, John Somerwel of Spittle Sheriff-depute of Lanerk, and William Stirling before deſigned; and John Jones Writer in Glaſgow was Procurator Fiſcal. I ſhall give their Trial as I have it from a mournful Spectator, now a reverend Miniſter.

Their Indictment ran upon their being at Bothwel, and their being acceſſory to other Inſurrections, and Reſet and Converſe. A great many Witneſſes were adduced, but nothing deponed which could militate againſt their Life, even by the preſent Laws, the Reader may judge by a Taſte of the Depoſitions. One Witneſs deponed, that he ſaw John Richmond at Airs-moſs in Arms: The Preſes asked him, how far diſtant he was from the Pannel. He answered, about Half a Mile; yet this was ſuſtained, and indeed the only Proof they had againſt him. Another Witneſs, adduced againſt John Main, being interrogate, if he ſaw John among the Rebels with Arms, answered, he ſaw him coming from the Eaſtward, and going Weſtward. The Clerk was ordered to mark that Depoſition, which the Preſes ſaid was material, and commanded him to write, Depones, he ſaw John Main coming to the Rebels, and going from them in Arms. Whereas the Deponent ſaid no ſuch Thing.

When James Winning was interrogate, if he had any thing to object againſt the Witneſſes, he answered, he had no Objection; but ſolemnly profeſſed, as he was to answer to God at the laſt Day, he never carried Arms in his Life, for or againſt any Man. Windram answered ivered him, it was enough if he was in Company with the Rebels, tho' he had but his Needle with him. In short, my Informer assures me, he could not observe the least Shadow of a Proof against any of them.

John Main, in his printed Testimony, makes it appear, that none of the Articles of his Indictment were capital, and gives this Account of his Trial. As to his escaping out of Prison, it was not to be charged upon him, but his Keeper; that he was at Bothwell, but only as an Onlooker; that he had conversed with one Gavin Wotherpoon, who was asserted to be a Rebel, but not proven one; that indeed he had not termed Bothwell a Rebellion, neither would he renounce the Covenants; that his Silence as to the King's Authority could never in Law be made Treason; that as to King Charles I. his Death, he knew nothing about it; and as to the Archbishop's, he would not judge of that Action.

The Articles insisted upon in their Examination against the rest, were much the same with those, and it was chiefly upon their Silence as to the Three last, they were put to Death: All of them died in much Comfort, Peace, and the utmost Cheerfulness. The Christian Magnanimity and Delight under which Archibald Stuart, a Youth scarce Nineteen Years, died, was observed by many. Amongst other moving Expressions at his Execution, he had this. I die not by Constraint, but willingly, and this I can say, I am more willing to die for my lovely Lord Christ, and his Work and Truths, than ever I was to live. In short, all of them died in a forgiving Temper, praying earnestly for Pardon to their Persecutors, and yet warned them of their Hazard, if they continued in these Courses without Repentance. These Five good Men ly buried, with other Sufferers, in the high Church-yard of Glasgow.

Their Sentence and Execution

At their Execution, Gavin Black in Monkland was seized by the Soldiers, upon mere Suspicion, and some Tokens of Sorrow appearing in him, and put in Prison; and when upon Examination, he did not satisfy their Queries, he was in a few Weeks with many others banished to Carolina.

Gavin Black

And at their Burial, James Nisbet, a Relation of one of them who were executed, was taken by one of the Soldiers of his Name. We shall just now meet with him in June, dying a publick Death. The Persecutors and Soldiers were very narrow in their Observations at such publick Executions, and, as if they resolved to counter the known Truth, Sanguis martyrum semen Ecclesie, when People appeared affected at them, or the Burials of such as were allowed publick Burial, they picked them up to fill the next Stage with Blood.

James Nisbet

I return again to the Criminal Court at Edinburgh. And April 1. I find Mr. John Banantyne of Corehouse, formerly mentioned, George Ramsay of Idlington, Sir Patrick Hepburn of Blackcastle, Alexander Hume of Abbey of St. Bathans, George Houstoun of Johnstoun, Archibald Crawford of Auchmains, Sir John Rid-el of that Ilk, Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock, John Chiegly of Carfswel, James Dunlop of Houshill, indicted of Refet and Converse, and doing Favours to Rebels, as mentioned in their Dittays in the porteous Rolls. All of them offer to abide a legal Trial, and their Diet is deserted simpliciter.

Diet deserted against many Gentlemen, and yet afterwards they are attacked.

April 2. we have another Set of Gentlemen indicted as the former were; Alexander Dunlop of that Ilk, Alexander Hamilton of Kinkel, James Hamilton of Aikenhead, Fergus McCubbin of Knockdallien, John Bog of Dornel, Hugh Dunbar of Knockshinnoch, Francis Gladstones of Whitelaw, Gideon Scot of Atterside, Robert Johnstoun of Craigie-land, Robert Gourlay of Kepdarroch, Mr. William Fullarton of that Ilk, George Fullarton of Dreghorn, George Muirhead of Lauchop, James Stuart of Hartwood, James Gordon Merchant in Dumfries, John Forrester of Thirty-acres, William Cunningham of Buquhan, Sir William Scot of Harden elder. They offer to abide their Trial, and the Diet is deserted simpliciter. I need not remark, that those Gentlemen and many others were put to vast Charges and Trouble in waiting on since August last, besides the Money a good many of them had to give to the Clerks and others before their Diets were deserted, and they had Extracts. And many of them had been all this Time confined to Edinburgh, and some of them imprisoned, and yet at the next Circuits most part of them were of new attacked.

April 5. I find the Lords of the Judiciary desert the Diet against about Sixteen Feuars and Tradesmen, whose Names I insert not. And that same Day Andrew Gibson Merchant in Glasgow, John Balmeno there, John Maxwell of Gribroun, and about Twenty others, are deserted. And April 7. Mr. Andrew Hay of Craignethan, John Hamilton of Halraig, Thomas Ker of Grange, and the Laird of Mauldsley, are deserted. Upon the Eighth and Ninth the Process against the Earl of Lowdon, and some others comes in, which I leave to the next Session.

April 10. James Howison, Maltman in Lanerk, is indicted for being at Bothwell. The Witnesses prove he was in Company with some of the West-country Army without Arms; and the Aize bring him in as guilty of being with the Rebels, but without Arms. The Case was this; he lived at Lanerk, and when a Party of the West-country Army came there he, as all who were in the Place, was obliged either to retire or converse with them; and this is all the Witnesses prove. Yet the Lords sentence him to be hanged at the Grass-market, November 12. and forfeit his Lands and Goods to his Majesty.

James Howison in Lanerk sentenced.

April 16. the Trial of that gallant and good Man John Paton of Medow-head, in the Pa-

John Paton of Medow-head.

His Indictment.

rith of Finwick comes on. He was commonly called Captain Paton, and had some Command at Bothwell, if not at Pentland also. 'April last, I find the Council order a Reward of Twenty Pounds Stirling to Cornet Lewis Lawder, for apprehending John Paton, a notorious Rebel these eighteen Years.' And 'tis probable he was taken some Time this Month, since ordinarily the Trial of Persons in his Circumstances was not long delayed.

When before the Justiciary he is indicted for being with the Rebels, both at Glasgow and Bothwell, as a Captain. The Advocate ex superabundanti passes his being at Pentland, and indicts upon his being at Bothwell. The Lords find the Libel relevant; and for Probation he adduced his own Confession before the Council. 'John Paton in Meadow-head, in Finwick Parish, confesses, he was taken lately in the Parish of Merns, in the House of Robert Howie in Floak; that he haunted ordinarily in the Fields and Muirs. Confesses, he was invited by the Country People to go out in the Year 1666. and commanded a Party at Pentland. Confesses, he joyned the Rebels at Glasgow about eight Days before the Engagement, and was with them that Morning before the Engagement.' Refuses to sign.

The Affize had no more to cognosce upon but his Confession, and bring him in guilty, and the Lords sentence him to be hanged at the Grass-market, Wednesday the 23 of April. By other Papers I find he was charged, when before the Council, with his being at Mauchlin-muir, and being a Rebel since the Year 1640. and a great Opposer of Montrose. It is probable he was there, but there was no Probation, and this was not insisted upon. He was interrogate, if he acknowledged Authority; he answered, he owned all Authority allowed by the Word of God. But the precise Point upon which he died, was his being at Bothwell.

He was prevailed upon to supplicate the Council, and there were several there who inclined to favour him; but he remarks in his Speech, that the Prelates effectually stopped that. However I find April 17. the Council, upon his Petition, continue his Execution to Wednesday the 30 instant. In the Narrative they say, he is condemned for his Accession to Pentland, Bothwell, and other Crimes. And the Council Records April 30. bear, 'John Paton in Meadow-head sentenced to die for Rebellion, and thereafter remaining in Mollies and Muirs, to the high Contempt of Authority, for which he hath given all Satisfaction that Law requires, reprieved till Friday come Sennight, and to have a Room by himself, that he may prepare more conveniently for Death.'

This is so favourable a Record for him, that I apprehend the Bishops have not been present: And indeed it looks as if some Favour had been designed; but it took no Effect, for Friday the 9 of May he was executed, when he died most cheerfully, forgiving all his Persecutors, Instigators, Reproachers, Soldiers, Apprehenders, Privy Council and Justiciary, in whatever they had done to him. But as to what they had done in Despite to the Image of God, and against his Work, he declared it was not in his Power to forgive, but heartily wished they might seek Forgiveness of him who had it to give, and that they would do no more Wickedness.

Now Executions turn pretty throng; and James Nisbet, in the Parish of Lowdon, was hanged at the Howgate-head near Glasgow, in June. I have seen nothing of his Trial, and I take it to have been before the Commissioners for Justiciary there. It hath been already observed, that this zealous good Man was taken at the Burial of John Richmond, and those who were executed with him in March. He was acquaint with most part, and had been intimate with some of them, and came into Glasgow to pay his last Respects to them at their Burial, and there being known, he was apprehended by Lieutenant Nisbet a Cousin German of his own; so much does a bitter persecuting Spirit break all the Bonds of Nature it self, and get over the nearest Blood Relations.

He was straight carried to the Guard, where he was soon entangled with their captious Questions, the Catechism of this Period, and sent to Prison. His Sentence ran upon the common Crimes, now made mortal Sins, which I need scarce resume. He owned Drumclog and Bothwell lawful, in as far as they were Acts of Self-defence, and Appearances for the Gospel. He refused to renounce the Covenants, and to own the King's Authority, as he expressed, in so far as he had made the Work of Reformation and Covenants, Treason. After he was condemned, he was offered his Life, if he would acknowledge the King's Headship and Supremacy over the Church, which they well knew he would never do. He was hardly enough used, and so closely watched, as he could scarce get any Thing writ to his Friends in Prison; yet he got a Testimony writ, in which he complains he got only Liberty to write incoherently. He begins with this Expression, 'I am come here to lay down my Life for the Testimony of Jesus, for asserting him to be King and Head of his own House, and for no Matter of Fact they have against me.'

And it will be a lasting Blot upon this Time, that so many good Men, against whom they had nothing but Matter of Sentiment and Opinion, and who had never been in any Rising against the Government, were thus from Time to Time cut off. He died in much Peace, and full Assurance. And they saw good to execute him a little out of the Town, and not at the Cross, which very little diminished the Confluence.

To return again to Edinburgh: In May and June, I observe many have their Diets deserted, because the Lords find they have lien long in Prison, and no Probation offers against them. And July 3. about Thirty common People and Tradesmen are deserted. And through several Diets this Month, near Three hundred Tradesmen and common People, have their Diets deserted. It would be endless to go through them all. And July 6. the Lairds of Kirkcaldy, Newtown and Ochiltree, are continued till November.

July 24. Arthur Tacket in Hamiltoun, is condemned upon his former Sentence. We heard of him before, and how hardly he escaped at Bothwell. He was a Taylor in Hamiltoun, and taken as coming from a Sermon, either that at Blacklock, or some other, at which Mr. Renwick preached. By the Council Registers July 1. I find, 'Duke Hamilton informs the Council, that Arthur Tacket, now a Prisoner, is an Heritor, and forfeited for the Rebellion. The Lords leave to the Justices, to proceed against him according to their Sentence of Forfeiture.' And July 22. Arthur Tacket confesseth before the Council, that he was in the Rebellion at Bothwell, and lately with the Rebels who were in Arms in the Shire of Lancark.

Arthur Tacket,

The Lords ordain him to be questioned by Torture, to Morrow at Nine of the Clock, before the Committee for publick Affairs. The Occasion of this Severity was, that the Youth peremptorily refused to tell who preached, and whom he had seen at the foresaid Sermon. Torture, even for Discovery of Treason, is hard enough, but Torture for a bare Discovery of a Minister who preached, and such as heard at a Field-conventicle, when the first was Death, was yet severer.

Put to the Torture.

When brought before the Council, or their Committee, in order to Torture, the Advocate declared to him, and offered to give it under the Hands of all present, that if he would be ingenuous and free upon all that was to be asked, what he said should never militate against himself, or any other Man. Arthur answered, he could not credit them, since they had broken their Promises, Oaths and Subscriptions to God and Man, and he could not think they would press him so much to declare who preached, if they were to make no Use of what he said. Whereupon the Hangman was commanded to open the Boot, and he laid his Leg in it. When he was going on, the Chirurgeon present desired he might desist a little, and taking the Advocate aside, told him, that Arthur was very young, and his Leg so small, that a few Strokes would crush it to Pieces, and seeing they were determined to take his Life, and it was probable nothing could be extorted, he moved they would forbear. Upon this the Advocate ordered the Thumbkins to be brought, which he endured without making any Discovery.

Circumstances of his Torture.

The Lords of the Justiciary, upon the foresaid Day, find, 'that Arthur Tacket being upon the 21 of March 1681. found guilty, by an Assize, of being in the Rebellion 1679. and adjudged to be demeaned and executed as a Traitor when apprehended, he being now apprehended, the Lords appoint him to be hanged at the Grass-market, Wednesday July 30. 'twixt Two and four in the Afternoon.' He had been forfeited in Absence, and now, tho' they had his Confession, yet they only adhere to their former Sentence. We heard he was at Bothwell, when he was scarce 17 Years of Age. Accordingly he was executed, and died most Christianly, forgiving his Enemies, and owning all Magistrates superior and inferior, in as far as they are conform to the Word of God, the Covenants, and are a Terror to them that do evil, and a Praise to them that do well. I very much doubt if History can produce Instances of so many prosecuted to the Death for such a Rising as that at Bothwell, so long after, and in so vast Numbers.

Sentence and Execution.

Towards the End of this Month, and the Beginning of August, I find, at different Diets of the Justiciary, near Two hundred deserted, mostly Country People who had been put in the piteous Rolls for Refet and Converse. Probably the Managers had the new Circuits by this Time in View, where many of them were again attacked.

August 5. I find three Men before the Justiciary, other Papers make it the 15. but I have kept by the Date of the Registers, Thomas Harkness in Lockerbane, Andrew Clerk in Leadhills in Crawford, and Samuel McEuen in Glencairn. There was one Thomas Wood in Kirkmichael, who was taken with them, but I do not find him indicted at this Time. In December we shall meet with one of the same Name, and, for what I know, the same Person.

Thomas Harkness
and Samuel McEuen.

I have a particular Account of the Circumstances of taking these Four Men, as follows. Some Days after the Rescue of the Prisoners at Enterkin-path, which we shall meet with in the last Section, Claverhouse and a Party of his Men were searching the Parishes about in great Fury; and in the Parish of Closburn or Dalgerno, they came upon these Four Men in the Fields: Some Accounts before me, say, they were sleeping till awakned by the Soldiers, and at the Sight of them they offered to flee; whereupon the Soldiers pursued, shot at them, and wounded them.

The Soldiers were extremely enraged at this Time, by the Baffle given to the Party at Enterkin-path; and this is the only Excuse can be given for the Fury that now appeared in them, tho' indeed there was too much of this in their ordinary Carriage. All the Houses near to the Place where the Men were found, were presently plundered, the Party presuming, what they were willing to have, that the Neighbourhood was guilty of Resetting them, and few Houses escaped an Hundred Merks, or an Hundred Pounds Loss.

Great were the Severities used upon the Prisoners; they had been wounded when taken, and the Soldiers would not suffer their Wounds to be washed, nor Linens to be applied to them. A poor Woman, who came and offered some Help to them in dressing their Wounds, was seized and carried Prisoner a Part of the Way. They were brought first to Lanerk, and then to Edinburgh. Upon the Road they came to a narrow Pass, where Claverhouse expected to be attacked, and he gave Orders to the Soldiers, as soon as any Man appeared, to kill the Prisoners, tho' they had confessed nothing, and nothing was proven against them. When brought before the Council, Three of the Soldiers deposed, that those Men were at Enterkin-path; and as some of their Papers before me bear, that the Prisoners there received the Wounds they at present had: The Men constantly asserted they were not at Enterkin. Thomas Wood was reserved till afterwards, and the rest that same Day were remitted to the Justiciary, and condemned and executed that very Day, such a Rage were the Persecutors in.

Their Process.

I come now to their Process, as it stands in the Criminal Books. Thomas Harkness and the other Two, were indicted of high Treason, 'in as far as in this Month of August they had engaged with a Party of the King's Soldiers; that they did not own the King's Authority, or denied it; that they refused to call Bothwell, Rebellion; that they had conversed with Persons put to the Horn, and that they had conversed one of them with another being Rebels.' Three Soldiers depone they snapped Guns at them. This is all the Probation I observe adduced. Throughout this Process there are plain Evidences of Hatte and Thirst after Blood. 'The Assize find them guilty of being in Arms, and that one of them presented a Gun to the King's Forces, that they had Ball upon them, that they had conversed with Rebels, denied Authority, and fled from his Majesty's Forces.' Whereupon they are sentenced to be hanged at the Grass-market.

And Sentence.

They were brought into Edinburgh, about one of the Clock, and that same Day they are sentenced, and executed about Five of the Clock. Those plain honest Country People, so quickly hurried into Eternity, drew up a joynt Paper, and left behind them; which breathes so much plain honest Simplicity, and is so short and serious, that the Reader will be pleased to have a Copy of it here. It runs not in the Strain of those contained in the Cloud of Witnesses, and therefore is omitted by them; but in my Opinion it deserves a Room here.

The joynt Testimony of Thomas Harkness, Andrew Clerk and Samuel Mc'euen, from the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, August 5.

Their Testimony.

Dear Friends and Relations whatsoever, We think it fit to acquaint you, that we bless the Lord, that ever we were ordained to give such a publick Testimony, who are so great Sinners. Blessed be he that ever we were born to bear Witness for him; and blessed be the Lord Jesus Christ, that ordained the Gospel and the Truths of it, which he sealed with his own Blood, and many a worthy Christian gone before us hath sealed them. We were questioned for not owning the King's Authority. We answered, that we owned all Authority that is allowed by the written Word of God, sealed by Christ's Blood. Now, our dear Friends, we intreat you to stand to the Truth, and especially all ye that are our own Relations, and all that love and wait for the Coming of Christ. He will come, and not tarry, and reward every one according to their Deeds in the Body. We bless the Lord we are not a whit discouraged, but content to lay down our Life with Cheerfulness, and Boldness, and Courage; and if we had a Hundred Lives, we would willingly quit with them all for the Truth of Christ. Good News! Christ is no worse than he promised. Now we take our Leave of all Friends and Acquaintances, and declare we are heartily content with our Lot, and that he hath brought us hither to witness for him and his Truth. We leave our Testimony against Popery, and all other false Doctrine, that is not according to the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, which is the only Word of God. Dear Friends, be valiant for God, for he is as good as his Promise. Him that overcometh he will make a Pillar in his Temple. Our Time is short, and we have little to spare, having got our Sentence at One of the Clock this Afternoon, and are to die at Five this Day. And so we will say no more, but farewell all Friends and Relations, and welcomie Heaven and Christ, and the Cross for Christ's sake.

Thomas Harkness,
Samuel Mc'euen.

Samuel Mc'euen's
Letter
to a Friend.

If the Reader take as much Pleasure in reading this plain and natural Testimony, as I have done in transcribing it, he will not grudge to have Samuel Mc'euen's Letter he wrote to a Friend after his Sentence was pronounced, since it favours of the same undisguised, cheerful and and pious Spirit, and in its pure and natural Shape, and, I am perswaded, intirely from him- self. 1684.

My dear Friend,

I Am this Day to lay down my Life for adhering to the Truth of God ; and I bless his holy Name, that ever he honoured me, a poor Country Lad, having neither Father or Mother alive, to witness for him. And now I can set to my Seal to all the Truths in the Bible, Confession of Faith, Catechisms larger and shorter, National and Solemn League and Covenant, and to all the Protestations and Declarations given by the poor Remnant, agreeable to the same Word of God.

Tho in much Weakness, yet I love all that is for his Glory, and desire to hate all that he hates, with a perfect Hatred. I desire you not to be discouraged, for, I bless the Lord, I am heartily content with my Lot. It was my Desire, tho' most unworthy, to die a Martyr, and I bless the Lord who has granted me my Desire. Now this is the most joyful Day ever I saw with mine Eyes. Farewel all earthly Enjoyments and Friends, in our sweet Lord Jesus Christ ; and farewel Glencairn my native Parish. Welcome my sweet Saviour, into thy Hands I commit my Spirit, for thou art he, O Jehovah God of Truth, who hast redeemed me.

Samuel M'euen.

When I read such plain, and yet patheticall Productions from Country People, I cannot but be confirmed in the Reality of Religion, and reckon these plain Country Men heavy Witnesses against those who delighted thus in Blood.

The Justiciary are now fallen into the Method of dispatching the Persons before them, and condemning and executing poor People on the same Day, which we shall scarce meet with but in Scotland at this Season. Accordingly August 27. I find other Two sentenced, and dying the same Day, James Nicol and William Young, who, if I mistake it not, is the very same who when essaying to break Prison in the Canongate, was lamed by a Fall, and retaken. The Cloud of Witnesses, nor any other Paper I have seen, take notice of William Young, but the Registers putting him and James Nicol together, I see no Ground to doubt that they underwent the same Fate.

James Nicol, Merchant Burghess in Peebles, was a bold zealous Man: Hitherto he escaped, and was at Edinburgh at the Trial of the last named Three, which affected him very much. He was a mournful Onlooker upon their Process before the Justiciary ; and his Spirit being stirred within him with what he had seen, he was taking his Horse in the Grass-market to go out of the Town, after he had been some time there about Business ; at this Nick of Time the Guard came down with the three Persons last named, to their Execution. This stopped him, and he went in among the Crowd, and stayed till they were executed.

When coming away, in the Bitterness of his Spirit, he said in the Hearing of a good many, These Kine of Bashan have pushed these Three good Men to Death at one Push, contrary to their own base Laws, in a most inhumane Manner. Whereupon he was straight seized, and carried to Prison. In a Day or Two he was brought before the Committee for publick Affairs, and after that before the Council, where he was very bold and plain in his Answers, and was upon the 27 brought before the Justiciary.

By the Registers I find he is indicted for Treason. The Probation was his own Confession, that he was at Bothwell with Arms, that he owns Sanquhar Declaration, and the Paper published at Rutherglen. His Process

At the same Time, William Young in Evandale, is indicted the same way, and his Confession adduced for Evidence: 'That the King is King, or not King, as he keeps the Covenants; that he cannot say he is now King ; confelleth that he heard Mr. Donald Cargil at Field-conventicles since Bothwell ; that he thinks those who were at Bothwell were at their Duty ; that he was present with James Dykes a forfeited Person, at the Attack upon Evandale Castle, to rescue his Brother ; that if he had been old enough, he would have been at Bothwell ; that he would disown the King or any Body else, before he would disown the Covenants.' And that of William Young.

The Assize bring them in both guilty of Treason, by their own Confession, and the Lords sentence them both to be taken to the Grass-market, this present Wednesday, August 27. betwixt Two and Four, and hanged. Accordingly they were executed. Their Sentence and Execution.

The Circumstances of William Young in Evandale were very singular, and I shall add a Hint at them from a good Information before me. He was brought in Prisoner from Evandale to Hamiltoun, and met with great Severity, when carried from thence to Edinburgh, from the Soldiers, who took from him his Wig, and he rode most of the Way with his bare-shaven Head, and his Feet tied beneath the Horse's Belly. This good Man was distempered, and much crazed in his Judgment, for Five Years before he was taken, through a sharp and severe Exercise of Spirit he had been under. However, when upon any serious Conversation, or at Rea-

Reading or Prayer, his Distemper was scarce any way observable; but when out of these Exercises, he was perfectly restless, wrote Letters and threw them out at the Windows, and call them to the Keepers; so that all in the Prison observed it: His Fellow-prisoners cautioned him, as much as possibly they could, when he was called before the Council. When there, his Answers were not out of the Road; and when he came back from the Council and Justiciary, he was very sensible of the Lord's Goodness to him, and said to his Fellows, It had been given him in that Hour, who was a poor foolish Creature, who had much lost the Use of his Reason. He was one of them who escaped out of the Canongate Tolbooth, and would not have been known, if he had not himself told to the Soldiers who were ranging up and down, that he had broken the Tolbooth. He was most barbarously used when sent back to Prison, and his Arms were tied, and his whole Body miserably racked: This he bore with great Patience. He said, that extreme Pain would be intolerable, if eternal, but he was now near the Crown, and rejoiced in the full Assurance of it. Next Day, he was carried before the Justiciary, and sentenced, and straight executed with James Nicol. I have been the larger on this Man's Circumstances, because much of the Power of God, and Rage of Man, must be observed about him.

Mr. John Sinclair
Absence.

September 9. I find Mr. John Sinclair his Process of Forfeiture before the Justiciary. This learned and singularly religious Minister had been a good many Years at Ormiston; and now when it was determined to force all Presbyterian Ministers, either to comply or leave the Country, he choosed to retire out of Harm's Way. I find, April 30. 'The Council being informed, that Mr. John Sinclair, late Minister at Ormiston, hath gone over to Holland, and preached several seditious Sermons, and is about to be settled as a Minister in that Place, remit to the King's Advocate to enquire into his Behaviour whilst here, and, if he find Ground, to process him according to Law.'

This was severe enough Dealing, that when Ministers were retired, to avoid their ensnaring Examinations, in Absence Processes should be raised against them, when settling elsewhere, out of the King's Dominions. What Scandal the Advocate gathered up, I know only by his Indictment, which I am persuaded was false in every Article of it. All who knew this worthy and excellent Person, knew he was far from expressing himself at the Rate here libelled. However, he was cited in the Form that People out of the Country are summoned.

And at the above Diet, this reverend Person is indicted, and pursued for Treason. 'Mr. John Sinclair Minister at Ormiston, now at Delft in Holland, is indicted for preaching treasonable Doctrine and Positions, and his pretting the renewing of the Covenants, and People's taking up Arms against the King; that he declaimed against the King, and called his Royal Brother a rebellious Enemy to God, and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, Rogues; and prayed that God would open his Majesty's Eyes, to see the Evil of his Ways, and turn him from it, [ a Prayer he certainly very much needed ] otherwise that he would take him away from being a Scourge and a Curse to God's People.' And being cited at the Shore and Pier of Leith, and not compearing, the Lords forfeit him, and appoint him to be declared Fugitive and Outlaw, and to be put to the Horn. There is not a Shadow of Proof brought against him for these alledged Expressions; and indeed no Proof of them could be brought.

Act of Council about Citation of Vagrant Preachers, and
Mr. James Renwick.

They had far more Reason, according to their Laws now in Force, to proceed to the Forfeiture of Mr. James Renwick, whom we shall meet with afterwards, as the last who was publicly executed in this Period. August 19. the Council form an Act for the Citation of such as they call vagrant Preachers. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council appoint Mr. James Renwick and other vagrant Preachers, to be summoned by way of Dispensation, at the Cross of Edinburgh, and Pier and Shore of Leith; and those Summons are declared to be as sufficient as if they were personally cited; and, September 16. they order Mr. Renwick to be intercommuned.

Who is indicated and put to the Horn.

And September 19. Mr. James Renwick is indicted before the Lords of Justiciary, for being at Bothwell-bridge, and preaching at Field-conventicles, at Blackloch, Welshole, Craig, Spittal-hole, Greenock, and other Places, and teaching, the King was no King but a Tyrant. Being cited, and not compearing, they decern him Outlaw and Fugitive, and order him to be put to the Horn.

sentenced.

November 11. John Hutchison, Portioner in Newbottle, is processed in Absence. One of the Witnesses declares he saw him with Arms in the Engagement at Bothwell-bridge; another, that he saw him with the Rebels some time before; another, that he saw him in Company with the Rebels at Pentland; and another, that he saw him near Edinburgh about that Time in Arms. The Assize bring him in guilty of being in Arms at Bothwell-bridge and Pentland. The Lords sentence him to be executed, and demeaned as a Traitor, when apprehended, the Time and Place to be named by the Council, and in the mean Time forfeit him.

November 13. and at some following Diets, several Persons were processed, and condemned for the Declaration of War, posted upon the Church-doors, whom I shall leave to a
Section

Section by themselves. That worthy Gentleman, the Laird of Douchal, was likewise condemned to die towards the End of this Month, as shall be narrated in the Section allotted for the Account of his and his neighbouring Gentlemens Fines; and towards the Close of December, that excellent Gentleman Jerviswood was cut off, who will come in upon the following Section.

SECT. IV.

Of the Council and Criminal Processes against the Laird of Cefnock, the Earl of Lowdon, Mr. Spence, the Reverend Mr. William Carstairs, the Laird of Jerviswood, and others alledged to be concerned in the Plot this Year.

OF Design I have left to this Place, the Procedure of the Council and Lords of Justiciary last Year and this, against the noble and excellent Patriots alledged to be concerned in the Rye-house Plot, and I shall give most of what I say about them, from the Records and original Papers, just in the Order of Time they were prosecuted, and take in all that refers to each of them together. I spoke of the Plot in the general last Year, and say no more of that.

August 16. last Year, I find the Council ' appoint the King's Advocate to raise a Process of Treason against the Earl of Lowdon, Lord Melvil, Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, John Cochran his Son, Sir Hugh Campbel of Cefnock elder, Campbel of Cefnock younger, er, the Laird of Rowallan elder and younger, Montgomery of Langshaw, Fairly of Brunsfeld, Bailly of Jerviswood, Crawford younger of Crawfordland, Stuart of Cultness, and Denholm of Westshiels, who being cited before the late Justice-air, upon several Points of Treason, it was made appear to them, that at the Time of their Citation they were out of the Kingdom.'

Process raised Aug. 16. 1683 against the Earl of Lowdon, and others upon the Plot.

November 3. the Procedure of the Scots Council at London in this Matter, is read at Edinburgh, and insert in the Registers. ' At Whitehall October 22. 1683. present the King's Majesty, his Royal Highness the Duke of Tork, the Earls of Murray, Middleton, Sunderland, Mar, Airly, Ancrum, Broadalbin, the Treasurer-depute, Justice-clerk, Advocate, and John Wedderburn of Gosford; His Majesty, with Advice of his Privy Council, orders the Laird of Cefnock and his Son, Rowallan elder and younger, Crawfordland, Brunsfeld, Alexander Monro of Beaucrofts, Jerviswood, Mr. William Carstairs, Hepburn Son to Major Hepburn, Spence Servant to the late Earl of Argyle, Prisoners at London, suspect of high Treason, and some of them accused, to be sent Prisoners to Edinburgh, to be tried according to Law, being Scotsmen.'

Procedure of the Scots Council at London, Nov. 3. 1683.

The English Law could not answer the View they had against them, and our Scots Law is far more arbitrary, at least the Procedure used at this Time would not have gone down in England. Accordingly, those named were sent down, several of them I meet with no more in the Registers, and can say no further of them; but these who were chiefly levelled at we shall meet with in their Order. By a Letter from the King, the Advocate is ordered to prosecute the above named Persons for Treason.

Prisoners sent down to be tried at Edinburgh.

December 10. 1683. ' the Council remit it to the Bishop of Edinburgh, Treasurer-depute, Advocate, and Colonel Graham of Claverhouse, to consider the several Papers sent down from London, and to put together what they find concerning every Prisoner, and to begin with what concerns Spence, and to endeavour to decypher the Letters'

February 21. by the Council-registers I find, that Rowallan younger, upon a Certificate of his Indisposition, hath his Liberty, to abide in his Chamber at Edinburgh, continued till March 21. next, with Caution. We shall afterward find him and others enlarged, but Cefnock's Process now falls in.

The Advocate reports to the Council, that he hath found Matter, as he conceived, to insist against Sir Hugh Campbel of Cefnock for Treason. The Council, February 12. ordain him to insist, and appoint Sir George Lockhart to concur in the said Process with the King's Advocate. The Design of this was plain enough, to hinder that able Lawier, who had vexed them so much in the Earl of Argyle's Process, to be employed by Cefnock. Accordingly, upon Cefnock's Petition February 21. ' he is allowed to employ any Advocates he pleases, and they are warranted to plead, still excepting Sir George Lockhart, he being already ordered to assist the King's Advocate.' However, we shall find Cefnock is not prosecuted upon the Plot, Cefnock ordered to be prosecuted.

Plot, but upon his Accession to Bothwell, and that the Witnesses who had informed against him retracted when in Judgment.

I come now from the Records, and some original Letters writ by a Gentleman present at the Trial, to give a short and distinct Account of the Process against that worthy Gentleman Sir Hugh Campbell elder of Cesnock, a very ancient and honourable Family; and because this Trial was plainly invidious, and every Thing stretched to the utmost Height, I shall give the larger View of it.

Proceedings against him
March 17.

Indictment
March 24.
App. No. 96.
A.

March 24.

Sir Hugh was indicted March 17. and with him John Weir of Newtown, who is continued till April, and the Advocate insists against Cesnock, according to an Act of Council, dated February 16. by which Sir George Lockhart is appointed to concur with the Advocate in this Process. That Day the Process is delayed till March 24. when Cesnock's Indictment was read, and I have inserted it App. No. 96. A.

After his Indictment is read at the Bar, Cesnock himself opened his Case in a long and pathetic Speech, wherein he insisted mostly upon those Points. 'That tho' several Field-conventicles had been kept in the Country where he lived, yet he had permitted none to be upon his Ground; that neither himself, Children, or Servants, had been present at any of them; that as he kept his own Parish Church regularly, so missing Two of his Servants there one Lord's Day, he caused them to be kept out of his Gates till the Sabbath was over, and next Morning called for them, paid them their Wages, and dismissed them; that during the Time of the libelled Rebellion, he was so far from encouraging it, that he retired to Gilchrist, (perhaps writ for Gücherscroft) a strong House, and abode there till it was over; that he had put off his Ground all his Tenants who were said to be at Bothwell, as soon as they were convicted; that if he was found guilty in that Matter, he was most willing to underly the Law, but he knew he was innocent; that one of the Witnesses added against him he never saw before, as far as he knew, but could prove he had declared in several Places, that he would do Cesnock an ill Turn, because he had informed about a Murder he (the Witness) had committed. In short, as to other Defences, he remitted himself to his Advocates.'

the Pannel.

The Advocates for the Pannel were Sir John Lawder, Sir Patrick Hume, Mr. Walter Pringle, Mr. William Fletcher, Mr. John Kincaid, Mr. Colin Mackenzie, Mr. Robert Main, Mr. William Baily, Mr. James Balfour. After reading the Indictment, the King's Advocate moved that the Justices might examine the Witnesses previously before any Trial, this being a Case of Treason, and alledged a Letter from his Majesty to this effect. Mr. Pringle answered, that a previous Warrant ought first to be given by the Council, in Terms of the King's Letter, which was not produced. The Advocate replied, his Warrant produced was as to the whole Process, and no more was needful. The Lords delayed to determine till they advised with the Privy Council.

Council's Warrant for examining Witnesses first.

This little Bit of Form was soon got over; a Council was immediately called, and the Advocate had a Warrant given him. 'Edinburgh March 24. the Lords of Council having considered a Representation by his Majesty's Advocate, of the Necessity of the previous Examination of Witnesses in Cesnock's Process, do, conform to his Majesty's Letter to the Justices, December 20. 1682. give Warrant to them to examine those Witnesses previously.'

Debates of the Lawyers.

When this was produced, the Lawyers entred upon the Cause. Cesnock's Advocates pleaded at a great Length, and with much Force of Reason, and the King's Advocate said all so ill a Cause could bear. In this extraordinary Case, of which no Account has been yet published, the curious Reader will incline to have the Debates as they stand in the Registers. Accordingly, I have added the Defences of Cesnock's Advocates, App. No. 96. B. the King's Advocate's Answers, App. No. 96. C. After hearing of those the Court adjourned till to Morrow, when the Pannel's Advocates made their Duplies, they are inserted App. No. 96. D. and Sir George Lockhart made his to them, App. No. 96. E. To those Cesnock's Lawyers gave their Quadruplies, App. No. 96. F. When these are over, the Court adjourned till next Day the 26 of March.

inserted on.

That Day in the Entry the King's Advocate declared, he passes from the second and last Indictments, pro loco & tempore. The Part of the Libel he and Sir George Lockhart insisted upon was, 'That the said Campbell meeting with the Witnesses coming from the Rebellion, enquired whence, and being answered, from the Westland Army, desired them to return, for they would not want Assistance, adding, He did not like Runaways.'

The Lords debated very long among themselves as to the Relevancy, Replies and Duplies, and at length came to give this Interlocutor.

Lords Interlocutor.

'The Lord Justice-general, Justice-clerk, and other Commissioners of the Justiciary, find that Article, as it is libelled in the last Indictment, That the Pannel having met with the Persons mentioned coming from the Rebels in Arms, June 1679. and having asked them where they had been, and when they had told him they had come from the Westland Army, he said, he had seen more going to them than coming from them, and he having asked them if they were to return, and they answered they knew not, said to them, he liked not Runaways, and that they should get Help if they bide by it; or Words to that Purpose, as they are declared by his Majesty.'

‘ Majesty’s Advocate, viz. That they should have Officers and Help, or some Expressions of Help, relevant to inter the Pain of Treason; and repel the Defence founded upon the Indemnity, and the Defence of alibi as propounded, and all other Defences.’ They find the Libel relevant, and remit it to the Knowledge of an Assize.

I do not find the Lords were unanimous in the Interlocutor, but it carried by Plurality of Voices. Every Body was surpris’d to find that Cesnock’s Defence of proving himself alibi that Day condescended on in the Libel, when he should have uttered the Expressions above set down, to find this most valid Defence, I say, repelled by the Lords; and this was a Presage of what the Issue would have been, had not Probation failed. With this Interlocutor the Court adjourned to the 27.

Upon Thursday the 27. the Assizers were called and sworn, no Objection being made. Their Names are, Sir Robert Dalziel of Glenca, John Boyle of Kelburn, Bannantyne of Kellie, Sir Patrick Maxwell of Springkel, John Veitch of Darwick, James Nasmyth of Tesso, John Skene of Halyards, George Drummond Merchant, Sir James Fleming of Rathohyris, Sir John Dalmahoy of that Ilk, Andrew Frazer of Kilmundie, Alexander Nisbet of Craigen-inny, James Somerwel of Drum, James Boyd Merchant in Edinburgh, James Lock of Drylie. For Probation the Advocate produceth Thomas Ingham and David Craze-ford.

Assizers called and sworn,
with their Names.

Sir Patrick Hume objected for the Pannel, that they could not be admitted, ‘ because prodiderunt testimonium, and revealed what they would say to his Majesty’s Advocate and others; and also, that his Majesty’s Advocate had taken their Oath previous to any Warrant from his Majesty’s Privy Council, which is contrary to his Majesty’s Letter, that being only recommended to the Lords Commissioners of Juiciary, by an express Warrant from the Lords of Council; and it is a certain Rule in Law, that testis revelans testimonium suum partibus, a testimonio repellitur, and the Reason given by Lawyers is, ne ex istius dicto alii testes subornentur. Mascard. de prob. concl. 359. N<sup>o</sup>. 40. 2do. Because in proving the pretended Crime, they acknowledged themselves guilty of the Crime whereof the Pannel is accused, as is clear from the common Law, Cod. de accus. § inscript. 3tio. Because it is offered to be proven, that Ingham did prompt and sollicit others to depone in this Cause, and so has given partial Counsel. 4to. Et separatim, because they bear Hatred and Malice to the Defender; and it is positively offered to be proven, that since the Rebellion he promised to meet the Defender with an evil Turn if it lay in his Power by any Manner of Way out of Hell; and it is clear by our Law, Statut. 2. Rob. I. Chap. 34. against those that are excluded from bearing Witnesses, that nec socii, nec participes ejusdem criminis, nec aliquis hostis seu malevolus parti, nec incarcerati, nec vinculati, can be admitted Witnesses.’

Debates about the Witnesses,
March 17.

His Majesty’s Advocate opposes to the first, the constant Practice of his Predecessors, whereby they have been always in Custom to examine Witnesses upon Oath before intenting of the Libel, which a Judge or Privy Counsellor of the Nation may do both in Scotland and England, and his Majesty’s Letter was only necessary after intenting of a Libel, for a Warrant to the Judges who were not formerly in Use to examine, tho’ they might always have done it.

To the Second his Majesty’s Advocate opposes the constant and uncontroverted Custom, nor could the Crime of Rebellion, or any other privileged Crime be otherwise proven, for who can depone but they who are conscii, and all conscii are socii criminis.

As to the Third, his Majesty’s Advocate alledges the same is not relevant, except the Malice could be qualified to raise an inimicitia capitalis, which can only repel a Witness, especially in the privileged Crime of Treason, whereof the Detection is of such Importance, that many Specialities, as to Witnesses in other Crimes, are relaxed in this, and therefore the promising of an evil Turn is not relevant, nor the Quality, tho’ they should go to Hell for it, which is a rash, foolish, and inconsiderate Expression, but they may condescend upon the Ground upon which that inimicitia capitalis arose, and which may very much determine the Extent of it.

2do. Adhering to the former Objection, it is added separatim, that the Witnesses were suborned, in so as they were prompt, solicit, and instigate to depone in this Cause against the Defender: As also, that they solicited other Persons to be likewise Witnesses against the Defender, which the Lawyers clearly make a sufficient Subornation to cast them from being Witnesses, especially when they are to depone upon premeditate and formal Words, and after so long a Time, as is clear from Mascard. Con. 341. and particularly, that he instigated Adam Miller to be a Witness against the Defender.

His Majesty’s Advocate answers, 1mo. That tampering and soliciting non relevant, unless it take Effect, and the Witnesses succumb to the Temptation. 2do. It is not relevant, except the Money or good Deed were condescended upon, that it may be known if it be a sufficient Temptation, and upon what Account it was given. 3tio. The Subornation or Corruption must be by the Pursuer, or some having Warrant from him, for else even the Friends of the Pannel may take Pains and corrupt, and a Witness being desirous to come off may comply with it, all which should much hold in Witnesses called for the King, which are presumed to be from Calumny, and where no Advantage can arise to any private Party.

As to the speaking to Adam Miller, Can thou not say, or knows thou not that Cefnock spake such Words. It is answered, It is lawful for Contestes to ask at one another.

Sir George Lockhart answered, That the Objection anent corrupting the Witnesses is not relevant, unless the Quantity of the Money were condescended on, and that it were expressly alledged that Money were given upon the account of deponing against the Pannel in the Terms libelled, otherwise the simple giving of Money is not relevant. 2do. The Time must also be condescended upon, whether it was before or after the Citation as a Witness, or at least after the raising of the criminal Letters, for if it was before, it is not relevant, unless it were positively offered to be proven, that it was given upon Treaty and Agreement, that the Witness should depone in the Terms libelled against the Defender, and adheres to the former Answer, that the Pursuer nor none for him did use any Attempts of Corruption.

Mr. William Fletcher duplies, That Subornation and Corruption being latent Acts which cannot be proven by any other Probation than Conjectures and indicia, all Lawyers have sustained such Probation which doth arise from violent Suspicions, and it is sufficient for the Defender to condescend in general that Witnesses were suborned, instructed, and solicited, and what Money was given, or good Deed promised, will arise from the Probation; and it is absolutely impossible, that in any such Case, the Party who objects against the Witness can be special as to the Quantity of the Money; and it imports not, tho' the Witness had been practised before the Accusation, seeing it is positively offered to be proven, that they were suborned and corrupted in relation to the Pannel, and that they might depone against him.

This is what I find in the Registers as to the Lawyers Debates upon the Witnesses. By other Papers I find that Sir Hugh was asked, if he had any Thing to say as to Ingrham in particular. He answered, with the strongest Assurances, that he was most certain he had never seen him in the Face, and as to other Objections he left them to his Lawyers.

His Advocates urged very forcibly, that Ingrham could not be admitted, because he just now took upon him to prove, that the said Thomas had several Times said, that if there was a Way out of Hell how to be avenged upon the Pannel for delating him as a Murderer, he would be revenged, and straight offered Witnesses to prove, that in many Companies, he (the Witness) had most seriously exprest himself in these Words, and urged, that Ingrham could not be admitted to Cefnock's Prejudice, and cited many famous Lawyers to prove this.

The King's Advocate replied, That giving, but not granting, that the said Ingrham had thus exprest himself in a Passion, it could not rationally be thought, that now in cold Blood he would so desperately and wilfully damn his own Soul by Perjury, to take away the Life of an innocent Gentleman, especially considering he could propose no other Reward to himself than Damnation. He added further, 'to make it evident to the World, that the Witnesses have no Design to swear falsely, I am free to declare, that when they were brought in to me, I examined if they could say any Thing anent the late Rebellion, and Cefnock's Accession thereunto. They answered, they could say nothing; but when once I had made them swear as to what I should interrogate them, they deposed in the same express Words contained in the Indictment, which, added he, clearly evinceth that they had, and yet have the Impression upon their Consciences of that dreadful Majesty of God, who is Judge to this and all their Actions: And the Advocate goes on, had this Man come in voluntarily and offered to depone against Cefnock, it would have said much; but seeing he was brought in by Force, and without his own Inclination, the Objection made against him can be of no Force.' This Discourse was abundantly well calculate, for keeping Ingrham firm to the Deposition he had emitted in the Precognition, which was all the Advocate wanted.

Cefnock's Advocate was in no Difficulty to answer all the Advocate advanced. It was the easiest Thing in the World to put Matters in this Chancel to serve a Turn; and People of no Conscience, or under the Power of Revenge, have no great Impressions of Damnation, or of God and his awful Majesty: And if any who adduced these Considerations were privy to any Concert and Collusion in this Matter, they have had as little Impression of those tremendous Truths.

But further, the Advocate for the Defender offered to prove that this Witness was suborned to swear against Cefnock, and had got largely both of Money and Victual for his Reward, and had not only sold himself to this abominable Perjury, but had inticed and induced others to the same Course.

Upon this Allegation the Justice-general desired, that Particulars might be condescended upon. And Sir Hugh declared, that he was well informed, and would instantly prove it, that this Fellow (Ingrham) was hired by Hugh Wallace, sometime Factor to the deceased Lord Craigie.

When this Condescension was made, the Court could not but admit Cefnock's Witnesses for the Proof of what was advanced. Accordingly, Two Witnesses were adduced who deposed that Thomas Ingrham had sworn in their Hearing and Presence a great Oath, That he would be avenged upon Cefnock if there was a Way out of Hell to do it. Great Pains was taken to to cross-question the Witnesses, and the Interrogatories were put to them severally in the others Absence, yet they exactly agreed in every Word as to this Matter: But then in another Query, viz. When spake you of this Matter together? The one answered, He does not remember that ever they spake of it together, unless it was yesternight; and the other declared, He did not remember they communed at all upon it. This inconsiderable Variation not affecting the Matter of the Cause, was Handle enough to such who were seeking an Occasion to cast every Thing proposed in Cesnock's Defence.

Next, Two other Witnesses were adduced, viz. Ingrham's Father and Mother, who deposed they had seen Wallace give to Ingrham several Pieces of Money, but of what Value they could not tell; whereupon Ingrham himself was interrogate, and declared he had got from Wallace Half a Crown at one Time, and Ten Shillings at another, but he knew not upon what Design. The King's Advocate said, it might be Wallace had given Ingrham that Money for some Services he had imployed him in; and that he himself used to imploy the said Wallace as being a sharp Man, and very active for his Majesty's Interest.

After the Lords had heard these Debates upon the Witnesses, they reasoned at a considerable length upon them before they came to an Interlocutor. That eminent Lawier, my Lord Pitmedden, debated much whether Witnesses could be examined upon Oath in a Precognition, and brought such Arguments against this as could not be answered, save by the King's Letter allowing it, impetrate with an Eye to this and such like Processes. My Lord himself was pleased to inform me, ' That he moved to the Lords, at least that this might be done; since by the King's Letter the Witnesses Oaths had been taken, that before they were readmitted to swear in the same Affair, their former Depositions might be torn. But this, for as highly reasonable as it must appear, was peremptorily refused. However (added he) the Witnesses in presence of the Assize, deposed in favours of the Pannel contrary to the Tenor of their first Depositions, which they were said to have given in the first Precognition. ' At length the Lords came to this Interlocutor. ' The Lords having considered the Objections against the Witnesses, and the Debate thereanent, they, in respect of the Answers, repel the Objection anent proditio testimonii, and repel the second Defence as to socii criminis. And the Lords having considered the other Objections, and heard the Witnesses adduced by the Pannel for proving the same, ordain Thomas Ingrham and the rest of the Witnesses adduced by his Majesty's Advocate, to be received.

When Ingrham was brought in, and holding up his Hand to swear, Sir Hugh directed himself to him, and said, ' Take heed now what you are about to do, and damn not your own Soul by Perjury, for as I shall answer to God, and upon the Peril of mine own Soul, I am here ready to declare I never saw you in the Face before this Process, nor spake to you. '

Then Ingrham was solemnly sworn, and interrogate upon the whole Articles of the Libel. Several Things fell in this Witness his Examination, which we cannot expect to meet with in the Registers. And therefore I shall give the Deposition of both the Witnesses as they are recorded, and then a larger Account of the Circumstances from good Vouchers before me.

' Thomas Ingrham in Borlands, aged Thirty Two Years, deposes, That having met the Laird of Cesnock, at Daniel Crawford's House in Galstoun, in the Time libelled, he heard Cesnock ask from whence they came, and Daniel answered, from the West-land Party; and that he asked, who commanded them, Crawford said, One Hamilton. And the Deponent being interrogate upon the rest of the Libel, deposes he knows nothing of it. And this is the Truth, as he shall answer; and cannot write. '

Depositions of the Witnesses.

Daniel Crawford deposes negatively to the whole Libel. And this is the Truth, &c.

Daniel Crawford.

' The Assize, with one Voice, finds the Libel not proven. '

Jo. Dalmahoy.

Thus the Process stands in the Records, and more we could not look for. But it is worth the Reader's while to have the Detail of the Circumstances of this remarkable Examination from the Papers above mentioned. And they inform me, that Ingrham deposed, that being in the House of Crawford, Cesnock came to the Door, and having called upon the said Crawford, he asked, what Men those were who were in his House; Crawford answered, they were Men lately come from the West-land Army. Then Cesnock asked, Who commands there. Crawford answered, One Robert Hamilton. As Ingrham was going on in his Deposition, one of Cesnock's Lawyers asked him, Whether he had communicated this to any others, to seduce them thus to depone, and told him, he was now under a deep Oath, and nothing less than his Soul at Stake. Ingrham answered, I believe I have spoken of it to severals. Then the Justice-general asked, if Cesnock spake any other Words to Crawford; Ingrham answered, My Lord, I am now upon my great Oath, and I declare I do not remember he spake any more at all.

Upon this there was a great Shout, and Clapping of Hands in the Court ; at which the King's Advocate said in a great Passion, that he believed that Cesnock had hired his Friends to make this Acclamation, in order to confound the King's Evidence, and he never heard of such a Protestant Rore, except in the Trial of Shaftsbury ; that he had always a Kindness for that Perswasion till now ; that he was convinced in his Conscience, it hugs the most damnable Trinket in Nature.

After Silence, the Justice-general interrogates Ingrham again ; who answered, He had said as much as he could say upon Oath. And the Justice-general offering a third Time to interrogate Ingrham, Nisbet of Craigentinny, one of the Affizers, rose up and said, ' My Lord Justice-general, I have been an Affizer in this Court above Twenty Times, and never heard a Witness interrogate upon the same Thing more than twice ; and let Cesnock's Perswasion be what it will, we who are Affizers and are to cognosce upon the Probation upon the Peril of our Souls, will take notice only to Ingrham's first Deposition, though your Lordship should interrogate him Twenty Times. ' The Justice-general answered him with Warmth, Sir, you are not Judges in this Case. The Laird of Drum, another of the Affizers, presently replied, Yes, my Lord, we are only competent Judges as to the Probation, tho' not of its Relevancy. Whereupon the whole Affizers rose up and assented to what those said. The Justice-general in a great Heat said, ' I never saw such an Uprore in this Court, nor, I believe, any of my Predecessors before me, and it is not us you condemn, but his Majesty's Authority. '

Silence being commanded, Craveford the other Witness was called in, who being deeply sworn, and no Objection being made against him, he deponed negative, ' That he did not see Cesnock for a considerable Time either before or after Bothwell-bridge ; that he does not remember that Cesnock spake any Thing to him, either about the Well-land Army, or who commanded them. '

Whereupon there was another great Cry made, and Clapping of Hands, which put the Justice-general and Advocate into a great Rage, as what they reckoned an irreverent Insulting of the Court. Then Cesnock's Advocates craved the Probation might be remitted to the Knowledge of the Affize, which could not be refused. And after a short Speech made to them by Cesnock's Lawyers, they inclosed themselves, and very soon returned their Verdict, not guilty.

The Court
refuse to liberate Cesnock.

Upon which Cesnock took Instruments, and his Advocate craved he might be liberate, in respect nothing was proven against him. The Justice-general answered, that seeing he was the King's Prisoner, they must have his Majesty's Mind before he be liberate. Cesnock replied, that he was content, for he was abundantly certain, the Guilt charged upon him could never be proven. The Court sat late, or rather early, it being about Two of the Clock on Friday Morning before they rose, and Cesnock was returned to Prison.

Reflections
upon this Process.

It is very evident upon the whole, there was a Design formed to bring this worthy Gentleman under a Sentence of Death, and at least to take his Estate from him, tho' there were few Gentlemen less obnoxious to the Laws than he. We see that now no Methods were boggled at, tho' never so vile, to accomplish wicked Designs. Suborning of Witnesses is very palpable in this Case ; who were guilty is not my Province to determine : And the King must be drawn into this Affair, by procuring a Letter, which we have seen above, ordering Precognitions to be taken upon Oath by the Justiciary ; and yet we find in this Case they were taken by the Advocate alone.

It may be proper further to remark, in order to the Reader's having some Idea of this Government, that the Justice Court, which ought to be most just and fair, and give all Allowances in Cases relating to Mens Lives that Law and Equity suggest, were in this Case evidently partial in refusing the relevant Exculpation of alibi, at the Time libelled, in calling Cesnock's Witnesses for Exculpation, and repelling the most relevant Defence propounded upon a trifling Circumstance ; and in their unaccountable Carriage to Ingrham when upon Oath, and their open Endeavours to push him to Perjury, so plain, as the Affizers, none of them Presbyterians nor Favourers of the Sufferers, could not bear them ; and in their hectoring and abusing these Gentlemen, for acting as conscientious Persons would do.

And if those were their Methods with Gentlemen and before Lawyers, we may easily guess, how little Justice or Equity poor simple Country People, who could not bell the Cat with them, had to look for. And what sad Work would we meet with, if we had full Accounts of their Procedure from one who knew Forms and Law, and had been a Witness to their Procedure !

Persons persecuted for the Acclamations at Cesnock's
Trial.

I cannot pass this Process without remarking, that several of the Affizers, and other Gentlemen in the House, were brought to no small Trouble for the Noise in the Court, at Ingrham's declaring he could say no more, which the Advocate was pleased to call a Protestant Rore. And indeed so he might, for it was an Evidence of the Satisfaction of the Spectators, at the misgiving of the Design of the Managers now giving into a Popish Successor, and tyrannical and arbitrary Measures. Several were brought before the Council, and by them remitted to crave Pardon of the Justiciary. I give it as it stands in the Criminal Books, April 24. Appear.

• Appeared Sir Patrick Maxwell of Springkel, Alexander Nisbet of Craigentenny, James Lindsay of Drumbuig, being pursued before the Council, for making a Noise in the Time of Cefnock's Trial when the Witnesses were examined, and were ordained to appear before this Court, and make Acknowledgment and Apology therefore, which this Day they did.

We shall just now hear, that April 17. Cefnock was allowed free Prison. And June 19. I find by the Registers that the Witnesses against Cefnock are still in Prison, but that Day the Council allow them free Prison; and, for any Thing I know, they continued a considerable Time in Prison: For September 16. the Council ordain Ingham and Crawford, Witnesses against Cefnock, to be examined by the Committee for publick Affairs. The Day before, September 15. they send Cefnock and Mr. John Rae to the Bass. October 13. I find the Council order the Witnesses against Cefnock to be continued still in Prison, and they are allowed Six Pence a Day. What they expected from these Witnesses, or for what ends they were so long detained I cannot say: Only we shall find that Cefnock was afterward forfeited, and his Estate given to Mel-ford. In all this Matter this Gentleman hath nothing relative to the Plot laid to his Charge, tho' that was the alleged Cause of his Imprisonment.

Witnesses continued long in Prison, and Cefnock sent to the Bass.

I return now to the rest of his Fellow-prisoners, as far as I have Materials. April 1. I find a Petition presented from the Earl of Lowdon, who was delated with the Prisoners formerly named, bearing, 'that he being cited to compare before the Lords of the Justiciary the Eighth of April instant, to answer for alledged Crimes contained in his Dittay, but being forth of the Kingdom at the Time of the Dittay, and yet is, and in a very sickly and distressed Condition, craving that his Diet may be deferred, or a competent Time, wherein he may appear, granted, as they think fit.' And April 8. George Lord Melvil petitions much in the same Strain. The Deliverance of the Council as to both, is, 'The Lords Lowdon and Melvil being forth of the Kingdom, upon their Petition it is recommended to the Lords of Justiciary to prorogate the Day, that they may be in Case to find Caution, or appear.'

Procedure against the Earl of Lowdon, and Lord Melvil.

That same Day I find from the Justiciary Records, April 8. Criminal Letters against James Earl of Lowdon, George Lord Melvil, Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, and John Cochran of Waterside his Son, were read, as duly executed. I observe very little in them as to the English Plot, and when that failed, our Managers trump up Processes, near five Years after the pretended Facts, upon the Head of Bothwell.

Criminal Letters against them, Ochiltree and Waterside.

The Criminal Letters are too long to be insert. In short, they alledge that the Earl of Lowdon met with some disaffected Gentlemen and Preachers at Temple-holm near Galsfoun in June 1679. and treated anent the said Rebellion, and afterward corresponded with Rebels.

As to the Lord Melvil, 'tis alledged, that tho' he was with his Majesty's Army, June 1679. yet he sent John Miller of Waterhaugh from his Majesty's Camp, to Mr. John Welsh, and other Ringleaders of the Rebels, with Letters, Commissions, or verbal Orders, giving an Account of the Strength of his Majesty's Army, and their Numbers, and received Returns from them who were concerned in the Rebellion.

That Sir John Cochran conversed with Mr. William Gilchrist Preacher, who was in the Rebellion, heard him preach after Bothwell, with Mr. Robert Miller, at Ochiltree, that he carried the said Gilchrist to England with him, that he harboured and reset Mr. James Brown, a notorious Rebel, actually in the said Rebellion. And,

John Cochran of Waterside is charged, that he did associate himself on the Day of June 1679. to the Laird of Barscobe with a Party of Rebels of five or six Hundred, mounted his Horse, and rode with them, and supplied them with Wine and other Provisions. This is the Substance of the Criminal Letters.

The Lords being informed that the Earl of Lowdon is sick and out of the Country, and the Lord Melvil likewise abroad, and having a Recommendation in their Favours, continue the Process till November. And November 10. I find by their Books, the Earl of Lowdon and Lord Melvil indicted for contriving the Death of his Majesty, and his Royal Brother, and for a Design to subvert the Government; as likewise their Accession to the Rebellion 1679. and Harbour and Reset of Rebels: And being this Day called, and not comparing, the Lords discern and adjudge them the King's Rebels and Fugitives, and to be put to the Horn. And the Lords continue the Process of Forfeiture against them till March 17. next to come. And in their Diet April 8. Sir John Cochran and his Son are ordered to be denounced Fugitives. And yet next Day they have their Process before them.

Lowdon and Melvil indicted Nov. 10. and put to the Horn.

April 9. the Lords of Justiciary continue the Process of Forfeiture against Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree till the second Monday of July next. But I have observed no more about him in the Registers this Year, and go forward to his Son.

Ochiltree delayed.

Anent the Criminal Letters, against John Cochran of Waterside, the Lords sustain that Part of the Indictment relevant, that he was with the Rebels at Cumnock at a Rendezvous when they were in Arms, to infer the Pains of Treason, and remit it to an Assize.

Waterside's Process April 9.

The Assize are, the Earls of Dumfermlin, Linlithgow, Tarras, Lord Duffus, Sinclair, Blantyre, and some Gentlemen. And the Assize protest for the Preservation of their Privileges as Peers, which is admitted. The Witnesses are adduced; and one depones he saw Waterside with the Rebels at Cumnock, at the Bar-hill when rendezvousing, but was at some Distance, and and did not hear him speaking with Earlstoun and Barfcoke. Another depones, that he saw Waterfide walking among the Rebels, as he thought, with a small Sword. Another depones, that Waterfide spake for him to the Rebels, and got him Leave to go home, that he might return again to them. The Assize find him guilty of the Crime of Treason, and the Lords ordain him to be executed to Death, and demeaned as a Traitor, when apprehended.

To return again to the Gentlemen sent down Prisoners from England, I find April 8. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having considered a Representation by his Majesty's Advocate, that in August last, they had ordered him to pursue a Process of Treason against the Earl of Lowdon, and the others above named, and that before his Majesty's Letter allowing Warrant for examining Witnesses previously; desiring that Warrant might now be granted to the Justices for examining Witnesses as to these forenamed Persons. The Lords grant Order and Warrant for previous Examination of Witnesses against the forementioned Persons, or such of them against whom his Majesty's Advocate is ready to insist.

They get the Liberty of their Prison.

What was found in this Examination I know not, but it would seem nothing of Consequence appeared: For April 17. the Council allow the Lairds of Rowallan elder and younger, to be liberate, upon a Bond of Two thousand Pounds Sterling, to appear when called; and they permit Cesnock elder and younger, Brunsfeld, Jerviswood, and Crawfordland, to have the Liberty of free Prison. Whether the Two I am to name were again made close Prisoners, I know not; but, September 13. upon a Petition from William Fairly of Brunsfeld, and Crawfordland, that they have been Fourteen Months Prisoners, and nothing proven against them, craving Liberty, the Lords allow them the Benefit of open Prison. This is all I meet with concerning these Gentlemen, except Mr. Spence, Mr. Carstairs, and Jerviswood, whom I come now to account for.

Mr. William Spence.

I begin with the severe Treatment of Mr. William Spence. He had been Secretary to the Earl of Argyle, and had the Testimony from him, when going to the Scaffold, That he had been a faithful Servant; he was dealt the more harshly with upon the account of his Merit. By the Council-registers, I find him in the Irons, April 22. this Year, and it is the first Notice taken of him. If he hath been in the Irons ever since his coming down from England, it was heavy enough Treatment, and I see no Ground to suppose otherwise, since that Day the Council allow Mr. William Spence to be taken out of the Irons, but kept close Prisoner.

Put to the Torture, July 24.

Upon the 24 of July, the Council make an Act for Mr. Spence's being examined by Torture, and agree upon Queries to be put to him in the Torture, which the Reader hath, as to the Substance, printed already with Jerviswood's Case, and I shall not swell this Work with them. He endured the Torture with much Patience, and made no Discovery to the Satisfaction of his Examiners. But I cannot but insert here a most barbarous and unprecedented Method taken with this good Man, next Day but one after he had endured the Torture, and it is a full Proof of the Inhumanity of the Managers, and a Step every way peculiar to this Period, not only cruel in its Nature, but illegal, since all who write upon Torture agree, That the enduring of it purges from Suspicion of all Crimes; and 'tis the last Trial ought to be made in the most extraordinary Cases, and consequently ought not to be repeated, far less changed to a more inhumane and barbarous Kind. The best Account I can give of this, is by inserting the Council's Act, for watching Mr. William Spence, next Day save one after his Torture.

Act July 26. for watching him.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, being certainly informed, and, by Mistakes under the late Earl of Argyle's Hand, understanding, that there hath been a most treasonable Correspondence kept by the Means of Mr. William Spence, now Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, between the said late Earl of Argyle, and several Traitors in England, ament the carrying on of a most unnatural Rebellion in the Kingdoms of Scotland and England, and thereby to bring the same into Confusion, Blood, and Misery; and the said Mr. William Spence being Yesterday tried in Torture by the Boots, and having appeared altogether obstinate and disingenuous, and refused to declare thereanent upon Oath, (albeit it was declared by his Majesty's Advocate, in the Name of the King and Council, that whatever he should say or depone in the Premises, should not militate against himself.) The said Lords being resolved to use all Methods necessary to bring the said Mr. William Spence to a true and ingenuous Confession, and for expiscating the Truth in so important a Matter, do recommend to General Dalziel forthwith to call for the said Mr. William Spence from the Magistrates of Edinburgh, (who are hereby ordered to deliver him to such a Party as the General shall think fit) and to cause such of his Majesty's Forces, Officers and Soldiers, as shall be found most trusty, to watch the said Mr. William

William Spence by Turns, and not to suffer him to sleep by Night or by Day; and for that end, to use all effectual Means for keeping him still awake, for the effect foresaid; and ordain the Persons so to be entrusted, to take peculiar Notice in Writ, of what the said Mr. William Spence shall declare in the Premises, to be reported by the General to the Council or Committee.'

Remarks upon this need not be made; they will endeavour first to distemper this good Man, and then, if he shall fall into Ravery and lose his Judgment, they will write down what he says: And whether this be greater Cruelty or Folly, it goes beyond my Power to determine. However, after all this barbarous Treatment of Mr. Spence, for many Days and Nights, they got nothing they could make any Thing of.

I can only add, that August 17. the Council make another, I may say a third, Act, for his Torture: It seems it was just to force him to petition, as I find he does, and promises to make a free and ingenuous Confession of what he knows in this Matter, (understanding from his Friends, that he was capable of discovering nothing but what the Government already had from other Hands) upon Security given him for his Life, and that he should be no further tortured. This they grant.

Third Act for his Torture.

And, August 19. Mr. Spence upon Oath makes a Declaration, in Substance passing what relates to the Earl of Argyle's Letters already printed, 'That he does truly believe there was an Insurrection intended within those Two Years; as to what is to come, he cannot tell what the People abroad may be doing; that he had often heard of Designs and Associations, but that they were directly intended to hinder the Duke his Succession to the Crown, he cannot say; for all that he understood was pretended for the Ground of any Designs of Arms, was the Defence of the Protestant Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdom; and if against the Duke his Succession, only in so far as that might be prejudicial to these; and that he thinks, upon the King's Death, Troubles may probably arise.'

Mr. Spence his Declaration, August 19.

August 21. After Mr. Spence's Declaration, the Council, by their Act, declare, 'That they fully exoner him of all the Premises, and declare, that none of the foresaid Letters, nor his Testimony, shall be adduced against, or prejudice any Person delated by him, nor prejudice him any Manner of Way; and thereto the Lords interpose the publick Authority of the Kingdom.'

PERTH Cancel.

No more offers from the Registers, anent this worthy Person; but that after such a Complication of unaccountable Sufferings, September 13. the Council remove Mr. William Spence and Mr. William Carstairs, to Dumbarton Castle, and allow them Liberty within the Walls. The Council adjourning till November, many of their Members being to go to the Country, and to be at Circuits, the Committee for publick Affairs manages all in the Interval.

I come now forward to give some Account of the Sufferings, Torture, and severe Treatment of that truly great and good Man, the Reverend Mr. William Carstairs, this Year. This extraordinary Person is so well known through Britain, and, I may say, all the reformed Churches, for his shining Piety, his universal and polite Learning, his Candor and Integrity, having the Character of a truly honest Man, from that great Judge of Men King William, and being in Providence but lately removed to his Master's Joy, leaving behind him a most favourable Remembrance of his constant and indefatigable Services for Christ, Souls, and the Good of the Church of Scotland, that it is needless for me to say any thing of him, to those who are now on the Stage; but I wish some fit Hand would be so kind to Posterity, as to give us a just Account of this excellent Person. The Hardships he met with will be a lasting Blot upon this Period.

Mr. William Carstairs.

That I may give as large and yet succinct Accounts of his Sufferings this Year as I can, I shall begin with a Letter he was pleased to write to the Author of this History, a very little before his Death, which he allowed him to publish, and I promise my self it will be very acceptable to many Readers; and then I shall give what I meet with anent him in the Registers, and other certain Documents. I begin with his Letter to me, which was among the last ever he wrote.

Dear Brother,

You put me upon a Business, which, tho' it be of that Nature that I ought to do something in it, yet it is uneasy to me to think upon it; but I shall give you a very brief Account of some of the chief Particulars of it, in so far as I remember. I was taken at Kenterden in Kent, the Munday immediately after the Execution of that great and honourable Patriot of his Country, my Lord Russell.'

His Letter, a very little before his Death, to the Author of this History, giving the State of his Sufferings.

‘ The chief Thing which exposed me to Danger at that Time, was the Suspicion they had that I was Mr. Fergusson. I was admitted to Bail for some Days; but so soon as they had a Return from Court, I was committed Prisoner to the common Goal of the Place, no Bail being allowed to me, tho’ I was accused of nothing but of refusing the Oaths, one of which had been then expired by Law, viz. the Oxford Oath. ’

‘ I continued there for a Fortnight, when I was sent for by an Officer of the Guards, to be brought up to London, which accordingly I was, and committed for Two Days to the Hand of a Messenger. ’

‘ During which Time, Sir Andrew Forrester came to me, in the Name of King Charles II. offering me a Pardon and all Kindness, if I would tell what I knew in that Matter. He told me, that the King did not at all believe that I would be concerned in any such Practice as the Assassination of his Person, but because I might hear of it upon Occasions, he desired to know if I did; and I gave Sir Andrew such Answers as I thought were proper for me in the Circumstances I was in. He very earnestly, yet very civilly, besought me to make a Discovery of that Plot, as to other Things of it. ’

‘ Which shews the Falshood of what was positively asserted in an Account given in the Name of the King and Duke of York, as to that Matter; which is, That never any Hopes of Favour were offered to any to induce them to confess. ’

‘ I was afterward called before a Committee of the Lords of the Council, and not giving them that Satisfaction which they expected, I was sent close Prisoner to the Gate-house: In which Time, I was called twice out to be examined; at one of which, if not at both, was honest and worthy Major Holms, who was a Prisoner in the Gate-house too, and had been a Friend and Correspondent of the Earl of Argyle, to whom I was desired to give a Cypher of Names to correspond with, to which I added several with my own Hand, which was well known to the Earl of Melford, which afterward proved not a little prejudicial to me; for it was found among his Papers when he was seized: He also told the Lords of Council, that I had told him, that there had been some Consultations as to the lending Money to my Lord Argyle. ’

‘ I continued in the Gate-house Eleven Weeks, close Prisoner, looking upon my self as absolutely secure, under the Protection of the plain Law, of the Act of habeas corpus, against being sent to Scotland: And therefore I did, in the First of Michaelmas Term, petition the Court of King’s Bench, for being brought to my Trial, or admitted to Bail. But the very Day after, I was ordered to be ready for Scotland in Twenty four Hours, to be there tried for Crimes committed in that Kingdom, tho’ I neither was, nor could possibly be guilty of any Crimes there, not having been for several Years there, but passingly. ’

‘ Accordingly, I was sent to Scotland in his Majesty’s Kitchen Yaucht, with several other worthy Gentlemen of my Country, and was with them committed to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, where I was close Prisoner for several Months. ’

‘ During that Time I was only once examined, as far as I remember; but some Time after, we had the Favour of open Prison, till some of our great Men, who were gone in that Interval to Court, returned to Scotland, and Popish Counsels then prevailing there, we were all of us shut up close Prisoners again. ’

‘ And Mr. William Spence, a faithful Friend and Servant of the Earl of Argyle’s, was pitched upon to be examined first; and upon Refusal to give Satisfaction to what was proposed to him, as to the decyphering of some Letters of the Earl of Argyle, he was put to severe Tortures, one after another, in the Thumbkins, kept waking for several Nights and Days, and the Boots. ’

‘ At last, finding, as he judged, no great Matter if he should decypher the Letters, and that no great Prejudice would arise, as he imagined, to the Earl of Argyle, or his Friends, from his doing so, he was prevailed on to decypher them; but unhappily for me, there being several Names of the Cypher mentioned in that Letter, some of which I was expected by, which he did not know, but the Earl of Melford, who was in the Government, knew them, from the Cypher above mentioned, wherein were several Names writ by my own Hand. ’

‘ Upon this Decyphering, I was ordered that very Evening to be put into the Irons, in which I continued for Three Weeks. In which Time the Earl of Melford came to me, and earnestly dealt with me to confess what I knew in that Matter, and offered me Conditions that many in my Circumstances would have thought very great, particularly Two, That I should not be obliged, after a Month or Five Weeks Time, to answer any Questions that should be proposed about that Affair, except what I should be my self pleased to say about it; and that nothing that I said should be brought directly or indirectly against any Man in Trial that I should mention. ’

‘ I do acknowledge these Conditions were staggering to me, considering that I could not well see how I should be able to go through a constant Torture during my Life; however, I did resolve through divine Assistance to adventure upon the Torture, rejecting at that Time

Time the Conditions which Melford had difficultly obtained for me from the Privy Council.

My Reasons were, because I imagined, if I could once endure so severe Torture, either the Lords of the Council would have some Regard to my Character, and not put me further to Torture, or what I suffered might throw me into a Fever, and so I might be carried off the World; for I can declare, that Death, either by a Sentence or any other Violence, wherein my own Hand was not concerned, would have been welcome to me.

I was brought before the Privy Council in England, and some Depositions of Major Holms and Mr. Shepherd were read against me; but neither of them was ever confronted with me, tho' one of them had been so with some of our Countrymen upon that Occasion. When I came to Scotland in Company with several other worthy Gentlemen of my Country, and was committed, as I said above, Prisoner to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, I was at last brought out about Noon to the Council, about a Fortnight or Three Weeks after Mr. Spence's decyphering the Letters, and told by the Lords of Privy Council, that I must either answer upon Oath such Questions as they gave me, or go to Torture while I breathed.

And indeed Chancellor Perth had told me a few Days before, that I had refused so many singular Favours that had been offered to me beyond any Prisoner, that before God I should be tortured, and never a Joynt of me left whole.

When I was called in before the Council, the Declarations of Major Holms and Mr. Shepherd were read against me. I told them, that I could say nothing to them, because I had never been confronted with them, which was a plain Evidence that they had said Things against me, which they would not have had the Confidence to have asserted had I been present; but that was over-ruled.

Then I was urged to answer upon Oath the Questions that should be proposed to me. I told them, I would not do that in Matters which were looked upon as criminal. They told me, that it should be presently enacted, that nothing that I said should ever militate against me, nor should they enquire whether what I answered were true or false. I said, it was a bad Precedent, and I was not willing to begin it.

Then I was asked, what Reasons I had why I should not be tortured. I answered, I did humbly judge that I could not be any ways tried there, for the Order, by which I was sent down to Scotland, was express, that I should be tried for Crimes committed against the Government in that Kingdom; and I desired to know if my Lord Advocate had any Thing to charge me with of that Nature. He declared, he had not; but that now I was in Scotland, and if I had been guilty of contriving against his Majesty's Government at Constantinople, I might be tried for it. I told them I thought it was true, but that the Crimes I was accused of, were said to be committed in England, where his Majesty's Laws were equally in Force for the Security of his Government, as they were in Scotland, which at Constantinople they were not.

But this was over-ruled, and yet this was a notorious and unjust Breach of the Law of the habeas corpus Act, which was made expressly for the Security of the Liberty of Scots and Irish Men.

Then they asked me, if I had any further to offer against being tortured. I told them, that I did not pretend to any Skill in Law, but that I was informed, that semplena probatio was necessary in order to Torture, which was not in my Case; for neither the Depositions of these at London, nor what was said in my Lord Argyle's Letters, did amount to any such Thing. They told me, Presumptions were enough to warrant Torture.

Then they asked me again, if I had any Thing further to say why I should not be brought to Torture. I told them, I had only an humble Petition to them, that I might meet with no greater Severity in my own Country, than the Laws of that in which the Crimes I am accused of are said to be committed, do allow of.

After this Communing the King's Smith was called in, to bring in a new Instrument to torture by the Thumbkins, that had never been used before. For whereas the former was only to screw on Two Pieces of Iron above and below with Finger and Thumb, these were made to turn about the Screw with the whole Hand.

And under this Torture I continued near an Hour and an Half. In the mean Time the torturing by the Boot was tried, but the Hangman being newly come on, because the former was in Prison for some Crime, he had no Skill, and therefore it was put off till the next Day.

I do acknowledge I was much afraid I should not have been able to go through with that Scene of Torture; and if I had not, I was miserable, for I should have been brought to speak against every Man they had mentioned, but God ordered it kindly otherwise, and the next Day I had Conditions offered to me afresh.

Now as to the whole of this unpleasant Subject, I do declare, that this Affair is, so far as I was concerned in it as to any Consultations, no further than to discourse as to what might be proper to be done for securing our Religion and Liberty, from the Dangers that

‘ they were then in, without any Design against the royal Persons of the King and his Brother, or the Government by Monarchy; and that some Thing was done among the Scots, as to the sending down a Gentleman to discourse upon that Head, with some others here. I should be guilty of the most horrid Injustice, if I should accuse any of the worthy Gentlemen of my Country that were my Fellow-prisoners, or any of the English dissenting Ministers, of having the least Knowledge of, or Concern in the abominable Assassination of the King or his Brother; for I did then, as I do now, abhor such Practices, nor can I to this Hour tell really what was in that Matter that makes such a Noise; for nothing in my maimed Depositions that are printed, hath any Regard to any Thing of that Nature, except as to what Mr. Fergusson and Mr. Shepherd did say, for which they alone are to be answerable; and I must also say, that Mr. Shepherd did own his Abhorrence of such Practices.’

‘ And now, Brother, I shall conclude what I have to say upon this Subject, with the great Injustice I met with in being sent to Scotland, in open Violation of the plain Law of habeas corpus, which was only designed to make Way for my Torture; and the notorious Breach of the publick Faith, as to the Conditions that I had, by which no Person was directly or indirectly to be mentioned in any Trial as to that Matter, nor any Thing in my Depositions was to be adduced against any Person, which Condition was openly violated, and this is acknowledged to have been so by the late Earl of Cromarty under his Hand, as is to be found among the Records of Parliament.’

‘ I was indeed earnestly urged to oblige the then King so far, as to appear and answer some Questions before the Judges when they were set, and that no Person should be confronted with me. To which I replied, that the saying any Thing before Judges when sitting, might be of some Consequence, and through God’s Strength I would rather undergo many Deaths than accuse any of these worthy Persons.’

‘ I cannot but also acquaint you, that I think it was a Hardship put upon me, to print my Depositions as they stood, because they were very lame, since simple Answers to the Questions are only set down, and neither the Question that gave a Rise to the Answers, nor the just Extenuations as to Persons and Things which I gave in my Answers. Which had they been published, it would have been found from what I said, that there could be no Reason given why that Affair should have been prosecuted with so much Cruelty and Violence.’

‘ And having had a Liberty from the Lords of Council to go abroad, but was enjoined to wait upon the Secretaries at London, upon which I told some of our Lords, that I was afraid that might have very ill Consequences, for if I should be brought before the King, I would say the same Things to him in the Extenuation of that Affair, which I had said to them, which could not justify the Methods that had been taken in prosecuting the Nobility.’

‘ But when I came to London, and had waited upon my Lord Melford and told him this, he told me, the less the King heard of me or saw me, it would be the better; and that therefore it was his Advice to me to go abroad and live quietly, and offered me a Pass, which I accepted, and I accordingly went abroad. I am, &c.

W. Carstairs.

This Letter sets this excellent Person’s Case and Sufferings in a due Light, and I am only sorry that he had not Time and Leisure to enlarge upon the base manking of his Depositions, and to insert the just extenuating Circumstances he was careful to give of every Thing; and how these Depositions were printed I cannot say, this reverend and candid Person declares them miserably curtailed and maimed; and it seems the Managers have been sensible of this, and therefore they have not insert them in the Registers, but there is a Blank for them of Two Pages.

I come now to give what I meet with in the Council-records, with relation to this extraordinary Person, and I shall likewise intermix some Things from other authentick Documents before me, which will in some Measure help to make up what is wanting in his printed Depositions.

Council’s Act
anent Mr.
William Car-
stairs, Sep. 5.

Mr. Carstairs is not named in the Registers of Council, after his coming down, till September 5. and it seems, from August 19. to this Day he had lien in the Irons; and now the Council, according to the Chancellor’s threatening in private, come to pass an Act in the Forenoon Sederunt, the Tenor whereof follows.

Interrogatories to him in Torture.

In the Afternoon the same Day, September 5. the Council called and interrogated Mr. Carstairs, ‘ If he would now answer the Queries upon Oath ingenuously. He still shunned so to do, albeit the Advocate declared what the said Mr. Carstairs deponed should not militate or operate against him in any Manner of Way, whereunto the Council assented. The Council called for one of the Bailies of Edinburgh; and the Executioner with the Engines of Torture being present, the Lord Chancellor commanded the Bailie to cause the Executioner put him in the Torture, by applying the Thumb-screw to him, which being done, and he having for the Space of an Hour continued in the Agony of Torture, the Screw being by Space and Space stretched until he appeared near to faint; and being still obstinate and refractory to depone, the Lords thought fit to ease him of the Torture for that Time,

September 6.

‘ but certified him that to Morrow at Nine of the Clock, he would be tortured by the Beets if he remained obstinate. ’

September 6. ‘ The Lord Treasurer-depute, appointed to confer with Mr. William Carstairs for bringing him to an ingenuous Confession, upon the Interrogatories Yesterday put to him in Torture, reports, That he was content to depone thereupon, and be ingenuous upon the Terms mentioned in a Paper exhibited by the Lord Treasurer-depute. Which Paper being read and considered, was unanimously voted, and an Act made thereupon, and the Lord Treasurer-depute was authorized to give his Word of Honour to Mr. Carstairs, for performing of the Council's Part of these Articles contained in the Paper relating to them, he always performing his Part; and he is ordered to the Castle, and none are permitted to speak or converse with him, and particularly Mr. William Spence is not to be suffered to see him. And a Chirurgeon is allowed him in order to his Cure. ’

All I meet with in the Council-books further upon this Subject, is, Mrs. William Spence and Carstairs are, September 13. removed to Dumbarton Castle, and allowed Liberty within the Walls. And September 30. Mr. Carstairs is ordered from Dumbarton to Stirling Castle, and to be at large within the Walls of it. And immediately after this, upon the Foot of the Page 517. of this Volume, there is a Paper pinned to the Leaf, upon which is writ as follows. ‘ The Lord Lundin Secretary of State, as commiffionate in the Act above, did fend in the under-written Certificate to the Clerks of Council, dated at Barntoun October 1. 1684. the Tenor whereof follows. Whereas his Majesty's honourable Privy Council authorized me, upon the Terms mentioned in the foregoing Act, to be fulfilled by Mr. Carstairs, to promise upon my Word of Honour, to procure him the Conditions and Indemnity therein mentioned; these are therefore to testify to all concerned, that the said Mr. Carstairs hath fulfilled his Part, by answering upon Oath all Questions proponed to him preceeding this Day. In Witness whereof these Presents are subscribed.

DRUMMOND.

‘ In obedience to which Act and Certificate, the Clerks of Council delivered to the said Mr. William Carstairs the Act of Council, of the Date of the Sixth of September. ’

And then in the Register there follows a Blank for Two Pages in Folio. Whether this was left to be filled up with the Deposition of the Reverend Mr. Carstairs, and its being printed in so lame and maimed a Manner prevented its being filled up, or, after it was printed in so unfair a Manner, that they were ashamed to insert in the Registers a just Copy of his Deposition, with the Circumstances and Extenuations he gave upon Oath, or what the Occasion was, I cannot determine; but thus it stands in the Council-books, and I find no more withrelation to him.

That I may give the Reader all I have further concerning Mr. Carstairs, I shall add an Account given by himself in a Letter to his Friends at the Time of his Depositions, for preventing, as he tells them, of lying Aspersions upon himself, and satisfying them as to his Conduct in this Matter.

The Reader will observe, that the Council, in their Act of the Sixth of September, deal not so fairly as to insert the Paper of Conditions agreed to by their Delegate and Mr. Carstairs, which they ought in Justice to have done, seeing these Conditions were so unanimously approved: And, as I hinted before, they record nothing of what passed at his Examination, September 8.

It is the more necessary I insert the Conditions Mr. Carstairs obtained before he would give his Declaration upon Oath, as to the Interrogatories above named. In his present Circumstances, and after he had gone through the Torture, he essayed to get the best Conditions possible, that any Thing he should say should do no Harm to others, and by his Candor, Precaution and Prudence he obtained from the Secretary the following Conditions which were signed by them both, and, upon the publick Faith of the Kingdom pledged in them, he prevailed with himself to give his Deposition.

Conditions Mr. Carstairs had, Edinburgh Castle, 1684. under the Secretary's Hand.

Conditions
twixt the Secretary and
Mr. Carstairs.

‘ That Mr. Carstairs answer all Interrogatories that shall be put to him, 'twixt and the First of October next, upon his great Oath. ’

‘ The which being done, he shall have his Majesty's full Pardon and Remission, for his Life, Limb, Fortune, Estate, and Fame. ’

‘ That he shall never be brought as Witness against any Person or Judicatory, directly or indirectly, for any thing contained in his Answers. ’

‘ And further, That the said Mr. William Carstairs shall never be interrogate in Torture, or out of the same, concerning any thing preceeding the Date of this Paper, ’ the

the Day abovementioned, except he himself shall be delated as accessory, and that Accession to be after the Date of this, or his Remission.
And whereas the Council, upon the Considerations abovenamed, hath, by their Act September 6. authorized me to give my Word of Honour, and solemn Promise, that so soon as the Premises are fulfilled by Mr. Carstairs, I shall deliver him the Council's Act in those Things, and in a convenient Time thereafter, not exceeding a Month, his Majesty's Pardon, in ample Form, above express: Therefore I, by my Promise, give my Faith to Mr. Carstairs, in Manner above express, Time and Place above said.

His Depositions, without his Knowledge, and to his Grief, and scarce agreeable to these Conditions, were, in a few Hours after they were made, printed by the Managers, and crying in the Streets of Edinburgh. Mr. Carstairs's Candor was singular, and such unfair Dealing never entred in his Mind, otherwise he would have taken Care to prevent it, if Conditions would have bound those People, as indeed they did not.

His Depositions, Sept. 8.

These printed Depositions are lame, maimed, and unfair, as we have seen Mr. Carstairs declaring, and therefore I shall not reprint them again; they are in every Body's Hand, and have been too often printed already.

It was yet a great deal worse in the Advocate, to adduce the printed Copy as an Adminicle in Ferviswood's Trial; and the Reason he gives there for this, is but mere Juggling, that tho' it was capitulate, he (Mr. Carstairs) should not be adduced as a Witness, yet it was agreed, the Depositions should be published. If the Advocate mean any Agreement among the Council, 'tis perfect Juggling; if he mean an Agreement with Mr. Carstairs, that worthy Person, while alive, it will disclaim this: And we see 'tis far from being in the Conditions, but rather the plain contrary; for it was a poor Matter to Mr. Carstairs, not personally to be adduced as Witness. If his Declarations emitted were to militate against others, he reckoned he was made a Witness; and this was certainly an indirect making him a Witness: And it appears most evidently from Mr. Carstairs's own Letter, that one Condition offered him was, That nothing he said should be brought directly or indirectly against any Man in Trial. And when he was solicited to appear before the Judges, his Answer was, He had rather undergo many Deaths, than accuse any of those worthy Persons. So that upon the Whole, I cannot but suspect that Article in Ferviswood's printed Trial, Page 23. where Mr. Carstairs's Depositions are said to be renewed upon Oath, the 22 of December, in Presence of his Majesty's Privy Council, as being directly contrary to the second and third Conditions granted him. I find nothing of it in the Council-registers.

Remarks upon then being adduced in Ferviswood's Trial.

Many Reports were spread, and lying Stories told, as if Mr. Carstairs should have spoken many Things to the Disadvantage of the Noblemen and Gentlemen about whom he was interrogate; which, with what fell out in Ferviswood's Trial, grieved him exceedingly, and he wrote a Letter to his Friends about this Time, from which I shall give a few more Hints, passing many Things already noticed, and with them end my Account of this worthy Person.

Abstract of Mr. Carstairs's Letter to his Friends at this Time.

He testifies his Abhorrence of any Design against the King or Duke's Life; that all his Countrymen with whom he spake, were free of any Design against the King or Government, and that he frequently told the Lords who came to him, this whole Affair upon which he was questioned, amounted to no more than Talk, without so much as any formed Design, and even Talking was much broke off, before the Discovery of the Plot. He shewed them how unwilling he was to bring any Man to Trouble, and that it could not but be very grievous to him, to be forced to speak of any who had trusted him as a Friend, especially when the Business never came to any Bearing, or to that Height as to be any way prejudicial to the Government.

As to the Objection made against him, That he had been so particular in his Confessions, he says, That could not be escaped, his Interrogatories were so particular, and he upon Oath. We have before noticed, how his Extenuations were omitted; he adds, 'That he had declared as to my Lord Melvil, his great Aversion to be any way concerned in that Affair; and so fair was he, that he acknowledged he himself was the Person, who, with Difficulty, prevailed with my Lord, to come to the Meeting. As to old Cesnock, he said, He was a Man so cautious, and of so few Words, they knew not what to make of him; that his Son was much upon the Reserve; that he had nothing to say of the Lord Stair, and did not think he had any Knowledge of their Meetings, and that he had never spoke with him upon that Head: He commended Mr. Stuart much for his peaceable Temper, and acknowledged his Correspondence with him.'

That he had never conversed with the Duke of Monmouth, and what was in Holms's Declaration was a Mistake; and, for any thing he knew, the Duke rather discouraged as encouraged the Affair; that Mr. Carstairs was much a Stranger to the Methods in Scotland, as to this Business, and could give no Account of any Ministers engaged in it. He commended Langshaw as a Person very much for moderate Measures, and addressing the King anent Grievances. All this and much more, he says, he signified to the Lords of the Committee present.

In the same Letter he regrets, that his Depositions were read in the criminal Court, and says, That he was so far from knowing of it, that upon hearing of it he went and waited upon some of the Lords of Council, and represented his deep Concern on that account, and complained of it as a Breach of their Conditions with him; and that the Chancellor (upon reading the Conditions) owned before the Treasurer and others of the Counsellors, that what was done, was indeed a Breach with him, an Inadvertency, though without any Design in the Advocate; that the Advocate himself, when Mr. Carstairs waited on him, declared he was indisposed when the Council transacted that Affair, and did not fully know them. Whereupon Mr. Carstairs gave him a Copy of them, signifying to his Lordship, that he expected the Faith given him should have been kept, and he hoped any thing he had confessed should never be heard of, any more in publick, against any Man: And the rather,

That when he was called from Stirling Castle before the Lords, they used many Arguments with him, to give a general Account before the Justice-court, of the Substance of his Confessions to them; yet he signified his utter Aversion to it, as what would be a Witnessing against all whom he mentioned. And the Lords were pleased to tell him, they would rather die than break Conditions with him; which he depended upon.

Those Things Mr. Carstairs desires in his Letter, may be used for the greatest Advantage of all concerned; and says, It was declared by the Lords, and believed by him, that what he discovered was for their private Satisfaction, and not at all to militate against any; and adds, The Nature of the Thing declares so much, since the Interrogatories propounded to him were such as could not well be proposed in a criminal Court, and answered by him in a Way he could not well have answered them as a Witness, and in a Way of Proof, and that the Lords still assured him they would keep their Promise to an Ace.

Thus much I thought necessary for the just Vindication of the Memory of one to whom the Church of Scotland are under Obligations, whose Character is so universally known, and savoury for every good Thing, that I say no more of him. The People of this Time knew his Character, and therefore they were so hard upon him when in their Clutches; and, by Breach of Condition, adduce what he had said in Ferviswood's Process, as what they imagined would be of great Weight, coming from Mr. Carstairs. This is all the Reason I have for insisting so long in setting this great Man's Sufferings in their due Light, and come now forward to those of his dear Friend and Fellow-sufferer.

Mr. Bailly of Ferviswood.

Mr. Robert Bailly of Ferviswood, with whose Sufferings I shall end this Section, was a Gentleman who had the Testimony of some of the greatest Men of this Age, whom I could name, for one of the best of Men, and greatest of Statesmen, and so was a very proper Object of the Fury of this Period, and could scarce escape the Rage and Malice of the Duke of Tork, and such as were with him carrying on the Plot against our Religion, Reformation and Liberty.

Indeed he fell a Sacrifice for our holy Reformation, and received the Crown of Martyrdom, upon the account of his zealous Appearances against Popery and arbitrary Power. I can never consider this great Man, and several others, in this and succeeding Years, of the most judicious and notable of our Martyrs, neglected of design by the Collectors of the Cloud of Witnesses, but I must blame their private and Party Temper.

His Trial published.

Ferviswood's Trial was published by the Managers, and I may perhaps make some Remarks afterwards upon it. I shall here give some few Hints I meet with in the Records, with relation to him, when before the Council, of which there is nothing in his printed Trial.

Through his long Confinement, and harsh Treatment when in Prison, this good Man turned very sickly and tender; and it was reckoned almost certain by all, that had the Managers spared this Gentleman a few Weeks longer, they would have been rid of him by a natural Death, and escaped the indelible Blot of Inhumanity and Barbarity to so excellent a Person. He was evidently a dying when tried before the Justiciary, and was obliged to appear in his Night-gown before them, and scarce able to stand when he spake; and yet he was kept in the Pannel for Ten Hours, and behoved to take Cordials several Times; and next Day he was carried in a Chair, in his Night-gown, to the Scaffold.

By the Council-books, I find, August 18. the Lady Ferviswood is, upon her Petition, allowed to see her dying Husband, with the Physicians, but to speak nothing to him but what they hear and are Witnesses to. I am of Opinion this low State of his Health put the Managers at first off the Design of processing him criminally; and to secure his Estate, while he is dying a natural Death, brought on by their Maltreatment, they raise a Process in order to fine him to the Value of 6000 Lib. Sterl.

Thus, August 30. the Council order the Advocate to pursue Ferviswood, for resetting, entertaining, and corresponding with Rebels; and, as far as I can find, he was not able to appear pear before the Council when they passed a Decreet against him, only he ordered his Advocate to appear for him.

Accordingly, September 4. the Council pass their Decreet fining him in Six thousand Pounds Sterling. The Decreet is very long, and would take up too much Room here. In short, it narrates the Libel given in against Ferviswood, which consists mostly of the Articles of his printed Indictment, upon which afterwards he suffered, and a Charge of his Converse and Intercommuning with the Persons who will just now come in; and then the Libel is referred to his Oath, which he refusing, they pass Sentence. The Sum of all is this.

'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having heard and considered the foresaid Libel, and the Interrogatories given in by his Majesty's Advocate, in order only to an arbitrary Punishment, to which his Majesty's Advocate restricted the Libel pro loco & tempore, and reserved the other Articles of the Libel to be pursued as Law accords; and the Council having appointed a Committee to examine Mr. Robert Bailly of Ferviswood, upon the said Interrogatories, the Tenor whereof follows.'

'1mo. Did you harbour or intercommune with Mr. Samuel Arnot, Mr. Gabriel Semple, Mr. David Hume, Mr. George Barclay, Mr. William Gilchrist, Mr. Alexander Pedin, Mr. John Hepburn, Mr. John Rae, Mr. James Kirkcoun, Mr. Alexander Lennox, Mr. David Jamison, Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Alexander Moncrief, Mr. John Welsh, Mr. Richard Cameron, Mr. Donald Cargil, Denholm of Westshields, Stuart of Culneth, James Stuart his Brother, Mr. Thomas Pellings, John Wilson in Lanerk, Mr. John Menzies of Hangingshaw, Michael Lamb in Lanerk, David Barclay Surgeon in Edinburgh.'

'2do. Did you reset Alexander Twcedy your Gardiner, after Bothwell-bridge.'

'And the said Committee having gone to the Tolbooth, and desired the said Ferviswood to answer upon Oath to the said Interrogatories, and he having refused to depone, the said Lords do hold him as confest, and guilty in regard of his refusing to depone, referring to his Majesty's Advocate to pursue the other Crimes libelled, and whereof the said Ferviswood is now holden as confest, as Law accords, and have fined, and fine the said Laird of Ferviswood in the Sum of Six thousand Pounds, Sterling Money, for the Crimes whereupon he is holden as confest, to be paid to his Majesty's Cash-keeper for his Majesty's Use. Which Sentence was intimated to Mr. Walter Pringle his Procurator.'

We shall hear more just now of such unaccountable Fines imposed upon Gentlemen, to the real Value of their Estates, but in a little Time the Managers go on to hunt for his precious Life. September 10. the Council give Orders to remove the Lady Graden his Sister, and the Lady Ferviswood from his Room in Prison, they being informed he is recovered of his Indisposition. We shall find this was but a very slender Recovery, and that afterwards he grew worse, in part, no doubt, from his being deprived of the Care of these excellent Ladies; and November 6. the Lady Graden is allowed to be close Prisoner with Ferviswood, because of his valetudinary Condition.

He continued in Prison still weaker and weaker, till December 18. when I find the King's Advocate is ordered to pursue a Process of Treason and Forfeiture, against Mr. Robert Bailly of Ferviswood, to Morrow at Two of the Clock, and Sir George Lockhart of Carnreath, and Sir John Lawder Advocates, are appointed to concur with the King's Advocate in the Process. I need not again remark, that this was to prevent Ferviswood's employing them in Defence of his just Rights. However, the Time was exceeding short, and therefore, tho' it seems to be yet the more straining to him, the Libel and Indictment were not put in his Hands till the 22. upon the 23 of December Ferviswood gives in a Petition to the Council, shewing,

'That only Yesterday he received an Indictment of Treason at Eleven of the Clock, to appear before the Justiciary this Day at Two of the Clock in the Afternoon, which is so short a Time, that the Petitioner has got no Lawyers consulted, nor Time to raise his Letters of Exculpation for proving his Defences and Objections against the Witnesses, as is allowed by the Act of Regulation, and the ordinary Time in such Cases is Fifteen Days; and the Petitioner at present being so sick and weak, as he is not able to come over his Bed without being lifted, as appears by the Testimony of Physicians; wherefore he humbly supplicates, that the Council may prorogate the Diet to some competent Time, and allow him Lawyers, viz. Sir Patrick Hume, Mr. Walter Pringle, Mr. James Graham, Mr. William Fletcher, Mr. James Falconar, and Mr. William Bailly.' The Council refuse to prorogate the Diet, 'but grant him the Advocates he seeks, and allow them to plead without Hazard, they containing themselves in their Pleadings in the Terms of Law and Loyalty, as they will answer at their Peril.'

This is all I meet with in the Council-books concerning Ferviswood. I shall now give the Reader an Abstract of this excellent Person's Trial, from the Justiciary Records; the principal Papers being already printed, I shall only give the Subtance of them. Upon September 23. when, as I have already remarked, this worthy Gentleman was in a dying Condition, and could not have lived many Days, he was carried in before the Justiciary, where his Indictment is read, bearing.

That notwithstanding conspiring to overturn the Government, or concealing and not revealing any treasonable Design, Project, or Discourse tending thereto, or assisting, aiding, or abetting such as have any such Designs, infer the Pains of Treason by Act 3. Parl. 1. Jam. I. Act 37. Parl. 2. Jam. I. and 144 Act, Parl. 12. Jam. VI. and Act 1. Sess. 1. Parl. 1. Char. II. and Act 2. Sess. 2. Parl. 1. Char. II. and Act 2. Parl. 3. Char. II. Nevertheless the Pannel traiterously designed to debar his Royal Highness his Majesty's only Brother, from his Right of Succession; in order to which he endeavoured to get himself elected one of the Commissioners for settling a Colony in Carolina, that he might thereby have better Access to treat with the Earls of Shaftsbury, Lord Russell and others, who had entred into a Conspiracy in England against his Majesty's Person and Government, and with Colonel Rumsey, Walcot and others, who had conspired the Murder of the King and his Brother, and went to England himself to push forward the People of England, who, he said, did nothing but talk; and after he had settled a Correspondence here, did transact with the said Conspirators to get a Sum of Money to the late Earl of Argyle a declared Traitor, for raising a Rebellion, and did chide the English Conspirators for not sending it seasonably. And among many other Meetings at London, January, February, March, April, or May 1683. for carrying on the said traiterous Design, had one in his own Chamber, where were the Lord Melvil, Sir John Cochran, Cessnock elder and younger, with Mr. William Veitch a declared Traitor, and did treat of sending the foresaid Money, and the Scots upon their attempting any Thing for their own Relief, their getting Horse from England, and sent down Mr. Robert Martin from that Meeting to prevent any Rising in Scotland, till it should be seasonable. Which Robert did treat with Polwart and others, about securing the Officers of State, Castles and Forces in Scotland, and putting their Associates in Readiness to assist the Earl of Argyle. That he did correspond with Fergusson, Armstrong, Rumsey, and Walcot, who were privy to the horrid Part of the Conspiracy: At least he corresponded with the late Earl of Argyle, and Mr. William Veitch, declared Traitors, wherethrough he has committed, and is guilty of the Crimes of high Treason and Rebellion.

Pleadings.

Jerviswood's Advocates pled, that he ought not to pass to the Knowledge of an Assize, because he had not gotten a Citation of Fifteen Days, and was precluded his Exculpation; and by Act of Parliament, all Pannels before the Criminal Court are allowed to raise Precepts of Exculpation, which supposes a competent Time, not here allowed. This the King's Advocate, in his Criminals, Title Of Libels, allows, and the Lords decided it in the Case of Robertson 1673. who albeit he got his Libel in Prison, by an Interlocutor behoved to have fifteen Days. The Advocate opposes the constant Tract of Decisions, and says, That Act of Parliament is only in Cases where a Summons or Libel is to be raised; but here there is only an Indictment, nor was Exculpation sought before the Trial, which is the Case in the Act. However it is plain, Decisions can never prove any Thing against Law. And Jerviswood, as we heard, petitioned for Exculpation: Yet the Lords repel the Defence for the Reasons given by the Advocate.

It was further alledged for Jerviswood, that the harbouring, entertaining and intercommuning with the Persons named, is res habtenus judicata, and the Pannel already fined by the Council in a vast Sum upon that account. The Advocate restricts his Libel to the Pannel's entring into a Conspiracy for raising Rebellion, and for procuring Money to be sent to the Earl of Argyle, and concealing, and not revealing this. It is replied, That Jerviswood's corresponding with Argyle at any Time since his Forfeiture, was expressly propounded as an Interrogatory before the Council, and that not only by himself but likewise by Major Holms, Mr. Carstairs, West, Shepherd, Rumbold and Rumfey, and refers it to a Double of the Act of Council writ by the Clerk's Servant, and to my Lord Advocate's Oath; and as to Mr. Veitch, he was not declared Rebel.

Sir John Lawder for the King, opposes the Council Decreet, where no such Interrogatory was put to the Pannel, which must bear more Faith than any Scrol, and cannot be taken away by his Majesty's Advocate's Oath, to the King's Prejudice; and adds, Mr. Veitch was forfeited 1667. and 1669. the Forfeiture was ratified in Parliament. To this 'tis replied, that he does not appear to be the Person named in the Act of Parliament, and tho' he were, he came home since, and all the Punishment inflicted on him, was Banishment, not to return under Pain of Death, which took off any former Punishment, and it was no Crime to intercommune with him, especially in another Kingdom; and by the Act of Council 1683. the Conversing with declared Traitors is restricted to arbitrary Punishment. The Advocate opposes the Doom of Forfeiture, and the Proclamation of Council.

The Lords sustain the Libel, as restricted, relevant, and repel the Defences, and the Assize are sworn; and for Probation the Earl of Tarras is first adduced, against whom Jerviswood's Advocates object, that he is socius criminis, and by 34 Cap. Stat. 2. Rob. I. and likewise under an Indictment of high Treason, and being under the Impressions of Fear and Death, ought not to be admitted. The Advocate answers, that in Conspiracies socii criminis have still been admitted, because no other Witnesses can be had, and the Earl hath not, and never sought any Security for his deponing. The Lawyers for the Pannel reply the Statute of King Robert stands in full Force, and ubi lex non distinguit, non est distinguendum; besides, the Earl is incarcerated for the same Crime, and under an Indictment of high Treason hath thrown himself upon the King's Mercy, and cannot be Witness, seeing the King may give him his Life or not, and in such Circumstances a Witness was never admitted. Yea, the Earl of Tarras is to be considered as condemned for the Crime of Treason, seeing he fully and amply confessed the Crime, and never any Body allowed, that damnatus criminis læsæ majestatis, could be admitted as a Witness, for which he adduceth many Lawyers. Sir George Lockhart for the King opposes, that socii criminis are admitted Witnesses in omnibus, criminibus exceptis, which is agreed to by all Lawyers; and that the Earl of Tarras hath submitted to the King's Mercy, is no more but socius criminis; and if this Objection stood, Conjurations of Treason could never be proven. Another of Jerviswood's Lawyers replies, that there are some Objections competent against Witnesses, even in criminibus exceptis, for Example, that he is a capital Enemy, and sub potestate accusatoris, and so the Earl of Tarras is by his Submission and Confession; and he having submitted his Life and Fortune to the King, is in the Case of a Witness, who absolutely depends upon his Majesty's Advocate the Pursuer, and in a private Process testes domestici, and such as intirely depend on a Person, will not be admitted; and as to the Argument, that at this Rate the guilty Person must escape, the Answer is plain, his Majesty's Advocate might have pursued the Pannel before he had pursued the Witness; but now the Terror of a Process of Treason cannot but have Influence on him as a Witness. In short, they urged that none under infamia juris can be admitted, no more than a Person convict and condemned, even in the Case of Treason; but the Earl is materially convict, when after an Indictment he confesseth; and never a Lawyer asserted, that a Person convict of Treason could be admitted a Witness.

These Reasonings were so strong, that the Publisher of Jerviswood's Process takes Notice on the Margin, as if he had been conscious the Earl ought not to have been admitted, that he deposes nothing different from the other Two Witnesses, who deposed the same Things against the Earl, for which he was forfeited, so that there could be no Ground of Suspicion from his Circumstances, which might be easily answered. This might be a laid and concerted Thing, and I doubt not but it was; and since the Earl was convict by Confession, there was no Need of Witnesses, but ex abundanti to colour the Design the better.

However, the Lords repel all Objections, and call the Earl as a Witness. His Deposition, and that of Commissary Monro, Philiphaugh, and Gallowshiels, have been more than once printed, not only in Jerviswood's Process, but in Sprat's History of the Rye-house Plot, and I shall not here enter on the Detail of them. They prove that Jerviswood being in Hazard, as all the Nation were, of Oppression, after the unaccountable Decision in Blackwood's Case, went up to London, and did speak and talk anent Methods to bring in the King to exclude a Popish Successor; and that they discoursed likewise upon Money to be sent to the Earl of Argyle, and Mr. Martin in May 1683. came down to Scotland with some Proposals to the Earl of Tarras, Philiphaugh, Gallowshiels, and some others, to engage them to a Rising, when England rose for the Security of the Protestant Religion; but as to a Design against the King's Life, nothing of that was known to any of them. Most Part of them relate to the Plot, as it was called, and Design then in Hand, and very little militates against Jerviswood in particular. They all adhere judicially to their Depositions made before the Lords of the secret Committee.

As an Adminicle of Probation, the Advocate produces the printed Copy of Mr. Carstairs's Deposition, and the Clerks depone they collationed the printed Copy with the Original, and the Lords ordain it to be taken in as an Adminicle; and they give it a Title very injurious to Mr. Carstairs, and contrary to their own Conditions granted him. 'The Deposition of Mr. William Carstairs, when he was examined before the Lords of the secret Committee, given in by him, and renewed upon Oath, upon the 22 of December 1684. in the Presence of his Majesty's Privy Council.' This looks as if Mr. Carstairs had voluntarily renewed his Deposition, December 22. with an Eye to his dear Friend, Jerviswood's Trial now coming on, than which nothing is more injurious to this worthy Person. The Matter was this, as appears by what is above inserted, and the Account that reverend and singularly candid Person gave me more than once in Conversation. Mr. Carstairs was their Prisoner, and he is brought into Town a few Days before Jerviswood's Trial, and dealt with most earnestly to be a Witness against Jerviswood, which he rejected with Abhorrence, and put them in mind of the Conditions granted him, and the Breach of Faith in this Proposal. He was again urged but to appear before the Lords of Justiciary, and own judicially that he had admitted the Depositions signed by his own Hand, at a Time when Jerviswood was not present; he told them, he would suffer any Thing before he would do so mean a Thing. Mr. Carstairs was positive, that as far as he could mind, he was never before the Council; but when dealt with by the Chancellor, Queensberry and some others, and had flatly refused the Two former Proposals, the original Papers signed by him in the Castle being produced, he did own what he could not get by, that those were his Subscriptions, and put them in mind of the Conditions upon which he had made those Declarations, and expected they should not be brought against any Person, as they had promised, and so left them. And this is all that was attested by the Chancellor, Queensberry, and the rest; yet they were sustained as an Adminicle. Shepherd's and Burn's Declarations were produced, and this was all the Proof.

Before the Assize inclosed, the Advocate had a most bloody and severe Speech to them, wherein every Thing is stretched to the uttermost against the Pannel. I shall not insert it here, since 'tis already published. In short, he urges the Appointment of a Thanksgiving, for the Discovery of the Conspiracy, through the Nations, the Practice of the Judges in England, who found Proof enough to forfeit some of all Ranks, and insists upon the Witnesses being Jerviswood's Relations; and if he be not punished, no Man can; the Conspiracy is a Cheat, the King's Judges Murderers, and the Witnesses Knaves, and such as have died, Martyrs.

He goes on to aggravate the designed Invasion and civil War which would ensue, and most calumniously insinuates, that the Pannel was privy to Burn's Design to kill the King: Whereas the Reader will observe in Burn's Deposition, that Jerviswood was with them merely about the Money to be transmitted to Holland. He reproaches him with being Nephew and Son in Law to the Lord Waristoun, which, I believe, Jerviswood reckoned a great Honour and Happiness, and alledges he was Ringleader in Scotland, and guilty of Treason as much as Blackwood, whom he might have been ashamed to mention.

Then the Probation is summed up with much Cunning, and many Stretches. Among other Things he alledges Mr. Carstairs's Friendship for Mr. Baily, as an Argument of the Truth of his Deposition, which was emitted when he knew it was to be used against Jerviswood. After what hath been narrated, the Reader will very much question the Truth of this, Mr. Carstairs provided expressly against it, and unless he knew the People about him to be faithless and villanous, he could not know this.

He insists again upon the Clearness of the Probation, that Jerviswood was accessory to Argyle's Design of invading his Country, and adduces Rathbillet's Case, wherein he says, there was but one Witness, and that of Two Men before the Circuit at Glasgow, against whom there were no Witnesses of their killing Two of the Guard, but only their not disclaiming the Guilt, and putting the Court on Proof; and urges Douchal's Case, and says, if a Gentleman was lately found guilty of high Treason, by the Opinion of all the Lords of the Session, for not revealing that Sir John Cochran sought Fifty Pounds Sterling from him, though he refused the same, and though he believed it was sought for a charitable Subistence, what deserves this Pannel who sought Thirty thousand Pounds Sterling? Thus we see Precedents made of their own iniquous and unprecedented Practices. The Advocate closes all by shewing, he insisted not so much upon this Probation to convince the Assize, as the World, that there was a Conspiracy; and indeed this Speech seems contrived on Purpose to stretch every Thing against Jerviswood.

I wish I could give as good an Account of the moving Speech Mr. Baily had to the Inquiry, and the home Thrusts he gave the Advocate; but I can only say, he appealed to the Advocate's Conscience, whether he was not satisfied as to his Innocence, and had not owned so much to himself; which the other acknowledged, but added, he acted now by Order from the Government; and to the Advocate and Judges, he, like a dying Man, most pathetically disclaimed any Access to, or Knowledge of any Design against the King or his Brother's Life; but added, if his Life must go for his Essays to prevent a Popish Succession, he owned them, and heartily parted with his Life as a Testimony against a Papist's mounting the Throne.

Assize.

When all this is over, the Assize are ordered to inclose, and bring in their Verdict to Morrow by Nine of the Clock; which was done, and is as follows. 'The Assize in one Voice finds the Crimes of Art and Part in the Conspiracy and Plot libelled, and of concealing and not revealing the same, clearly proven against Mr. Robert Baily the Pannel, in respect of Depositions of Witnesses and Adminicles adduced.

Strathmore Chancel.

Sentence, that he be executed
that Day, Dec.

Upon the opening of the Verdict, 'the Lords decerned and adjudged the said Mr. Robert Baily of Jerviswood, to be taken to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, this 24 Day of December, 'twixt Two and Four in the Afternoon, and there to be hanged on a Gibbet till he be dead, and his Head to be cut off, and his Body to be quartered in Four, and his Head to be affixed upon the Nether-bow Port of Edinburgh, one of his Quarters on the Tolbooth of Jedburgh, another on the Tolbooth of Lanerk, a Third on the Tolbooth of Air, and a Fourth on the Tolbooth of Glasgow, and ordain his Name, Fame, Memory, and Honours, to be extinct, his Blood to be tainted, &c. as in common Form; which was pronounced for Doom.'

Thus this Saint of God is hasted away to his Father's House. In Two Days Time they begin and end his Process, and executed him as if they had been in Fears of being prevented by a natural Death. His Carriage was most sedate, couragious, and Christian, after his Sentence, and during the few Hours he had to live. And at his Execution he was in the greatest greatest Serenity of Soul possible almost for a Person on this Side of Heaven, though extremely low in his Body. He prepared a Speech to have delivered on the Scaffold, but was hindered. Under the Prospect of this he left Copies with his Friends, and it deserves a Room here, as containing a short and distinct View of his Case.

‘HAving received such Usage as I have done, and having got so short Time, it cannot be expected from me in Reason that I should say much.’ His last Speech.

‘Only for my own Vindication, and the Vindication of my Religion, I do testify and declare in the Sight of the omniscient God, and as I hope for Mercy on the Day of Christ’s Appearance, that I was never conscious to any Conspiracy against the Life of his sacred Majesty, or the Life of his Royal Highness the Duke of Albany and Tork, or the Life of any other Person whatsoever.’

‘That I was never conscious to any Plot in any of the Nations, for the Overthrow and Subversion of the Government; and that I designed nothing in all my publick Appearances, which have been few, but the Preservation of the Protestant Religion, the Safety of his Majesty’s Person, the Continuation of our ancient Government upon the Foundations of Justice and Righteousness, the redressing of our just Grievances by King and Parliament, the relieving of the oppressed, and putting a Stop to the shedding of Blood.’

‘As for my Principles with relation to Government, they are such, as I ought not to be ashamed of, being consonant to the Word of God, the Confessions of Faith of the reformed Churches, the Rules of Policy, Reason, and Humanity.’

‘I die a Member of the Church of Scotland, as it was constitute in its best and purest Time under Presbytery, judging that Form of Government most conducing to Piety and Godliness, and most suitable for this Nation.’

‘I die a Hater of Popish Idolatry and Superstition. The faint Zeal I have had against Popery, and for the Preservation of the Protestant Religion in this Nation, hath brought me to this Condition. I am very apprehensive Popish Idolatry will be the Plague of Scotland.’

‘God open the Eyes of his People, to consider the Hazard they are in of Popery. It seems the Generation is fitted for it, and all the Engines of Hell have been made Use of to debauch the Consciences of People, that they may be fitted for Idolatry and Superstition. Men are compelled to take contradictory Oaths, that they may believe Things that have a Contradiction in them.’

‘I know I will not be allowed to speak what I would, and therefore I will say little. I bless God this Day, that I know whom I have believed, and to whom I have committed my Soul as unto a faithful Keeper. I know I am going to my God and chief Joy. My Soul bleisseth God and rejoyleth in him, that Death cannot separate betwixt me and my God.’

‘I leave my Wife and Children upon the compassionate and merciful Heart of my God, having many reiterated Assurances that God will be my God, and the Portion of mine.’

‘I bless and adore my God, that Death for a long Time hath been no Terror to me, but rather much desired; and that my blessed Jesus hath taken the Sting out of it, and made it a Bed of Roses to all that have laid hold on him by Faith, which worketh by Love.’

‘My Soul bleeds for the deplorable Condition of the Church of Scotland; we are losing the Gospel, having fallen from our first Love and Zeal, therefore God is threatening to spue us out of his Mouth. Oh that my Blood might contribute in the least to awaken the Remnant to do their first Works, and might contribute to establish any of his in the Ways of Holiness and Righteousness.’

‘I have had sharp Sufferings for a considerable Time, and yet I must say, to the Commendation of the Grace of God, my suffering Time hath been my best Time; and when my Sufferings have been sharpest, my spiritual Joys and Consolations have been greatest. Let none be afraid of the Cross of Christ, his Cross is our greatest Glory. Let all who love God in Sincerity, prepare for the hardest of Suffering, for Fire and Gibbets; the Aversion that is in all to the Cross of Christ, is the Bane of our Professors.’

‘I am much afraid, that Christ will be put to open Shame in Scotland, and will be crucified afresh, and his precious Blood accounted unholy and polluted, and that Christ, in his Members, may be buried for a while in the Nation; yet I have good Ground of Hope to believe, that the Sun of Righteousness will yet shine again, with Healing under his Wings.’

‘Oh that God would awaken his Remnant while it is to Day, that they may consider what belongs to their Peace. Wo will be to them that are instrumental to banish Christ out of the Land, and blessed are they who are instrumental, by a Gospel Conversation, and continual Wrestling with God, to keep Christ in the Nation. He is the Glory of a Land, and if we could but love him, he could not part with us. Wo be to them that would rather ther banish Christ out of the Land than love him. God pour out his Spirit plenteously on his poor Remnant, that they may give God no Rest till he make his Jerusalem the Joy and Praise of the whole Earth.

 'I have no more Time, but they who love God I hope have minded me in my Affliction, and do mind me now, and will mind my Wife and Children. I go with Joy to him who is the Joy and Bridegroom of my Soul, to him who is the Saviour and Redeemer of my Soul. I go with Rejoycing to the God of my Life, to my Portion and Inheritance, to the Husband of my Soul.' Come, L O R D.

I have several Circumstances of this excellent Person's Carriage, during the Trial and Execution, too large to be insert here. When his Sentence was intimated, he said, My Lords, the Time is short, the Sentence is sharp, but I thank my God who hath made me as fit to die, as ye are to live. When sent back to his Room in the Prison, after Sentence, he leaned over on the Bed, and fell into a wonderful Rapture of Joy, from the Assurance he had, that in a few Hours he would be inconceivably happy. Being, after a little Silence, asked how he was, he answered, Never better, and in a few Hours I'll be well beyond all Conception; they are going to send me in Pieces and Quarters through the Country, they may bag and hew my Body as they please, but I know assuredly nothing shall be lost, but all these my Members shall be wonderfully gathered, and made like Christ's glorious Body. When at the Scaffold, he was not able to go up the Ladder without Support. When on it, he said, My faint Zeal for the Protestant Religion has brought me to this End; and the Drums interrupted him. Their Spite against his Body was very great, and I am told the Quarters of it lay in the Thieves-hole for Three Weeks, before they were placed as in the Sentence.

There are some other Noblemen and Gentlemen I meet with this Year in the Council-registers, attacked for the Plot, as the Earl of Tarras, who, as we have heard, was indicted before he was made Use of as a Witness against Ferviswood, and the Laird of Polwart, since the Revolution Chancellor of Scotland, and King's Commissioner, and Pringle of Torwoodlie, and some others; but their Processes not being brought to an Issue till next Year, I reserve them till then, that we may have the full View of all which concerns them.

Circuits in October, at Glasgow, Air, Dumfries, and Wig-

HAVING given a pretty large Account of the Procedure of the Council and Justiciary this Year, and their Processes against many particular Noblemen, Gentlemen, Ministers, and others, it remains that I consider the more extensive Oppression of the Western and Southern Shires, by the Circuit-courts at Glasgow, Air, Dumfries, and Wigtown, towards the End of this Year; and the exorbitant Fines imposed upon many Gentlemen after those, will afford Matter for another Section by it self.

I shall here resume nothing of the general Forms and Methods used before and at those arbitrary Courts, these having been narrated on the former Years; but I shall, from the Registers, give their Commission and Instructions, and some View of their Severities from written Accounts come to my Hand, which may be depended on, and indeed contain but a very small Part of the Hardships they put upon People who came before them; but these are all I can now glean up at this Distance of Time, there being no Registers of these itinerant Courts, that I can meet with.

Those Circuits, we see, come about annually, and, generally speaking, they are in the Re-cess of Session and Justiciary, in the Harvest Quarter, when the Managers took the Diversion of the Country, and they were very careful to fill up that Part of the Year in carrying on the Persecution, which, during the rest of the Months, they managed at Edinburgh.

In August, these Courts were agreed upon at London, upon Application from the Bishops and Managers here; and, September 6. the King's Letter is read, ordering the Council to appoint the following Commission to be given to the underwritten Persons in their several Districts. The Commission runs just in the Terms of the King's Letter, which therefore it is needless to insert, and I only take in the Commission and Instructions.

Commission for Justiciary, and Instructions, September 6. 1684.

CHARLES, &c. to all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects whom it effeirs, Greeting: Forasmuch as, albeit the many Endeavours used by Us to reclaim the disaffected and disorderly People, in severall of the Western and Southern Shires of this Our Kingdom, have not been so effectual as the Gentleness of Our Government, and the Interest of all concerned gave Us Ground to hope; but on the contrary, they continue in rebellious Convocations, and seditious Conventicles, and other disorderly Practices, without any competent Endeavours used by those concerned in the severall Shires, either conform to Our standing Laws or late Proclamations: Yet we being still resolved to profecute all just Means for securing Our Royal Power, and the Safety of Our People, have thought expedient, that before more severe Remedies be tried, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, hereby to impower some of Our Privy Council to go to severall Shires and Places.

And particularly, the Duke of Hamilton, Our Treasurer-depute, and Justice-clerk, to the Shires of Clydsdale, Renfrew, and Dumbarton; the Earl of Mar, Lord Livingstone, and Lieutenant-general Drummond, to the Shire of Air; Our Treasurer-principal, the Lord Drumlanerke, and Colonel Graham of Claverhouse, to Dumfries and Wigtoun, and the Stewartries of Anundale and Kirkcudbright; the Earl of Balcarres, Lord Testar, William Hay of Drumtzier, to the Shires of Roxburgh, Selkirk, Peebles, and Merse.

With full Power to them, or any Two of them, within the Shires and Districts foresaid, to act as Commissioners of Our Justiciary, in all Matters criminal; and for that effect, to affix and hold Criminal Courts, create Clerks, call Assizes, &c. (as in former Commissions above insert) as fully as the Commissioners of Our Justiciary have done, or may do.

And to the effect, the Design of this Commission against disorderly and irregular Persons may be the better prosecuted, We do impower them to hold Courts, and in these Courts to call and convene all Persons guilty of Conventicles, withdrawing from publick Ordinances, disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, and such like Disorders and Irregularities; and to take their Oath, examine Witnesses against them, pronounce Sentences, and the same to due Execution cause be put, by Imprisonment, or other legal Diligence, conform to the Laws of this Realm.

And generally to act and do conform to the Tenor of the Instructions herewith given by Us, or which shall hereafter be given by Us, Our Privy Council, or secret Committee of Our Privy Council, as fully and freely in all Respects, as a Quorum of Our Privy Council, if they were present. All Persons are ordered to attend the Lords Justices, as in common Form; and this Commission to endure till the First of December next, unless We think fit to prorogate the same. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, September 6. 1684.

Follow Instructions upon the foresaid Commission.

CHARLES R.

1. You shall disarm all Heritors who have not taken the Test, and all the Commons, excepting the Militia; and if any shall conceal Arms, or refuse to depone thereupon, when by you required, you shall fine the Heritors in one Year's Rent, the Tenants in one Year's Rent of their respective Farms; the Servants, and Cottars, and Tradesmen, not authorized by the Bishops, and send them to Our Privy Council to be disposed of as they ther Men or Women, and you shall put Our Proclamations, especially that of the them, as Concealers and not Discoverers, negligent Heritors, Sheriffs, Bailies, and other Magistrates or Heritors of the Place where they are kept, or otherwise concerned by Our Laws and Proclamations, according to the Tenor thereof; and the Husbands of such Wives as are guilty, and have not done their Endeavours in Terms of Our Letter, bearing Date the Day of .

 ‘ For doing of which, these Presents shall be to you, and all others who may be respectively concerned, a sufficient Warrant. Given under Our Royal Hand and Signet, at Our Court at Windfor Castle, the 26 Day of August 1684. and of Our Reign the Thirty sixth Year.’

By His Majesty's Command,

MURRAY.

It was the Month of October before this terrible Circuit sat down in their different Districts. Those ample Powers, and a Liberty to cut and carve in them as they saw good, let us see what an arbitrary and absolute Government Scotland was now under. Life, Liberty, and every Thing is left in the Managers Hands. If they pleased to have Mercy on the poor harassed Country, the King allowed them, and if not, their Instructions carry them even to Fire and Sword.

To pave the Way for their Work, or at least to prevent the poor Sufferers getting off the Kingdom, and to discover such as remained in it, Two Proclamations are emitted in September; the first bears the Date, September 15. ordering the Oaths of all the Masters of Ships, or Vessels going off the Kingdom, to be taken, as to their Passengers, which I have insert App. No. 97. This needs no Observation upon it. No question, it was levelled against the persecuted Party principally; a new Circuit was very justly frightsom to them from their Experience of the Severities of the former. They are not suffered to live at Home, and now are stopped from retiring to foreign Countries, where they might be free from being butchered in cold Blood.

And September 16. another Proclamation is emitted, discharging all Persons whatsoever, to travel from one Shire to another without a Pass. It is but short, and I have added it App. No. 98. All Travellers must have a Pass from some Persons in the Government. And the Pretext is, to hinder Persons from carrying false News from one Part of the Country to another. I am not so far Master of the Intrigues now on Foot, as to make Reflections that perhaps might be native enough here. As the former was a Check and Damp upon Trade and Commerce, so this is a plain Encroachment upon the Liberty of the Subject, in going and coming from one Place to another, and a Kind of imprisoning the Lieges at large, without any just Reason given. That of spreading false News is evidently frivolous, and every Body may see these might be spread by Letters. The true Design seems to have been, to be a Preface to more general Impositions on the Subject, as we shall afterward hear, to prevent suffering People retiring from the Fury of the Circuits, to be a new Colour to the Soldiers, and to oppress poor People the more. I wonder the Proclamation does not empower the Bishops and orthodox Clergy, to give Passes. The Instructions to the Commissioners seem to suppose some such Passes, but, it seems, the Council do not find it needful to entrust them.

Before the Meeting of the Circuit or Justiciary, the Council by their Clerk order the Shire of Stirling with its Jurisdictions, pro hac vice, to be adjoined to the Jurisdiction of Glasgow, to save the Lords the Trouble, as I suppose, of leaving Glasgow. I observe nothing of this in the Records, but it appears by an original Warrant, from the Clerk of Council to the Sheriff-depute of Stirling to this effect, in my Hands, which, because it gives us some View of the Preparations and Care taken to ripen Matters for the Circuit, and of the willing Share the Clergy were to have in this, I have insert here. Its Date is not expressed, and is indorsed.

Warrant to the Sheriff-depute of the Shire of Stirling, 1684.

Sheriff-depute of Stirling,

‘ FOrasmuch as his Majesty, by a Letter under his own Royal Hand, hath been pleased to adjoin the Shire of Stirling, and the Jurisdiction thereunto belonging, whether of Royalty or Regality, to the District of Glasgow, you are therefore ordered to cite and advertise all the King's Vassals, and other considerable Gentlemen holding of other Superiors within

‘ within the said Shire, and Jurisdictions and Regalities within the same, to compare before the Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council, at Glasgow the 14 Day of October instant, by Nine of the Clock, and there to attend the said Lords, and receive such Orders and Directions for his Majesty’s Service, as shall be thought expedient. ’
 ‘ You are likewise to advertise all the Ministers within your Shire, that they attend the said Lords at Glasgow the foresaid Day, and that they come prepared to give in to the said Lords, exact Lists, upon which they are to make Faith as to all irregular Persons, Withdrawers from the Church-ordinances, and all suspect and disaffected Persons to his Majesty’s Government in Church and State, so far as it consults with their Knowledge, as also a List of all such Persons, as they believe, can give best Information anent the Premises. ’
 ‘ As likewise you are to cite the haill Elders of Kirk Sessions, their Clerk and Beadle, to depone upon the forementioned Particulars the said Day and Place. ’
 ‘ And particularly you are to cite the Magistrates of the Town of Stirling, to appear before the said Lords at the abovementioned Time, and particularly to depone anent the forementioned Particulars, and to bring alongst with them an exact List of the haill Heritors who stand infeist in Lands within their Burgh. And in this you nor any of the forementioned Persons are not to fail, as you and they will be answerable. Extracted by me Sir William Paterson, Clerk to his Majesty’s most honourable Privy Council. ’

Will. Paterson Cl. secr. Conc.

From this and what goes before we may learn, that these Courts had both a Council and Justiciary Power, and had a vast Compass of Affairs before them. We shall find afterwards, this Shire came to Glasgow, and gave ample Proofs of their Loyalty and Submission to the King’s Orders.

Letter from the Committee for publick Affairs to the Commissioners at the Circuits Octob. 9.

What were the precise Days upon which these Courts, ordinarily called Circuits, tho’ different a little from these in the former Years, met, I cannot say, further than the Dates of some Papers in the Registers, and others come to my Hand, shew. It would seem that Court at Jedburgh met toward the Beginning of October, for I find a Letter directed to them, and the rest, from the Committee of publick Affairs, October 9. which will give some more Light about them. This I give from the Registers of Council.

October 9. 1684. Sederunt the Committee for publick Affairs, upon the Report of the Commission, at Jedburgh, and for the western Districts the Lords did send the following Letter, a Copy whereof was ordered to be sent to the rest of the Districts for the Rule of their Procedure.

My Lords,
 ‘ The Committee of Council being very frequent, I did propose to them your Two Queries: In answer to the first whereof, it is all our Opinions, that if the Defenders, called before you as Counsellors, be personally cited, they may be holden as confest; but they cannot unless they be personally cited, and all that can be done in that Case is to put them to the Horn, which will be as great a Punishment to them, as if they were declared Fugitives; but it will not infer any Danger to the Country by resetting them, which is as much to be shuned as can be. And if it be thereafter found convenient to hold them as confest, to the end that the King may get a Fine by holding them as confest, which may be more advisable than the taking of their Escheat, which is all that can follow upon their being put to the Horn, then I shall cause cite them upon Sixty Days, as being out of the Country, but let not that stop your Diligence; in which Case they will be holden as confest, tho’ not personally cited.
 ‘ It is likewise their Opinion, you should proceed against all Sheriff-deputes who have malversed, and that you should punish them exemplarily to the Terror of others, and to the end that People may see that you are come there to protect honest Men, as well as to punish Knaves. I am

This Letter is a little dark to me, not having the Queries; but it lets us in to see somewhat of the Managers severe Designs upon Gentlemen and others.

It is of more Importance to give an Account of a Letter from the King, read in Council, or its Committee, October 12. which was no doubt impetrate by our Managers here, as the Foundation of their imposing exorbitant Fines upon many Gentlemen we shall hear of in the next Section. The Letter follows.

CHARLES R.

King’s Letters to the Council, Impowering the Council or their Clerks ‘ Right trusty, &c. Whereas we find that some of our unnatural and rebellious Subjects in that our ancient Kingdom, do enter into Plots and Conspiracies, the more willingly and securely, that they think their Guilt cannot be discovered by the Depositions of Witnesses, they they, for concealing their Guilt, industriously using to discourse of those Matters only with one Person alone; and it being easy to cause One or Two, who might be proving Witnesses, to withdraw for some Time. And seeing it is the great Interest of all Government, as well as of all who desire to live peaceably under it, that all Subjects should be obliged to fear all Manner of Accession to such horrid Crimes, as tend to overthrow all Society and Government; and it being undeniable, that no Man can complain when judged by his own Oath, by which he is in less Danger, than by any Probation of any Witness whatsoever.

 refer Probation on to the Defenders Oath, and it they refuse, to fine.

Therefore thought it necessary to empower, and We do hereby authorize and empower Our Advocate to raise Process before you, or before those who are commisionate to represent Us, as Our Privy Council, in the Western and Southern Shires, against any whom you or they shall order, for the said Crimes of plotting and contriving to rise in Rebellion, or for intercommuning with, or resetting any declared Rebels; and to refer their Guilt to the Oath of the said Defenders, in so far as may extend to a pecuniary Mulet or Fine alienably.

Declaring hereby, for their further Security, that if they shall depone upon the Guilt so referred to their Oath, they shall be for ever as secure upon the Payment of their Fine, as if they had a Remission under Our great Seal: Whereas, if they refuse to depone, We order you to hold them as confest, and to fine them in what Sums you shall judge to be proportional to their respective Guilt and Accession. Which Power so granted to you, shall only continue in force till the first Day of April next to come, and is hereby ordained to be registrate and recorded in your Books, to the end that Extracts may be given to any who shall depone, as said is, this, and the Decrees to follow thereupon, being to them in place of a Remission. For all which this shall be to you a sufficient Warrant. Given, &c. September 27. 1684.

MURRAY.

Such Power was formerly granted to the Council, and now 'tis renewed to reach Heritors, against whom they had no Probation; and under the Colour of this they put the Test to them, as what only could purge them of Disloyalty and Reset. All the Country was involved necessarily in Converse with such as had been at Bothwell, and no Man who feared an Oath could swear his own Freedom from conversing with such; and by this Letter they were to be holden as confest, and guilty if they did not; and all this is imposed under the Notion of Kindness. One who calmly considers such Methods and their Tendency, cannot but reckon them publick Juggling with God and Men.

Remarks on it.

I come now to give an Account of the Procedure of the Lords at each of those Courts, as far as Materials have come to my Hand. I have nothing remarkable from Jedburgh, but that they were severe enough in Persecution, and frank enough in making an Offer of Cess to the King, as we shall hear the rest of the Districts did.

Circuit at Jedburgh.

Upon the Second of October, Queensberry, his Son, and Claverhouse sat down at Dumfries, having for their District, Dumfries, Galloway, Nithsdale, and Anandale. There were no where greater Irregularities and Severities committed than at this Southern Court, of which I shall give some Instances, if once I had taken Notice of the Addreses and Offers the Heritors were forced into. This vast Sum the oppressed Country was clubbed into, and the preparing Matters for the exorbitant Fines, within a little to be exacted, seems to have been the great Design in those Circuits their being sent up and down the Country.

At Dumfries.

The Judges were about a Month in that District. At Dumfries I find the Proposal of coming into a large Cess was made, and left to be thought upon till the Judges returned, and it was then gone into. The particular Methods used to bring up Heritors, probably much the same every where, will come in at Air and Glasgow.

All the Heritors were called and required to take the Test, and if any Irregularities were found charged against any of them, the Test was offered as a Favour, and they behaved either to take it presently, or go to Prison; and after some Stay there, the Refusers were allowed to give Bond and Caution to appear and answer at Edinburgh. I do not hear of many Gentlemen who were present, but one Way or other they were prevailed upon, except that excellent and worthy Gentleman Mr. Hugh Maxwell of Dalswinton, who continued afterwards many Months in Prison at Edinburgh, and was most iniquously fined, as we may hear.

Methods with the Heritors.

When they were got through the Heritors, the Commons were called upon by their different Parishes, and all who would not presently depone they were free of hearing and baptizing with Presbyterian Ministers, that they had kept their Parish Church, and had not reset or conversed with Rebels, Fugitives, &c. the Men were required instantly to take the Test, and likewise to swear they should never reset, harbour, give Meat or Drink, or shew any Kindness to any intercommuned wandring Person, and that upon hearing or seeing of any that were or should be denounced, or were upon their hiding, they should raise the Hue and Cry; and if they could not apprehend them, they should give timely Notice to the next Garison, that they might pursue them, or to the Sheriffs or Justices of the Peace.

With the common People.

The Women, especially through the Parishes up and down the Country, where Substitutes were sent to make this Oppression as extensive as possible, had not indeed the Test put to them, but dreadful Oaths formed according to the Circumstances they were informed to be in. For Instance, if they were alledged to have Husbands upon their hiding, they are obliged to swear they should not cohabit or converse with them, under the Pains of Law; if they had Children denounced, that they should not harbour or shew any Kindness to them. The Refusers, Men and Women, were straight sent to Prison, and indeed the Prisons and Guard Houses were now every where crammed full.

Procedure in Country Parishes, which the Judges could not reach.

After some Days at Dumfries, the Judges went to Kirkcudbright, and from that to Wigtoun, where, as far as I can learn, the very same Methods were fallen upon; and in the mean Time particular Gentlemen and Officers of the Soldiers, were commissioned to go to the Country Parishes, at Distance from the Towns, which the Judges could not fully reach: And at those Sub-courts, if I may call them so, I find it remarked that many were obliged to swear over again, though they had satisfied the Judges. The Test was offered to the Men, and other Oaths to the Women, and all Refusers were brought into Dumfries Prison, against the Time the Judges were to return thither. These Substitutes did not fail to take Sums of Money, to enrol Persons, as having satisfied, who did not take the Test; and no small Sums were raised this Way. About Twenty eight Prisoners were brought into Dumfries, against the Return of the Judges, who were most cruelly treated by the Way, and the very Necessaries of Life refused to them.

Committee for publick
Affairs, Oct. 13.
Transmit to the Secretary, with

No more offers to me from Kirkcudbright and Wigtoun, save the Address that was signed at Kirkcudbright, of which I have an Account from the Registers. Whether there was one from Wigtoun I know not, I have seen no Accounts of it, if it was not joyned to Kirkcudbright. By the Council-books I find, October 13. the Committee for publick Affairs, transmit the Address from Kirkcudbright to the Secretary, with the following Letter. I insert both.

My Lord,

Their Letter.

WE have this Day received an Account from my Lord Treasurer, of the Procedure of the Committee of Council, sent to the District of Nithsdale and Galloway, here inclosed, whereby you will perceive, that by the Diligence and Influence of the Lord Treasurer, that Place is brought to make a cheerful Offer to his Majesty of Twenty Months Cess to be paid in Four Years, beginning at Martinmas next, and that by and attour the Supply granted by the current Parliament.

They have likewise offered themselves to be bound for their Tenants and Servants, that they shall walk regularly in Time coming. This is a very good Example to the Western and Southern Shires, so that if they can be brought up this Length, there may be a considerable Addition to his Majesty's Forces. The Districts of Clydsdale and Air have already offered Six Months Cess, to be paid in Two Years, of which the Lord Register has no doubt given you an Account. Your Lordship will please to give the Duke an Account of my Lord Treasurer, Lord Drumlanerk's, and Claverhouse's Diligence in that Place. We are.

Follows the Tenor of the Address sent up.

To the Right Honourable William Marquis of Queensberry Lord High Treasurer, James Lord Drumlanerk, and Colonel John Graham of Claverhouse, Commissioners of His Majesty's Privy Council, for the Shires of Dumfries, Wigtoun, Anandale, and Kirkcudbright,

The humble Address of the Heritors, Wadsetters, and Liferenters, within the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright.

The Address from the Stewartry of Kirkcudbright.

WE Undersubscribers, Heritors, Wadsetters, and Liferenters, being met by your Lordship's Command and Allowance, and having considered the Representation made to us by the Lord High Treasurer, in name of the rest of the Commissioners, in relation to the present State of Affairs, in the Southern and Western Shires; and considering the great Obligations that we and all his Majesty's Subjects ly under to our gracious Sovereign, for the many Expressions and Acts of his Goodness and Bounty to us: And as we are very sensible of the Lord High Treasurer his Justice and Favour to us on all Occasions, whereof, in a due Recognizance of the same, we shall never be unmindful; so, from the Representation made to us by his Lordship, and a due Sense of the great Happiness this Nation

' Nation enjoys, under the Government of the best of Princes, to whose prudent Care and Conduct, next to the Providence of God, we acknowledge we owe our Liberty, Tranquillity, and Peace we have had under him for many Years, while almost all other Nations about us have been engaged in War. As also, that nothing hath stood in the Way of our being the happiest of all People, but what had its Rise from some disaffected Persons among our selves, and their withdrawing from the publick Worship, and frequenting House and Field-conventicles, the Consequences whereof involved a great Part of the Kingdom in those Two unhappy Rebellions, 1666 and 1679. unto which too many in this Country had too great an Accession. And albeit his Majesty, from such Provocations from these who gave a Rise to those Rebellions, might have exercised the Rigour of his Justice, to the full and total Extirpation of that rebellious Party, and have put the standing Laws of the Kingdom in Execution, yet his boundless Mercy and Goodness was such, as not only to pass by the Errors and Escapes of such as through Ignorance were misled, but even to pardon and indemnify Rebels themselves, and others who had Accession thereunto: Notwithstanding whereof, many do yet continue in their rebellious and pernicious Principles, in a direct Opposition to his Majesty's Government, who being unworthy of the former Acts of his Mercy and Goodness, are now to be prosecuted to the utmost Rigour.'

' Therefore we the Persons above designed, out of a due Sense of our Duty to God, to his sacred Majesty and his Successors, and out of a just Abhorrence and Detestation of all Rebellion and Separation, and as a true Mark of our Loyalty and Allegiance to our gracious Sovereign, and for the Preservation of our selves and Posterity.'

' Do make an unanimous and cheerful Offer to his Royal Majesty, whom we pray God to bless with a long, happy, and prosperous Reign over us, and to his Successors, towards the maintaining of the standing Forces, for the better securing the Peace and Quiet of the Kingdom, Five Months Cess yearly for the Space of Four Years, from the Term of Martinmas next to come, and that by and attour the present Supply payable by us by the Act of Parliament, dated in August 1681.'

' Beseeching his Majesty graciously to accept of this our unanimous Offer and Tender. Which Five Months Cess, for the said Four Years, is to be uplifted, levied, and collected, out of the Land Rent within the said Stewartry, in the Manner as the present Supply is payable to his Majesty; and the first Term's Payment to be at Martinmas next, by way of Advance, and so forth thereafter, at Whitsunday and Martinmas, being Two Months and a Half's Cess termly, during the said Space.'

' And as a further Testimony of that Duty and Obedience we owe to our sacred Sovereign, and for the Security of the Peace and Quiet of the Government, for the future, we bind and oblige our selves, for our Tenants and Cottars under us, that they shall live regularly and peaceably all Time coming, or otherwise to extirpate and remove them forth of our Lands, so soon as their Irregularities shall come to our Knowledge, either by the ordinary Judges, or Ministers within whose Bounds they live, and shall give our utmost Course and Assistance in reducing them to Justice, in case of their Irregularities, and that under the Certifications provided by Law thereanent; and what the Lords of Privy Council shall be pleased to inflict against the Contraveners thereof.'

When the Judges had ended their Work at Kirkcudbright and Wigtoun, they returned to Dumfries, and finished what they had left undone there. I meet with their Address sent up, October 30. by the Committee for publick Affairs, and a Letter to the Secretary, with high Encomiums upon the Treasurer, for his Pains in bringing that Country to such Expressions of Loyalty. The Address itself, signed by the Heritors of Dumfries and Anandale, is much to the same Purpose with that just now insert, and I love not needlessly to swell this Work.

Abstract of the Address from Dumfries Shire

' They take Notice, with great Thankfulness, of the King's sending down his Royal Brother the Duke of York to Scotland, and declare they have nothing more to wish for, than that the King and his Successors reign over them, and offer the King as many Months Cess as his Majesty's Privy Council here, or secret Committee thereof, think fit, by and attour what the Parliament has already granted; and bind themselves for their Wives, Families, Tenants, and Cottars, their Regularity, in such Terms as his Majesty's Council shall think fit and practicable by them, besides the ordinary Certification by Law; and give Assurances, that whatever shall at any Time be proposed to them by the Lord High Treasurer, for the advancing of his Majesty's Interest, shall be most cheerfully gone into by them.'

During the Time that this Court was sitting at Dumfries, and the other Towns in this District, the Soldiers were Day and Night searching up and down the Country, and the Informers busy to give notice of any who had accidentally escaped the Fury of the Court. And the strictest Searches possible were made for all Wanderers, and Persons upon their Hiding.

Mean while the Country is harried with Searches

It was this Severity which produced the Declaration in November from some of the Society People, which I shall give Account of next Section save one. The whole Country almost was sworn against them, and the Soldiers were killing them wherever they found them, and this Treatment drove them to these Extremities we shall hear of. And indeed all along, the Heights any of the persecuted People ran to, were plainly the Effects of the unaccountable and illegal Procedure of the Persecutors.

Particular Persons staged before the Circuit in the South.

Mr. William
Caldow an Abbeygate of his Sufferings
since the 1660.

But it is high Time to come to some Instances of the Severities of this Court, in this Southern District, against particular Persons. And I shall give a short Narrative of the Sufferings of such as I name, before, at and after this Court, from well vouched Accounts.

The first who offers is Mr. William Mcmillan of Caldow, in the Parish of Balmaclellan in Galloway. This excellent Person was very harshly treated at this Court, but I shall give a Detail of his Sufferings a little higher. After the Reintroduction of Prelacy he was persecuted by Mr. Robert Moir Curate of Balmaclellan, assisted by Sir James Turner then raging in that Neighbourhood. This Gentleman was obliged first to leave his Mother's Family for mere Nonconformity; and marrying, in a little Time he was forced to scatter his own, and live as a Fugitive the best way he could. His Losses in this Period cannot be easily computed, besides the great Hardships his Person was exposed unto, tho' nothing could be charged upon him but peaceable Recusancy.

He had no Accession to, or Concern in Penland, and yet Sir William Bannantyne quartered his Men upon his Family, apprehended himself, and detained him, with many others, Prisoner in the House of Earlston; and his House was spoiled, and his Goods and Furniture seized, and all this, notwithstanding he had given Bond, under the Penalty of a Thousand Pounds, to answer the Council or Justiciary for any Thing that could be laid to his Charge, conform to the Warrant given to my Lord Harris by the Government for that effect. And when Sir William was afterwards, as we have heard, proceeded before the Council for his Exorbitancies, Mr. William was put to vast Charges, as one of the Persons principally lesed, in waiting on at Edinburgh, as a Witness, to small Purpose.

This Gentleman went frequently over to Ireland, to breathe a little in those heavy Times, where he was often and much pressed by the Presbyterian Ministers of the County of Down, to pass his Trials in order to the preaching of the Gospel; for they had now long Experience of his good Parts and shining Piety. At length he was prevailed upon, and after his passing through the ordinary Trials with full Approbation, he was licensed to preach about the 1673.

When, in the most cautious and peaceable Manner, he was now and then preaching in Galloway, he was informed against by the Earl of Nithsdale and the Prelates, who made some Noise about him; yet, without any Noise from the Council, the said Earl sent Two of his Militia Troop, Alexander Maxwell, afterward of Cowheath, and William Glendonning of Partan, with some other violent Papists thereabout, who seized him, and carried him Prisoner first to Kirkcudbright, and then to Dumfries, where, without any Libel or Accusation, he was continued Prisoner Thirty five Months without Intermission, to the great Damage of his Health. After many fruitless and yet chargeable Applications to the Council, upon the Back of Bothwell, when the Duke of Monmouth stopped the Fury of the Persecutors a little, he was liberate.

Upon the first Circuit at Dumfries after Bothwell, Mr. William Mcmillan was cited to it for Refet and Converse, and finding the Design of the Court was to bring all who appeared under sinful Engagements, he absented, and was denounced Rebel and Fugitive at the Cross of Dumfries, with many others. All the Lieges were inhibit Converse with him, and his Goods confiscate to the King's Use. This turned to his great Loss as to any Money he had, and his Stock and Cattle; and he was obliged to hide and lurk many Months in the open Fields, to the great Prejudice of his Health, which at best was but infirm.

Those Hardships at length threw him into a most dangerous Fever, and when not recovered out of it, Mr. Mcmillan, with his infirm Wife, was dragged by the Soldiers to this Court at Dumfries. After much severe and barbarous Usage in the Guard-house, he was sifted before the Lords, who examined him upon some intangling Questions, which he not answering, and withal peremptorily refusing the Test, they most iniquously ordered him to be carried to Wigtoun, under a Guard, and abide Trial when they came thither. By the Road the Soldiers forced him, not yet recovered from his Fever, to walk on Foot till he fainted; and when he fell down among their Hands, they took a young wild Colt near them, and set him upon it, without Saddle, or any Thing under him, to the great Danger of his Life.

Being brought to Wigtoun, he had no other Lodging but the open Guard-house, without any Bed for Eight Days, or any Place to retire to, though he was under a violent Dysentery and Flux. When the Lords came to Wigtoun, Mr. William petitioned them, that he might have the Favour of the King's common Prison, that at least he might be rid of the Guards now continually about him, or that he might be allowed to give Bond to appear at Edinburgh, as soon as he could reach it; but such was their Inhumanity, that both were refused.

From Wigtoun he was sent to Kirkcudbright, where Grierson of Lag, by Orders, as he said, from Queensberry, threatened him most severely, if he would not take the Test: But he, through Grace, standing his Ground, was sent Prisoner to Dumfries Castle, where he continued from the 22 of October, until the 22 of November, in an open House among a Throng of others, under a Guard. It was a Wonder to himself, and to all who knew his Circumstances, that under all this Toil and hard Usage, he died not among their Hands.

The 22 of November, he, with upwards of Eighty others, Men, Women, and some Children, were carried to Moffat Kirk, where they lay that Night, under great Extremity of Cold, being wet through, and most of them in Hazard of drowning in the Waters, under Cloud of Night, before they could reach that Station.

He with 80 Prisoners from Dumfries sent in to Edinburgh Nov. 22. their severe Usage.

Next Day being Sabbath, the Soldiers travelling Day, they were carried Twenty four Miles to Peebles, under a Guard of Three Troops of Dragoons, commanded by Captain Clelland. There several of the Prisoners were sorely beat, and cruelly mocked by the barbarous Soldiers, and all of them in Hazard of their Lives, by crossing the Water in a violent Speat. Upon the 24. they were carried to Leith Tolbooth, and reproached bitterly as they went through Edinburgh. There they were so thronged, that they could scarce stand together, and had no Conveniency so much as to ease Nature.

Here James Muirhead, late Bailie of Dumfries, through the terrible Fatigue, fell into a severe Distemper; and such was the Barbarity of this Time, that neither Surgeon nor Physician was allowed him, and he died in Leith Tolbooth a little after their Arrival, my Account bears, it was on the 28.

James Muirhead Bailie of Dumfries dies at Leith.

By Order of Council Mr. William Mcmillan, with Thirty four more, was brought up to Edinburgh under a Guard, and after Examination, distributed to several Prisons in Edinburgh and the Canongate. There they continued in great Throng, and inexpressible Difficulties, till, about the 18 of May next Year, they were sent to Dunotter. Their Hardships there, and by the Way, I shall refer to that Place.

The reverend Mr. William McGeorge, Minister of the Gospel at Heriot, was likewise before this Circuit, and I have a Hint of his Sufferings from his worthy Son, present Minister at Pennicook. Mr. McGeorge was, with many other honest and peaceable Persons, sorely persecuted by Mr. James Alexander, Sheriff-depute of Dumfries, this Year. The Sheriff-depute imprisoned and fined Multitudes, and caused secure Two Women for alledged Converse with their near Relations, who were in the porteous Roll. When the Circuit came about, the said Mr. McGeorge, James Muirhead late Bailie of Dumfries, of whom just now, John Irwin, John Scot, John Gibson, Homer Gillison, James Muir, Andrew McClellan, all in Dumfries, with many others, were carried into Leith, with the Hazards and Severities we have heard of. Mr. McGeorge continued in Prison till the Middle of April next Year, when he was liberate upon Bond to compear when called. Several of these Prisoners had been so peaceable and regular, (as it was now termed) as to hear the Episcopal Ministers, yet this did not exeme them from the above Treatment.

Sufferings of Mr. William McGeorge Minister at Heriot.

Before this same Court I find Charles Maxwell in the Parish of Keir. All they had to lay to his Charge was Converse with his Sister in Law, after he had given Bond for her good Behaviour, and by Allowance brought her home to his own House from Dumfries Prison, where she had lien for several Months for mere Nonconformity. By this Instance we may see what the Crimes were for which the Heritors at this Time were harassed. Generally speaking, they were perfect Shams, made up for an Occasion to press the Test upon such as they hoped would refuse.

Merely for this the Test was put to him, and upon his refusing it, he was put into the Thieves-hole, and laid in the Irons. Thus he continued, which mean while was most arbitrary and illegal, till the Lords returned to Dumfries, and they passed a Sentence of Banishment upon him. By the Intreaty of his Friends, and the Violence of those Hardships, he complied at length, and took the Test, and was liberate upon paying Twenty Pounds Scots of Fees.

And to give all I have anent him, in November next Year he was cited to a Court at Glencairn Church, for collecting Charity to the Prisoners at Dunotter. He compeared, and when nothing could be proven against him, he was dismissed; but that same Night a Party of Soldiers came to his House, with an Order to take Ten Pounds, or the readiest of his Goods to that Value, for his Wife's Absence from the Court, when he knew nothing of her Citation, and further Orders to carry him Prisoner to Dumfries. With much Difficulty he prevailed with them to take his Bond, with his Master Cautioner, for a Thousand Pounds to appear at Dumfries when called.

At this same Court at Dumfries, or some of the Courts held by those deputed to examine the Country Parishes, a very extraordinary Case fell in. Some Country Women were pannelled for being helpful to the Wife of one of the Persons alledged to have been concerned in the rescuing the Prisoners at Enterkin-path, about Forty eight Hours after the Rescue, when she was in very hard Labour. The poor Women, when interrogate upon Oath, acknowledged they were assisting to the poor travelling Woman, and were found guilty of Refet and Converse with Rebels, and very narrowly escaped being sent to Prison. This is a Piece of Barbarity not to be heard of among Heathens.

Women prosecuted for being present in Leith with the Wife of one who was said to have been at

When the Lords were at Kirkcudbright, they fined, among others, William Martin, Son to the formerly mentioned James Martin of Dullarg, in the Parish of Partan in Galloway; and I shall end the Accounts of the Court in this District with some Hint at his Sufferings. Besides the Severities exercised upon his Father already mentioned, Mr. Martin was put to considerable Charges before the Justiciary at Drumfries 1679. for pretended Accession to Bothwell. In the 1682. he was charged by a Herald to compare at Edinburgh, and there seven Times pannelled, and yet no Probation adduced as to his being at Bothwell; yet he was forced judicially to renounce all the Lands he was infested in before the 1679. and, as he himself observes, put to great Charges through the Knavery of his Agents, and the Covetousness of the publick Servants.

This Gentleman, in his subscribed Account of his Sufferings, now before me, says, when he was at Edinburgh, Queensberry sent for him, and offered to buy the Fortune which he had a Right to by his Marriage with the Heritrix of Caroe, but offered so little, that Mr. Martin refused to sell it at that Rate. Queensberry in Passion enough promised to make him repent it, and said, he found him in the porteous Rolls, and, if possible, he might lay his Account with Loss of Life and Fortune. His Lordship being too strong a Match for him, he says, he was forced to dispoise Lands to the Value of Six hundred Merks a Year, for the Sum of Five thousand Merks, which he reckoned of clear Loss to him, Six thousand three hundred and thirty three Pounds, Six Shillings and eight Penies.

In the Beginning of this Year, in his Absence his Wife was summoned, for his alledged baptizing a Child with a Presbyterian Minister, and was presently forced to give Bond for an Hundred Pounds Scots, which was paid. At several Times he had eight Dragoons quartered upon him, for some Days, during this Justiciary. Colonel Douglas quartered upon him, with Forty four Horsemen for some Time, and being cited to the Circuit at Kirkcudbright, and knowing the Test was to be offered, he chose to withdraw, and was fined in Absence in Seven hundred Pounds Scots, which he paid. From these Instances we may have some View of the Procedure in this District. 'Tis full Time to come to that at Air.

Circuit at Air.

I shall give an Account of the Proceedings of this Commission of Justiciary, with a Council Power, at Air, mostly from a Narrative sent me by a Gentleman of Honour then present. The Lords present were, Earl of Mar, Lord Livingstone and Lieutenant-general Drummond, afterward Viscount of Strathallan, and they sat down, attended with all the Freeholders, towards the Beginning of October.

Discourse of the
to the Heritors.

After the Rolls were called, and the Heritors all present, each of the Lords had distinct Harangues, wherein they gave the Freeholders to understand, ' That whereas there were before them porteous Rolls, wherein were Crimes of high Treason laid to the Charge of most, if not all the Nobility, Gentry and Freeholders of the Shire of Air, and the Shire in general lay under a very bad Character of Disloyalty and Disaffection to the Government, at Court; therefore they out of Compassion to the Inhabitants of the Shire, well knowing their impending Dangers, and as their Friends and Wellwishers, advised the Nobility and Gentry there present, to consult among themselves, and conclude upon what Method appeared to them most proper to evidence their Loyalty to the King and his lawful Successor, thereby to remove the suspicious Jealousy and bad Impressions the Court had of them. With more to this purpose. This was an handsom Way to levy Money by Innuendo's, and to draw them into the Test and other Court Measures.

The Proposal was gone into, and Lieutenant-general Drummond, being alledged Heritor by possessing the forfeited Estate of Kersland, and professing more than ordinary Zeal for the Good and Reputation of the Shire, was desired, by the Nobility and Gentry, to do them the Honour to assist them with his best Advice and Council. Without any Ceremony, he embraced the Invitation; and when they retired to another Room, he was soon chosen Preles. And after a Discourse much of a Strain with that above, and under the greatest Protections of his Friendship, and hearty Concern for the Peace and Welfare of the Shire, gave it as his Advice, and the most proper Way to evidence their Loyalty, and obtain of the Government an Indemnity for their past Crimes, was to make a voluntary Offer to take the Test; and then he was persuaded the Lords Commissioners would effectually interpose their Interest that there might be no further Prosecutions, and a full Indemnity would be granted for bypast Faults, excepting a few, the Court had just Ground to suspect, had proceeded further in disloyal Practices than could well be indemnified.

Lieutenant-General Drummond to petition for Liberty to take the Test, with what followed thereon.

And, in regard there was then no standing Law to administer the Test to any such as were not Ministers, and Officers Ecclesiastick, Military and Civil, and therefore the Lords Commissioners could not legally impose it, he further gave it as his Opinion, that all the Noblemen, Gentlemen and Heritors there present, should petition the Lords Commissioners to do them

the Favour to administer the Test to them, that they might have an Opportunity to evidence their Loyalty to the King, and to clear themselves of all disloyal Practices. 1684.

Upon this Proposal several Noblemen, Gentlemen and others withdrew from the Meeting, and others stayed, and made another Motion to make an Offer of some Months Cess to be presently paid. After much Reasoning, the Overture of petitioning was gone into, and a Form of a Petition was drawn up. When this was writ over, with three Doubles, and blank Paper to each for Subscriptions, one for each Lord, and the three Districts of the Shire, the Lords separated one to the Body of the Kirk of Air, another to the Isle, and the third, I suppose, to the Tolbooth.

The Heritors of each District were called; and, after a new Speech from each of the Lords, aggravating mightily the Danger they were in by the Law, and yet signifying, that to evidence his Majesty's Clemency, and their own Regard to the Welfare of the Shire, they had gone into a Proposal, made (by one of themselves) to petition for the Favour of Administration of the Test, and then proposed the Question to every particular Heritor in each District, Will you sign the Petition, or not? Such who signed were dismissed, and the Recusants ordered to stay where they were.

When the Rolls were gone through, and the Separation made, the Lords retired and ordered the Recusants to be made Prisoners where they were, by shutting the Doors, and did not so much as allow those in the Body of the Church, to converse with those in the Isle, who were so pent up in that narrow Place, that they were much straitned; yea, neither Meat nor Drink was allowed them, but what they got towed up by the Windows; Guards being posted at the Entry, it was, it seems, resolved to starve the Gentlemen into Loyalty.

I need scarce remark, in a Period of so much illegal Procedure, the Unaccountableness and Unwarrantableness of this Method of arbitrary imprisoning Gentlemen, who had received no Indictment, and were guilty of no Crime, save refusing to sign a Petition, which they were at full Liberty to do, or not to do, as they saw Cause; and one Part of the Heritors doing it, being no Rule or just Cause, to make the Refusers suffer Treatment due only to villainous Offenders.

Thus they remained till the Lords had dined, when, perhaps ashamed of this rude and indiscreet Treatment of so many innocent Persons of Rank and Quality, the Commissioners came to a Resolution to permit the Gentlemen to come out, and confined them to the Town of Air. And by a special Favour, and with some Difficulty it was that Sir William Wallace of Craigie obtained, that some of his Friends might have Liberty to go with him to his House out of the Precincts of the Town, and yet within a Cry almost to the Tolbooth.

The Commissioners proceeded next to administer the Test to such who had signed the Petition, and when these were called, some of them, upon second Thoughts, did alter their Mind, and refused it. This chagrined the Lords so much, that tho' a little before they had owned, they were not authorized by Law to press the Test, the Gentlemen Refusers were immediately sent to Prison, yea, some of them to that nasty Place called the Thieves-hole, as Montgomery of Bordland, a Gentleman of a good Family, and some others, where they were in a miserable Case, and could neither sit, nor had room to stand upright.

When this is over, the Recusants, pretty numerous, and of good Quality and Rank, had Indictments given them, containing many Crimes, some of which the Persons pannelled were perfectly incapable of. Some Youths, who had no Families, but lived with their Parents, were charged with Reset and Converse. Others unmarried, or who had no Children, were indicted for irregular Marriages and Baptisms, and the like. These Indictments likewise contained Matter for Multitudes of ensnaring Questions, to which the Pannels were obliged to answer upon Oath.

To all the former illegal Steps they added this. The indicted Gentlemen were classed into several Divisions, and as many of them as they saw good, were remitted to be examined by the Officers and Subalterns of Mar's Regiment then lying at Air, several of whom, in a little Time, quit the Profession of the Reformed Religion, and declared themselves Papists, as Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, and some others. This was a Subcommitting of their Power without any Just Ground, and making the Army Lords Commissioners.

Upon the Report of the Subcommissioners, shall I call them? it appeared, several of the Gentlemen were able to clear themselves of their Indictments by Oath, though others were not; yet all of them were treated as alike guilty, which was another odd Step. And the Lords called them all again before them, and made a new Offer of the Test to them, as the only Way they would allow of, to clear their Innocency in the alledged Crimes, and by Threatnings, Promises and Importunity of Friends, not a few were prevailed upon, and the Number of Recusants was considerably lessened.

Such who stood their Ground, were afterwards one by one brought before the Lords, and examined by the Lord President of the Day, upon their Indictment, and the Commissioners presided per vices. The Pannel was still urged to take the Test, and when they refused, tho' many of them were ready to clear themselves by Oath of the Particulars libelled, this was not allowed, but they were committed Prisoners to the Room in the Tolbooth of Air, called the Council-house.

This Room was perfectly crowded, and the Gentlemen had no other Shift for several Nights, but to ly there, with their Clothes on, upon some Sort of Beds on the Floor, brought in to them by their Friends. But in the Day-time their Lodging was yet worse, for the Season being cold, and the Pannels Number leined, the Lords met in the Council-chamber where there was a Fire, and the Gentlemen were turned out to the cold common Prison, among a rascally Multitude of Soldiers and others. And there the Gentlemen would have sometimes been to benumbed with Cold, that when they offered to write, their Hands would not serve them; yea, just above them was a large common Room, where Multitudes of the meaner Country People were so crowded together that they had not Room to ease Nature but as they stood, and the Nastiness came down upon these below.

When by all those Hardships for several Days, the Lords found none of them would be forced to swear an Oath they reckoned self-contradictory, they at length were pleased to dismiss them upon exorbitant Bail, above the Value of their Estates, to appear at Edinburgh when called. I have no Accounts of any Cefs offered by the Heritors of this Shire.

Procedure
against the
nisters;

Before this Court all the Presbyterian Ministers in the Shire of Air were called, who in the former Years had been indulged, or were preaching sometimes with their indulged Brethren, and the Test was offered to them, which, I need not add, they refused. Upon this they were ordered to bind themselves, that they should exercise no Part of their ministerial Function, until the King and Council gave them Allowance. One or Two, as my Information bears, had Clearness to come under that Obligation, and were dismissed; but all the rest peremptorily refused such a Tie, as a subjugating the Ministry they received of the Lord, to the King, and they were sent to the Bass, and other Prisons, where they endured no small Hardships, of which I am sorry I can give no particular Account. Thus a clear House was made of Presbyterian Ministers in the West, and the orthodox Clergy were for some Time delivered of those Eye-sores. And this Year also a good Number of the best, and most conscientious of the Episcopal Clergy, were turned out of their Charges for refusing the Test.

Commons.

The Lords Commissioners, by themselves and their Substitutes dealt much with many of the Country People to take the Test, and erected a Gibbet at the Cross to frighten them, and pointing to it, would say, Tonder Tree will make you take the Test. At this same rate they used to terrify young Gentlemen. One Day the Earl of Mar, when going by the Cross, pointed to the Gibbet, and said to a young Gentleman yet alive, from whom I have it, a Refusant, Will not that shake your Resolution? No, my Lord, answered the other, If I am to be hanged, I expect so much Advantage by my Birth and Quality, as to hang at the Cross of Edinburgh, and twixt this and Edinburgh I may think what to do.

As to the common Sort, I am told they followed much the same Methods used at Dumfries. All who were blamed for Refet and Converse, behoved to take the Test immediately, or go to Prison. They were likewise taken obliged to raise the Hue and Cry against all suspect Persons.

I find in one written Account of the Procedure of this Court, and it seems agreeable to their Instructions, that they passed an Act, discharging all to go out of their own Parish, without their Minister's Testimonial, by way of Pass; and all who wanted this were to be seized and imprisoned. The same Information bears, that they discharged being at Field-conventicles upon Pain of Death, and extended the Act against House-conventicles, making that one, where there were Two more than the Family: But 'tis certain, they took up Rolls of all who kept not the Church, and charged all to be regular under the highest Pains, and put all whom they had cited, and were absent, to the Horn, and forfeited some, and filled all the Prisons up and down the Country with such as refused the Test.

disarmed, and others.

And to end this general Account, the Lords, before they left the Shire, disarmed all such who refused the Test, not so much as leaving a Pistol or walking Sword. And many who were thus disarmed, were Gentlemen who had signalized themselves in the King's Service. Thus they treated that gallant as well as good Man, whose Memory is still savoury in the Shire of Air, Major Buntin. I am well informed, his Services were so great and well known to the King, that he recommended him to his Brother the Duke of Tork in a very particular Manner, when he came down to Scotland, as one he had a particular Regard unto. And if this good Man could have gone along with the Courses of this Time, I know he might have had some of the highest Posts in the Army. And yet so insolent were those Commissioners, that his very walking Sword, and a pretty Carabin he used to divert himself with, were taken from him, though this Gentleman had never taken the Tender, or in the least quitted the King's Interests, when he was at his lowest; and my Lord Livingstone's Page had this Sword given him, and wore it publickly in the Streets. That gallant Gentleman Captain Hamilton of Ladylands, who afterwards died in Defence of his Country against the French, was disarmed, and many others.

I shall end the Account of the Procedure of the Commissioners at Air, with Two Instances of particular Severities, the one of a Sentence of Death, and the other of Fining and Banishment.

ment. The first is a very affecting Proof of the Spirit of this Time. A poor Country Man was charged with being at Bothwell; the Account of whose Trial I have from the forementioned Person of Honour who was present. Before passing Sentence, the Lord Livingstone President that Day, told him, If he would answer one Question the Sentence should not be pronounced, and it was, Do you own the King's Authority, or not? The Man answered very distinctly, My Lord, I do own the King's Authority so far as he acts by, and it is grounded on the Word of God. The President said again, I ask thee, Man, dost thou own the Authority of King Charles II. yea or no? To which he replied again, I do own the Authority of King Charles II. as he acts conform to the Word of God, and grounds his Power thereupon. The Question was several Times repeated, but the honest Man would give no other Answer; and so the Sentence passed, and he was ordered in a few Hours to be hanged at the Cross of Air. At the Intercession of some Ladies, indeed the poor Man was reprieved, and carried in to Edinburgh.

But it must appear horrid in a Protestant Country, or among Christians who own the Bible, to hear of a Sentence of Death passed upon a Person in open Court, and after Deliberation, plainly importing an Exemption of Sovereigns in their Actings, from Conformity to the Word of God, and supposing a Power in them beyond, and without any Foundation of a divine Law.

The other Instance I give, is of that singular Person I have mentioned more than once before. Quintin Dick, Feuar in Dal'mellingtoun; and I give it from his own Papers. After a considerable Struggle whether to appear or not, he at length determined with himself to obey the Citation, lest his Non-ompearance should be reckoned Contempt of Authority, and he guilty of the Things laid to his Charge, or a Favourer of the wild Principles and Practices some of the Sufferers were falling into. When he compeared he had a Libel given him, upon which he was interrogate next Day, when, being asked if he conversed with Rebels, he answered, he withstood the Rising at Bothwell, as much as he could in his Station, but after they were broke he supplied the Party with Meat and Drink. Being required to swear upon the alleged treasonable Positions, he said, Rising in Arms upon Self-defence, and entering into Leagues and Covenants without the Consent of the Magistrate, were Points controverted among Divines and Lawyers, and he could not take upon him by Oath to determine them. And being required to take the Oath of Allegiance, he declared, he owned the King's Authority in Things Civil, and was ready to swear it, but Supremacy in Things Ecclesiastical was such an Usurpation upon Christ's Kingdom, that he was a better Friend to the King than to wish him it.

this Circuit.

Whereupon the Lords passed the following Sentence upon him. 'Quintin Dick in Dal-mellingtoun being found guilty of Converse with the Rebels, of refusing to depone upon the treasonable Positions, and refusing to swear the Oath of Allegiance, is fined in a Thousand Pounds Sterling, and banished to the Plantations in America.' There follow in his Papers several judicious and solid Remarks upon this Sentence, too long to be insert. He observes, That as to his Converse with Rebels, none were named in his Indictment, and they had no Ground for it, but by his own Acknowledgment that he had charitably supplied some of the fleeing Party with Meat when fainting, and if there was any Thing in the Law contrary to this, 'tis superseded by God's plain Command. As to his refusing to swear upon the treasonable Positions, he declares he hath much Peace in it, and durst not by an Oath condemn the Practice of our worthy Ancestors and many others. And as to the Allegiance, he thinks no Law obliged him to take it, and he could not swear the Supremacy now joyned with it, being perswaded, that the Church of Christ hath a Government in Ecclesiastical Matters, independent upon any Monarchy in the World, and that there are several Cases, which no way come under the King's Cognizance.

Upon the Back of this Sentence, all his moveable Goods were immediately seized, as appears by a Commission, to Robert Crawford and John Speed Messengers, by the Lords, to inventory with them, and an Assignment of them at the Value of Two hundred and seventy six Pounds Scots, yet remaining. This good Man's House at Dal'mellingtoun, was set apart for a publick Guard-house, for the Soldiers to keep Guard in as they went and came from Galloway.

He was himself immediately cast into one of the most noisom Holes in the Prison, with Thieves and Murderers; and he notices, in very moving Expressions, and with many suitable Applications of Passages of Scripture, to the Praise of God, and Support of other Sufferers, that notwithstanding of Age and Infirmary, and the Stink and Filth of the Place, and their Crowd, so that they could scarce get standing, and Multitudes of inexpressible Hardships, he was not only born through, but could glory in Tribulation, and say, Patience was wrought, and Experience, and Hope, and the Love of God shed abroad, and he had a Hundred-fold even in this Life, beyond what the World could afford.

After that he continued to be led from one Place to another, from Munday to Saturday's Night, when about Seven of the Clock he was put into the Guard, and carried on the Sabbath-day to Glasgow, and thence to Edinburgh, where he disclaimed the Society People's Declaration of War, before the Council, and was examined by them upon the very same Points upon which his Sentence at Air run, and had the Test offered him, which he peremptorily refused. He remarks, that he was sweetly supported of God, and much refreshed by the Company of many worthy Gentlemen in the Prison; and as the Sufferings of Christ grew, so Comforts abounded by Christ. Thus he continued in Prison till he was sent to Dunnotter next Year.

This knowing and judicious Christian, with a great deal of Caution and Exactness states the Grounds of his Sufferings; and if the Reader find as much Pleasure, as I have done, in this extraordinary Country Man's Account of Matters, he will not grudge to read the State he made of Things before he came to the Court at Air, in his own Words, though considerably shortened.

He remarks, 'That our Rulers from one Step to another, had pushed their Opposition to the Presbyterian Establishment; that in October 1684. they would allow no Presbyterian Minister to preach publicly or privately, and were now come to press Bonds and Tests, disclaiming all owning of Presbytery, and binding to an intire Subjection to Prelacy, and would oblige every one to search for and apprehend all who favoured that Way, till they were utterly extinguished. For those Ends the Court met at Air at this Time.'

'Now, says he, this Conformity to Prelacy so strongly urged, was brought to every Man's Door. The most painful of Deaths was more to be desired than Imprisonment now, because of the Throng and Nastiness of the Place, the dreadful Company there; and particularly we were abandoned by Friends who found Clearness to make Compliances. The Forethoughts of these upon the one Hand, and the Fears of quitting in the least Scotland's Work of Reformation, brought me to a Choke.'

'Upon the one Hand, Disobedience to the Law laboured under the Reproach of alledged Schism and Separation from the Church, affected Vanity, Singularity, Bigotry, wilful Wickedness to a Party, and Contempt of civil Authority, and, if Magistrates would, might be followed with utter Ruin; and if I should conform, I could not free my self from the Charge of backsliding Apostacy, and abandoning the Interests of Christ, and rebuilding what in my Place and Station I was called and covenanted to destroy. In a Word, I would be guilty of quitting an Ordinance of Christ for an human Invention.'

'Many Things darkened my Case, and heightened my Grief. The grievous Divisions fallen in among the Presbyterian Party, some of them being for no preaching without the Magistrate's Allowance, others for Ministers following their Calling and Commission from Christ at all Hazards, and a few who stated themselves against all who would not come to their Heights, in declining Authority to the Reproach of Nonconformity, so that Enemies represent all Presbyterians as of those wild Principles. This was one of the bitterest Parts of my Cup.'

'But knowing that the Devil is now aloft in Scotland upon the one Hand and other, to ruin the Presbyterian Interest, and Cause of Reformation, I found it my Duty to bear my Witness for it. Under this Design it was a new Damp to me, that a great many one Way or other, after Scotland had attained such Lengths of Reformation, have owned the Ministry of the Prelatists, and joyn with them in Ordinances.'

'And now being necessitate to choose in this Case, and either own Prelatists as lawful Ministers of this Church, or give a Reason why I cannot, in all Humility and Fear of God, without the least Design of reflecting upon such who have Freedom to comply, I give those Reasons following.'

'But in respect of the woful Mistakes the Difficulties of the Time hath rendred Presbyterians and every Thing of this Nature liable to, I take Liberty in the first Place to declare my Judgment, anent that precious Ordinance of Magistracy and civil Government. I own and avow Magistracy as God's Ordinance appointed in his Word; and particularly, I own King Charles II. as my lawful King, and sole Monarch of those Realms, acknowledging all lawful Obedience and Subjection to him in the Lord, and disclaiming all and whatsoever Attempts against his Royal Person, and all Libels favouring of Contempt of his Authority.' But,

'In the next Place, I must, in all Humility, and with due Reverence to Authority, say, that I cannot give the active Obedience required by Act of Parliament, anent owning and receiving of Prelatical Preachers, as the lawful Ministers of the Church of Scotland; and that because I stand under an Obligation before God and the World, to bear my Witness for Presbytery, in Opposition to Prelacy; and in respect I can by no Distinction reconcile hearing and receiving Ordinances, at the Hands of sworn and avowed Prelatists, with the Allegiance I ow before God, for Presbytery; I cannot, without violenting my own Light, hear or own Prelatists as the lawful Ministers of the Church of Scotland, and my Reasons are.'

'Our Lord Jesus Christ, the supreme and only Head and Lawgiver in his Church, did appoint, in the Person of his Apostles, a perpetual Ministry in his Church, the Sum of whose Charge is both severally and joynly to take care, and oversee and feed the Church of God, and

and the chief Part and Duty of such Office is to preach, teach, and consequently rebuke, reprove, exhort, remit, and retain, bind and loose; in which Things the Heads both of Doctrine and Discipline, with their immediate Power and Warrant from Jesus Christ, are clearly held out independent upon any civil Power upon Earth, and to be exercised by a Parity among themselves, our Lord himself peremptorily prohibiting all lordly Domination amongst them, which accordingly his faithful Apostles and Ministers practised during their Time, and left it so to the World's End by their Example. 2dly. This Church-government being a Trust committed to the Ministers of Christ, as well as the preaching of the Word, and so an Ordinance of Jesus Christ, is no more to be yielded than any Truth of God. 3dly. Presbytery from Scotland's first Delivery from the Tyranny of Rome, has been the due Right of that Nation, and has therein been exercised by the sent Ministers of Christ in Parity, and recognised by the King and Law, except some Intrusions Prelacy has unjustly made upon its Rights. 4thly. Prelacy was brought to a judicial Trial by the Judicatories of this Church, and found an human Invention void of any Warrant from God's Word, and accordingly sentenced and cast out of this Church, and thereafter this was ratified by Act of Parliament. 5thly. The whole Kingdom in the full Persuasion of Presbytery's Right, and Prelacy's Tyranny and Usurpation, became solemnly sworn for the Maintenance of the one, and Extirpation of the other, ilk Man in his Place and Calling. Now, under these Circumstances I can by no Means reconcile the Compliance required by Law, with the Allegiance I owe before God and Man for Presbytery. This may suffice for this excellent Man, and I shall say no more as to the Court at Air.

Let us now come Eastward to the Court held at Glasgow, where were present the Duke of Hamilton, the Lord Lundin, afterwards Earl of Melford, Secretary, and the Lord Collington Justice-clerk. So large Accounts have been given of the Two former Districts, that I shall pass many Things here wherein there was a Coincidency.

Circuit at Glasgow.

Upon the 14 of October they met. To that Day, we find, Stirling Shire Heritors were cited, and, I suppose, their Meeting was opened with a Sermon, as the Sessions are in England; at least there is before me in Print a Sermon preached before them at Glasgow, and dedicated to them by Alexander Ross D. D. and Professor of Theology at Glasgow.

Doctor Ross his Sermon before them.

We have not many Instances of this Nature, and the Reader, it may be, may desire some Account of a Sermon at such an Occasion, and published by the Command of the Justices. The Dedication gives us the Professor's Testimonial to the Judges, and his Account of their Actings in this Court, 'That their incomparable Zeal and Dexterity, whereby they manage the Court, was incredibly to the Advantage of a decayed Religion and Loyalty in that Corner.' His Text was Acts 26. 28. Thou almost persuadest me to be a Christian: But if the Professor hath preached as he hath printed, which no Body will question, I may apply Cowley's Character.

Remarks upon it.

'He reads his Text, and takes his Leave of it.'

And without offering at any Thing explicatory or textual, he lays down this Scheme, which, how well it agrees with Mr. Cowley's Character, the Reader will judge. 'I will, says he, 1st. shew the different Parties of our divided Zion. 2dly. The Malignancy of the National Sin of Schism. 3dly. The Necessity of Episcopacy for supporting the main Concerns of Christianity. Lastly, The Application.' One cannot help thinking he might fully as well have chosen Gen. 1. 1. for a Text for this Subject.

Indeed to those he premises a general Account of Christianity, as he calls it, that he might have a Hit at the disfigured Faces, and hideous Tones of some People, and ever Body knew whom he would have been at; and them he charges with being the Occasions of the Nation's heavy Taxes, and paints them out as the Authors of all the Confusions, Rebellions, Atrocities, and daily Tumults in this Kingdom; and after a great many ill Names of the Declarations at Sanquhar, Rutherglen, &c. he gives a broad Innuendo upon the Reformation, complaining, that the Nation lies under the Reproach of ruined Cathedrals, and metropolitical Sees; and then in his deep Oratory, descants upon Bishop Sharp's Monument: and after some dry Satyr upon the remaining Inclinations of so many towards Presbytery, he handles the Evil of the Sin of Schism, and by some Thread-bare Arguments, a Hundred Times answered, the Doctor endeavours to shew the Usefulness of Episcopacy to remove Schism, Heat, and many ill Things in the Church of Scotland, since her Reformation by Presbyters.

And for Application, after he hath taken Notice how unsuitable it is for an evangelical Pastor to whet the Sword of Justice, and press Severities, he comes gravely to tell the Judges, that they will be justified in whatever severe Methods they find proper, by the Malignancy of the present Schism, and the Inveteracy of the Distemper; and presses them to take the harshest Ways with such as threaten the very Extinction of Christianity; and concludes with acquainting them, the Church is like to suffer more from her present Enemies, than ever she did from Nero and Dioclesian.

I wish, by this Time, the Reader be not outwearied with this fulsom Account. Here the native Spirit of the orthodox Clergy breathes freely; and after he hath painted out the persecuted secuted Party and Presbyterians, in the most odious Colours, and when he hath wiped his Mouth, and condemned himself in what follows, he plainly hounds out the Judges to whom Severities, and tells them, tho' they come the Length of Persecution, it is no more than the Schismaticks deserve, being worse than Nero and Dioclesian.

After the teaching and breathing out so much Cruelty and Severity, in so publick a Manner, I wish, for their own sakes at least, the Prelatick Party would be a little less clamorous upon the Extremities and Excesses some few of the Sufferers were at this Time driven to, by the Oppression thus preached up upon them.

Address of the Heritors of the Shire of Stirling.

We heard, in the Beginning of this Section, that the Shire of Stirling was adjoined to this District. Accordingly, the Heritors of this loyal Shire attend, and give in the following Petition or Address.

*Unto the Honourable Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's honourable Privy Council,
The humble Address of the Heritors of the Sheriffdom of Stirling, convened by your Lordships Warrant,*

Sheweth,

‘That whereas your Lordships were pleased to ordain us to convene among our selves, to consider what Course we should propose or suggest, for securing the Peace and Order of the Country; in obedience thereunto we convened, and having considered your Lordships Proposals, we find our selves so much obliged, in Duty and Conscience, to obey his sacred Majesty and Government, and those entrusted by his Majesty therein, as we would not presume to make our Propositions, except in so far as we do all unanimously declare our utmost, dutiful, and absolute Submission to, and Compliance with his Majesty's Authority and Government, as it is now established, and our utmost Detestation and Abhorrency of all Rebellion, rebellious Practices and Principles, Assistance thereof, Connivance therewith, or whatever may tend thereunto; and that we are willing at all Times, and by all Means in our Power, to witness the same with our Lives and Fortunes, and that we are and shall be ambitious of all Occasions and Opportunities, by which we may express the same; and of which, we humbly presume, we gave such Testimony, as we could, in the Time of the late rebellious Insurrection, when none of our Heritors of any Value was absent from his Majesty's Host, and our Militia Regiment of Foot, in as good Order as most of the Kingdom, in obedience to his Majesty's Commands, fitted themselves at Stirling, to do their utmost in his Majesty's Service. Nor can it be instanced at any Time, that any Shire in Scotland has been more forward and ready, according to their Power, in his Majesty's Service, than we have been. And tho', in the late Rebellion, a very few inconsiderable Persons, never looked on as Gentlemen in our Bounds, followed the Rebels; we humbly expect, from the Justice and Clemency of his sacred Majesty, and the Government, that their Fault, so much abhorred by us, should not be imputed to us.’

‘Whence, we cannot conceal from your Lordships, the Grief and Anxiety of our Minds, in being now classed and ranked with the other Places of the Country, chief Actors in, and Compilers with the late Rebellion, and other Disorders, who were long since out of their just Jealousy of their Disaffection to the Government, disarmed by publick Authority. But having a deep Sense of our Duty to our sacred Sovereign, his Authority and Government, and of his sacred Majesty's Benignity and Favour to his loyal Subjects; and also considering our own Innocence, and good Affection to his Majesty and all his Concerns, we all declare our selves ready and willing, for further securing the Peace of the Kingdom, and strengthening his Majesty's Government, to contribute, in all Submission and Humility, in the Supply of Three Months Cess yearly, for Two Years ensuing, to be paid at Martimas and Whitsunday next, by equal Portions, over and above the Supply granted by the current Parliament, with the Charge of standing Militia, Horse and Foot, or any other Supply in our Power, to his Majesty's Government, that may not import on us a Mark of Distinction from others his Majesty's most dutiful, most loyal, and affectionate Subjects; and we promise to attend Ordinances dispensed in our Parish Churches, notwithstanding of the Latitude given by the Acts of Parliament every Sunday, so far as Possibility and Conveniency can allow, and our Absence shall neither be wilful nor contumacious.’

‘In which Terms, we humbly expect, that this our cheerful Offer shall not be understood as extorted from us, out of any Sense of Hazard we apprehend our selves in for Delinquency. And we humbly, cheerfully, and heartily offer our Support and Concourse to his Majesty's Government, and Quiet in the Country, in Manner foresaid.’

I doubt not but this Address, intermixed as it is with a Vindication of themselves, was well received by the Lords. I find nothing of such Offers from Lanerk, Renfrew, and Dumbarton; and ere I leave this Head of the Offers made by the Shires, it may not be unfit to observe, that the Council, by their Act December 3. this Year, 'restrickt the Offers made by the Shires, to Three Months Cess, till they further consider them, and appoint them to be paid all within a Year, because they say the Parliament is shortly to meet.' Whether they extend this Three Months Cess over the whole Nation, or restricted it to the Shires named, I know not, but 'tis plain they inclined to have it all, and as soon among their Hands as might be.

The Lords Commissioners at Glasgow, likewise had a Bond of Regularity delivered in to them by the Stirling Shire Gentlemen, signed by their Hands, which deserves a Room here, and it contains an obligatory Clause for the offered Cess.

Bond of Regularity offered by them.

WE Undersubscribers Noblemen, Heritors, and others, within the Shire of Stirling, for testifying our deep Sense of Duty to our most sacred Sovereign the King's most excellent Majesty, and from our Abhorrence of Rebellion, and rebellious Principles, Irregularities and Disorders, and to evidence our firm and constant Resolutions to adhere to his Majesty, his Heirs and lawful Successors their Interests, and to contribute our utmost Endeavours to imploy our Lives and Fortunes for his Security, and the Peace of the Government, and the Extirpation of every Thing that may tend to the disturbing thereof, bind and oblige us, and ilk one of us, for our selves, our Families, Tenants, Subtenants, Cottars, and Servants, that we and they shall live regularly and orderly, according to the Act of Parliament, and shall not connive at any Disorder, but, to the utmost of our Power, shall repress the same, by taking and delivering the Offenders to Justice, if in our Power, and shall give timely Notice to the next Magistrate or Officer of his Majesty's Forces, and shall assist and concur with them, for taking, apprehending any Fugitives, vagrant Preachers, or such as reset, assist, or maintain any such; and that we shall not harbour, reset, or maintain any Rebels, Fugitives, or intercommuned Persons, nor suffer any such to be upon our Grounds or Estates. And further we, and ilk one of us, bind and oblige for our selves, our Families, Tenants, Subtenants, and Cottars, duly and orderly, and ilk Sunday to frequent our own Parish Churches, unless we have a reasonable Excuse to impede us therefrom; and shall partake of the holy Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, whenever the Occasion offers, unless we be able to give Satisfaction to our Ministers, of our present Unfitness to partake of that holy Ordinance. And such of our Tenants, Cottars, and Servants, as live upon our Lands and Heritages, as shall refuse to partake of that holy Sacrament, without a reasonable Excuse to satisfy their Minister, as said is, and shall be complained of to us by our Ministers, we shall deliver up their Persons to the ordinary Magistrates, to be punished according to Law, if in our Power, or shall remove them from off our Lands and Heritages; and that we shall not baptize or marry but with our own Parish Ministers, without their Allowance: And we bind and oblige us, and ilk one of us, to perform the Premises, and every Part thereof, under the Pains and Penalties due to such Crimes as we shall connive at. And we shall behave our selves as loyal and faithful Subjects, by declaring and discovering what may tend to the Disquiet of the Kingdom, or Disturbance of the Peace thereof, any Manner of Way; and that we shall not rise in Arms against his Majesty or his Authority, or his Heirs and lawful Successors, but shall defend the same with our Lives and Fortunes. And as a further Evidence of our Loyalty and Sincerity in the Premises, we hereby bind and oblige our selves, our Heirs and Successors, to pay in to his Majesty's Treasury, or any who shall be appointed to receive the same, for his Majesty's Use, Three Months Cess yearly, over and above the Cess imposed by the current Parliament, and that for Two Years, payable at Two Terms in the Year, Martinmas and Whitsunday, by equal Portions, beginning the first Term's Payment, being a Month and an half Month's Cess, at the Term of Martinmas next, and so forth to be continued termly, ay and while the Expiration of the said Two Years. And we are content and consent, that all Diligence pass against us, for inbringing thereof, as may pass against us for the Cess imposed by the said Parliament. In Testimony whereof, &c.

Nothing can be more extensive than this Bond of Regularity, and it reached farther than any Paper of this Nature I have seen, and effectually secured the Payment of the Cess, and the carrying on the Persecution in this Shire, the Two great Things the Lords had in View. Whether such Bonds were signed in the other Districts, I know not, but 'tis not improbable that the same Method was followed through them all.

this Circuit against particular Persons.

I should now come forward to the particular Instances of their Severity at Glasgow; their chief Work was among the Heritors in Renfrew and Lanerk, and good Numbers of them by no Means could be brought up to take the Test, and their Treatment of them will come in upon the succeeding Section, so that my Work will very much shorten here.

The Persons delated by the Curates and their Elders, as we have heard, in every Parish within this District, were called, and such Heritors who refused the Test, and others who declined taking the Bond of Regularity, were imprisoned. Instances in every Parish could be given, but they would be endless; and therefore I shall point but at a Hint or Two in every Shire.

In Lanerk Shire, from the Parish of Evandale, I find about Thirty six of the common Sort imprisoned at Glasgow for refusing the Test and Bond, which by no Law they were obliged to take: Their Names before me would take up too much Room; and this besides the Four Gentlemen from that Place, imprisoned with the others who fall in next Section, Netherfield, Overtoun, Browncastle, and Bannantyne of Craigmuir. Most Part of the common People continued in Prison at Glasgow and other Places, upwards of Half a Year, and many of them were sent to Dunotter, Blackness, and other Places.

From the Parish of Cannethan, the Two forementioned Gentlemen, Allantoun and Hartwood, with good Numbers of the common Sort, appeared before this Court. The Gentlemen refusing the Test were remitted to Edinburgh, and had their Share, with the rest to be mentioned, of Sixteen Months Imprisonment, to the great Hazard of their Health, and Prejudice to their Estates. Their Rents were all arrested, as was done, I think, unto all the Gentlemen in Prison, by which their Families were reduced to Straits great enough.

William Dalziel
of West Redmire
dies in Prison.

William Dalziel of West Redmire, in the same Parish, upon his refusing the Test, was made a close Prisoner in Glasgow Tolbooth, and, through the Hardships he underwent there, in a little Time he died. No Moyer could prevail to get him out of Prison during his Illness; and when dead, it was with great Difficulty that his Friends were allowed to carry his Body to the Sepulchres of his Fathers in Cannethan Church-yard.

Informations before me bear, That Two Hundred of the smaller Heritors, belonging to the District of Glasgow, were, for refusing the Test and Bond, banished to the Plantations. The greater Heritors were remitted to Edinburgh, and, as we shall hear, received Indictments as to Converse, Reset, and relieving the Sufferers, and Church Disorders: All which were referred to their Oath for Probation; and they fined above the Value of their Estates.

I find, that the rude Soldiers haled several sick and weakly Women in to Glasgow at this Time, for their not hearing of Conformists, some whereof died in a few Days after they were put in Prison, such as Agnes Livingstone in Kippen Parish.

Treatment of
in Lochwinnoch.

I shall end this Account of the Treatment of suffering Presbyterians at this Time, with an attested Narrative of some very honest People in the Parish of Lochwinnoch, who were banished by the Lords, and most barbarously treated after Sentence, much in the Words of the Sufferers, some of whom are yet alive attesting this. They observe, that a little before the Lords came to Glasgow, a Sabbath or Two, John Marshal Sheriff-officer, made Intimation at the Church-door of Lochwinnoch, That all Heritors, how mean soever, should appear before the Lords. The Persons underwritten and others, accordingly went into Glasgow, and waited several Days before they were called; and yet some of the Company were so poor, that they had scarce whereon to sustain themselves.

At length they were called, and, as they answered to their Names, the Test and Bond of Regulation was put to them, and the Oath of Allegiance with the Supremacy intermixed with it. Upon their Refusal to swear, and to sign, they were cast into Prison, where they lay Twenty Days. The Throng was so great, that they could not ly down upon the Floor all at once, but did this by Turns. They were a second Time called before the Lords, who passed a Sentence of Banishment on them to the Plantations.

This, they say, they were very glad of, for they choosed Banishment rather than an Appearance before the Lords, where they knew the escaping of one Word would hazard their Lives. And, November 1. Robert Orr of Millbank, James Allan Portioner of Keers, John Orr of Jamphreystock, James Ramsay Portioner of Auchinbow, John Orr of Hills, Robert Semple of Balgreen, William Orr Portioner of Keam, and Robert Blackburn of Lawristone, these belonging to Lochwinnoch, and all of them Heritors, were carried in hard Frost and Snow to Stirling on Foot, with about Forty other Prisoners. There, though very weary, and without any Refreshment, they were forced into Three low Vaults, some Steps under Ground, without Fire or Light, or any thing to ly on, and no Place to ease Nature in, but the Corners of the Vaults.

Indeed they met with no small Kindness from some good People in the Town, who brought in Straw to them to ly on, and Coals for Fire, and some sent Meal and Money to them, which was a great Relief. They were made to believe, that very soon they were to be sent off to the Plantations, and accordingly they sent to their Friends in the West for some Money to take with them, which was sent as far as could be done in a short Warning. Whe-

Whether this was a Trick of the Soldiers, that they might finger any little Money they could get, I know not; but no sooner did it come up to them, but a Serjeant, named John Downie, in Bell's Company in Mar's Regiment, by Order, as he said, from the Earl, came to the Prison with a Party of Soldiers, with kindled Matches. The Town-officers who kept the Keys were caused open the Doors, and the Serjeant with the Soldiers went in and searched them, and took all their Money from them; from Robert Blackburn, Thirty seven Pounds, Robert Semple as much, Robert Orr Fifty Merks, James Ramsay Eighteen Pounds, John Orr Three Ducatoons, John Orr in Hills Eleven full Dollars. It is not minded what was taken from the rest of the Prisoners. 1684.

When the Soldiers were robbing them of their Money, the Prisoners earnestly begged they might leave them some small Part of it for their present Maintenance, and accordingly some little was given back to each, and the Soldiers left them, but came back within Half an Hour, and took it again; and though they should have starved, would not allow them to keep one Farthing.

They remained in Stirling till May, when they were taken out, and tied Two and Two with Cords, and sent in to the Canongate, where they lay some Time, and some of them were sent to Dunottier, where we shall afterward hear of their Hardships; and all this they with Multitudes of others endured, merely because they refused the Test and Bond, which by no Law could be forced upon them.

This may suffice for giving some View of those Council and Justiciary Circuit-courts, in October this Year.

S E C T. VI.

Of the exorbitant Fining and long Imprisonment of a considerable Number of Gentlemen after those Courts, November and December, 1684.

When I was designing to have cast in the Accounts of these excellent Gentlemens Sufferings, with those last mentioned, they swelled so much upon my Hand, and the Circumstances seemed so singular, that I could not but think they merited a Section by themselves.

The Gentlemen whose singular Hardships I am entring upon, were, for Quality, peaceable Behaviour, good Sense, and singular Piety, behind none in the Nation. And they were the Remains (after many Deaths, and upwards of Twenty Years Severity) of those of their Rank in the West-country who had stood firm to the Presbyterian Interest; and yet had managed themselves with that Temper, Caution, and Prudence, as the Government could not reach them, till this Self-contradictory Test came about, and even that could not be legally forced upon them, and then cheerfully they chose the Reproach of Christ, and Affliction with the People of God. And when Matters came to be so stated, that they behoved either to suffer or sin, the Choice was easie. Their Reflexions on it since have been comfortable, and their Memory will be savoury, while the Hardships put upon them will remain a lasting Stain upon this Government.

Character of
at this Time
fined.

Many of them, if not all, were before the Courts at Dumfries, Air, and Glasgow, and there upon sham Indictments, either sent Prisoners to Edinburgh, or obliged to find Bail in exorbitant Sums, above the real Value of their Estates, to appear there. In November they appeared, and were imprisoned, most of them fifteen Months, and some of them longer.

I am sorry, that, at this Distance of Time, I cannot so much as record all their Names; several from Air Shire and the South have not come to my Hand; but these following in and about this Time, were sometimes close Prisoners in the Tolbooth, and sometimes in the Castle of Edinburgh, and so harshly dealt with, that when some most momentous Affairs, and the Sicknes and Death of some of their nearest and dearest Relations, pleaded for a Week's Interval upon Bail for whatever Sums the Managers pleased, it could not be granted.

From the Shire of Renfrew, Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock Baronet, since the Revolution Privy Counsellor, and now for Twenty Years one of the Senators of the College of Justice, and during some Years Justice-clerk; the Lairds of Craigend's elder and younger, the Laird of Douchal, the Laird of Fulwood, Zacharias Maxwell of Blawarthill Brother to Sir George Maxwell of Nether-pollock, Mr. James Pollock of Balgray, John Caldwell of that ilk.

Their Names.

From the Shire of Lanerk, the Laird of Allantoun, the Laird of Halraig, since the Revolution one of the Senators of the College of Justice, Mr. Andrew (since Sir Andrew) Kennedy

nedy of Clowburn, some Years Lord Conservator, the Laird of Overtoun, the Laird of Hartwood, James Young Chamberlain of Evandale, the Laird of Browncastle, Mr. John Bannantyne of Corehouse, since the Revolution Minister of Lanerk, Bannantyne of Craigmuir, and the Laird of Braidsholm.

From the Shire of Air, Sir James Montgomery of Skelmorly, Sir Adam Whiteford, Cunningham of Alben-yards, and several others not come to my Hand. From Dumfries and Galloway, Mr. Hugh Maxwell of Dalwintoun, and the Laird of Balmagechan. And whether it was at this Time or not precisely, I cannot say, but it was much upon the same score, that the following Gentlemen from the Merse, some of whom have been hinted at formerly, were exorbitantly fined, the Laird of Riddel, the Laird of Greenhead, the Laird of Chatto, the Lord Cranston, Sir William Scot of Harden, senior and junior, the Laird of Wall, with severals from other Places.

Their Case, and the true
Reason of their Sufferings.

Let it be once for all observed, that if those worthy Gentlemen had had Throats wide enough for the Test, the taking of it would have purged them from all the Crimes charged upon them, contributing for Argyle's Supply charged only upon a few of them, Reset and Converse with Rebels (for actual joyning in the Rising was not pretended, many of them being with the King's Host, and all of them of known Loyalty) and Church Irregularities. But rather than take a contradictory Oath, they would all suffer to the utmost.

Their Case was in short this. They had been once and again in the porteous Rolls, and no Probation found against them, and their Diet deserted. Now they are charged with high Treason, as guilty of Reset and Converse with such as had been at Pentland or Bothwell, which was the Case of every Body in the West and South. They had no Probation against them but what would equally have levelled at all, and many of the Managers themselves, and therefore they would not proceed in a criminal Way with them except in Douchal's Case, but the Advocate restricted the Libel to an arbitrary Punishment, and passed from the capital Pains of Treason; and thus by the Letter above set down, impetrate from the King, the Heads of their Libel were referred to their Oath, and the Test, which could not be imposed on them, was offered to them, and upon their refusing to swear upon their Libel, and take the Test, they were fined above the Value of their Estates.

In a Word, they were a Set of worthy, pious and peaceable Presbyterian Gentlemen, who, for upward of Twenty Years, carried so loyally, as that they could be reached by no Law then in Being. The Test did not come to their Door by Act of Parliament, they being in no Places of Trust. The Managers, having felt the Sweet of former Forfeitures after Pentland and Bothwell, had a Mind for their Estates. The Gentlemen could not be reached that way, and yet viis & modis the Managers would be at them for their constant Regard to Presbyterians, and their good Estates; therefore Indictments and Libels are trump up against them, and the Test offered, which they knew they would never take, to keep the Prosecutors in some Countenance, and then, as disloyal and suspect Persons who would not take the Test, the Council fines them in prodigious Sums equal to a Forfeiture, and above the real Value of their Estates.

The Case of those worthy Sufferers being, generally speaking, much the same, it will be needless to narrate each of their Processes, and indeed I want distinct Narratives of several of them; I shall then give some Hints from the Council-registers, and original Papers some of them have been pleased to communicate with me, and from these the Reader will be in Case to form a Notion of the unaccountable and arbitrary Procedure of the Managers with all of them.

The Case of
John Porterfield
of Douchal.

And it may be proper to begin with that singularly pious and worthy Gentleman, John Porterfield of Douchal, whom I have before had Occasion to mention in the former Part of this Work; and I shall give a Narrative of his Persecution from the publick Registers, and some other original Papers.

November 20. I find the Council order the Advocate to insist against Porterfield of Douchal before the Justiciary, for high Treason, and they allow him Lawyers to plead. This Process against him, was to strike Terror in the rest of the Gentlemen, for they had no more against him that I can observe, than against some of the rest, and to bring them into their Measures. He is not brought before the Criminal Court till November 29. the Reason, I suppose, of the Delay was the Declaration of the Lords of Session, presently to be insert, which could not be got made up till this Time, and was so justly surprising, and made much Noise when it appeared. It seems his Sentence of Death was preconcerted before the Justiciary sat; for in the Council-registers, November 28. I find as follows, 'The Council recommends to the Lords of Justiciary to leave the Day and Place of Douchal's Execution to his Majesty.'

His Indictment
Nov. 29.

November 29. John Porterfield of Douchal, is indicted for high Treason, Rebellion, and Reset and Converse with Rebels. 'In so far as he did not reveal Sir John Cochran's Proposal for Charity to the Earl of Argyle, and as he did converse with and reset his Brother Alexander Porterfield, forfeited for Accession to Pentland, and that he harboured George Holms, who had been at Bothwell, upon his Ground.' Those are the horrid Crimes this worthy Person must be brought under a Sentence for, which, when we have heard the Gentleman's Defences, no Body will reckon Crimes, far less capital ones:

With

With the Libel, the Advocate produces the Query he had proposed to the Lords of the Session, and the Solution of it signed by them, as the Judgment of the most eminent Lawyers to evince the Relevancy of that Part of the Indictment, which deserve a Room here, as what, 'tis to be hoped, none of their Successors upon that learned Bench, will ever find again; this being unto all unprejudiced People, at least summum jus, if not summa injuria. 1684.

Edinburgh, November 28. 1684.

The said Day anent a Query proposed by his Majesty's Advocate to the Lords of Council and Session, by Command of the Lords of the secret Committee.

It being Treason by the common Law and ours, to supply and comfort declared Traitors, and it being Treason by our Law to conceal Treason.

Queritur, Whether Sir John Cochran having asked of Porterfield of Douchal, who was not related to the late Earl of Argyle, the Sum of Fifty Pounds Sterling for the said Earl's Use, being a declared and notour Traitor, and Douchal not having revealed the same to his Majesty or his Officers, whereby the Prejudice that might have followed thereupon, might have been prevented, is not the foresaid concealing, and not revealing, Treason?

The Advocate's Query to the Lords of Session, upon Douchal's not revealing a Supply bought from him to the Earl of Argyle.

Geo. Mackenzie.

The Lords of Council and Session having considered the facti species proposed in the foresaid Query, it is their Judgment, that the concealing and not revealing in the Case foresaid, is Treason. Their Answer.

James Fowles,	Geo. Mackenzie,

In this Answer the whole of the Lords of the Justiciary (almost) Three or Four at least deliberately give their Judgment anent the chief Part of the Matter in debate in Douchal's Process; and it may be considered how far in Equity Persons who have already given Judgment, can give it over again. It is certain they could not but condemn the Gentleman, unless they should condemn what they themselves had signed under their Hands.

I have not observed the Debates of any Advocates in this Process, for indeed it was fruitless almost to reason upon a Matter already concluded upon. However, I shall here set down Douchal's own Thoughts of his Case, which he drew up at the Time, and, if I mistake not, gave in to the Court, and resumed it before the Assize; and it is as follows.

John Porterfield of Douchal, is indicted for Refet and Converse with his own Brother Alexander Porterfield of Quarreltoun, whereas the said Alexander being forfeited for his Accession to the Rebellion 1666. and his Estate being sold, and disposed by the Exchequer, the said Alexander after some Years did come and live peaceably within the Shire of Renfrew, and, long before the Time libelled, did go publickly to Kirk and Market, behaving himself as one of his Majesty's free Lieges, by conversing with his Majesty's Subjects of all Ranks, such as Privy Counsellors, the Sheriff of the Shire, and the Officers and Soldiers of his Majesty's Forces; so that private Subjects could not but conclude, he was indemnified, and his own Brother was not more to abstain from Converse with him, than those abovementioned, especially seeing he did compare before the ordinary Courts of Judicature, particularly the Sheriff Court of Renfrew, sometimes as Pursuer, sometimes as Defender in sundry Actions; yea, did actually compound with the Sheriff of the Shire, for a Fine of Irregularities in not keeping his own Parish-church, and received his Discharge for the same. Moreover, he did ordinarily frequent his own Parish-church, when there was a regular Incumbent, and frequently conversed with the said Minister; he was frequently invited, and present at most Part of the Burials within the Shire, where he had Access to converse with all Ranks, and repaired to Markets within and without the Shire; and lastly, did assist and help to settle the Soldiers in their Quarters and Localities, and did entertain them even at his own House.

Douchal's Defence.

As to the harbouring of George Holms, the plain Truth is, the said George went away without Arms, and returned so without being noticed; but so soon as I was informed that his Name was in the porteous Roll of the Court at Glasgow 1679. though he was neither Cottar, Tenant, or Servant to me, yet I caused his Father put him off my Ground. Thereafter he compounded, first with Kennoway the Donatar for his Moveables, and thereafter

with the Sheriff-depute for his peaceable Living, at which Time he took the Bond of Regularity, and had a Testificate thereupon. Notwithstanding I would not entertain him, so that he listed himself a Soldier in the standing Forces. All which is offered to be proven?

As to the last Point of the Libel, the Truth is, Sir John Cochran did make a very overly Motion to me, for Fifty Pounds Sterling by way of Charity to the Earl of Argyle, which I refused; and in regard the Motion was proposed so trivially, I thought it not worthy to be communicate, nor could I prove it, had it been denied, neither in Construction of Law can it infer the Things libelled.

This plain and naked Representation of Douchal's Case, gives us a new View of the wretched Stretches now made to find Persons guilty, and could not but fully satisfy all disinterested Persons of the Gentleman's Innocence; but who can stand before Envy and Covetousness? therefore, notwithstanding of this fair stating of the Matter, the Lords give their Interlocutor as to the Relevancy.

Lords Interlocutor.

The Lords having considered the Libel pursued by his Majesty's Advocate, against John Porterfield of Douchal, find it relevant as 'tis libelled, viz. that he entertained, harboured, and reser on his Ground, George Holms a declared Fugitive for Treason, and conversed with and reser his Brother a forfeited Traitor; as also, that he concealed, or not revealed the treasonable Proposal made to him by Sir John Cochran, for Supply to the late Earl of Argyle, separatim to infer the Crime and Pains of Treason, and remit the same to the Knowledge of an Inquest?

When the Assize was called and sworn, the Advocate for Probation adduced the Pannel's judicial Confession, signed Edinburgh, November 17. 1684. 'The which Day John Porterfield of Douchal, confessed and acknowledged that Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, some time in the Session, in the End of the Year 1682. or Beginning of the 1683. having met with him in the Burgh of Edinburgh, the said Sir John proposed to him to give Fifty Pounds Sterling for the Relief of the late Earl of Argyle, and that he refused to do the same. Consequently he told this Proposition to Craighends elder, and that Craighends had told him the like Proposal had been made to him.'

Porterfield.

And the said John Porterfield being again interrogate in the Presence of the Assize, if he had conversed with, harboured and reser his own Brother Alexander Porterfield, a forfeited Person, and also whether George Holms a Fugitive, had dwelt and resided upon his Ground, and if Sir John Cochran had made the Proposal to him mentioned in the Dittay, and that he had concealed the same from, and not revealed it to his Majesty's Privy Council, or others in Authority under the King, he declares, he had already told what was Fact in these Matters, and submitted to the King's Mercy, and intreats the Lords may represent his Case favourably.

Verdict of the Assize.

Thereupon the Assize withdrew, and soon brought in their Verdict. 'The Assize having chosen Sir John Dalmahoy their Chancellor, all in one Voice find the Pannel John Porterfield of Douchal guilty, by his own Confession, of conversing with, harbouring and reser Alexander Porterfield his Brother, a forfeited Person; as also for harbouring on his Ground George Holms a Fugitive; and likewise of concealing the Proposal made to him by Sir John Cochran, for supplying the late Earl of Argyle, a forfeited Traitor.'

John Dalmahoy.

Sentence.

Upon the Return of which the Lords, only Two are in the Sederunt, John Drummond of Lundy, and Lord Collingtoun Justice-clerk, that same Day pass the following Sentence. 'John Porterfield of Douchal, as being found guilty, by an Assize, of the Crimes of Treason mentioned in his Indictment, is decerned and adjudged to be executed to Death, demeaned as a Traitor, and to underly the Pains of Treason, and utter Punishment, appointed by the Laws of the Realm, at such a Time and Place, and in such a Manner, as the King's most excellent Majesty shall appoint; and ordain his Name, Fame, Memory, and Honours to be extinct, his Blood to be tainted, and his Arms to be riven forth and delete out of the Book of Arms, and thrown in his Face; so that his Posterity may never have Place, nor be able hereafter to bruik or enjoy any Honours, Offices, Titles, or Dignities within this Realm in Time coming, and to have forfeited, amitted and tint all and sundry his Lands, Heritages, Tacks, Steddings, Rooms, Possessions, Goods and Gear whatsoever pertaining to him, to our sovereign Lord's Use, and to remain with his Highness in Property. Which was pronounced for Doom.'

Douchal was most sedate and patient under his Trial, and bore all with a Christian Spirit. His Honour as a Gentleman, and Loyalty as a Subject, stood full and intire; his Conscience did not reproach him, all was peaceful within, and God smiled upon him. Thus nothing Men could do did ruffle him.

When

When he was to receive his Sentence of Forfeiture and Death, he was asked, as usual in some Cases, what he had to say, why it should not be pronounced. His Return was, 'My Lords, I have little to say, I pray the Lord may save the King whatever come of me.' Which shewed him to be a better Christian and Subject than such who persecuted him. 1684.

His Sentence drew Compassion and Tears from many of the Onlookers, to see so good, old, and innocent a Gentleman exposed to such Hardships for imaginary Crimes; yes, the hard Measure he met with was regretted by some Persons in the Government, after it was over; and I am well assured, that even Sir George Mackenzie used to cast the Blame of this Procedure on himself, and term Douchal My Lord Melford's Martyr.

And such was the Equity of those Times, that the very Person who was his Judge, had got a previous Promise of his Estate, which was in due Time made good; and July 1686. by the King's Gift the Earl of Melford was made Donatar to his personal and heritable Estate, so that he had more Reason than every Body to find him guilty.

Such Instances as this verify the black Character, a Person of Merit and Honour gives me of this Period. 'This was a Time when Stretches of obsolete Laws, Knights of the Poit, half or no Probation, malicious Informers, scandalous Rogues and Miscreants, were the Government's Tools to ruine Men of Estates, Honour and Principle.'

But the Lord hath reserved us for happier Times, and we have seen this Plot I am describing, against the Protestant Interest, unravelled, and these sanguinary Laws happily rescinded; and the Opinion given by the Lords of Session in this Gentleman's Case, and relative to others of his Fellow-sufferers, hath been since the Revolution solemnly declared contrary to Law in the Claim of Right; and this Sentence of Forfeiture, with the Act of Parliament ex post facto, ratifying the same next Year, was in a better Parliament rescinded, whereby in part Justice was done to this good Man and his Family.

But before this happy Turn came, Douchal was obliged to transact with the Earl of Melford, and give him sufficient Security for Fifty thousand Merks, and a Gratuity of an Hundred Guineas to his Lady; and the Half of the Sum was paid to him, though Douchal was his very near Cousin, of so little Weight now were the Ties of Blood and Friendship; but the Revolution happily prevented the Payment of the other Half.

Let me further remark, before I leave this excellent Gentleman, that the principal Informer against him was John Maxwell of Overmains, a near Relation and Neighbour of his own. This poor Man, after he had fallen into the Crimes of Adultery, and, I think, Murder too, could think upon no Method so proper to save his Life, and ingratiate himself with some in the Government, as to turn Informer, hoping thereby, as he himself afterwards confess, to share in the Plunder; but he was disappointed, and his Family is now pluckt up by the Roots.

Indeed I could give many Instances, if this Work were not already swelled exceedingly beyond the Bulk I designed, of the just Steps of holy and righteous Providence, punishing the Authors, Promoters, and Tools of this heavy Persecution I am describing. Very few of them have escaped remarkable Strokes in their Persons, Estates, Posterity, or Reputation; and Multitudes of them are now cast out of their Houses and Heritages, and they and theirs reduced to Beggary; others of them have fled the Sword of Justice, and wandered as Vagabonds in foreign Lands. The Case before us is an undeniable Instance of a just Retribution. The Family of Douchal, in this Period devoted to Destruction, at this Time are not only in Possession of their own paternal Estate, but by a Purchase have acquired the Estate of John Maxwell of Overmains.

I come now forward to give some Account of the rest of the Gentlemen who were dealt with in another Manner than Douchal, and in no ways terrified, by this rigorous Procedure against him, to quit their Principles; and standing their Ground were fined in Sums equal to a Forfeiture, without the Formality of a criminal Process, or Sentence of Death.

November 28. By the Council-books I find 'Warrant granted to cite Sir John Maxwell of Pollock, Cunninghams of Craigends elder and younger, Poterfield of Fulwood, Caldwel of that ilk, Zacharias Maxwell of Blawarthill, and Mr. James Pollock of Balgray, to appear before the Council upon the Second of December.' They had all given Bond at the Court at Glasgow in October, to compare at Edinburgh in November. I find November 20. by the Registers, Fulwood appears upon his Bond, and is ordered to be imprisoned. I observe none of the rest in the Registers till their Citation, but suppose they all compared and were imprisoned. Gentlemen in Renfrewshire cited before the Council Nov. 28.

I may well begin with the Lord Pollock as first in the Summons, a Gentleman of good Quality, and of a very old Family, as well as of shining Integrity, Probity and Piety. He is yet alive, and his own Modesty, and my Relation to him forbids me to say what I could and would of him. An Heart-regard for the Presbyterian Interest, as well as a bright Pattern of suffering for a good Conscience, was handed down to him by his excellent Father Sir George Maxwell, whose noble Example it is his Care most closely to follow. Case of Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock.

My Lord Pollock had before this met with many smaller Attacks from the Sheriff-depute, for Irregularities Ecclesiastical, and keeping suffering Ministers in his House. We have heard heard of his being put in the porteous Rolls, and of his Imprisonment and other Trouble he was brought unto, till his Diet was deserted simpliciter. And yet for the very same old pretended Crimes of Refet and Converse, for no other Thing could be charged against him, upon his refusing to swear upon his Libel, and declining the taking of the Test, the Council fine him in the swingeing Sum of Eight thousand Pounds Sterling; and he refusing to pay this extravagant and arbitrary Fine, continued Sixteen Months in close Prison. Afterwards he got a Composition made, and paid a great Sum, and gave Bond for a greater, and was at vast Charges before Matters could be brought even this length.

him and others cited with him.

This will best appear from the Council's Decreet passed upon him, and the rest of the Gentlemen cited with him December 2. this Year; and that Sentence of the Council is so exorbitant that it deserves a Place in the Body of this History, and follows from the Registers.

ANent our Sovereign Lord's Letters raised at the Instance of Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh, Knight, his Majesty's Advocate for his Highness's Interest in the Matter underwritten; mentioning, that where, albeit by the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom (they need not be resumed) the keeping and being present at House or Field-conventicles, and the withdrawing from the publick Ordinances in their own Parish-churches, and the baptizing Children, and marrying disorderly and contrary unto the established Government and Laws, be expressly prohibited and discharged under the particular Pains and Penalties therein contained; likeas, albeit according to the common Laws and Acts of Parliament in this Kingdom, the harbouring and hounding out, refetting, entertaining, corresponding and intercommunig with Rebels, Traitors and disorderly Persons, the furnishing of them with Meat, Drink, Money, and other Provisions, the contributing of Money to Rebels, Fugitives, forfeited or intercommuned Persons, the hearing of seditious and treasonable Speeches, and not revealing the same, the seeing of Rebels and Fugitives in Arms or otherwise, and not discovering them, and not giving timeous Advertisement thereof to his Majesty's Magistrates, or Officers of his Forces, that they may be brought to condign Punishment, be Crimes of an high Nature, and severely punishable.

Nevertheless it is of Verity, that the Persons underwritten, Sir John Maxwel of Netherpollock, Alexander Cuninghame elder of Craigends, and William Cuninghame younger thereof, John Caldwell of that ilk, Zacharias Maxwel Portioner of Blawarthill, Alexander Porterfield of Fulwood, Mr. James Pollock of Balgray, have, upon the First, Second, Third, or remanent Days of the Months of August, September, October, November or December, 1679 Years, and the First, Second, Third, and remanent Days of the Months of January, February, or remanent Months of the Years 1680, 1681, 1682, 1683 and 1684. upon one or other of the Days of one or other of the Months of the foresaid Years, kept and been present at divers House and Field-conventicles, kept within the Burgh and Barony of Glasgow, Shires of Renfrew and Lanerk, and several other Places, where they have heard divers rebel, declared fugitive and vagrant Preachers, those Trumpeters of Sedition, and harboured, refet, entertained, corresponded, and intercommuned with, furnished with Meat, Drink, Money, or other Provisions, or have contributed Money to Rebels, Fugitives, forfeited or intercommuned Persons, viz. Balfour of Kinloch, the Two Hendersons of Kilbrachmount, the deceased Hackstoun of Rathillet, and others the bloody and sacrilegious Murderers of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews; as likewise to Robert Hamilton late pretended General of the Rebels, to the deceased Mr. Donald Cargil, Mr. Richard Cameron Ministers, Mrs. John Welsh, John Rae, David Hume, James Kirkcoun, Alexander Lennox, Edward Jamison, or Mr. Samuel Arnot, Mr. John Spreul late Writer in Glasgow, John Spreul his Son, John Spreul Apothecary in Paisly, Alexander Porterfield Brother to the Laird of Douchal, and other notorious Rebels, and infamous Traitors, whom they knew to be such: And severals of the said Persons married and baptized their Children disorderly, and constantly, during the said Space, have withdrawn from publick Ordinances, which is the Root and Foundation of Schism and Rebellion, and from which all the barbarous Murders and other Assassinations have sprung, and which his Majesty and the Estates of Parliament have declared to be seditious, and of dangerous Example and Consequence, as is particularly expressed in the Seventh Act of the Second Session of his Majesty's Second Parliament.

Whereby the said Persons, and every one of them, are guilty of the Crimes above libelled, or one or other of them, in high and proud Contempt of his Majesty, his Authority and Laws, and thereby incurred the Pains and Penalties contained in the said Acts, for which they and every one of them ought to be severely and exemplarily punished in their Persons, to the Terror of others to commit and do the like in Time coming.

And

And anent the Charge given to the said Sir John Maxwell, and haill remanent Defenders above written, to have compeared personally, to answer the said Complaint, and to have heard and seen such Order taken thereanent, as appertaineth, under the Pain of Rebellion, with Certification as the said Letters, Executions, and Indorfations thereof, at more length purport.

Whilk being called this present Day, and the said Pursuer compearing personally, and the Defenders being Prisoners, as being sent in by the Lords Commissioners of Council, lately met at Glasgow, being brought to the Bar; and his Majesty's Advocate having, conform to Two several Letters under his Majesty's Royal Hand, restricted the foresaid Libel to an arbitrary Punishment, and instead of all further Probation, referred the Verity thereof to the Defenders Oaths, according to the Declarations emitted under their own Hands, before the said Lords Commissioners; and which being read and shewn to them, and they having at the Bar immediately acknowledged and subscribed the same upon Oath.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having heard and considered the foresaid Libel, and Declarations of the said Defenders, subscribed and acknowledged by them upon Oath, do find them and ilk one of them guilty of the Articles libelled, and now restricted to an arbitrary Punishment; and therefore have fined, and hereby do fine them in the respective Sums of Money underwritten.

The said Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock, in the Sum of - 8000 L. Sterl.

Alexander Cunningham elder of Craigends, and William Cunningham thereof, in solidum, in the Sum of - 6000 L. Sterl.

Zacharias Maxwell Portioner of Blawarthill, in - 20000 Merks Scots.

Mr. James Pollock of Balgray, in the Sum of - 15000 Merks Scots.

To be paid to his Majesty's Cashkeeper, for his Majesty's Use; and ordain the haill said Defenders to be committed Prisoners to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, to remain there till they make Payment of the said Sums respective, and find Caution to his Majesty's Cashkeeper, for Payment of the said Sums, to which they are hereby restricted, 'twixt and the First of January next to come, otherwise to be liable to the whole Sums respective above written, in case they find not the said Caution, and pay the said Sums now restricted, as said is, before the elapsing of the said First of January next, (except as to the said John Caldwell of that Ilk, and Zacharias Maxwell of Blawarthill, whom they ordain to continue Prisoners for their whole Lifetime, besides the Payment of their Fine) viz. the said Sir John Maxwell, the Sum of 5000 Pounds Sterling, Alexander and William Cunninghams of Craigends, the Sum of 4000 Pounds Sterling, the said Alexander Porterfield of Fulwood, the Sum of 20000 Pounds Scots, and the said Mr. James Pollock, the Sum of 500 Pounds Sterling. Upon the finding of which Caution, or the Payment of the said Sums to which the said Fines are restricted, they are to be liberate, (Caution being always found, or Payment made, before the First of January next to come) and ordain Letters of Horning and other Execution to be directed thereupon, as effeirs.

I am sorry I have not all the Declarations the Gentlemen made before the Court at Glasgow, tho' the Matter of some of them will come in just now; but I can fully assure the Reader, that notwithstanding of the odious Articles of the Libel, invidiously put in to blacken the Gentlemen, of their Converse with and Reset of the Persons concerned in the Murder of the Archbishop, yet they were as free of these as the Advocate or their Judges; and it was a Stretch peculiar to this Time and Court, to find them guilty, and everyone of them of the Articles of the Libel, as well as groundless and false; and, as to some of them, what the Council all knew they were not guilty of.

And indeed all that could be laid to their Charge, was Converse, I think, the most of them had, as all the Country as well as they, with Quarreltoun, and with some outed Presbyterian Ministers named, tho' not many of them, and none other of the Persons named in the Libel, and their being present at House-conventicles, and absent some of the Times libelled from their Parish Kirk; and upon these Ecclesiastical and imaginary Crimes, they are thus extravagantly fined; upon which I need make no Reflections.

There was no Probation adduced against them, but their own Declaration, which they made sincerely, and more fully than I believe could have been proven against them, and some of them refused to depone upon it at Glasgow. When they came to Edinburgh, and saw no better could be made of it than a round Sum, they yielded to adhere judicially, it seems, upon their Oath to their Declarations, but could never reasonably expect such exorbitant Fines as were imposed: What the Pretext was for Caldwell and Blawarthill's Imprisonment during Life, I know not; they were both most peaceable Gentlemen, and as little liable to the then Laws as any of the rest. But, it may be, this Clause was put in to be remitted afterward, upon their paying their whole Fines without Defalcations, which we see were made to the rest.

the Lairds of Craigends.

I come now forward to give some more particular Hints at the Case of some of these excellent Gentlemen, as far as vouched Accounts have come to my Hand, a little further to expose the Iniquity of this Procedure.

I begin with the Laird of Craigends elder and younger, Two worthy Gentlemen of an ancient Family, descended from the noble and old House of Glencairn, in the Shire of Renfrew. Craigends younger is still alive, in flourishing Circumstances, notwithstanding of this heavy Oppression, a singularly pious and excellent Gentleman, far above any Character I can give of him. Both of them gave such ample Indications of their Loyalty and peaceable Temper, in a Petition to the Council by themselves, as, in the Eyes of all indifferent Judges, very much aggravated the Managers Severity to them. This Paper was in such expressive Terms of Submission to the present Government in the State, as more could not be required; and when it did not satisfy, every Body saw it was Fines the Managers were aiming at, and not Security to the Government, since greater Evidences of Loyalty could not be given, than the Petition signed by the Two Gentlemen.

A better Account of their Case cannot be laid before the Reader, than from the following Information, vouched in every Branch of it by the present Laird of Craigends. And because it contains several Matters of Fact, which set the Harshness of the Council's Procedure, with these Two and their Fellow-prisoners, in its due Light, I insert it here.

'The Lairds of Craigends elder and younger, having lived in all peaceable, and, to their Knowledge, orderly Deportment, did, in October 1684. compear with other Gentlemen their Neighbours, before the Lords Commissioners of the District of Glasgow, where being libelled severally upon the Points of Refet and Converse with Rebels, Conventicles, and withdrawing from the Church, and other such like Delinquencies, they were divers Times before the Lords, and interrogate upon several Points, as well concerning the Guilt and Crimes foresaid, and how they stood affected to the Government.'

'As to their Guilt and Crimes confessed by themselves upon Oath, without any further Probation, they are as follow. Against Craigends elder, 1. Converse with Alexander Porterfield, alledged to have been at Pentland, and within Two Years thereafter, he transacted his Forfeiture, and ever since, these Fourteen Years, lived securely and openly in his own House, without any Challenge, and hath haunted Kirk and Market, and Courts of Judgment, with no less Freedom than any other of his Majesty's Lieges. 2do. That Sir John Cochran had sought Charity from him, for the late Earl of Argyle, in the Year 1682. Sir John himself being then a free Subject, Craigends refused the Desire, but his not revealing the Proposal, is accounted a Crime. 3tio. That some of the nonconformist Ministers had performed Family-worship in his House.'

'Against Craigends younger, only accidental Converse, which he acknowledged in his Deposition, and that he could not deny but he heard Sir John Cochran seeking Charity to the late Earl of Argyle, from others; but neither Sir John nor any from him sought the same from him.'

'The Council indeed in their Libel, load that Matter of Sir John Cochran's Proposal, with such Epithets and Circumstances, as would make the bare concealing of it an atrocious Guilt, alledging Sir John had made Application to several Persons, for Sums of Money to the late Argyle, to help to carry on a Conspiracy and Rebellion; but the Gentlemen being no ways privy to such a Design, and knowing no other Intent of the Proposal, but the supplying of a Nobleman's urgent Necessity, for his Livelyhood, it was not possible for them to understand any further Duty requisite, than to refuse, till now that the Parliament hath made the Matter clear, by a positive and posterior Law; and they might the rather be carried away with this Mistake, that the Council, within these Two Years, in a Practick relating to the late Sir John Cunningham, had declared themselves of a quite different Judgment.'

'There being Information given, anent Sir William Denholm of Westsheils, 'holding Correspondence with, and doing Favours to Mr. John Cunningham of Bedlane, forfeited and declared Rebel, among the rest, Sir John Cunningham's Name is heard, with some Ground of Jealousy, that he might be in the Correspondence. Upon Trial it was found, that when Bedlane's Letters were offered, Sir John refused them, but never held himself obliged to reveal any Thing; and yet when other Persons who had received the Letters were criminally indicted, and cited with Sound of Trumpet at the Cross of Edinburgh, and their Correspondence aggravated in all its high Circumstances, the Carriage of Sir John upon the contrary was commended, and in the publick Proclamation highly applauded, that he did as became a good and faithful Subject in refusing, notwithstanding he never revealed any thing.'

'And certainly, if it was Duty to reveal the bare seeking of Charity to a Rebel, much more had it been Duty to reveal a Rebel's Letters, which could not be supposed to contain less than the seeking of Charity, whatever they might have imported more; and seeing the Case was not altered by any positive Law, the Gentleman might well think they

 ‘ his Majesty’s Privy Council.’

‘ However, upon these Grounds and no other, they are called in before the Privy Council, and, with many others their Neighbours, sentenced in Fines to the supposed Value of their Estates : Others were fined, every Man by himself, but Craigends and his Son are joyned together for the Sum of 6000 L. Sterling, far above their Value, and both of them kept Prisoners, and charged in solidum for the whole Sum, as if they had been mutually liable for each other’s Faults, notwithstanding there was no Equality betwixt them, as the Particulars of their Confession manifest, there being nothing against Craigends younger, but accidental Converse with Alexander Porterfield.’

‘ The Gentlemen further alledge, they have given such Testimony of their Freedom from any dangerous Principles anent the Government, that they must be beyond all Ground of Quarrel that way, which the Commissioners may well remember, when they interrogated Craigends younger upon his Principles, at Glasgow; and both the Father and the Son exprest their Principles in a very solemn Declaration, given in to the whole Council in Writing, before the passing Sentence upon them; and they cannot but be surprized at the hard Measure given them, after such a publick Proof of their Loyalty to their Sovereign, wherein they conceive themselves to be short of none of his Majesty’s Subjects.’

‘ The Gentlemen are not such Fools as to alledge an Argument from Principle, as sufficient to expiate Crimes; but when the Escapes are such as the whole Country are engaged in the like, and which surpassed the Skill of any reasonable Man, to understand them to be Crimes, at the Time when done, and when the alledged Ground of the Courses taken against others in the like Cases, was only to secure the Government, by a good Principle in the Subject, those Gentlemen, after so full a Vindication of their Principles, expected they should not have been troubled for invincible Mistakes, more than many of their Neighbours, who were never called in question for them, tho’ as much guilty as they.’

I have only particular Accounts of another of these worthy Gentlemen, and that is Alexander Porterfield of Fulwood, Son to the Laird of Douchal, just now mentioned. He is yet alive, a Gentleman of a very good Character, and in good Circumstances, notwithstanding this exorbitant Fine, in the Parish of Kilellan and Shire of Renfrew, ready to attest every Circumstance of the Account I am to give of his Case.

Case of Alexander Porterfield of Fulwood.

At the Court at Glasgow in October, he was indicted as guilty of several hainous and treasonable Crimes, since the Year 1660. and when there was no Proof of his Libel, the Verity of it was referred to his own Oath, after they had passed from capital Punishment, and restricted it to an arbitrary one, and ordered him to swear upon the several Articles of it.

Fulwood very reasonably objected, That no Law could oblige him to depone in the Matters libelled, since the Law concerned Heritors only; and, for his Part, he stood infest in no Lands, and so could not be reckoned among them. The Lords interrogated him, if he had not a Disposition from his Father Douchal, to the Lands of Fulwood, and possessed them; he owned he had, and the Lords finding him upon this an Heritor, ordered him to give his Oath.

As to all the Articles of his Libel, he deponed negatively, save Two; the one was his Converse with his Uncle Alexander Porterfield of Quarreltoun, which he told their Lordships he reckoned so far from being a Crime, that in his Opinion he would have been inexcusably criminal, had he declined Converse with so good a Man, and his most affectionate Uncle, especially when Mr. John Hamilton of Hallcraig, upon Application to the Government, had obtained a Gift of Quarreltoun’s Estate, and faithfully applied it to his Use, with a plain Connivance. And although his said Uncle had not applied to the King, or obtained any Indemniity or Remission for his alledged Rebellion, yet he had Access these many Years to live peaceably in his own House, (with the other Circumstances named in Douchal and Craigends’s Cases) so that he judged himself safe to converse with him, when every Body did so; and he himself was but an Infant at Pentland, unfit to make a Judgment of that Rencontre, or whether there was any Danger of Converse with such who were alledged to be concerned in it.

The other Article was his being present at House-conventicles, and he frankly owned that he was present at several Sermons preached by Presbyterian Ministers, in his Father’s House at Douchal, being one of his Family, and not forisfiliate. In doing whereof, he reckoned he had been at his Duty. This was all that he confessed. He was ordered to sign his Deposition, which he did, and was kept Prisoner at Glasgow until he found Caution, and gave Bond to compear at Edinburgh, November 20. if called, or otherwise to enter himself Prisoner within the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, under the Penalty of 10000 Merks, in case of Failie.

Accordingly he was at Edinburgh the said Day, and, not being called, he entred Prisoner, and, as we heard, with the rest of the Gentlemen his Neighbours, was called and fined in

Forty thousand Pounds, and remitted back to the Tolbooth, till he should pay the said Sum. There he continued about Fourteen Months, and besides his corporal Punishment by Imprisonment, the Government proceeded to real and legal Diligence against his Estate, by Adjudication and otherwise, for evicting the Fine.

But finding that this was not the most compendious and expedite Way for obtaining Payment, they took the shortest Way; and by their Act comprehended Fulwood's Estate within the Forfeiture passed upon his Father, and thereby declared the same forfeited; notwithstanding several Years before he had a Disposition of the Lands of Fulwood, and was in Possession, and the Lords at Glasgow upon these found him an Heritor distinct from his Father, and under this Notion obliged him to depone. Thus they went and came upon Law and Property, just as it answered their Designs.

By all which it is plain, how dissonant their Treatment of this Gentleman was, not to say to Law and Right, which was but seldom now considered, but likewise to their own Practick, which no Body can make hang together. Melford was made Donatar to Deuchal's Estate and his Son's, and there was no Remedy. Fulwood behoved to compound and agree for a Piece of Money, and take a new Right from him to his own Land, with a Discharge of his Fine. The first Moiety was actually paid, and the happy Revolution stopt the rest, and this Gentleman, as well as the rest, was at vast Charges and Expence in obtaining their Compositions, and Securities of their Lands from the Donatars, and otherwise, which I believe fell not much short of the unpaid Moieties of their Fines.

From those Hints the Reader will guess at the Case of those excellent Gentlemen, and will see very much of the Temper of those Times, when indeed nothing was stuck at to get Money from Presbyterians. I regret I cannot give as distinct Accounts of the rest of the Gentlemen named, but their Circumstances may easily be gathered from what is insert.

As to the rest of the Prisoners named, I can only give the Hints I meet with in the Council-registers; and those of them fined were in the same Circumstances with the former Gentlemen, save that few or none of them were charged with the charitable Supply, or with Converse with Quarreltoun, but I doubt not they had conversed with other fugitive Persons.

Decree against
others, Dec. 24.

December 24. I find a Decree passed by the Council against the underwritten Gentlemen. Their Libel is mere Nonconformity, and alledged Refet and Converse, and refusing the Oath of Allegiance, with the King's Prerogative annexed, which they did not reckon themselves obliged in Law to take; whereupon the Council fine them in the following Sums.

Stuart of Allantoun in	-	-	-	-	12000 Merks.
William Hamilton of Overtoun in	-	-	-	-	9000 Merks.
James Young Chamberlain of Evandale	-	-	-	-	10000 Merks.
James Muirhead of Bradisholm	-	-	-	-	4000 Merks.
Mr. John Hamilton of Halcraig	-	-	-	-	12000 Merks.
Mr. Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn	-	-	-	-	12000 Merks.
Mr. James Stuart of Hartwood	-	-	-	-	6000 Merks.
John Bannantyne of Craigmuir	-	-	-	-	2000 Merks.
George Hamilton of Browncastle	-	-	-	-	2000 Merks.

This is all I meet with in the Registers. By another Information I find the Laird of Corehouse was fined in 9000 Merks, which was remitted by the King; and Allantoun's Fine was gifted to Crigui. No question these worthy and religious Gentlemen got down considerably in their Compositions, but they were put to great Charges, and those arbitrary Impositions brought their Estates and Families low.

Fines in the Shire of Roxburgh.

And by the same Information, under a very great Man's Hand, I find reckoned up among Sheriff Fines confirmed by the Council, severals in Roxburgh and thereabout formerly mentioned; the Laird of Riddel 52000 Pounds Scots, the Laird of Greenhead 24000 Pounds Scots, the Laird of Chatto 20000 Pounds Scots, the Lord Cranstoun 1500 Pounds Sterling, Sir William Scot of Harden 53000 Merks, of which Sir George Mackenzie got 27000. Sir William Scot of Harden junior, 3500 Pounds Sterling, paid to the Duke of Gordon and Marquis of Athole, and the Laird of Wall 20000 Merks Scots. So much for the exorbitant Fines of Gentlemen this Year.

Of the apologetical Declaration emitted by the Society People, the Murder at Swine-abbay, and the severe Procedure, Commissions, and Proclamations following thereupon, November and December, 1684.

Those Matters contained in the Title, I have of design put all together in this Section, that the Reader may have a fair and impartial Account of this Part of the Management of the Persecutors. It is evident, Oppression had put that Part of the persecuted, the Society People, upon Measures, that many of themselves were not for, and which cannot be vindicated; but it will be as plain, that the Managers took occasion from this Handle given them, to run Lengths that can as little be justified, and were never used in any well ordered Government. I only notice further, that the Body of Presbyterians are no way concerned in this Matter, than as they were silent and melancholy Observers of the Heights run to on both Hands, and had most unjustly the Reproach of Principles tending to Assassination, fixed upon them, and in part were made Sharers of the Barbarity and Violence now raging universally against all who stood out against Prelacy.

That the Reader may have as full a View of this dark and black Part of this Period, as may be at this Distance, I shall lay down Matter of Fact, as it was from original Papers and Documents, and give first an Account of the Paper emitted by the Societies, and the Notice taken of it by the Council in November, when the killing of Kennoway and Stuart at Swine-abbay fell in, which produced new Barbarity, and the Orders for killing in the Fields, and then go on to the new Commissions and severe Instructions given in November and December, till we meet with the publick Proclamation emitted in the End of the Year, and shall shut up this Section with the criminal Prosecutions, and publick Executions of several Country People, when the Managers are inflamed in the highest Measure by what the Society People had done.

Contents of this Section.

The extraordinary Severities exercised September and October last, with the barbarous Murder of some honest Country People in the Fields, which shall be noticed in its own room, drew forth from the Society People their apologetical Declaration, and admonitory Vindication, especially against Intelligencers and Informers, about the Middle of October, when the Courts described Section 5. were just at their thronest persecuting Work.

Circumstances of the Society People at this Time.

As the State of the Body of Presbyterians was at this Time most lamentable through the Kingdom, their Ministers all turned out, and either in Prisons, or forced to leave their native Country, their Gentlemen imprisoned and most exorbitantly fined, their Commons cruelly haralled now by the Army, and then by particular and more general Courts; so the People united in Societies, who, as we have heard, had withdrawn, since the Death of Mr. Cargil, from the rest of the Presbyterians of this Church, were in a special Manner hunted, yea, killed all the Day long, and counted as Sheep for the Slaughter.

From what hath been pointed at, as to the Condition of those Wanderers and hiding Persons, who, generally speaking, made up those Societies (though many were upon their Hiding, who did not joyn with them in their Heights) the Reader will easily guess at their Circumstances. The Sea-ports were shut, they could not get off the Kingdom, they were daily hunted for by the bloody and merciless Soldiers, the whole Country was sworn to discover them, and bound up from giving them Meat or Drink, and secret Informers and Intelligencers were bribed to joyn them, and find out their Haunts and lurking Places, and any who inclined to do them the least Kindness, were terribly persecuted, and all they did in their own Defence was reckoned Murder, and the Country abused for it. They were persecuted, and cast out of Protection by the Government, and no Terms would be accepted but going over their Light and renouncing their Principles.

All this, and much more than I can now narrate, gravaminous in their Case, put the general Society, which, by their original Records I find, met October 15. to publish their apologetical Declaration. Mr. James Renwick was employed to draw it; and it was published by some of their Number, October 28. I insert it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 99. from the Copy before me, under Mr. Renwick's own Hand.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 99.

It is not my Business to enquire how far private Persons, in such Circumstances, may take upon them to threaten thus, and cast off Authority: The Reader will find their own Reasons for this Part of their Practice in their informatory Vindication published some Years after this; only as an Historian I may have the Liberty to observe, that the Government, or the Executors of the present Laws, ran much farther in unaccountable Severities upon those poor People, than even what the Oppression of those People had forced them thus to threaten.

Remarks on it.

threaten. And as far as I can learn, they made no Attacks unless it was at Swine-abbay, where they had no small Provocation till they were attacked, and their View in this very Paper was not so much Action, as the frightening some People they had to do with.

But I leave Comparisons, or what may be said of this Paper, to themselves. Only it is evident, that this Paper formed by Mr. Renwick now their Minister, and the Expressions in it are a little softer and smoother than the Sanquhar and Lanerk Declarations formerly mentioned. And I am well informed by Persons of Credit present with them in this Meeting, that Mr. Renwick himself, and a good many others of the best Knowledge in the Meeting, reasoned a long Time against emitting any threatening Paper of this Nature at this Juncture, as what would be of little Use to them, and exasperate the Managers, and bring on new Distress upon the harassed Country: But nothing less would satisfy a warmer Set of People among them, who were most clamorous, and by insisting gained the Point. And Mr. Renwick was forced to go in with them, to keep Peace, as far as might be, among themselves.

Yet after all the Softning he could give it, there are many Things in it so much out of the Road of private Persons, that it became Matter of much Obloquy and Reproach to the Body of Presbyterians, who mean while were no way privy to, or concerned in this Paper. And as most of the Struggles of Persons under Chains, and the Feet of their Enemies, make their Case worse, so this raised the Fury of the Government; and yet in part it wanted not its designed Effect. The most venomous Malignants were affrighted, Informers and Intelligencers in the West and South for some Time were deterred from their Trafficking, and the most virulent and persecuting of the Curates in Nithsdale and Galloway thought fit to retire for some Time to other Places, even before the Murder in Carsphairn next Year, of which in its own Place.

When this Paper had been published by some of the Societies, it was affixed to several Market-crosses, and November 8. posted up upon a great many Church-doors in Nithsdale, Galloway, Air and Lanerk Shires. I find it put on the Church-doors of Kilbride, Strathewan, and many others.

Nov. 11. this Paper comes in to the Council.

November 11 or 12. Copies of the Societies Paper came in to the Council, and put them in a perfect Rage. I shall give some Instances of it from the Registers, and then from some Accounts I have from Persons yet alive, who were present that Afternoon when the Prisoners were brought in before them.

John Semple put to Torture.

By the Registers I find a very severe Act anent John Semple. November 13. ' John Semple of Craigthorn in the Parish of Glasford, taken near the Kirk of Glasford, and brought in Prisoner, as suspect to have been a Contriver of the late treasonable Declaration against the King, or at least accessory to the affixing thereof at the said Kirk, and some others, or at least as having Knowledge of the Persons Contrivers, Affixers, or Promoters thereof, being called before the Council and having refused to give his Oath upon the Premises, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council ordained him presently to be tried by Torture in the Thumb-screw, Boots, or both, until he be brought to a clear Confession, they having first declared, that what he should declare should not militate against himself as to his Life. And the said John being called in, and interrogate in the Thumb-screw, and having refused to declare, and at length turned faint, he was remanded to Prison till to Morrow at Ten of the Clock, at which Time he is again to be tried by Torture. ' I meet with no more about him in the Council-books; we shall just now meet with him to Morrow before the Judiciary.

Robert Goodwin
and others sent to the Iron-house.

By other Papers, particularly one under Robert Goodwin's Hand, of whom I have given some Account before, I find, that November 13. he, with several other Prisoners, was brought this Afternoon before the Council, and interrogate upon this Paper, about which they knew nothing. In a great Haste it was read over to them, and they were ordered immediately to hold up their Hands and swear they did not adhere to it, and knew not the Authors of it. Robert Goodwin in name of the rest said, and I doubt not but it was the Case of all of them, that he had never heard it till it was now read, that he knew nothing about the forming of it, but would swear nothing about it; whereupon they were sent to the Iron-house.

Their Treatment of William Niven.

Another Instance of their Treatment of the Prisoners this Day, I have from one present, and Witness to the terrible Usage of William Niven Smith in Pollock-shaws in the Parish of Eastwood. We heard formerly, that last Month he was banished to the Plantations, and here I shall take Occasion to narrate some other Particulars of his Sufferings, and that but in so many Words.

We heard of his Trouble in the Year 1678. and since that Time he lived peaceably, following his Trade, and had not been at Bothwell, nor was chargeable with any Thing, but not hearing Mr. Fisher the Episcopal incumbent. July 29. this Year, about Midnight, a Party came and took him out of his Bed, and carried him to Glasgow Tolbooth. They alledged he had been at a Sermon of Mr. Renwick's, which was false. He lay three Weeks there in Irons, and then, with John Macbae of the Parish of Kilpatrick in Dumbarton Shire, he was carried up up to the Bishop, and examined by him and Colonel Windram upon the ordinary Questions. Nothing was found against William save his not hearing Mr. Fisher, to whom I must do the Justice to say, he was one of the soberest of his Way, and he came into Glasgow, and used his Interest with the Bishop, and signified to him, that the Prisoner was a good peaceable Person, and as to his not hearing, he would take him into his own Hand. 1684.

But nothing could prevail unless he would take the Test, which he peremptorily refusing, was sent, with Five others, Two and Two of them fettered together, in to Edinburgh under a Guard. There he lay in the Irons Night and Day, till May 1685. when he had his Share in Dunotter Sufferings, as we shall hear, and afterwards was sent to New-jersey with Pitlochry.

This same Day, when the Accounts of the apologetical Declaration came into Edinburgh, William with some others whom my Informer hath forgot, but minds John Hodge Armourer in Glasgow, John Campbell in Overmoor, John and Peter Russell in Muirhead of Shots Parish, James Tennant in West-caldar, were brought most suddenly about Six of the Clock at Night, from the Iron-house to the Council or its Committee. The Chancellor posed William and the rest, whether they knew any Thing of these treasonable Papers that had been affixed to Church-doors last Saturday Night, or Sabbath. They all declared, they did not. Then they were interrogate, if they owned the Matter of them. The Pannels answered, they knew nothing about them, and could neither own, nor disown them.

The Lords appeared to my Informer, to be in an unusual Hurry and Rage, and the Clerk was bid read the Paper, which he did as fast as he could run over it. Upon hearing of it, the Pannels declared ingenuously, that they could make no Judgment of it upon so overly an Hearing. They were again required, under the highest Pains, to disown it as their Opinion. They answered, they had no Share in it, and would not take upon them to judge of it, since this came not to their Door.

Whereupon they were removed a little, and when called in, they were told they were sentenced to die that Night at Ten of the Clock, and were removed Two and Two into Corners of the laigh Council-house, with a Soldier or Two to wait on them, there to continue till the Hour of their Execution. Happily for them something or other fell in that Night which put the Managers in Confusion: It was said, it was some Letters they received, and so about two Hours after, they were carried back to the Iron-house, and for a good many Weeks afterward they were made to expect every Day they were to be executed at Two of the Clock, till the King's Death fell in, and then they were no more directly threatned. This Procedure is every way so far out of the Road, that I should not have inserted it, if I had not had it from one whom I can depend upon, who was Witness to it, yet alive attesting it in all its Circumstances.

From this Instance we may see the Manner of this Period, and what an Handle was taken from every Thing that fell out, to exercise the greatest Severities upon People who could not be supposed to have any Share in those Incidents. To this likewise we must attribute the barbarous Treatment of the Prisoners from Dumfries, formerly spoken of. Old Men, and Women with their Sucklings not three Months old, Women with Child, and others near Eighty Years, upon the Break of a Storm of Frost and Snow, were forced to travel Twenty, or Twenty four Miles about the shortest Day, and through Waters, to the Danger of their Lives. None of them either could be concerned in this Paper, and no Account can be given of such Barbarity, but their merciless Temper exasperated by this Declaration.

Next Day, November 14. the Managers go a farther length, and, by the criminal Records, I find before the Justiciary, John Semple, John Watt, and Gabriel Thomson. They are libelled for high Treason, as Art and Part in the Paper lately posted up upon the Kirk-doors. The Advocate restricts the Libel in those Terms, 'That the Pannels own, or refuse to disown the traitorous Proclamation mentioned in their Indictment.' The Probation is John Semple his judicial Declaration that he owns the Proclamation, and would not disown it. Gabriel Thomson refuses to disown it. John Watt refuses to answer, or disown the Paper. The Assize bring in all the Three guilty according to their Confession, and the Lords sentence them to be taken to the Gallow-lee, this Day betwixt Three and Five of the Clock in the Afternoon, and forfeit them in common Form. John Semple, John Watt, and Gabriel Thomson sentenced to die Nov. 14.

I am well informed that John Semple was tortured most cruelly a second Time in the Boots, and taken from the Torture to the Justiciary, where Sentence was past, and executed that same Afternoon with the others. At the Execution the Soldiers were barbarous, and allowed the poor Men scarce any Time to pray. The People who looked on were surrounded by the Soldiers, and had Interrogatories and Queries put to them, which when they refused to answer upon Oath, Ten or twelve were made Prisoners, and carried from the Scaffold to the Tolbooth.

After this, I find the Lords of Council delay the Examination of the Prisoners in the Canongate and Edinburgh Tolbooths, as to the treasonable Declaration, and perhaps would have extended their Enquiries into the Country, had not the Incident of killing of Kennoway and Stuart fallen in, which put the Managers upon new, and yet more barbarous Methods.

The Murder of Kennoway and Stuart at Swine-abbay.

I have not so distinct an Account of the Murder of these Two, as I wish I had, neither can I say whether it was in Self-defence or not, but 'tis generally said, it was premeditated by some Persons in the Neighbourhood, or Society People lurking among them, they having been severely oppressed by Kennoway for many Years; and if this was an Assassination, no Body ought to defend it. They were both Gentlemen, as the Stile was, of the Life-guard, and killed, as is said, coming out of the Door of the House at Swine-abbay, in the Parish of Livingstone; and after the most narrow Search that was made, none of the Actors could ever be found, but I am assured, the Society People refused to admit some Persons to their Fellowships, whom they suspected to be concerned in this Murder. I have no Account of Stuart, but Kennoway's Oppressions in Livingstone, West-calders, and that Neighbourhood, from Pentland to this Year, have been in part noticed, and I shall add a few other well vouched Instances of his former Carriage.

Thomas Kennoway
and Oppressions.

Thomas Kennoway was very active under general Dalziel at Pentland, and after the Defeat of the West-country Army, he apprehended that excellent Person formerly mentioned, Mr. Hugh Mackail at Brades-craigs, and went still on in Spite and Malice against the suffering Party, Year after Year. Some Years after, he with a Party of the Guards attacked a Company of unarmed People hearing Sermon at Thomas-moss in East-calders in Mid-lothian, and shot one of them through the Thigh, and beat and spoiled many others. The Council and Managers soon took Notice of his Activity and Severity, and gave him frequent Commissions, which he rigorously executed. At one Time he attacked a Meeting in the Parish of Bathgate, and shot one James Davie, an Heritor of that Parish, dead in the Spot, and took Fourteen Prisoners, who were afterwards sent off the Kingdom. After Bothwell he seized Mr. John King, and brought him in Prisoner to Edinburgh. In Mid-calders, he seized an old Man whom he alledged to have been at Pentland, and beat, and bound him in the most barbarous Manner. Mean while some went in to Edinburgh, and complained to the General of his Cruelty, whereupon a Letter coming out to him threatening him for his illegal Severities, he forced the poor old Man, in Fear of present Death, to sign a Paper, that Thomas Kennoway had never wronged him in his Person or Goods. In the Parish of East-calders he broke in upon an House, and missing the Husband whom he was seeking, beat and abused his Wife, who was with Child, most inhumanely, and threatned before her Eyes to force Two of her Daughters, all which put her to such a Fright, that she parted with Child, and never recovered, but died in a very little.

Indeed he was notoriously wicked and profane, a known Adulterer, and a fearful Drinker, and blasphemous Curser and Swearer. He used to say, Hell would be a good Winter Quarters, but ill Summer Quarters. And one in Company asking, if he was not afraid to speak so of Hell; he said with a new Oath, He was never afraid of Hell, but sometimes he was afraid some of the Rebels would shoot him dead at a Dyke-side. This was some Years before his Death.

Instances of his grievous Oppression of the Parishes of East, Mid, and West-calders, and Livingstone, have been given, and many might be added: He was indeed a Terror to all that Country-side. And he was constantly almost among them, fining and oppressing Multitudes, of which I have Accounts before me too long to be insert here. One Thing I shall notice, because it was much observed after his Death. Some time before Meldrum's Court, of which an Account hath been given, Kennoway had for some Time continued drinking at Swine-abbay till all the Money he had was spent, and he had not wherewith to pay his Reckoning, he went out, and seeing a poor Country Man coming by on the Road with a Bag of Oats, by mere Force he took it from him, and threatned him dreadfully if ever he looked after them, and with the poor Man's Oats he paid his Lawing, and had some little more Money to drink upon in some other Place. And in this very Place he was sent into Eternity.

killed Nov. 20.

November 17. he came out of Edinburgh, with a Roll of Persons, he said, he had a Commission, from the Council, to apprehend in the Country, upwards of an Hundred and fifty Men, probably of his own upgiving. He alighted at Livingstone, where he met with the other Duncan Stuart, to whom he shewed his Commission, and told him, in a few Days he hoped to be as good a Laird as many in that Country, and they fell a drinking. He regretted much that he was turning old, and would not get the Lands he now reckoned as his own, long enjoyed. In the Way to Swine-abbay he described and pointed at the Places he had in his Eye to possess, to his Comrade Stuart, till they came thither, and there they continued drinking and laying their Projects until the 20 of November, when they were cut off; the particular Circumstances whereof I cannot relate, none being Witnesses but the Actors, who got off, and were never taken.

This is all the Account I can give of this Matter, and I do not set down those Things to vindicate the Actors, but to shew how righteous the Providence was, that this wicked Man is cut off in the Midst of his Days and Projects, however blameable the Persons might be in their Manner of doing it. Before I leave those two Persons, I only insert the Council's Act December 9. anent their Widows, to shew the Concern they shewed for the Relatives of such as had been active in the Persecution. The Council having considered the Petition of Ju- net Stuart Relict to Thomas Kennoway, one of the Gentlemen of his Majesty's Guard, and Jean Jaffrey, Relict to Duncan Stuart, another of them, lately inhumanely murdered and butchered by some desperate Rebels and Fugitives, at the House of Swine-abbay in the Night-time, do recommend them to the Treasury for Charity.

But I come forward to the Council's more publick Actings as to the Society People's Declaration and this Murder at Swine-abbay, and we shall find them very singular. From thence they take Occasion, first to order a particular Search to be made in Edinburgh, which was not so unreasonable, and then, after some Reasoning and Opposition to so much Barbarity, they agree upon the bloody Orders to murder in the Fields all who should not expressly disown the foresaid Declaration, without any Libel or legal Process, and lastly give out a terrible Commission for harassing the Country round the Place where the two Soldiers were killed, and after that Commission is executed, they grant more general Powers to particular Trustees, to harass of new the West and South Country. Of all which in their Order, and from the publick Records.

November 21. the Council make the following Act. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having just Reason to suspect that several of those desperate Rebels who have lately emitted a most traiterous Declaration, whereby they declare War against the King's most sacred Majesty, and all in Authority, civil, ecclesiastical, and military, under him, may lurk in the Town of Edinburgh, and who in the Prosecution of the same have lately murdered some of his Majesty's Soldiers, require the Magistrates to take all effectual Methods to discover them, and to take up Lists of all in the Burgh that are Housholders, and the Oaths of Heritors as to the Tenants they set their Houses to; and by the Help of the Ministers and Elders of the respective Parishes, to make up Rolls of the Inhabitants according to the respective Parishes; and empower Ministers and Elders to examine Masters or Mistresses of Families, upon Oath, as to the Number of their Servants, their Names and Surnames; and likewise to give up the Lists of Subtenants, if any, and to take up Lists of Lodgers in any House or Tavern, so as all put together may comprehend the whole People, and to take an Account of all Persons who have neither Family nor Residence.' A little after this followed the Search which hath been accounted for Section 1.

Council's Act as to the Town of Edinburgh, Nov. 21.

More general and extensive Measures were for some Time under Deliberation among the Managers, and, as soon as could be, they authorized what had been now and then practised by the Soldiers with Impunity, the killing People in the Fields in cold Blood who would not answer their Queries, without any Libel, Process, or Jury. It would be hard to persuade the present or after Ages that any such Orders were judicially agreed upon by the Council, if we had not the original Records to vouch this, and, until I had Access to them, I could not fully give Credit to what I had by a general Report, that Soldiers had Orders to kill in the Fields, and at most reckoned it was some particular Warrants, given under some of the Managers Hand, that were pretended for this Barbarity, and it is more than I expected when I met with the Order for it, standing as a black Mark of the Cruelty of this Time in the Registers.

Soldiers empowered to kill in the Fields without Process.

It is altogether useless to make Remarks upon those Orders, they stand fairest in their native Colour; and I am surpris'd at the Confidence of Sir George Mackenzie, who was conscious of those, and knew them well, and yet undertakes a Vindication of this Reign as full of Mercy and Clemency. The Council inclined to have the Concurrence of the Lawyers, the Lords of Session, in this extraordinary Step, and apply to them, and record their Answer to their Query, and form their Act upon the whole. This Matter stands in the Registers thus.

Account of this from the Council Registers.

QUERY.

• Whether any of his Majesty's Subjects, being questioned by his Majesty's Judges or Commissioners, if they own a late Proclamation, in so far as it declares War against his sacred Majesty, and asserts, that it is lawful to kill all those who are employed by his Majesty, refusing to answer upon Oath, are thereby guilty of high Treason, and Art and Part in the said treasonable Declaration?

ANSWER.

• IT is the unanimous Opinion of the Lords of Council and Session, that a Libel in the Terms of the said Query, is relevant to infer the Crime of Treason, as Art and Part of the said treasonable Declaration against the Refusers.

• It being put to the Vote in Council, whether or not any Person who owns, or does not disown the late traitorous Declaration upon Oath, whether they have Arms, or not, should be immediately killed before Two Witnesses, and the Person or Persons who are to have Instructions from the Council for that effect? Carried in the Affirmative.

• The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do hereby ordain any Person, who owns or will not disown the late treasonable Declaration upon Oath, whether they have Arms or not, to be immediately put to Death; this being always done in Presence of Two Witnesses, and the Person or Persons having Commission from the Council for that effect.

this.

I pretend to no Skill in Law, neither am I a proper Judge of the Import of the Terms of the Opinion given by the Lords of Session; but according to the plain and obvious Meaning of the Expressions in their Answer, it does not appear to be any Foundation for, or Signification of their Lordships Approbation of the Vote and Act of Council, which immediately, and in the same Page, follows it in the Council-books, as if their Lordships Answer were the Foundation of the Council's Act. To me they seem to suppose, that a Libel ought to be given to the Person who owns, or does not disown the Societies Declaration, and that he be prosecuted before competent Judges, and not murdered brevi manu by a Soldier or Officer with a Council Power; and tho' the Lords of Session had given this as Law under their Hand, it would not have had any Weight with me, or, I believe, with the unbiassed World, as long as any Sense of Humanity, Reason, and the Nature of Society remains.

Neither does this barbarous Act seem to have passed the Council itself, without some Struggle and Opposition. Had it been unanimously voted, I question not but the Records would have born it, and used a stronger Term than, that it carried in the Affirmative.

I shall only remark further, that I am informed, Extracts of this Act signed by the Chancellor, Advocate, or Clerk, given to the Officers of the Army, and Powers from them again given to their Underlings, even so low as common Centinels, were reckoned Commissions sufficient for the executing of this horrible Act. What may be in this I shall not affirm. The People who passed such an Act as this, could easily give ample enough Commissions, if they pleased. However, 'tis certain, that Majors, Captains, and Soldiers, pretended all to act by virtue of this Act; and though I shall not say, that all the Murders we shall meet with in the Fields next Year, were committed by Warrants from the Council, which at this Distance can scarce be known; yet no doubt Claverhouse, Balfour, and others had them, and we shall meet with Balfour calling Witnesses to his Murder in the Terms of the Act, and private Centinels alledged Orders for what they did this Way; so that upon the whole, I cannot help thinking, that as several Murders in cold Blood committed before this Act, as we have noticed, and shall hear of, were thereby made the Council's Deed, so the Blood for several Years shed in the Fields and Houses, the Blood of many Scores of Innocents, is all to be charged upon this unnatural and unaccountable Act.

It is Time now to come forward to the Commissions the Council gave. The Day after this former bloody Act, November 23. they give a Commission to try, judge, and execute in the Parish where Kennoway and Stuart were killed, and others about, mentioned in their Instructions. As I abominate Murder in cold Blood as much as any, so I cannot but equally hate Cruelty and Oppression, under the Colour of Law; and I could not but be surprised, to meet with such Instructions agreed on by the Council, especially when they were a Pattern by which the Soldiers were careful to act in other Places of the Country. 1684.

The Commission with a Justiciary Power is given to the Lord Livingstone, Lord Ross, Lord Torphichen, Lieutenant Murray, Sir Mark Carse, and George Hume, Cornets of the Guards, the Lairds of Barbachlay, Pockemmat, Pottishaw, and Badds, or any Five of them, the Lord Livingstone, or commanding Officer being always present. The Commission is in the ordinary Stile of those formerly narrated; but the Instructions are every Way singular, and follow under this Title, as appears to me, to impower any of the Forces under the commanding Officer, to execute all these Severities.

Instructions to the Forces to be sent to the Parish of Livingstone, Bathgate, Torphichen, and Calders.

‘ You shall convocate all the Inhabitants, Men and Women, above Fourteen Years of Age, within the Parishes of Livingstone, Bathgate, Torphichen, Calders, Easter, Wester, and Middle, and ye shall examine every Person; and after the Oath of Abjuration, (we shall meet with it just now) such as take the Oath you shall dismiss, unless you have Grounds of Suspicion of their Guilt.’
‘ And if any own the late traiterous Declaration, or Assassination of the Soldiers, you shall execute them by military Execution upon the Place.’
‘ And such as refuse to answer or depone, or will not disown the said traiterous Declaration, and the Principle and Practice of Assassinations, you shall give them a Libel instantly, call Fifteen Men as a Jury, and let them judge them, and instantly execute the Sentence of Death on such as do so refuse to disown, or to answer to the Questions before the said Jury.’
‘ And ye shall feize their Goods, delivering as much of them as will pay one Year’s Rent, to such Masters as either have, or will take the Test.’
‘ And if any be absent, ye shall burn their Houses, and feize their Goods, unless their Master, or some other sponfible Man bind to produce them in a competent Time; the Master or Cautioner being always one who hath, or shall take the Test presently.’
‘ You shall likewise examine all Persons upon their Knowledge of any accessory to the said Proclamation or Assassination, and such as refuse to depone upon their Knowledge you shall keep Prisoners.’
‘ You shall examine all upon their Oath anent Harbourers, Refetters, or Concealers of the Assassimators, or such as were accessory to the Proclamation; and if any refuse, make them Prisoners, bring them into Edinburgh, and cause secure their Goods.’
‘ And as to the Families of such as you condemn or execute, you shall make Prisoners of all Persons in their Families, above the Age of Twelve Years, in order to Transplantation.’
‘ As also you shall take the Oaths of all who compear, that they shall not harbour, refet, or conceal any of those dangerous Rebels, whether pretended Ministers, or Adherents, but shall discover their Persons, and assist to the taking or pursuing of them, and shall discover who shall harbour, refet, or entertain any of them, to some Magistrate or Heritor of the Ground, that they may raise the Country, and pursue them, till they be apprehended; and who will not give Oath in the Terms abovementioned, you shall bring Prisoners to the Tolbooth of Linlithgow, there to be kept till further Order.’
‘ You shall likewise apprehend all the near Relations of Nimmo, and bring them to Edinburgh for further Examination. For all which this shall be Warrant to you, and all Officers and Soldiers employed by you.’

Those Instructions speak for themselves, and as they want a Parallel, so they need no Commentary. We may look upon them as the Copy according to which the Country was to be handled at this Time, and this cruel Scene was exactly followed in several Places for some Months, bating some little Regularities here, which the Officers of the Army at some more Distance from Edinburgh did not always reckon themselves bound to follow. Reflections upon them may be very short, such who were Parties, I mean both in this Case, by being Officers in the Life-guard, and in other Cases, by sharing of the Spoil, are made Judges.

What terrible Hardships are here put upon the poor Country ! Boys and Girls of Fourteen and fifteen Years of Age have the Oath of Abjuration crammed down their Throat; and even such as swallow it are not free from Suspicion, but may be kept in Custody, and so are presumed to be perjured.

The Refusers of the Oath, and such who do not presently disown the Declaration, are instantly to be tried by a Jury, and that Jury by former Acts of Council must bring them in guilty, and they are to die upon the Spot under Colour of Law.

Such Masters as have the Tenderness to refuse a contradictory Oath, must lose their Rent, which is secured to those of Latitudé. Absents who incline not to come under this Inquisition, and, for any Thing known to the Council or Judges, are necessarily absent, must have their Houses burnt, if some Testers do not interpose.

And what Righteousness and Equity can there be conceived in punishing the innocent Families of such whom they think good to find guilty, even Striplings of twelve Years of Age with Transportation ?

How iniquous and heavy an Imposition was it, though now very common, that all should be imprisoned who would not engage upon Oath, to pursue Ministers and others abovenamed, and discover them and their Concealers !

Those Things cannot but stun Posterity, and make all who hear detest such wicked Oppression of the Rights of Men and Christians. And can any Thing but Ignorance of such Inhumanities, or the worst of Tempers, be at the Bottom of the Efforts too many are making (1715) to bring us back to those black Times ?

Procedure in the Parish of Livingstone, and those about, in pursuance of those Instructions.

I have before me a large Account of the Procedure of this Commission in the foresaid Five Parishes. The Soldiers came out the Day before, and charged all, young and old, to appear before the Judges, under Pain of Death. They sat first at Livingstone, where many Questions were put to some of the People anent the King's Authority, their keeping the Kirk, and other Matters quite extraneous to the designed Enquiry. The Soldiers sat on Horseback, with their Swords drawn, round about the Country People in the Fields. Old and infirm People who had not been from their Houses for many Years, were brought out, and those who were not able to walk, were brought on Horses, and such who were not able to sit, were tied to one another on Horseback; none were permitted to return till the Judges examined them. At Night, the Court adjourned to Mid-caldor, and all not examined were ordered to attend there, where the People were examined in the Church. But, passing these Circumstances, I only remark, that all this Trouble the Country was brought to, made no Discoveries I can hear of.

Form of the Oath of Abjuration, approved in Council, Nov. 25.

November 25. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council approve the Draught of the Oath underwritten, to be offered to all Persons whom they or their Commissioners shall think fit.'

'I A. B. do hereby abhor, renounce and disown, in the Presence of the almighty God, the pretended Declaration of War lately affixed at several Parish-churches, in so far as it declares a War against his sacred Majesty, and asserts that it is lawful to kill such as serve his Majesty in Church, State, Army, or Country, or such as act against the Authors of the pretended Declaration now shewn to me. And I do hereby utterly renounce, and disown the villanous Authors thereof, who did, as they call it, statute and ordain the same, and what is therein mentioned. And I swear, I shall never assist the Authors of the said pretended Declaration, or their Emissaries or Adherents, in any Point of punishing, killing, or making of War any Manner of Way, as I shall answer to GOD.'

This is the first Shape of the Abjuration Oath, we shall have it just now in the Proclamation a little shortned, and this was new Matter of severe Persecution to the West and South of Scotland next Year. That this might be the better pressed, the Council send West Lieutenant-general Drummond, and, besides him, name many particular Commissioners in the particular Districts in the South and West. They are mostly the Persons named in the Beginning of this Year, with some few others, some of whom will come in just now; it is their Instructions and Commissions will be of most Use to the Reader, to discover the Temper of this Period.

And December 2. I find the Council direct the following Letter to the Commissioners of the several Districts in the southern and western Shires.

Right Honourable,

'THE King's Majesty having granted an Indemnity, February 26. last past, and the Council considering there may be Persons within your Districts, who may fall in to share in that Indemnity, and being willing none should fall short of it, have sent you the following Instructions thereanent.'

PERTH. This

This is the first Time I meet with this Indemnity, tho' granted February last. What were the Motives in the Managers to keep it up till now, I shall not enquire, neither can I learn from the Registers it was published at all. In February or March next Year, an Indemnity is published at the Accession of King James, but till then I can learn of no other since the 1679. However, they now clog the Indemnity with the Abjuration Oath, and put it intirely in the Hand of the Commissioners, to apply the King's Pardon, or not, as they see Cause. The Instructions will best speak for themselves. 1684.

Instructions for applying his Majesty's Indemnity.

1. YOU are, conform to his Majesty's Indemnity, to set at Liberty, and free all Persons imprisoned, or under Bond, by you not fined; and though they be sentenced to Banishment, they being under the Degree of Heritors, Liferenters, Wadsetters, or Burgesses of Burghs Royal, and vagrant Preachers.

Instructions for applying his Majesty's Indemnity, Dec. 3.

2. By vagrant Preachers you are to understand indulged Ministers, and such as are in Orders, but not licensed according to Law, whom you are not to dismiss or liberate, but upon their enacting themselves, or finding others Caution for them, that they shall not hereafter exercise any Part of the ministerial Function within this Kingdom, under the Pain of Five thousand Merks, otherwise find Caution under the same Sum to remove off the Kingdom within Twenty Days, and not to return without Licence, and mean while to live peaceably.

3. If any Persons already declared Fugitives, shall within Twenty Days after the Date of his Majesty's Proclamation, address to you, and testify their Acceptance of the said Pardon, by taking the Allegiance, or finding Caution to transport themselves out of his Majesty's Three Kingdoms, before the Twentieth Day of May next, after the Date of his Majesty's Proclamation, and to live peaceably till then, and not to return without Licence, on Pain of Death, you are to admit them.

4. But before you offer his Majesty's said Pardon to any of the foresaid Persons, you are to cause them swear the late Oath of Abjuration, and that they shall never take up Arms against the King, or any commissionate by him, upon any Pretext whatsoever; and if they refuse so to do, you are to secure them in Firmance, until you report to the Council, and have further Orders; and you are to give the ordinary Pass to all such as take the said Oath.

But to aw the Country the more, beside the former Commissioners, some are more especially appointed to traverse the Country with a Justiciary Power lodged in them solely. Thus, December 4. the Council send Lieutenant-general Drummond to the West and South. His Commission and Instructions will best shew his Powers. Lieutenant-General Drummond has Commission.

CHARLES, &c. Forasmuch as We and the Lords of Our Privy Council are certainly informed, that there are certain fugitive Rebels now in Arms, in several Places in the south and western Shires, who by themselves, their Adherents and Accomplices, do daily commit great Aubses and Insolencies, to the Disturbance of Our Peace, and the Disquiet of Our loyal People.

We, to the effect that these Rogues and Villains may be reduced, do, with Advice of Our Privy Council, constitute Lieutenant-general Drummond, Master General of Our Ordnance, Our Justice in that Part, to the Effect underwritten, with Power to him to go to the said South and West Shires, or any Parts thereof, where the said Rebels and their Adherents do mostly resort, and then and there, as he shall think expedient, to affix and hold Courts of Justiciary, call Assizes, &c. (as in common Form before specified) and call any of the said Rebels or their Adherents, or Persons suspect, and cause Justice be done on them according to Law and Practick, and Acts of Parliament of this Realm, and Instructions given by Our Council of the Date thir Presents. Promitten. to hold firm and stable; and ordain this Commission to continue and endure till the first of January next.

1. YOU are to go to the southern and western Shires, where several Rebels and their Adherents are, or do haunt and resort, and do commit great Insolencies and Abuses; and for your Assistance in reducing and punishing them according to your Commission on, you are to take with you the Forces following, Half of the Troop of his Majesty's Life-guard, Four Troops of Claverhouse's Regiment of Horse, the Earl of Balcarras, Airly, and Lord Ross their Troops, Six Troops of General Dalziel's Regiment, with Two hundred Foot out of the Earl of Mar's Regiment; and with them you are to pursue, take, and apprehend and kill the foresaid Rebels and their Abettors.'

'2. You are to call before you all such Persons who have been in the late Rebellion, and have not taken the Benefit of his Majesty's Indemnity, and their Resettlers, as also, all such who have been Actors in contriving, accessory to the publishing, or affixing, or do any manner of way approve of, or allow the late treasonable Paper and Declaration.'

'3. You are to quarter the said Troops under your Command, upon your March up and down the said Shires, either in Burgh or Land, as you shall find most expedient; and you are to settle Garisons of Horse and Foot, and Dragoons in such Places, and consisting of such Numbers, as are contained in a List given you for that Purpose; and to make such Alterations in the said Garisons as you shall find most proper for the King's Service, and the Peace of the Country; and you are to require all Sheriffs and Magistrates where the Garisons are to be established, immediately to convene the Commissioners concerned to provide them, and to certify the Sheriffs and other Magistrates, that if they prove negligent, they will be convened before his Majesty's Privy Council, and fined therefore; and if they be negligent, you are to allow the Forces in that Case to take what they want at their own Hand; and generally, you are to do every other Thing necessary, which may most conduce to his Majesty's Service, and the Good of the Country.'

At the same Time the Council write a Letter to the Duke of Hamilton, acquainting him, that they had sent West Lieutenant-general Drummond, with a Justiciary Power to go through the western and southern Shires, and try Rebels and Fugitives, and vagrant skulking Persons in the said Shires, and, where he finds it necessary, to establish Garisons, especially in Lanerk Shire; and desiring that his Grace may convene the Commissioners, who are proper to provide the Garisons with all Necessaries.

Commission
for the Laird of
Orbistoun, Dec. 8.

Besides those Powers granted to the Lieutenant-general, some other Commissions are granted to private Persons, who would undertake them, to search for, and take suspected Persons in Places which the regular Forces could not so easily reach. Thus I find a new Highland Host is brought down upon the Shires of Renfrew and Dumbarton, under the Laird of Orbistoun. The Commission is a little singular, therefore I insert it. Date December 8. 1684.

'CHARLES, &c. Forasmuch as We understanding there are several Rebels and Fugitives, who do haunt and skulk in the Shires of Dumbarton and Renfrew, and that there are several outed Ministers who reside within the same, to the great Disturbance of Our Peace, if a proper Remedy be not fallen upon for preventing the Abuses committed by the said Rebels and Fugitives, and Our People from being debauched into disloyal and seditious Principles by those outed Ministers.'

'Therefore We, with, and by Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do give and grant full Power and Authority to William Hamilton of Orbistoun, to levy voluntarily Two hundred Highlandmen of the Shire of Dumbarton, and with them, or any Part of them, as oft as Our Service shall require, to march to any Part of the said Shires, and pursue, take, and apprehend the said Rebels and Fugitives, vagrant and skulking Persons and their Resettlers, and commit them to some Firmance or Ward till they be legally tried.'

'And in case any of the said Persons be in Arms resisting and refusing to be taken, We do hereby fully empower the said Laird of Orbistoun, and those with him, to kill, wound, and destroy them, and deliver such of them who shall be taken alive, to Our next commissioned Officer of Our Forces, to be brought in Prisoners to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, in order to be brought to a legal Trial, or to be otherwise disposed of as Our Council thinks fit.'

'And in pursuance of the said Commission, We do authorize the said Laird of Orbistoun, to imploy Spies and Intelligencers to go in Company with the said Rebels and Fugitives, as if they were in their Party, the better to discover where they haunt and are reset; and, if they can, to apprehend and present them unto him for the Effect foresaid.'

'As also with full Power to the said Laird of Orbistoun, to take and apprehend the Persons of all outed Ministers, who shall be found within, or resort unto the said Shires, and send them in Prisoners to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, or deliver them to the nearest Officers of Our Army, to be brought in Prisoners accordingly.'

'It is also hereby provided, that the said Laird of Orbistoun take Care that those Persons imployed by him, commit no Disorders, and the Country through which they pass, receive no Damage by them.'

'And

And for the better Encouragement of the said Laird of Orbistoun, and those with him, We indemnify him or them in case of Resistance, where Persons may be killed, wounded, or mutilated, and for conversing with Rebels and Fugitives to the Ends foresaid, and from all Pursuits criminal or civil in all Time coming; and do declare this Our Indemnity to him and them, to be as sufficient and valid as if the same were under Our Hand and great Seal: And this Our Commission is immediately to begin and take Effect, and to continue and endure till We or Our Privy Council shall recal the same.

The Hardships and Difficulties the poor People in the West and South were brought under by this Army sent upon them, are indeed inexpressible. Some particular Instances may come in afterwards, this and the next Year; but the Reader will easily perceive what furious and exasperate Soldiers would do, when they had so large Powers and Commissions. We shall presently meet with more Commissions given to some select Persons in every Shire, which perhaps superseded the giving them to particular Persons.

At length, December 30. after all those Steps taken to harass and persecute the Country, before any previous Warning given to them, of the Danger of the Societies apologetical Declaration, and the Necessity of the taking of the Oath of Abjuration, which, one would think, ought to have been the first Step should have been taken, the Council emit their Proclamation against the Declaration, which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 100.

Proclamation
apologetical

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 100.

The Names of the Sederunt are insert to make it the more remarkable, but why the Title of the Proclamation runs, against the horrid Principle of Assassination, the Framers best knew. The Society People expressly disown it. I do not at all offer to defend their Paper, yea, I really think Allowances may be made to the Managers, when they reckoned they had gotten such an open Affront; and I could bear with them in going further now than upon other Occasions, but the Reader must observe they go very far. I can scarce doubt, but some of the Managers knew the Nature of their Meetings: Earlsfoun had given a very fair Account of them, and yet they take it for granted, their Fellowships and Societies for Prayer and Conference, were a Form of civil Government, and levelled at bloody and assassinating Designs. I am apt to believe, some of the Managers knew other Things, tho' they speak thus.

And upon this false Supposition, the Proclamation orders all that do own this Declaration, or do not disown it, to be tried and executed to Death. And that this was hard, will appear, not only from the Scruples we have heard, against owning or disowning Things, at the Order of the Persecutors, but will be yet plainer, if we charitably suppose, what, they say themselves, is true, that they were driven to this last Shift, not from any Design of Assassination, which they say they abhor, but merely in Self-defence, and they advance much to prove, that their Assertions go no further. But I leave their Defences to themselves.

This I know, that many poor Country People would not disown their Paper, not from the least Inclination to the Principles the Proclamation speaks of, but because they imagined the disowning of this Paper, was a disowning of the poor persecuted People, and an Approbation of the Cruelties and Hardships put upon them; and it was certainly unaccountable to butcher Multitudes of them merely for their Opinion, and that in a very few Minutes. I may take Notice further, that the Council, or rather criminal Court by their Direction, found the not giving poor Country People's Opinion upon this Paper, sufficient Ground to execute them, even before this Proclamation; and the Proclamation orders a 'Trial and Execution upon the Back of it: But the Soldiers would not insist upon this Nicety, but wherever they found People who would not answer their Questions, they immediately dispatched them; and in this the Act of Council appears to warrant them, tho' I don't observe that the Proclamation does.

It needs scarce be remarked, that the Proclamation involves the whole Subjects, in Assistance to Magistrates and Army, in those severe Courses, which was hard enough, but now very common, and then under a Pretext too, to ease the Country, whereas it was really to involve them. All above Sixteen Years are obliged to have Passes of their Loyalty, and these were only to be had upon their swearing the Abjuration Oath, as in the Proclamation.

I shall say very little upon this Oath; the more frequently Oaths, and that in different Shapes, upon every new Turn, be imposed, the less they are for the real Security of a Government, and the Design of them is lost. I own, for as short as the Oath is, it runs very oddly to me: The Swearer disowns, in the Presence of GOD, this pretended Declaration of War, in as far as it declares War; and it seems to need Explication as well as some Parts of the Test, and many Things might hinder Persons to swear such a Proposition as this, who were heartily against Assassination; and yet all must have this Pass, otherwise must be reckoned Concurreurs with the said execrable Rebels, and Owners of the said Declaration. This made a short Process, and, for any thing I can observe, all who wanted a Pass, might be murdered by the next Soldier who met them; and every one who refused to concur in harassing these poor People, is to be holden as guilty as the Refusers; and all Persons and public Houses who entertain any wanting this Pass, are laid under the Pains of being punished as Refettors of Rebels; and every Body who is required (by an Hostler, or Stable-keeper, for for any thing I know) to swear that his Pass is good and genuine, must do it; which, Ifancy, will be found a Clause peculiar to this Time, and no where else to be found. And lastly, the Proclamation offers 500 Merks to the Discoverers of any that had Accession to the Societies Paper, or any of the Members of the Societies or Fellowships. Their Price is much fallen. We have seen 9000 Merks set upon the Discovery of an intercommuned Minister, and 10000 Merks on the Archbishop's Assassimators; and yet but 500 Merks now is put upon the alledged Patrons of Assassination.

No Body can be more for a Government's discouraging all Things which tend to Assassination and Murder than I; but this is an odd Way of doing it, especially when disclaimed in the Paper it self: And every Body must observe, that the former Orders and this Proclamation, did, in the Event, open a wide Door to Multitudes of Murders and Assassinations of some very pious Persons, as we may afterwards hear.

In short, the Managers took Occasion, from this unhappy Paper of the Societies, terribly to renew their Oppression of the Country, and maliciously and slanderously to charge it upon the Body of suffering Presbyterians, who, as they knew nothing of it, so were very far from approving it: Yea, the Reader will find the Societies themselves, afterwards, in the informatory Vindication, disown it as a Declaration of War, almost in the very Terms the Government require it to be disowned, and asserting, that in this Paper they acted merely ad terrorem, and for Self-preservation, and expressly disclaiming all authoritative and magilstratical Power: However, dreadful was the Havock and Trouble the whole Country was brought under for it.

This will in part appear from the Commission given the same Day the Proclamation is emitted by the Council, to great Numbers in every Shire almost, to hold Courts, and bring every Body to Trouble, and the Instructions and Powers granted them, which I shall next insert. The Execution of those Commissions will come in next Year.

December 30. the Council give the underwritten Commission to the Persons named in it.

Commission.

CHARLES, &c. Forasmuch as, notwithstanding all the fair and legal Methods used by Us and Our Privy Council, for reducing those who have been debauched with schismatical and seditious Principles, yet several of them do not only continue in their former irregular Practices; but also considering, that several desperate Rebels and Fugitives, who have been still reset, sheltered, and supplied in the Country, since the Year 1679. have now of late erected themselves in a mock Form of Government, do disown Us, Our Authority and Laws, and have declared War against Us, and from that do infer, that 'tis not only lawful, but Duty on them to kill Us, and all who serve under Us; and yet such inhumane Monsters, who, in pursuance of their traitorous Declaration, are daily committing bloody and execrable Murders, are sheltered, supplied, reset, and connived at in several of Our Shires; and We being fully resolved, that those accessory to the late Rebellion 1679. or who reset any who was there, and that those bloody Wretches, and all who any manner of way have harboured, reset, sheltered, supplied, connived at, or has seen or heard of any of them, and hath not given timeous Advertisement to Our nearest Magistrates or Officers of the Forces, or have not observed the Prescript of Our Laws against Irregularities and Disorders in Ecclesiastical Matters, should be brought to due and condign Punishment: We, with Consent of the Lords of Our Privy Council, have thought fit to grant Our full Power, Authority, and Commission, to the Persons aftermentioned, for prosecuting the Persons guilty of the said Crimes, in the Bounds and Manner after specified.

Appointing them, or any Three of them, in the foresaid Shires and Bounds respectively, to proceed against, punish and sentence, according to Our Laws, such Persons therein as they shall find, by their own Confession, or other legal Probation, guilty of being present at House or Field-conventicles, withdrawing from publick Ordinances, disorderly Marriages and Baptisms, and other Ecclesiastical Disorders.

And We do further appoint the foresaid, or their Quorum, within the respective Shires and Bounds, to be Our Justices in that Part, with full Power to meet at such Times and Places as they shall find convenient, and then and there to affix and hold Courts, &c. (as in common Form) and this to endure until the first of March next.

January 13. next Year, I find the Council add another Commission to the Sheriff of Berwick, to Sir Archibald Cockburn of Lantoun, Sir James Cockburn of that Ilk, Hume of Lint-hill, and Mr. Charles Hume of Aytoun, with the Earl of Hume their Convener.

And to Sir Archibald Murray of Black-barony, David Murray of Stenhope, James Nasmyth of Possfo, James Geddes of Kirkid, Richard Murray of Spittlehaugh, and William Horburgh of that Ilk, for the Shire of Peebles, Black-barony Convener. The Day of their Meeting is January 22.

The Council, with this Commission, gave them very particular Instructions, which deserve a Room likewise here.

Instructions to Commissioners to meet January 15. next.

1<sup>mo</sup>. You shall meet together, Three being a Quorum, the 15 Day of January, and according to the Proclamation, examine all in each Parish on Oath, upon the Interrogatories contained therein. And for so doing, each of you may examine a Parish apart, and secure such as refuse, and each of you may likewise give Passes, in the Terms of the Proclamation, to such as disown those horrid Principles.

2<sup>do</sup>. If any Person own the Principles, or do not disown them, they must be judged at least by Three. And you must immediately give them a Libel and the Names of the Inquest and Witnesses, and they being found guilty are to be hanged immediately in the Place, according to Law. But at this Time you are not to examine any Women, but such as have been alive in the said Courses in a signal Manner, and those are to be drowned.

3<sup>do</sup>. You are to proceed against the absent Men, not by denouncing them Rebels, but by holding them as confest upon a pecuniary Mult, and they being thereupon decerned, conform to the King's Letter, their Moveables are to be inventared and sequestrate.

4<sup>do</sup>. You must proceed against all who are guilty of having been at Bothwell-bridge, or were in Accession thereunto, except they have taken the Indemnity; but you are not to proceed so summarily, but give them Time. And if they take the Test, and be very penitent, let them find Caution, or enact themselves to appear when called.

5<sup>do</sup>. You must likewise proceed against Heritors guilty of Church-disorders, since their former Fining. And if any have not been adequately fined, you may proceed against them for the Superplus.

6<sup>do</sup>. You may examine Witnesses, as you see Cause, against such as are given in the List, to be pursued before the Parliament.

7<sup>do</sup>. If you find Probation against Heritors not yet delated, you may take them before you, both as to the Rebellion, and the late Conspiracy.

8<sup>do</sup>. You are likewise to cause the whole Pack-men, Cadgers and Drovers, within the Bounds of your Shire, find Caution not to carry Letters or Intelligence to the Rebels, or to sell to them, or give them Ammunition. or supply them any other manner of way.

9<sup>do</sup>. You are to cause the whole Merchants of your Shire, who have any Powder, Lead, or any Sort of Ammunition, or were in use to sell the same, give their solemn Oath as to the Quantity and Quality thereof, and find sufficient Caution that the same shall not be given or sold to Rebels. And if they fail to give the said Caution, all the Ammunition is to be secured and taken from them, until the same be called for by the Master of the Ordnance, and brought to his Majesty's Magazines.

10<sup>mo</sup>. If the foresaid Pack-men and other wandering Persons in your Shire, shall not appear, and shall refuse to find the foresaid Caution, that by Order of the said Commissioners their Packs be seized, and their Persons secured till further Order from the Council.

11<sup>mo</sup>. You shall call for, to your Assistance, such Parties of Horse or Foot in your District, as you shall have Occasion for, who are hereby ordered to obey you. And you are to meet at such convenient Times and Places, as may be most for the Ease of the People.

Magistrates of Burghs impowered to tender the Oath of Abjuration.

I meet with no more in the Registers relative to this Declaration, but what will come in next Year, under the rigorous Execution of those Commissions and Instructions, unless it be that, January 9. the Council empower the Magistrates of Burghs to tender the Oath of Abjuration to all concerned, conform to the Proclamation.

The last Thing I promised in this Section, was to give an Account of the criminal Prosecution before the Justiciary, and publick Executions of some Country People, who refused to disown this Paper of the Societies, about which so terrible a Bustle was made. I shall first give an Account of their Process, from the Justiciary Registers, and then give some further Hints of them from some other Papers.

George Jackson and others proccessed Dec. 8.

December 8. George Jackson, Thomas Wood, Alexander Heriot, James Graham, and Thomas Robertson, and with them Patrick Cunningham, John Watt, James Kirkwood, Alexander Vallange, and James Glover, are indicted, ' That upon the 28 of October last bypast, they did emit a most barbarous and hellish Proclamation, that they would begin their Assassination and War. Upon the 9 of November, after the Promulgation of this villanous Paper, and this Paper having been posted upon the Kirk-doors of Kilbride, Linlithgow, and other Places, the Pannels were taken, and at their Examination, owned ilk one of them, or would not disown that Paper upon Oath, in so far as it declares War against the King, and that it is lawful to kill the King's Officers of State, Counsellors, Justices, Soldiers, or Informers, or declare, if they had any Hand in emitting of that Paper. Wherethrough ilk one of them are guilty of contriving, emitting, and publishing the foresaid treasonable Declaration, at least are Adherers thereto, in refusing to disown and disclaim the same by Oath, and ought to be punished with Forfeiture of Life, Land, and Goods, to the Terror of others.

Five of them disclaim the Declaration, and the Diet is deserted.

The Five last named, as in Presence of almighty God, renounce and disclaim the Principles above mentioned, at the Bar, and their Diet is deserted simpliciter. The Diet against the other Five is continued till to Morrow.

December 9. the Lords find the Libel relevant, viz. that the Pannels own, or refuse to disown the traitorous Proclamation, whereby War is declared against his Majesty, and asserting, that it is lawful to kill those employed by his Majesty, to infer the Crime of Treason, as Art and Part of the said treasonable Paper, and remit the same to an Assize.

Diet deserted against Alexander Heriot.

The Probation adduced by the Advocate, is the Pannels judicial Confession in the Court Yesterday, whereby they refused to disown the said Paper when read to them, to which the Pannels adhered, and disowned the King's Authority. Alexander Heriot disowns the Proclamation, and at the Bar acknowledges upon Oath, that it is not lawful upon any Pretext whatsoever to rebel against his Majesty, or any in Authority under him; and the Diet is deserted as to him, simpliciter.

George Jackson, Thomas Wood, James Graham, and Thomas Robertson to be executed Dec. 9.

The Assize bring in the other Four guilty, by their own Confession. And the Lords sentence them to be taken to the Gallow-lee this Day, December 9. 'twixt Two and Five in the Afternoon, and hanged.

George Jackson.

Thus this Matter stands in the Records. I have some other Hints as to those good Men, from other Papers, which deserve a Room here. George Jackson lived in the Parish of Eastwood, and we have heard that this fervent zealous Country Man was taken at Glasgow, being overheard praying in a House. A little after he was seized he was carried before the Bishop, and by him examined upon several Questions very captious. It may not be unfit to point at some of them, that the Reader may have some further Taste of the bloody and bitter Temper of the Prelates, and the Methods they used.

His Examination by the Bishop.

The Bishop asked him, if he was at Bothwell-bridge. He answered, Yes. He was next asked if he was an Officer, and said, No; for he was but Sixteen Years of Age. The Bishop then asked him, if he was at Bothwell Rebellion. George answered, he allowed himself in no Rebellion against God. The Bishop asked, if it was Rebellion against the King. The other said, he had answered that already. The Bishop asked, if he would pray for the King. He answered, he reckoned it his Duty for all within the Election of Grace. The Bishop asked, is the King within the Election of Grace, or not. George answered, if you were such a Man as you pretend to be, you would not ask me such a Question. Then he was asked, if he owned Authority. He answered, he owned the King and inferior Magistrates, in as far far as they were a Terror to evil Doers, and a Praise to them who do well. The Bishop asked, are they not so. George answered, when the Lord Jesus shall sit Judge, they, and you, and the like of you, will count for it, whether you be or not. He was asked, if the Bishop's Death was Murder; and answered, he was not concerned with those Matters. The Bishop left him, with saying in a considerable Heat, Sir, the Boots will make you free in your Answers.

All the last Winter he was kept in the Irons, without any Fire; and May last, he was carried into Edinburgh, where being called before a Committee of the Council, he came in with a Bible in his Hand; perhaps he would not leave it in the Iron-house, and had none to give it to till he came back. I would not notice this Circumstance, were it not to discover the jeering scoffing Temper of the Persecutors. The Advocate says when he came near, There comes he and his Bible, let us see where the Text is. George calmly answered, he was not a Minister. Put up your Bible, says the other, we are not for preaching at this Time. He answered, he was not come to preach, but since they insisted upon his Bible's being in his Hand, which was no Crime, he wished they would make it the Rule whereby he was to be judged; for they would ere long be judged by it. It was replied, he was now come to be judged, and not to judge them. And then the ordinary Questions were put to him, which he answered much the same way as above to the Bishop.

He continued in the Irons till the Bustle about the Societies Paper, and then was posed, if he owned that Declaration. He answered, as far as was agreeable to the Word of God; but he allowed of no Murder. The Council remit him to the Justiciary, where we have heard his Sentence. He died in much Comfort and Serenity.

Thomas Wood, we formerly heard, was taken after the Rescue at Enterkin-path. I have before me his Account of his Examination under his own Hand. November 12. when the Managers are in a Rage upon the Societies Declaration, he with others were called in, and had that Paper read to them; and Thomas was asked what he had to say of it. He answered, he never heard of it till now, and could scarce understand it, the Clerk read it so fast. He was asked, but do you adhere to it. He answered, as far as it is agreeable to the Word, but no further. But, added they, the Covenants are in it, do you adhere to these. He answered, I do. And, after some Questions, if he was at Bothwell, or Airs-moss, where he was not, he was dismissed.

Thomas Wood,

James Graham Taylor in the Parish of Corsemichael in Galloway, when coming Home from his Work to his Mother's House, he was overtaken in the high Way by Claverhouse and a Party of Soldiers. They knew him not, and had nothing to lay to his Charge, but searching him, and finding a Bible in his Pocket, they took it and his Tools from him; and, without asking any more Questions, no doubt reckoning him a disloyal Person, carried him with them to Kirkcudbright. From thence they took him to Wigtoun, and from thence to Dumfries, where he was some Time in the Irons, because he would not answer their Interrogatories. He was in a little Time taken in to Edinburgh, and questioned upon the Declaration of the Societies, and refusing to answer, was condemned, and died most comfortably.

James Graham
in Corsemichael.

Thomas Robertson had fled out of the South Country, and lived some Time at New-castle; he was there imprisoned upon his refusing to take the English Oaths. By some Means or other he got out of Prison, and came to Edinburgh, where, at the general Search November last, he was taken; and, when brought before the Council, he was soon ensnared by their Interrogatories, and remitted to the Justiciary, where he was condemned with the rest. By his last Speech he appears to have been a serious pious Man.

Thos. Robertson;

Thus we see, none of those Persons were or could be concerned in the Societies Paper, they being in Prison and else where at the Time, and since: Yet precisely upon their refusing to judge about it, and condemn it, they are sentenced, and die, to be a Pattern to the Soldiers in their more summar Sentences up and down the Country, or to satisfy the present Rage the Managers were in from the Societies Paper.

None of these were or could be concerned in the Societies
Declaration.

This is all I meet with from the Registers, relative to this Declaration; and the Reader will find other Instances of Severities through the Country, in the next Chapter. Upon the Whole, he will with me regret the lamentable Consequences of that ill-worded and ill-timed Paper, and observe the Activity and Vigilance of the Persecutors. They slip no Occasion given them of harassing and oppressing the Country, after all formerly laid upon it this and former Years. I come now to finish this Year and Chapter with 1684.

S E C T. VIII.

Some general Hints of the Persecution, particular Hardships, and Murders in the Fields, with some other Accounts which came not so well in upon the former Sections, this Year 1684.

Matter hath swelled so much upon my Hand, and I was so knit down by the large Subjects I thought needful to put together in the former Sections of this Chapter, that I chose to leave to this Place many general Accounts of the Persecution of this Year, and some particular Sufferings, of which I have not the distinct Dates, and several other incidental Things, which deserve the Reader's Notice.

Contents of this Section.

I shall first give some further Views of the severe Persecution in all the Corners of the Country, by Courts, Searchings, Finings, and Banishments, which I have in vouched Accounts from the particular Parishes, and they are supported by the Commissions and large Powers we have formerly seen were granted by the Government, and then I shall take in some other incidental Things from the Registers and other Papers, which tend to enlighten the History of this Year.

The former Courts, for which Commissions were given in the preceeding Years, continued very frequent, and their Severities increased, as appears, by the extravagant Finings, Searchings, Quarterings, Banishments, and Murders in cold Blood, now beginning. The Persons mentioned in the former Years, continued to squeeze the poor Country People most arbitrarily for alledged Refet and Converse, Noncompearance at former Courts, and other Things now made Pretexes for Oppression.

The Persecution on this Year goes as far back as Pentland.

And when Matter began to fail them within the Compass of the foregoing Years, since Bothwell, they ran as far back as Pentland. Thus in Galloway, where that Rising began, I find the Soldiers exacting considerable Sums this Year in the Parish of Dalry, as the Rests of the Bonds extorted by Bannantyne and others. Much Money was exacted from the poor People, and the very Interest of those Notes and Bonds reckoned up, and their Cattle were taken away, and their Houses rifled, merely upon their pretended Accession to Pentland.

The Share of the Curate in Tingwall in the Fines.

In the Parish of Tingwall I find Finings most severe, and Papers before me bear, that the Curate of that Place made Money by them. He used to delate the Persons to the Courts, and upon pretext of the People's Inability and Poverty, he interceded and got down the Fine to a small Matter, which he paid down, and took a Right to the whole, and then took his own Methods to draw much more from the Persons concerned, before they got their Discharge. Many other Ways he had to share in the Fines of Persons of his own delating.

Courts held by the Laird of Lag.

I find the Laird of Lag holding Courts frequently in Galloway, the Beginning of this Year, and obliging those who did compear to declare on Oath what they knew of those who did not compear, and if they knew where any of the Wanderers haunted. In the Kirk of Dalry, he gathered all the Men of the Parish, without signifying what he was to do with them, and then brought a Party of the Soldiers and surrounded the Kirk, with express Orders to let none out till he gave Commission. Then he tendred the Test to them all, though none of them in Law were obliged to take it, assuring them in the most threatening Manner, none should get off till they took it. Many took it against their Inclinations. And when by fair Means and foul he had prevailed with them, he said, Now you are a Fold-ful of clean Beasts, ye may go Home. Yet afterwards getting new Informations from his Spies, about some of them, he afterward harailed severals who had sworn, and fined them, tho' they were legally purged from their alledged Faults, by taking the Test. I find he exacted upwards of Seven hundred Merks from three Men who had qualified.

As David Graham.

David Graham, about the same Time, held Courts at the Kirk of Twinnam and that Neighbourhood, mostly about Nonconformity. His great Interrogatory was, if they kept the Church, and when many could not depone in Terms of Law, they were fined, and the Fines exacted with all Rigour. Courts were held also in the Parish of Anwick, and the same Methods followed, only with this Difference, that the Day before the Court, Soldiers were sent to the Houses of those they chiefly had an Eye upon, to quarter there, and bring them with them to the Court to Morrow.

The Curate's Share in the Severities at
Kirkcudbright.

At Kirkcudbright likewise there were Courts, not only about Nonconformity, but also Refet and Converse. The Curate caused almost the whole Parish to be cited, and sat in the Court, and excused and accused as he saw good, and gave Characters of the Persons appearing, and a secret Mark was put upon such as he alledged were backward in keeping the Church, though they declared or deposed in Court they were regular, that afterward they they might be narrowly looked to. At this Court Masters were sworn, that as soon as they found their Servants kept not the Church, they should be dismissed, and Parents the same way as to their Children. 1684.

James Martin of Dularg, was brought to much Trouble at this Court. We have met with the Sufferings of his Son William Martin. I shall here take Occasion to insert an Hint of the old Man's Troubles. He had been fined most groundlessly by Middleton's Parliament, in Five hundred and Ten Merks; and when he refused to pay that Fine, being conscious of no Crime, that, and almost as much more, was taken from him by Force, as appears by a Discharge under Sir William Bruce's Hand. He lost much by Sir James Turner's Quarterings upon him for his Wife's Nonconformity. An Hundred Pounds were taken from him for baptizing a Child with a Presbyterian Minister. Some Time after, John Maxwell of Milltown fined him in a large Sum for his Wife's Nonconformity, and Three Yoke of Oxen and some Horses were taken away upon his refusing to pay it. At length, he raised a Process of Reduction against Milltown before the Council, which cost him upwards of an Hundred Pounds; and the Council were so sensible of this Persecutor's Exorbitancies, that for this and other Things for a Time they took away his Commission. Being this Year cited before this Court at Kirkcudbright, at the Instigation of Mr. Colin Dalgleish Curate, he was fined in a Thousand Pounds, for his Wife's not keeping the Church, and cast in Prison till he paid it. There by the Severity used, and Want of Accommodation, he caught a Cold; and took a violent Cholick, whereof he died in Prison.

James Martin of Dularg his Sufferings.

Thomas Lidderdale this same Year, held Courts likewise at Kirkcudbright of a more extensive Nature. To these all the Neighbourhood were cited, Women as well as Men, and interrogate upon Oath. After some Questions about themselves, anent the Names of all irregular Persons they knew, and Wanderers, and where they frequented in that Country; and particularly if they knew where any of their Goods and Gear were, or any Person who had any Thing that belonged to them; and, according to the Informations given, such Persons were presently harassed, and their Houses rifled.

Courts held by Thomas Lidderdale.

The Test was now generally pressed at the Courts which were held, and by the Persons mentioned in the Proclamation, as impowered to grant it as a Favour. A great deal of Rigour was used this way at Glasgow, whoever the People who held Courts were pleased to suspect, had it tendred to them; and if they refused, to Prison they must go, though no other Thing could be laid to their Charge; and not a few were prevailed with to take it over the Belly of their Light and Conscience, which gave Occasion to some bitter and sore Reflections afterward to severals of them. A few Instances of many that might be given, shall here suffice.

The Test imposed at Glasgow on Persons suspected.

William Spaldie, Taylor in Glasgow, took, and subscribed the Test, and in a little Time fell under great Remorse for taking the Lord's Name in vain, and swearing that contradictory Oath, as he now apprehended it to be. In this Trouble of Mind he continued some Time, and died not long after in great Distress. Some good People visiting him on his Death-bed, endeavoured to comfort him, but he refused all of that Nature. When he was desired to consider the Extensiveness and Greatness of God's Mercy in Christ, he answered, 'Speak not of Mercy to me, I have appealed unto God, and attested him to judge me, and he will do it. I have sealed and signed my Condemnation with mine own Hand.'

Remarkable and lamentable was the Expression of William Muirhead Vintner there, at his taking the Test. He was but a coarse Man, yet his Conscience got up upon him on the taking of it; and when he rose from his Knees, he said to the Administrators, 'Now you have forced me to take this Test on my Knees, and I have not bowed my Knee to God in my Family these Seven Years.' The poor Man went away much discouraged, and next Sabbath was taken with a sudden Illness, and died.

I only mention another Instance of the dismal Consequences of this violent pressing of this Oath. John Anderson Indweller in Glasgow, was prevailed upon, with many others, to take the Test, and not long after, his right Hand and right Knee broke out in a running Sore, commonly called the Cruels. For my Share I dare not fix Connections in Matters of this Nature, I only narrate Fact, and what the poor Man's own Apprehensions were. This Evil grew upon him, and not many Days after he died in great Terror, and used to cry out, This is the Hand I lift up to take the Test, and this is the Knee I bowed. We ought to be very sparing in making particular peremptory Consequences from Providences; but these Matters of Fact are known to severals yet alive, and many Things of this Nature were observed up and down the Country, but those Instances may suffice.

The Quartering of Soldiers for Non-payment of the Cess, was another Thing at this Time most vexatious to the Country. That Tax was imposed, and the Method of gathering it so ordered, as, one would think, an Occasion was sought to stumble the poor Country, and to give Room for the Soldiers to spoil and ravage. The Narrative of the Act imposing it hath been already noticed, and many honest People did think, that in paying it, they consented to all the black and foul Things committed by the Soldiers; and their Refusal became new Matter of sore Persecution. A Party of Soldiers was brought upon the Refusers by the Uplifter of it, and they quartered till Ten Times the Value of the Cess was taken; and after all, oft-times the poor Man's Friends behoved to compound with the Publican, for a Sum a great deal more than the Cess came to, besides the Loss by quartering. Thus in the Parish of Carjphairn, Seven Cows were taken away from Gavin Maclymont upon his Refusal, after quartering, to pay the Cess, and all the Sum owing was not Five Pounds Scots. Vast Depredations were made in most Parishes this way.

Multitudes banished this Year.
John Gate in Glasgow.

Multitudes were banished this Year from their native Country, many of whom never returned. We have heard of several Instances already, I shall add but one or two here. John Gate Thatcher in Glasgow, being at his Work upon an House, some Soldiers going out upon a Party, came to the House, being an Ale-house, and called for Ale and Brandy. The Officer called John down from his Work, to drink with them. He was unwilling, but durst not refuse lest he should be suspected. When he came down, he was ordered to drink the King's Health, this he modestly declined and waved; and it being insisted upon, and he refusing, he was straight sent to Prison, and in a little Time banished to Carolina.

Further Account of his and his Wife's Sufferings.

An attested Account is come to my Hand, since I wrote what is above, of the Sufferings of John Gate Wright in Glasgow, whom I take to be the Person just now named. When he was imprisoned, his Wife Agnes Andrew, yet alive, a religious and worthy Person, was likewise imprisoned in a different Room. Their small Family, consisting of Eight young Children, was scattered, several of them were at the Time sick of a Fever, and yet most barbarously turned out of the House, and the House locked up, and all in it seized. Agnes in a little fell ill of a Fever and Flux in Prison, and could not get out till a Surgeon gave a Certificate of the Hazard of her Life, she being with Child. When liberate, the Magistrates would not permit her to return to her own House, nor meddle with any Thing in it, and the Inhabitants being frightened with the Prosecutions for Relief of disaffected Persons, this afflicted Person had no Place but the open Street to lodge in with her sickly Children, till the excellent Lady Ardry allowed her a Brew-house to stay in, with no small Hazard to herself, and there Three of her Children died. Her Husband continued in the Irons many Months, till transported in the Pelican of Glasgow, with others, to America, where he soon died. Nothing was or could be laid to his or his Wife's Charge, but simple Nonconformity.

George Ruffel in West Redmyre, in the Parish of Cannethan, being informed against for baptizing a Child at a Conventicle some Years ago, without any Probation, was carried to Lanerk Tolbooth, and from thence to Edinburgh, where he was gifted for a Recruit, and sent to the Army abroad, where he died.

Instances of Severity this Year.
John Smith shot in the Fields without Process.

No small Severities were exercised this Year upon the account of House-conventicles, and there were none in the Fields but what Mr. Renwick kept. John Smith, who had been at a Conventicle, in his Return falling sick, sat down in the Fields. A Party of Soldiers coming that Way, without any Probation or Process, or any further Ceremony, shot him in the Fields where they got him.

Another Instance of the Severity of this Period follows. Upon the last of December 1684. a poor Man in the Parish of St. Mungo, was taken out of his Bed by Captain Dalsail, merely because he acknowledged he did not hear the Curate. The Test was offered him, and upon Refusal, he was put in close Prison at Dumfries, and threatened with Death. In March he broke Prison, and got into England. His Wife and Seven small Children had all taken from them, and went likewise into England, begging. The Persecution there turning hot, she returned; and when she had waded the River many Times, bringing through her Children one by one upon her Back, she came to an Ale-house, and sitting there peaceably, Wester-ran, and some other Persecutors came in, and required her to take the Test, or immediately to go to Prison at Dumfries, and leave her Seven Children. She only begged they might allow her to take the youngest, a sucking Child of about a Quarter old, with her: By no Means would they yield to this, but allowed her till to Morrow, and bid her prepare to die, for they would drown her, if she continued to refuse the Oath.

Next Morning she was asked, if she would swear, she said, she would not. She was asked, if she approved Murder, she answered, she did not, it was not their Sort who were Murderers. They told her, that was enough to take her Life. However, they carried her Prisoner with them to Dumfries, and would not permit her to take her sucking Babe with her. There she continued Five Weeks Prisoner. The Lord moved some to look after the Infant, and the Six others who were able to walk came afterwards to Dumfries; and the eldest applied to the Bailies, that they might have but Liberty to see and speak with their Mother. This was refused, and they put out of the Place. One of them going by the Prison saw her looking out at a Window, but was not suffered to speak to her; when forced away, the Child blessed the Lord he had once more seen her. The Mother was sent in Prisoner to Edinburgh, whither the Children followed her, and the Council had some more Compassion, and at length liberate her.

Let me add another Instance of the Soldiers Carriage. Two Soldiers came from the Garrison of the Sorn, to lift the Cess or Locality in the Parish of Dalmellington, and were lifting ing it in a Country Room called Sloansloun, possessed by Andrew Mitchel. This Place lying towards the mountainous Part of Galloway, the Wanderers and persecuted People upon their hiding, were some Times appearing in the Neighbourhood, the Two Soldiers meeting with Two of them endeavoured to seize them, and were wounded, but not dangerously. 1684.

When the Accounts of this came to the Garison, Lieutenant Dundas with all his Men, came to the Village of Dalmellington, and sent out some and seized Andrew Mitchel's whole Goods, amounting to Twenty Bolls of Corn, Twelve Cows, besides Sheep and Horses, though he was no way concerned in the Scuffle. The Soldiers continued there a Fort-night on free Quarter, to the great Charges of that Place. The Lieutenant called before him a great many People, he alledged had conversed with the hiding People. The Curate of the Place, Mr. Lang, was very useful to him in pointing out the Persons. Fifteen Persons, whose Names are before me, refusing to give Oath as to Converse, were sent Prisoners to Glasgow, and continued there Seventeen Days. They were fined in a Thousand Pounds Scots to the Fiscal, and Five hundred Merks to the wounded Soldiers, and gave Bond to answer there in June.

And one of them, James Gibson of Erris, was distressed for the whole Sum, and forced to pay it, and he allowed Retrocession upon the rest for their Proportions, as appears by the Bonds, Receipts, and Discharges, yet preserved; and their Loss one way and other, was really more than the Sum they actually paid; and yet no Crime could be charged upon them. Besides these, the Lieutenant, in February, seized some of the most substantial of the Inhabitants in the little Town of Dalmellington, and carried them Prisoners with him to the Garison, till, as he said, he should see if the Soldiers would recover; and kept them there Fourteen Days, though not in the least concerned in the Affair.

I am sorry I can give so short Accounts of the Sufferings of John Corsan of Balmangan, in the Parish of Borg in Galloway, last Year and this. That Gentleman was imprisoned for refusing the Bond of Regularity, and continued close Prisoner Nine Months. He was fined in 6000 Merks, and paid it every Farthing, as a Discharge, in his Grandson's Hands at present, bears. His Lady was imprisoned by Colonel Douglas, and, for refusing the Abjuration, received an Indictment; and it was given out, they designed to sentence her to be drowned within the Sea Mark, at the Ferry of Kirkcudbright; but King Charles's Death put a Stop to this and some other Processes of this Kind.

In the Kirk of Borg Claverhouse held a Court this Year, to which all the Parish were summoned, and ordered to bring with them all the Arms they had. All who came were forced to swear these were all they had, and they were taken from them, and carried to Dumfries, where, as was then said, they were given to the Earl of Nithsdale and other Papists. I doubt not but all the Protestants of that Country were disarmed, though I have not Accounts from other Parishes. Courts held by Claverhouse.

Another Instance of the Soldiers murdering in the Fields, I have before me, attested by several Persons yet alive. This Summer, about the Month of July, Lewis Lawder, a subaltern Officer in the Garison of the Sorn, was riding up and down upon some Scotch or other; and at the Woodhead of Tarbolton, in the Shire of Air, he meets William Shirinlaw in Stairhead, aged Eighteen Years or under, and consequently could not be either at Pentland or Bothwell; he was not in the porteous Roll, he was indeed of the Number of those who were given up to the Soldiers by the Curate, for Nonconformity. Lawder seeing him at some Distance cross the Road, he being about his Business, ordered one of the Dragoons, John Guthrie Flesher in Air, to apprehend him. When he was brought up to the Party, after a few of the ordinary Questions asked, Lawder ordered him to be shot, which was done on the Spot. More Instances of People killed in the Fields, without any Process.

The Party went straight to the Stairhead, where the said William had been Servant, and seized Paul Lawmont and Matthew Bell in Stairhead, with Boswel in Stair, against whom they had nothing I can learn but their Nonconformity, and keeping the said William as their Servant. Those Three were carried out to the Fields near by, after their Examination upon the ordinary Questions, and Lawder ordered them to sit down on the Ground upon their Knees, and cover their Faces, in order to be shot presently: But by the good Hand of Providence he was restrained, his Men positively refusing to obey his Orders, telling him, One in a Day was sufficient.

Thus we see, before the Council's inhumane Orders for shooting in the Fields, the Soldiers had made Experiments of this more than once. And we shall next Year, have a vast many Instances of this black Work. Such a Procedure obliged the hiding Persons to have Arms with them, go where they would; and such fearful Barbarities drew forth the Societies apologetical Vindication.

At this Time, the Death of John Alison Chamberlain in Nithsdale to Queensberry, made a great Noise; he had been an Apostate from a Profession he had taken up before the Restoration, and turned a bitter Persecutor. His Torment in Body made him rore, but he had heavier Torture in his Spirit for his bygone Ways. He died in the greatest Agony and Terror;

Account of the Rescue of the Prisoners at Enterkin-path.

Terror; yet the living laid it not to Heart, but the Persecution went on in its full Vigour.

In July or August this Year, the Rescue of the Prisoners at Enterkin-path fell out, and I promised in this Place to give some Account of it, which I now come to do, from some Papers writ about this Time. It brought much Trouble to Nithsdale, as we have heard, and Three good Men were executed upon this Score most unjustly.

Out of the Multitudes who were this Year cast in Prison in Dumfries, many Parcels were sent in to Edinburgh, as the Managers saw good, where they were banished, transported or executed, if they were not prevailed upon to make some Compliances to save their Lives. About this Time, Nine Prisoners were ordered in to Edinburgh, under a Guard of Twenty eight Soldiers; the Writer of this Account now before me, was one of the Prisoners, and Locheat, a Gentleman of a small Estate in Glencairn Parish, was another, a further Account of whom will come in presently.

Some of their Friends who were upon their hiding in the Country about, getting Notice of this, resolved to do what they could to rescue them, and chose the narrow Path of Enterkin, in the Road from Dumfries to Edinburgh, as the most convenient Place for their Purpose. There they posted themselves in the best Manner they could; and when the Prisoners came up, Two and Two tied together upon Horses, they demanded them; they were answered with a Volley of Shot, which they returned, and scattered the Guard, and unloosed Seven of the Prisoners, and took them with them. One of the Soldiers was killed, and several of them wounded. The Soldiers carried off one of the Prisoners, and Locheat was rescued after he had been miserably treated, as we shall hear. This Prisoner was John McKechney a singularly pious Man in Galloway: The Soldiers, according to their Orders, shot at him, missed his Body, but shot him through the Arm, which, through Want of Care about him at Edinburgh, putrified and gangrened, and he died of this after Thirteen Weeks patient enduring great Trouble.

The Soldiers with their Prisoner carried in the Accounts of this Scuffle to Edinburgh. Orders came from thence to all above fifteen Years of Age, in Nithsdale, to arm and meet the Gentlemen and Soldiers in their appointed Places, that they might search the whole Shire for Rescuers of the Prisoners, and Warning was given next Sabbath in the Churches. Accordingly every Parish met, having some Soldiers with them, searched Mosses, Muirs, and Mountains, Woods, and every Corner of the Shire, but I do not find they caught any Prisoners that Day of the general Search.

When this failed them, next Lord's Day Intimation is made from Pulpits in Ten or twelve Parish-churches nearest Enterkin, that all Persons above fifteen Years should meet at new Dalgerno next, and declare upon Oath what should be enquired at them. Multitudes came, and were interrogate as to Rescued or Converse, or if they knew any guilty of it, if they knew who rescued the Prisoners, or which Way they went, or where they are now.

It was but a few they could examine that Day, and so the Soldiers divided into the several Parishes, and appointed several Districts up and down the Country, and with them Mr. James Alexander Sheriff-depute. The Laird of Stonehouse, and other Heritors in the different Parishes accomplished yet a more diligent Search. The Sheriff-officers went from House to House, and they were appointed to return written Executions of their Summons, that there might be none omitted by Paction, Bribes, or the like, and the Episcopal Ministers in each Parish were obliged to give in their Rolls upon Oath.

At those Courts the forementioned Queries were proposed, and the strictest Enquiry possible was made, who kept not the Church, who heard, married, or baptized with outed Ministers, and the like; as to which many had been interrogate, I know not how oft, formerly. The Absents had Soldiers sent upon them, and Multitudes were imprisoned, or found Caution to answer. This Work continued about Six Weeks, and then the Circuit met, of which already. The Reader will easily guess what a vast Trouble this Inquisition brought upon that Country.

Cruelty exercised on the Laird of
Locheat at this
Time.

I promised to give some Hint at the Cruelty exercised upon the forenamed Laird of Locheat, at this Time. This Gentleman had been at Pentland, and was apprehended upon that Score, and imprisoned Half a Year. He came out upon the Bond of Peace, which afterward proved Matter of Disquiet to this good Man. He was at Boswell, and from that Time to this he was much upon his Hiding. The Laird of Stonehouse had got his Estate upon his Forfeiture, and some time before this he had been apprehended by a Soldier, and carried in to Dumfries, and was in great Straits for his very Subsistence in Prison.

He was among the Prisoners rescued at Enterkin, and after he was loosed, being in Confusion, and not retiring where he should, fell in among the Soldiers, who were barbarous to him. He received a Shot with small Lead in the Face, at some Distance, which deprived him of his Sight, and after that they wounded him cruelly in the Head and Body, and left him for dead. But the Rescuers coming up, the Soldiers retired, and he was sent to a Country House near by, and his Friends advertised, who came and took a care of him as privately as might be.

In a little Time, Stonehouse, who possessed his Estate, getting Notice he was in the Neighbourhood, came and held a Court. The Gentleman's Brother, among others, was obliged to compear, and being interrogate upon Oath, if he knew where Locheare was, confest he had him in his House, and told them, he was just a dying in every Body's account. Straightway a Party of Soldiers was sent, and the blind, wounded, and in Probability dying Gentleman, was brought to the Court; and his Brother, and all they could learn had shewed the least Act of Humanity to him, were made Prisoners.

When Locheare was in the Court, he was asked, how he liked his present Circumstances, by the Test which he once had in his Offer, and would have saved him. He answered, the Test was more terrible to him than all he had met with, or all they could do. Stonehouse said, he would not quit his old ill-natured thravn Principles for all that is come on him, and ordered him to be carried straight Prisoner to Dumfries; thence he was carried into Edinburgh where he lay long extremely weak. However his Patience outwearied them, and at length he was dismissed without any sinful Conditions.

While the Country about Enterkin was thus haralled, the Laird of Lag and others were not idle in Galloway. In Harvest he held a Court at Carpsphairn Church. Upon the Sabbath-day he came from Sanquhar with a Party of Soldiers, and in the Road, at the Holm of Dunquhairn, he seized a Young Man, George Lorimer, and would have him drink the King's Health. He refusing was made Prisoner, and sent to Dumfries, where in some time he broke Prison and escaped, and for any Thing I know, is alive still.

Lag's Court
in August.

Upon Munday he called all the Parishioners one by one, and upon Oath made them declare what they knew about any Persons hiding or wandring in that Neighbourhood, what they were, where they were, and who harboured or conversed with them, and lastly, about their own keeping the Church. Mr. Peter Peirson Curate of the Parish sat with him in the Court, and informed him of the Characters of such who were present, and of all the Absents, and upon this Information Parties were sent through the Parish, who spoiled their Houses, and brought in many old and infirm People, Women with Child, and the Sick, who had not compeared before Lag, and they were treated rudely enough.

The Parishes in the South now had their Hardships very frequent, and one upon the Heels of another; and so a little after Enterkin-path, Lieutenant Livingstone came from Nithsdale to Carpsphairn with a Troop of Dragoons, and swore all the People about the Head of the Water of Ken, as above. Claverhouse came after him with Five or Six Troops, and went through all the Hills thereabout, searching for Persons on their Hiding, and made as many as he pleased answer his Interrogatories upon Oath.

Wonderful were the Preservations of the Persecuted about this Time. The Soldiers frequently got their Clothes and Clokes, and yet missed themselves. They would have gone by the Mouths of the Caves and Dens in which they were lurking, and the Dogs would snook and smell about the Stones under which they were hid, and yet they remained undiscovered. This was the Case of Gavin Maclymout at Cairns-hill-muir, and others.

One Instance of Cruelty to an old Woman of Seventy Three Years in Carpsphairn, deserves its Room here. Her Son had been cited to some Court 1680. for hearing Mr. Cameron, and upon his Noncompearance he is intercommuned, and her House at that Time spoiled when they missed him. This Year the Soldiers came again, and not finding the Son, they carried his Mother Prisoner to Dumfries. There they offered her the Test, which, through Advice of Friends, she was almost brought over to comply with; but when they saw her like to yield, they would further have her to swear she would never speak to, or harbour her Son. This she would by no Means comply with. Thereupon next Market-day the poor old Woman was scourged through the Town of Dumfries. This she bore most patiently, and after all, before she was liberate, she behoved to pay Two hundred Merks.

Many were the Severities now exercised in Galloway. Macdoul of Gillespy in the Parish of Luce was dead some time ago, and his Lady Janet Ross, Liferentrix of the Estate, had Corporal Murray, with thirteen Dragoons and their Horses, sent to quarter upon her at the Infatigation of the Curate, and for mere Nonconformity. They stayed Five or Six Weeks, and in the Harvest Time almost destroyed the whole Crop. They shot the Sheep in the Fields, and at length forced her from her Estate, and she retired to Ireland about Twenty Months. All her Tenants almost were obliged to appear first at Air, which is near Fifty Miles distant, and then cited into Edinburgh, which is about Ninety Miles; only to be Witnesses against the Lady for her Nonconformity.

Lady Gillespy's
her Sufferings.

Charles Stuart now in Knock, in the same Parish, was apprehended by Claverhouse in the Throng of Harvest, and was cast into Stranrawer Prison, and got not out till he paid Three hundred Merks for baptizing his Child with Mr. Samuel Arnot. He was summoned likewise to Edinburgh as a Witness against Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, and his Lady for her Nonconformity, and obliged to wait on Seventy two Days at Edinburgh upon his own Charges. He had likewise a Journey to make to Dumfries and to Air, though he had nothing to witness against those excellent Persons. Great was the Trouble Multitudes were put to at this Time, by their being cited Witnesses hither and thither.

Charles Stuart of

Colin Alison.

The Persecution for bare Nonconformity was very violent every where, through the whole of this Year. In many Places they had rid themselves of the most Part concerned in the Rising; and they had not many of the elder Sort to exercise their Severity upon, but Noncompearers at their Courts, and Nonconformists to the Curates. Indeed every Day almost was casting up some new Snare or other, from which an Handle was taken to increase the Persecution. I only give one Instance. In September Major Balfour seized Colin Alison a Weaver in Glasgow. That same Day upon the Street Balfour had challenged his Son, but he escaped out of his Hands, and the Major went straight to his Father, though he had nothing to charge him with, and took him out of his House, and put him in Prison; there he lay till the 1688. and all for simple Nonconformity.

Robert Watson
in Badernock.

I only add another Instance of the Barbarity of the Soldiers, in November this Year, upon Robert Watson in Balmore, in the Parish of Badernock, Five Miles North of Glasgow. This good Man had been paralytick for Six or Seven Years, so that he stirred not off his Bed, neither could he receive Meat or Drink without Help. Upon Information from the Curate, Mr. Stirling, this Man was seized as a disaffected Person. That same Day Mr. James Gilchrist, Chaplain to the Laird of Glorat, afterwards an useful Minister at Kirkmichael, was brought in Prisoner. About Eight a Clock at Night, the Party came into Robert Watson's House, and took one of his Horses and yoked in a Sledge, and carried Robert and his Couch he lay on, with his Head and Feet lying over the Sledge, and in that Posture under heavy Rain they carried him into Glasgow that Night. When he was examined at Glasgow, considering his Circumstances he was soon dismissed, and the Soldiers cursed the Curate for putting them to this Trouble.

Sufferings of William Hanna
and his Son.

I shall shut up this general Account of the Persecution this Year, with the Sufferings of William Hanna and his Son, in the Parish of Tunnergarth in Anandale, of which a Narrative lies before me, attested by Persons who knew them, and indeed they are very remarkable.

William Hanna was taken October this Year. Since the Establishment of Episcopacy this good Man was a strict Nonconformist, and would never hear the established Ministers. In the Year 1667. he was imprisoned for hearing a Presbyterian Minister, and fined in an Hundred Pounds. He was a near Neighbour to the Curate of the Parish, who in the 1678. turned very severe upon him for his Nonconformity, having nothing else to charge him with. William was cited frequently to appear before the Session, and refusing to appear, the Curate was going on to Excommunication, and came the length of the first Prayer, but saw fit to stop there. A Child of William's died, and the Curate would not suffer it to be buried in the Church-yard, and set a Watch upon William's Burial-place. However, January 1. 1679. some came to make the Child's Grave. The Curate being informed, came out himself in great Fury, and took away the Spades and Shovels, and told them, if they buried the Child by Night or Day, he would cause trail it out again, since he knew not if it was baptized; so the Man was forced to bury elsewhere.

Mr. John Welwood came into that Parish where his Father had been Minister, and preached several Sabbaths. The Curate procured a Court to be held, at which many gave Bond to carry regularly, and not to go to Conventicles. This William refused, and was brought to no small Trouble. In the Beginning of the 1679. he was forced to go upon his Hiding. In November 1681. for not paying 13 Shillings Scots of Cess, he had an Horse worth Four Pounds Sterling taken from him. In the Year 1682. when the Courts turned throng and severe, he and his Sons were forced to wander, and endured great Hardships for some Time. By the Circuit 1683. he was denounced and declared Fugitive; and about that Time, the Curate hearing that a Gentleman in the Parish who did not hear him, and William, were both at home, sent to Dumfries for a Party who caught the Gentleman, and William very narrowly escaped.

This Year 1684. being weary with his Tossings, William went over the Border to England, hoping to breathe a little there; but ere long Colonel Dacres seized him, and sent him under a Guard; and October 26. Sprinkel with his Troop received him, and some more Prisoners, at the Border, whence they were brought to Anan, and next Day to Lockerbridge, when Queensberry ordered him to be carried to Dumfries, where he lay in Irons, till the Prisoners, as we heard, were carried into Edinburgh and Leith.

From Leith he was brought up to the Canongate Tolbooth, and cast into a dark Pit, where he had neither Air, nor the least Glimpse of Light for some Days. Here, and no Wonder, he fell very sickly, and begged the Favour to be let out to the Guard-hall, that he might have the free Air; which was refused. The Soldier who brought him in his small Pittance of Meat or Drink, when he opened the Pit Door to let him in, said, Seek Mercy from Heaven, for we have none to give you, adding other blasphemous Expressions, which I shall not repeat. Here he lay Nine Days without any Thing charged upon him but Nonconformity, at length he was brought up to the Canongate Tolbooth, where he lay till he was sent to Dunnotter, as we shall hear.

His Son's Sufferings deserve our Remark, and I know not where they come in better than here. William Hanna not yet Sixteen Years of Age, because he kept not the Church, was in the Year 1682. forced to flee to England, where he abode some Time. In September Year

Year he returned home, and fell sick of a very fore Ague. When he was under it, and so weak as he could scarce stand, the Soldiers fell upon him in their Searches, and carried him with them on Foot Three or Four Days in their Rangings up and down. 1684.

Coming to the Grave of one who had been shot, and buried in the Fields, they set him on the Grave, and covering his Face, bloodily threatned him, if he would not promise Regularity, and other Things then pressed, they would shoot him straight. The Boy told them, God had sent him to the World, and had appointed his Time to go out of it, only he was determined to swear nothing he reckoned sinful; he was now in their Power, and they might do as they would. When the Soldiers perceived his Composure and Stayedness, they took him to the Laird of Wester-ran, who sent him Prisoner to Dumfries. Thence next Year he was taken to Edinburgh, and after many Examinations he was put in the Thumbkins, and after that committed to the Irons, which were so strait, that his Flesh swelled out above them. In the Iron-house he was robbed of all his Money sent him by his Friends; and at one Time Eleven Dollars were taken from him. After a Year and a Half's Imprisonment, he was banished and sold in Barbadoes. I am informed this worthy Person returned after the Revolution, and is at present the reverend Minister at Scarsborough. His Mother endured great Fatigue and Hardships when waiting on his Father and him.

There were some Persons put to Death towards the Close of this Year, of whom I have not distinct Accounts, else I would have given them upon the third Section, above. However, any Hints I have of them I give here. William Keagow was executed upon the same Points with the others abovenamed, in December. 'Tis observed, that at some of their Executions, one of these, or the forementioned, happened to sing Psalm cxix. 84, &c. which so enraged the Soldiers, that they made a great Disturbance, chased off the Spectators, and would not suffer their dead Bodies to be dressed. Arthur Bruce in Dalserf Parish was executed some Time this Year. George Shiels, Thomas Scot in Brunchefer, John Falla in Kelso, and Thomas Turnbull in Ancrum Parish, were sent in Prisoners this Year to Edinburgh, at several Times, for mere Nonconformity, and, by the Severities and bad Treatment in Prison, died there.

Let me add, that December 18. Claverhouse, when ranging up and down Galloway, with a Troop, came to the Water of Dee; and at Auchincloy, came upon some of the People who were lurking and hiding, unexpectedly, and surprized Six of them together; for what I can find, they had no Arms. According to the Instructions lately given by the Council, he shot Four of them upon the Spot in a very few Minutes, Robert Fergusson and James Macmichan from Nithsdale, and Robert Stuart and John Grier Galloway Men: Afterwards their Friends carried off their Bodies to Dalry, and buried them. Some Accounts before me say, that by Orders from Claverhouse, a Party came and uncovered their Graves and Coffins, and they continued so open Four Days, till the Party went off: And it appears certain, that James Macmichan's Body, after it was buried, was taken up, and hung up upon a Tree. This was strange Barbarity and Spite.

The other Two, Robert Smith in Glencairn Parish, and Robert Hunter, Claverhouse carried with him to Kirkcudbright, and called an Assize, and made a Form of judging them, and caused execute them there. They would not permit these Two to write any Thing, not so much as Letters to their Relations. There were Two more in the Company who escaped, and happy it was for them it was so; for probably they would have gone the same Way. The Soldiers pursuing them had Notice of an House they had gone into, where they had not sitten down, but gone away immediately, and came to it, took all the Persons in it Prisoners, and immediately burnt it down to the Ground. It may be, the Rescue of some Prisoners at Kirkcudbright, by some of the Wanderers, a little before this, was the Pretext for all this Cruelty.

I come now to glean up a few Remarkables from the Registers, that may afford some Light to the History of this Year, though they have not so direct a Reference to the Sufferings.

January 1. I find an Order from the secret Committee, to Captain Patrick Graham and Sir William Paterson, to go and seal all the Lord Maitland's Papers in the late Lauderdale's Lodgings. It seems, a little before this, that once great Man, the Duke of Lauderdale, died; and notwithstanding his bright Parts, and long Favour with his Master, at length he fell into the utmost Neglect and Contempt: And now, it seems, the present Managers resolve to canvass his Papers.

April 11. upon Application from the Bishop of Edinburgh, the Council pass the following Act about a Fast. 'Forasmuch as the Lord Bishop of Edinburgh, having represented to the Council, that at the late Meeting of the diocesan Synod of Edinburgh, it was proposed that there might be Two religious Fasts kept yearly through the Bounds of that Diocese, to implore the Mercy of almighty God, for a comfortable Spring and Harvest, and the Synod had recommended it to him to acquaint the Council therewith; and he having desired their Authority for approving of the same, they do willingly agree to the said Christian Propo‘fal, and interpose their Allowance and Authority thereunto; and leave it to the Lord Bishop, to name the Days whereupon the said Fast is to be kept in the said Dioceſe.’ Whether this Method of a double Fast in the Spring, and before Harveſt, was kept up, I do not know; I wiſh never a worſe Propoſal had paſt through the Bishops Hands. I only notice, April 17. a national Fast is appointed by the Council; for a great Drought, it ſeems, fell out that Spring.

The curious Reader may perhaps be content to know, that upon the foreſaid Diet, the Council recommend George Scot of Pitlochrie, Son to Sir John Scot of Scotſtarbet, to his Maſteſty, for a Gratification for ſome Abſtracts of the publick Registers made by his Father.

April 22. I find a Proclamation with relation to Diſcipline and Kirk-ſeſſions, which I do not find ordered to be printed, for what Reaſons I ſhall not ſay; but one would think, that there was Ground to have printed it, ſince it concerns ſo many. However, I ſhall inſert it here.

CHARLES R.

‘FOrasmuch as, by the Supremacy inherent in Our imperial Crown, as one of the Prerogatives thereunto belonging, it ſolely reſides in Us to emit ſuch Acts and Conſtitutions, and Orders concerning the Adminiſtration of the external Government of the Church, and the Perſons to be employed therein, as We, in Our Royal Wiſdom, ſhall think fit, as is more fully ſpecified in the firſt Act of Our ſecond Parliament; and therefore, We and Our Predeceſſors having always been careful, that the Diſcipline of the Church, by Kirk-ſeſſions and otherwiſe, be obſerved: For the Preſervation whereof, it being neceſſary, that Perſons of good Reputation, and known Loyalty, ſhould aſſiſt the Miniſters in the Exerciſe of eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline: We therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, do hereby impower the Miniſters of the reſpective Pariſhes, within this Our ancient Kingdom, to give in Liſts to the Bishops their Ordinaries, of ſuch as are fit to ſerve as Elders in the ſaid Pariſhes; and being approved by them, We hereby ordain and command the Perſons ſo named and authorized to ſerve as Elders, except they can offer ſuch ſufficient Reaſons to be allowed, as may excuſe them from ſerving in the ſaid Employment: With Certification to the Perſons who ſhall reſuſe, not being lawfully excuſed, as ſaid is, that upon Production of the ſaid Nomination, and Inſtruments taken upon Reſuſal, Letters of Horning ſhall be directed under the Signet of Our Privy Council, charging them to accept and officiate, within Fifteen Days, under the Pain of Rebellion. OUR WILL IS, &c.’

Remarks on it.

This Proclamation was undoubtedly deſigned to force Country People and Heritors to joyn in with the Epiſcopal Miniſters, in the Exerciſe of Diſcipline. Indeed in many Places, the Curates were hated for their Share in the Severities of this Period, by many, otherwiſe not very nice in their Principles; and others could not joyn with them from Conſciouſneſs of their unſcriptural Way of entering Pariſhes, when mean while the Neceſſity of the Times brought them now and then to hear them; yet they were peremptory in reſuſing to joyn with them in eccleſiaſtical Society. And ſo this Violence and Force is uſed to bring them into Church-offices, directly contrary to the Scripture-directory, that none ſhall enter by Conſtraint, but willingly. This was another Handle of perſecuting not a few.

The Miniſters in particular Pariſhes uſed to procure blank Commiſſions from their Bishops, and they inſert whom they pleaſed in it; and if Gentlemen or others reſuſed, then Letters of Horning were got out againſt them. One of thoſe original blank Commiſſions is come to my Hands, dated next Year, and the curious Reader will be pleaſed to find it here.

‘FOrasmuch as I John, by the Mercy of GOD, Biſhop of Edinburgh, am informed by Mr. John Cockburn Miniſter at Ormiſtoun, that the Perſons afternamed, viz. [ they are blank in the Original ] all Pariſhoners within the Pariſh of Ormiſtoun, are Perſons apt and fit to be Elders in the ſaid Pariſh of Ormiſtoun, and to aſſiſt him in the Church-diſcipline; and he the ſaid Mr. John Cockburn having choſen them as Perſons fit and qualified for the ſaid Employment: Therefore I have approved, and by thoſe Preſents approve of his ſaid Choice of the foreſaid Perſons, to be Elders and Aſſiſtants to him in Church-diſcipline, within the ſaid Pariſh; and hereby require them, and every one of them, to accept and embrace the ſaid Employment, conform to the Act of Council made thereanent. Upon the groundless Stories raised by the Duke of Tork, anent a designed Insurrection in Scotland, which was not projected till the Accession of a Papist to the Throne, to prevent the Earl of Argyle's Attempt that way, which indeed was not yet concerted, the Lieutenantcy of Argyle Shire and Tarbet is changed, new Lieutenants established, and the Heads of the Clans in Argyle and Tarbet are ordered to attend the Lieutenants at their Call, with Quota's of Men and Provision for Thirty Days, with other Things, which the Reader hath in the Proclamation, for the Peace of the Highlands, dated May 5. See App. No. 101. A.

Proclamation
May 5, for the Peace of the Highlands.

App. No. 101.
A.

Remarks on it:

The Design of all this was not only to weaken the Interest of the Family of Argyle, which was very great in those Shires, and of all who were friendly to them, but to strengthen and increase the Duke of Tork's Party in the Nation, by encouraging the Highland Clans, many of whom were Papists, and all of them hereditary Right Men, and Friends to arbitrary and oppressive Measures, as they have abundantly proven more than once. It was thought very expedient to have a good Body of these Clans still in Readiness in all Events, for securing the Popish Succession, and defending the Courses now taken, if Need were.

July 25. I find, the Council make Sir Archibald Kennedy of Colzean, Captain of the Militia Troop of the Shire of Air, in room of Sir John Kennedy of Girvan-mains, lately deceased, who wanted not his Share in the Persecution, next Year.

September 16. the Council order a new Election of the Magistrates of Air, and send a Nomination of Provost, Bailies, and Town-council. I find by the Registers, this Month and the following, that the Council engroueth the Power of nominating the Magistrates and Council of most Part of the Royal Burghs; and even in Edinburgh it felt, they order a Committee of their Number to be present, and oversee the Election of Magistrates at this Term.

Council Inventions, on the Election in 3 Royal Burghs.

November 6. a Patent is read and recorded, to John Drummond of Lundin, late Treasurer-depute, to be Secretary of State in conjunction with the Earl of Murray. He is sometimes, in Papers, termed Secretary before this: How it comes to be so I cannot tell.

Drummond of Lundin (afterwards Melford) made Secretary of State.

The Council, November 26. pass a pretty remarkable Act anent the Choice of Members of Parliament, which deserves a Room here.

Act anent Election to Parliament.

‘FOrasmuch as there are severals of the Members who have served in the late Session of this current Parliament, who, it may be reasonably presumed, will not serve in the ensuing Meeting thereof, to be held at Edinburgh upon the Tenth of March next to come, upon the Terms of the Act of the said last Session thereof. Therefore, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, do hereby require the Sheriffs of the respective Shires, at the next Meeting of the Freeholders appointed by his Majesty's late Proclamation, where such Members are, in face of the said Meeting, to enquire at them if they will serve in the Terms mentioned in the same Act. And if they shall refuse, do hereby authorize the said Sheriff and Meetings respective, to proceed to the Election of such fit Members as will serve at the said next Session of the current Parliament.

Act Council Nov. 26, about Election to Parliament.

‘And in regard there are some Members who served in the last Session of the current Parliament, who are under Citation for Treason; the said Lords do require the said Sheriffs, as soon as the Diets to which they are cited are elapsed, and they declared fugitives, to call and convene the said Freeholders, and proceed to the electing of other Members, to serve in their Room. And which Power is hereby given and granted likewise to the several Burghs Royal, in the Circumstances foresaid, that the said ensuing Meeting of Parliament may be full and frequent.’

The Act of the last Parliament spoken of here, I take to be the Test, and where there was any who had not, or would not comply with it, they were to be turned out; and agreeably to the arbitrary Measures at this Time used, we see the Council, as they take upon them the Power of modelling of Corporations and Burghs, so they assume a material Power of modelling the supreme Court of Parliament, in its elective Members. No more is needful, but the trumping up a Summons for Treason, Converse with any who had been at Pentland or Bothwell, was Ground sufficient for that; and then the Sheriff is impowered to make a new Election. Thus the Parliament was purged of some of the best of the Members of it, and by the Time they sat, which was lengthned out by King Charles's Death, it was pretty well disposed for serving a Popish King, and advancing the Ruin of the Reformation.

Orders to the Advocate to raise a Process of Forfeiture before the Parliament, against Wellshells, Colclough, O. Hiltree, Mr. Stuart, Lord Melvil and others within written.

To secure all the better, December 3. the Council give Orders to the Advocate, 'to raise a Process of Forfeiture before the Parliament, by a Summons in Latin, after the old Way, under the Quarter Seal, upon a Charge of Sixty Days, against Denholm of W. Ashbells, Stuart of Cultness, Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, James Stuart Son to Sir James Stuart of Goodtrees, the Lord Melvil, the Laird of Polwart, George Pringle of Torwoodlie, Andrew Fletcher of Saltoun, Hume of Bassenden, the Heirs of Mr. Martin late Clerk to the Justice-court, the Heirs to the late Earl of Lowdon, Thomas Hay of Park, Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, Walter Lockhart of Kirkcubright, Montgomery of Lanshaw, John Weir of Newtoun, Mr. Gilbert Elliot Writer in Edinburgh, Campbel of Ardkinglas, Cessnock elder and younger, and Jerviswood.' We shall meet with them next Year.

At the same Diet, John Henderson, suspect to be one of the Murderers of the Archbishop, appears, and is absolved, having given a good Account of himself, and having taken the Test.

Duke of Gordon Chancellor.

December 11. the Duke of Gordon's Patent for being Chancellor, is read and recorded; if he was not now a declared Papist, he was shortly so; and now that Set is getting in very fast.

Mr. Thomas Hay Dean of Murray made a Justice of the Peace.

December 17. the Council, 'considering how necessary and proper it is, that Mr. Thomas Hay Dean of Murray, be Justice of the Peace within the Shire of Murray, and particularly in his own Parish, do therefore nominate and appoint him to be a Justice of the Peace there, with full Powers, and that the Justices of Peace at their first Meeting receive him.'

I need scarce add, that in December this Year, at Glasgow and some other Places, Multitudes of People imagined they saw Bonnets, black, blue, and of several Colours, falling down from the Air upon them. Generally, by sensible Persons, this was looked upon as deceptio visus; and the Power of Imagination. It was odd however, that next Year when the Militia came to the West against Argyle, they had just the same Bonnets; and at the Cross, Green, and other Places, where the Bonnets were alledged to be seen, the Militia swarmed most.

This Winter, many Gentlemen and others at Edinburgh, were challenged by the Managers, for giving Charity to outed Presbyterian Ministers, and contributing to the Education of their Children. But I have said enough upon this Year, and come forward to the next.

CH A P. IX.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, during the Year 1685.

Remarks upon Persecution.

PERSECUTION is so ill a Thing, that no Body almost owns it, though Multitudes in all Ages have been guilty, especially such fearful Acts of Wickedness as we have met with upon the former Years, and shall again find this Year; and readily the Parties most concerned will wipe their Mouths, and say they are clean.

But the Remembrance of Matters of Fact this Year is so fresh in the Thoughts of many yet alive, that there can be no Denial of them, without the greatest Impudence and Effrontery.

Particular Instances of Barbarities of all Kinds do now grow upon my Hand, and it is truly a Satisfaction to me, that I can tell the Reader I am now drawing towards a Close of those melancholy Things, which no doubt will grate the Ears, and weight the Spirits of such to whom they come, and were I once through this black Year, the following Three to the Revolution will take but little Time.

Subject Matter of this Chapter.

This Year affords Abundance of Matter. I have left to this Chapter the Narrative of the severe Persecutions, every where almost upon the Society's Declaration, and the Refusal of the Abjuration Oath. New Murders in the open Fields turn so frequent, that I shall scarce be be able to give Account of them all. Multitudes were cut off every Month, without the tedious Formality of a Process, besides a good Number of publick Executions at Edinburgh and other Places, and the barbarous drowning of poor innocent Women within the Sea Mark.

In February the Death of King Charles falls in, a Popish Prince mounts the Throne, to the Terror of all good Protestants, and the Joy of all Papists; and after he had given some smooth Words to lull all asleep, he quickly cast off the Mask, and some Branches of the Persecution of Presbyterians run very high.

A new Session of Parliament meets in April under this Popish Sovereign, and since little was left undone by the former Sessions, that could be done against Presbyterians, the iniquitous Procedure and Acts of the Council are all ratified, and some new Advances made.

In the following Month, the Attempt of the noble Earl of Argyle falls in, which was soon quite broken, and issued in his Death, and that of some excellent Persons with him, and we need not doubt was carefully improved by our Managers, for a new and general harassing of the Country.

The Summer affords us some more Murders in the open Fields, and upon Scaffolds, and the inhumane Treatment of some Hundreds of Prisoners at Dunotter in Harveit, and toward the End of it; we have, besides some more publick Executions, the Transportation of a great many to America, with Pitlochy, beside some other incidental Things. These will afford Matter for a good many Sections.

S E C T. I.

Of the Persecution this Year upon the Score of the Societies Declaration.

HAVING in the last Section, gave one, of the former Chapter, given a large Account of the Societies Declaration, emitted by them October 28. last Year, I begin my Account this Year with the Severities of the Soldiers, in different Places of the Country, in pressing the Abjuration of it, which we heard was appointed by the Council. It is but a few Hints in several Parishes up and down which I can point at, as a Specimen of the Methods now used. Other Instances will come in ere I end this Chapter.

Matter of this Section.

In Nithsdale James Corsbie was seized, and, upon his Refusal of the Abjuration, his Ears were crompt, and was sent to Jamaica, and sold as a Slave. Whence the Persecutors borrowed this Practice of cutting off the Ears of such as fell among their Hands, which, as we shall hear, turned pretty ordinary, I know not.

James Corsbie's Ears crompt and banulced.

Toward the Beginning of this Year, I find Captain Strachan harassing many in the Parish of Dalry in Galloway. He commanded sometime in the Garison kept in the House of Earlsfoun, and held Courts round about him in that Neighbourhood, and pressed the Abjuration with a great deal of Cunning and Cruelty upon all, and many Families were obliged to dislodge and wander upon their Refusal.

Persecution in Dalry.

At the same Time Courts were held by the Laird of Lag, and such as he deputed in other Parts of Galloway, where the foresaid Oath was most violently pressed in every Parish, and the Women, as well as Men, and the younger as well as these more advanced, were forced to take it.

In other Parts of Galloway.

Throughout all the large Shire of Air it was most violently imposed. In the Parish of Auchinleck one William Johnstoun was cited to one of the Courts where it was appointed to be taken. He did not compear, and a Party of Soldiers were sent to his House, who intirely rifled it. He and his Wife having retired, left a Maid in the House to attend and look after their Family of small Children, who could not be transported. The Soldiers were so inhumane as to carry her away with them to the Garison of the Sorn, leaving five or six small Infants destitute and helpless in the House their alone.

In Air Shire.

When the Servant was brought to the Garison nothing could be laid to her Charge, and yet the Oath was put to her, which she peremptorily refusing, never having taken any Oath, and declaring to them she did not understand it, and could not swear it, they put kindled Matches twixt her Fingers, and burnt off the Flesh to the very Bone. She endured all with the greatest of Patience, and such Composure as astonished her Tormentors, and in the Issue they dismissed her.

Great Cruelty to a Servant-maid.

Indeed at this Time, there was no Peace to him that went out or came in, and the Fury of the Parties, as they went up and down seeking their Prey, was unparalleled.

1685.

In Lanerk Shire.

In the Parish of Stonehouse in Lanerk Shire, a poor Man was at his Work in the Fields, and when he saw the Soldiers coming, he stepped out of the Way, not being willing to come into their Hands. Upon this they followed him, and shot at him, and overtaking him at length, without asking him one Question, knocked him down with their Muskets, and wounded him with their Swords, leaving him for dead upon the Spot. Then coming to his House near by, they took away Two Horses, and left some of their Number in the House to see his Corn threshed out; so the poor Man, besides the grievous Wounds he got without any Reason given, at a modest Calculation lost upwards of Three hundred Merks. Those left to dispose of his Corn were so unmerciful, as to turn his Wife and several small Children from the House in the Night-time, during a violent Storm of Frost and Snow, so that they were almost killed with Cold.

And in the neighbouring Parish of Dalserf, about this same Time, many Families were scattered. John Harvey, Walter Ker, and Andrew McKillen were seized and banished. The first of them had all his Goods seized, and his Wife was imprisoned a long Time, and very cruelly used. John Stuart in the same Parish, had his Doors burnt by his Master, and his Wife was carried Prisoner to Hamiltoun, with an Infant not a Month old, with a Design to carry her further; but when she came that length, she fell so ill with travelling in her Circumstances, that she was left for dead; and all this for Noncompearance, and declining the Oath now pressed.

In Cambusnethan.

John Marshal Tenant to Cultness, in the neighbouring Parish of Cambusnethan, for refusing the Abjuration had Two Cows and all his Crop taken from him by one Ogilvy, who for some Time kept a Garison in the House of Cultness, and his Family was scattered. At the same Time they took from John Torrence in the same Parish, upon the same Score, a Cow, Six Sheep, and all his Corns, and spoiled his House, carrying off all that was portable.

In Twinam.

Captain Douglas and his Soldiers oppressed terribly, in the Beginning of this Year, the Parish of Twinam. A poor Tenant there, after many Severities, was prevailed with to swear the Oath, and so the Soldiers left him for a little; but after Eight or Ten Days returned, and forced him to go with them to a neighbouring Parish, and assist them in searching for some Wanderers. Upon the Road thither they met with a poor Man who would not answer their Questions, nor swear; him the Captain ordered immediately to be shot. The other Country Man modestly intreated the Captain to examine the Man a little further, and to give him some more Time before they dispatched him, for this they beat and bruised him, so that in a few Weeks he died.

This same Captain came through a good Part of Galloway, with some Militia under his Command, and spoiled all Places whithersoever they came, as they had been in an Enemy's Country. Claverhouse and he subcommitted their Power to Gentlemen, in every Parish, when they went off, and those Deputes at their Leisure harassed every Body in those Parishes.

In Balmacellan.

So strict and severe were the Soldiers upon every Emergent, that in the Parish of Balmacellan, a Country Man who had somewhat suddenly broken about his Plough, was running home to bring some Instrument wherewith he was to mend it, came near a Party of Soldiers before he got to his House, who, seeing him running, seized him, and forced him to swear presently.

In Corfmichael.

A Party of Soldiers came about this Time into Corfmichael, to look after such as had been absent from the Abjuration Court; they made dreadful Havock, and destroyed every Thing, and took Beds, Ploughs, Harrows, and made Fire-wood of them where they stayed, though they wanted not abundance of other Fuel. They seized several Women, and carried them from Prison to Prison, because of their refusing the Abjuration. Some of them were sent to the Plantations, others to Dunotter, and some continued in Prison till the Toleration.

In Tongland.

In the Parish of Tongland, Lieutenant Livingstone with a Party of Dragoons harassed very severely. After Courts had been held there for pressing the Oath, they made very strict Searches for Noncompliers. A Youth about Eighteen Years, named John Hallome, seeing the Party at some little Distance, stepped out of the Road in which he was travelling. This they quickly observed, and pursued and wounded him, first with a Shot, and then with a Sword in the Head, never once asking him one Question. They carried him Prisoner from one Place to another, till at length they brought him to Kirkcudbright. There they put the Abjuration to him, which he refusing, an Assize was called, made up of the Soldiers, and he was condemned, and executed there.

Cruelties committed by the Soldiers at this Time.

Every Person that endeavoured to get out of their Clutches at this Time, was reckoned as confessedly guilty, and straight dispatched. William Auchinleck in the Parish of Buttle had been conveying a Friend of his to Ireland, and was returning to his own House on Horseback. Unhappily for him he fell in with a Company of Douglas's Foot coming from Kirkcudbright, who called to him to stand. The Man complied with every Thing that came about, and was a full Conformist, but he had no Mind to lose his Horse, which he suspected the Soldiers would take from him.

And

And therefore rode a little off from them; taking a Compass he got by them, and came on his Way, till he came to a publick House on the Road, called Carlin-work; there he called for some Ale, which he took sitting upon Horseback, thinking he was out of their Reach. But the Soldiers, some of them at least, had taken a nearer Way, and came up when he was drinking, discharged their Pieces at him, and killed him outright. Another Boy happened to be at the House, at that Minute when the Soldiers came up, was mounting his Horse to go with the former, at the Shot the Horse being frightened, threw the Boy from him, the Soldiers came up and knocked him in the Head with their Pieces, and took his Horse from him, and any Money he had, without asking him a Question.

It would be endless to set down the Ravages and Severities of the Soldiers, and therefore I shall add another Instance to shew the Share which the conformable Clergy had in them, which can be attested by several Witnesses yet alive. It is no Pleasure to me to expose People of this Order, but their Hand was so deep in every Trouble that came about, that it would be Unfaithfulness to pass them.

In the Parish of Catchcart near Glasgow, there was a good old Man, John Watson, who lived in Langside. This Man fell very poor, and was obliged to beg his Bread from House to House, besides, he was almost wholly lame. The Curate Mr. Robert Finnie was much embittered at this Man because he would not hear him, and at this Time he likewise refused the Abjuration Oath. Mr. Finnie gave in an Information against him as a dangerous and disaffected Person, and got an Order to a Party of my Lord Ross's Troop to apprehend him.

The Party came to Langside where any Dwelling the Man had, was, and were informed that he was at Glasgow waiting on for an Alms, it being the Day of the Week upon which Sir James Turner used to give somewhat to the Poor at his Lodgings. So for that Time he escaped.

Mr. Finnie continued in his Rage against the poor, lame, aged Man, and procured another Party to be sent in quest of him, with strict Orders to apprehend him. When they came, he was at home in his Cottage, and they were really ashamed so many of them had come for so small a Prize. When they saw him, they found he was neither able to flee from them, nor travel with them. And some of them failed not to curse the Minister, who had bound them out upon such a Prey.

They urged him hard to swear the Abjuration; John told them in much Calmness, that it was now a long Time since he had sworn the Covenant, and resolved to swear no more Oaths.

The Soldiers knew not how to get him to Paisly, and were ashamed to go along with a Baggard and Cripple too. His Neighbours, out of regard to the honest Man, and it may be fearing worse, offered to send him on a Sledge to the Hawk-head, my Lord Ross's House. My Lord getting an Account of the Matter before John came up, sent out a Servant, and ordered him home again, blushing at Mr. Finnie's Malice and merciless Temper, and sent Half a Crown to him as a real Object of Alms.

There is but one other Instance, with which I shall end this general Account of the Persecution upon the Score of the Abjuration, which I have well attested from the Parish of Penningsham in Galloway, by the late worthy and learned Mr. Robert Rowan Minister there, and it is the Case of the Milroys in that Parish. I give it all together in this Place, though it relates to several Years, and from it we may have a new View of the Severities of this Time, and an Estimate may be made, what a black Account we might have had of them if Care had been taken to get such circumstantiated and attested Narratives as this is. I give it mostly in the Words of my dear Friend, though I must shorten them.

The Case of Gilbert and William Milroys in the Parish of Penningsham.

There were Two Brothers in that Parish, Gilbert and William Milroys, living at Kirkcaldy in Castle-stuart's Land. Last Year when the Test was pressed violently, William took it, and Gilbert compounded with the Sheriff-depute to get his Name out of the Rolls, and actually gave him Twelve Pounds, and got off.

But this Year when all were obliged to abjure, these Two, with their younger Brother Patrick Milroy, having no Clearness to swear, were obliged to abscond and wander. In June or July this Year, the Earl of Hume sent his Merse Militia to their Houses, and rifled them, and drove away all the Cattle they could reach. And Two Days after Seventy Horsemen came under Cloud of Night upon them, continued all Night, and destroyed all the Foot had left committing great Severities upon the Women who were in the Houses, particularly upon Gilbert's Wife, when she offered to detain from them some wearing Clothes of her own, which, she said, Men had no Use for; they seized her and put lighted Matches twixt her Fingers, and grievously tormented her and several others.

Early next Morning they searched the Fields about the House, and seized Gilbert Milroy's Brother William, with a Servant of about Sixteen Years of Age, who were lying hid among the Corn, and carried them Prisoners to Monnigaff. They likewise took with them the Remains of the Cattle, and Household-stuff which had been put out of the Way before.

The Number of Cattle taken from them at both Times, was eighty black Cattle, besides a great many young ones which were with them, not numbred, Twenty Four Score of Sheep, Eight Horses and Mares, some of them worth an hundred Pounds. The Destruction of Corns by eating, treading down, and their frequent ranging the Fields, cannot be computed; and what was not destroyed their Families durst not stay to reap, and so it was intirely lost: Their Crop was Twenty Four Bolls of Sowing each, of Galloway Measure.

Next Day Gilbert and William were brought before the Earl of Hume at Monnigaff, and were examined as to their keeping the Church, Converse with Whigs, and who among their Neighbours used to reset them. When they declined to answer upon those Points, they were put to the now ordinary Torture of lighted Matches betwixt their Fingers, but through God's Grace they endured all, and would make no Discoveries.

Here they were kept Six Days, and every Day threatned with present Death, if they would not comply, conform, and delate such whom they knew in the Neighbourhood did reset persecuted People.

As the Severities of the Officers and Commanders were great, so the Impiety of the common Soldiers deserves our Notice. Gilbert Milroy's Wife was come to Monnigaff to wait upon her Husband; she had gone out to the Fields to pray, and one of the Soldiers overhearing this good Woman, came up to her, and drawing his Sword threatned to kill her for praying; however he was restrained, and only brought her Prisoner to the Captain of the Guard, bawling out against her Prayers, and swearing they were Treason. The Captain saw good to dismiss her.

Her Husband and his Brother with several others, were carried under a Guard to the Church of Bar, tied together Two and Two, like Beasts for the Slaughter; there they were kept Three Days and examined by Major-general Drummond, who hector'd and threatned them terribly, telling them, if they would not comply, and inform where the Whigs haunted, and who used to reset them, he would send their Dittay with them, so that they should be hanged without an Assize as soon as they came to Edinburgh: But nothing prevailed upon them to act against their Conscience.

Thereafter they were sent to Hamiltoun, where they stayed one Night, and from thence were carried to Edinburgh, and imprisoned at Holy-rood-house, all the rest of the Prisons being fully packed.

There they were examined by some of the Counsellors and the Advocate, as to their not keeping the Church, their haunting Field-meetings, keeping Company with Rebels, and as to their Knowledge of the Persons who used to reset such; and not answering their Interrogatories to Satisfaction, they were severely enough handled.

Mr. James Colquhoun, Episcopal Minister at Penningham, had no small Share in their being thus treated. Gilbert Milroy found Means to treat with him when he was apprehended, and sent him a good Wedder upon his Promise to speak and act in his Favours. Gilbert's Wife afterwards went to Mr. Colquhoun, and asked a Line in her Husband's Favours; accordingly, he wrote a Letter and sealed it, giving it to herself to carry in with her to Edinburgh. In this Line, instead of acting in the Prisoner's Favours, he informed the Judges that he was a disloyal Person of rebellious Principles.

This, together with their refusing to comply and swear the present Oaths, brought on their Sentence, which was to have their Ears cut off, and to be banished for Ten Years; and when their Sentence was intimated, they were put in the Iron-house. In a few Days some of the Counsellors came in to them with a Chirurgeon, who cut off the Ears of all the Prisoners who came from Monnigaff, except Gilbert Milroy, who was then so fatigued and weak, that he appeared to be in a dying Condition; and after the Chirurgeon had his Scissors about his Ear, he passed him as a dying Man.

Since I have brought them this far, I shall go through their Troubles, and place them here all together, as a flaming Instance of the Rigidity of this Period, toward Persons who had never carried Arms against the Government, or been in any Opposition to it, merely for their Opinion, and refusing what they reckoned an unlawful Oath; and from those attested Relations the Reader will easily form a Notion of the heavy Sufferings of many who were thus dealt with, of whom no Accounts are now preserved.

About Five or Six Days thereafter, Gilbert Milroy with the rest of the sentenced Prisoners in the Iron-house, were taken out, and Six and Six of them tied together, and such of them as were not able to walk, which was the Case of several, were carried upon Carts to New-haven, put into a Ship lying there, and thrust under Deck, Two and Two of them fettered together, to the Number of an Hundred and Ninety.

While at Sea, they were kept close together Night and Day under great Distress, for Want of fresh Air, starved with Hunger, and tormented with Thirst, so that several of them were put to drink their own Urine, and Two and thirty of them died. They were Three Months and Three Days at Sea, and had no Favour shewn them by the Master of the Ship or Seamen.

When they landed at Port Royal in Jamaica, they were put in an open Prison, and had very much Friendship shewn them from several People in the Island; particularly by one Mr. Hicks

Hicks, who was afterwards in this Popish Reign prosecuted at Law, and vexed by evil minded Persons, for shewing Kindness to those suffering People. After Ten Days Continuance in open Prison, they were sold to be Slaves, and the Money paid for them was given to Sir Philip Howard, who had got a Gift of them from the King. 1685.

Gilbert Milroy suffered very hard Things in Jamaica, after he was sold. His Master would have him to work on the Lord's Day; this he peremptorily refused. After he had been beat several Times, one Day his Master drew his Sword, and had well nigh killed him; but afterwards finding him faithful and conscientious, and very diligent, he altered his Way, and made him Overseer of all his Negroes. The Blacks mortally hated him for his Fidelity to his Master, and made various Attempts to murder him. One of them struck him on the Head with a long Pole, whereby he lay dead for some Time, and lost a great deal of Blood, so that ever since he is a little paralytick. At another Time he was poisoned by another of the Negroes, but was saved by timely Application of Antidotes. In short, he was continually in Hazard of his Life by those Savages.

Many of the Prisoners died in their Bondage, but Gilbert lived till the happy Revolution, and then was liberate, and came safe home to his Wife and Relations; and when my Account was written December 1710. he was alive, a very useful Member of the Session of Kirkcowan, in the Presbytery of Wigtoun.

Providences were very closely observed by him, and he kept an exact Account of the Lord's Way with him in Writing, out of which the above Particulars are taken; and he had very singular Steps of Providence to remark, as to the Lord's Methods with the Persons concerned in the Ship which carried him and the rest to Jamaica, and such as were active in their Hardships and Troubles, some of which will not be unacceptable to the serious Reader.

He notices, that Sir Philip Howard an English Gentleman, who procured a Gift of the Hundred and Ninety Prisoners from King James, and designed to come over to Port Royal, never had the Satisfaction of enjoying the Price of their Liberty; just when taking his Leave of his Friends and Companions, and coming over the Thames, he fell down 'twixt Two Ships, and perished.

When they were at Sea on their Voyage to Jamaica, he observes, that about Forty of the Soldiers and Crew in the Vessel, who were so very cruel to them poor Prisoners, turned mad, and leaped over Board, and many others of them were trysted with a pestilential Fever.

The Master of the Ship, Mr. Evans, fell sick, and his Body gradually rotted away before his Death, so that no Body almost could come near him; and it would seem he had some Terror likewise upon his Mind for the Hardships he had done to the Prisoners, for he called for several of them, and begged them to forgive him, and pray to the Lord for him, which they very cheerfully did.

He remarks lastly, that this Ship wherein they were carried to Jamaica, was sold for Three hundred Pounds Sterling, and lost in her Voyage homeward; and he who commanded in her, William Love, was brought to such Misery, as the said Gilbert was informed when he came home 1690. that he was become Under-cook in a Man of War.

To end this Section, the Troubles of the Country were really inexpressible by the violent pushing of this Oath in January and February this Year. The Imposition of it was much more rigid in some Places than others. Where the Heritors were not for Severities, and there happened no Soldiers to come, Things went tolerably easy: But in most Places of the South and West it was urged most unaccountably upon Lass and Lad, young and old; and Multitudes of poor Women were sent to the Plantations, several of them from their Children and small Families, for no other Reason but their refusing it.

However, it is noticed by some, that in the Event, this Method increased the suffering Party, and the Number of Wanderers; for it was crammed down with such Haste and Violence, that many through present Fear fell in with it; and afterwards, when they came to be affected with their Sin in so taking it, they quit Conformity altogether, and joyned with the persecuted Party.

Providence put a Stop in part to this general Violence, by King Charles's Death; and the Imposition of this Oath slackned a little toward the End of February. The Murders in cold Blood increased rather after the King's Death, for some Months; but the universal pressing of the Oath ceased, tho' still this was carried on by the Soldiers throughout this Year, and even afterwards, as we shall hear.

S E C T. II.

Of the Procedure of the Council and their Committees, till the King's Death.

Matter of this Section.

THE Death of King Charles II. falling in February 6. this Year, makes it not unfit that I give the Persecution of Presbyterians by the Council, in Two Sections; and here I begin with what past in Council before that remarkable Event, tho' the Consequences of this will lead me to some Things which happened some little Time after this. I begin with the Effects of the Council-commissions with Justiciary Power, granted, as we have seen, December 30. last Year, in the different Shires; and then I shall insert what I meet with in the Council-registers this Year.

Terrible Nature of the Courts held by Commission, January and February
this Year.

By the Powers and Instructions above insert, granted to such as constituted those terrible Courts, we may easily perceive how frightful they were to the southern and western Shires. They were horrid Inquisitions, and in several Things they went even beyond their severe Instructions: While the Soldiers were almost every Week murdering some in the Fields, those Commissioners, or any Two of them, had the Power of Life and Death in their Hand, and were to pick up any who were overlooked at former Courts, and went back as far as Bothwell and Pentland, yea, even the Restoration, for Nonconformity.

They were likewise a Kind of Precognition before the Parliament met.

We may likewise consider those Courts as a Kind of Precognition before the Parliament sat down. The Commissioners were to gather up all that could be found against the Gentlemen in Prison, in the Close of the last Year, and others, who, we heard, were cited before the ensuing Parliament, in order to Forfeiture. They were ordained to meet, January 15. and had different Sessions in January and February. There were no Registers kept of their Procedure, as far as I know; and it is but a lame Account I can give of what they did, from a few Hints come to my Hand. One Instance or Two from Dumbarton and Renfrew Shires, may suffice.

John Zuil of Darleith his Suffrages from the Court at Dumbarton.

To begin with the Commission for Dumbarton. In February, Orbistoun, Major Arnot, and the other Commissioners, met; and, among many others, they had before them that worthy Gentleman John Zuil of Darleith, whose Treatment I shall give from an attested Account I have from one of his nearest Relations, who knew all the Circumstances of it.

Darleith had been cited in October, and not compearing by reason of Sickness, he was denounced. At this Court he appeared, though he remained sickly, and very much indisposed, and was fined in a Thousand pounds Sterling, merely because he refused to depone upon his Libel as to Reset and Converse, and for his Refusal of the Test offered to him: He was cast into Prison in the Castle of Dumbarton, to continue there till he paid his whole Fine.

In March thereafter, his Lady fell ill of a Fever, whereof she died; and though it was but a small Distance from the Castle, her Husband, for a good while, was not suffered to come out to see his dying Wife. At length, his Son Robert Zuil, since the Revolution Bailie and Dean of Gild in the City of Glasgow, with his Son in Law, were admitted to give Bond with himself, for a Thousand Pounds Sterling, that he should return to Prison in Four Days after the Interment; for this mighty Favour was not allowed till the Lady was dead, and he was denied the Satisfaction of seeing her.

He returned at the Time appointed, and was continued close Prisoner Eighteen or Twenty Months, till the Persecution slackned a little. However, by this harsh Treatment, and Want of Accommodation in Prison, this excellent Gentleman contracted a Consumption, whereof he died January 1688.

Decreet against him, Kilmahew, and John Campbell of Carrick,
&c.

Since writing what is above, I have sent me the just Extract of a Decreet, past at this Court, which deserves a Room here, and it relates to a good many others besides Darleith. At Dumbarton, February 19. 1685. Sederunt, William Hamilton of Orbistoun, Sheriff-principal, Humphrey Colquhoun Fiar of Luss, Major George Arnot Lieutenant-governor of Dumbarton Castle, and Archibald Mauley of Ardincaple, Commissioners of Council and Justiciary. The which Day, anent the Libel pursued by his Majesty's Advocate, and Thomas Wallace Sheriff-clerk, having Commission from him before the said Commissioners, against John Campbel of Carrick, and Christian Elliot his Spouse, John Zuil of Darleith, and Anna Fisher his Spouse, John Napier of Kilmahew, and Lillias Colquhoun his Spouse, Isobel Buchanan Relict of umquhile Archibald Buchanan of Drumhead, Claud Hamilton of Barns, and Stuart his Spouse, Hugh Crawford of Cloverhill, and Hamilton his Spouse, John Douglas of Mains, and Hamilton his Spouse, William Colquhoun of Craigtoun, and Stirling his Spouse, William Semple of Dalmock, and and Dennistoun his Spouse, and William Noble Fiar of Ardardan. The Commissioners foresaid, having seen and considered the Libel, and Acts of Parliament whereupon the same is founded, together with the forenamed Persons Defenders, their Valuations; and the foresaid Libel being found relevant, and admitted to the foresaid Pursuer's Probation, and by him referred to the haill Defenders Oaths, DECERN as follows, viz. the said John Napier of Kilmahew, for his Noncompearance, is holden as confest, and is fined in the Sum of Two thousand Pounds, Sterling Money of England, for himself and his Lady; John Zuil in a Thousand Pounds Sterling, having appeared and confessed Two Years withdrawing from his Parish-church, since the Indemnity, as likewise an House-conventicle, and other Church-disorders, he refusing to give a Testimony of Loyalty by taking the Test, when required by the Commissioners; also, fine the said John Campbell of Carrick, for himself and his Lady, in the Sum of Fifteen hundred Pounds, because of his Contumacy in not compearing when lawfully cited, at which Day his Spouse Christian Elliot compeared, and acknowledged she had heard outed and unlicensed Ministers preach and expound Scripture in her Husband's House several Times, but cannot be positive how oft; and the foresaid Isobel Buchanan in a Hundred Pounds Sterling: And ordain the Magistrates of Dumbarton to imprison them instantly, or when apprehended, till they pay the said Sums, or otherwise give Satisfaction to the noble and potent Princee William Duke of Queensberry, Lord High Treasurer. For which this shall be to them or any of them a sufficient Warrant.

Let me go over the River Clyde to the Shire of Renfrew, and we shall yet meet with greater Severities. Most part of the Presbyterian Gentlemen of that Shire we left in Prison at Edinburgh last Year, so that the Commissioners there, had only some meaner Persons to exercise their Severities upon.

The Commissioners in Renfrew Shire.

Upon the 3 of February, I find John Park and James Algie executed at the Cross of Paisley, by Sentence of the Commissioners for this Shire. I have a distinct Account of them from the late Reverend Mr. Matthew Crawford Minister at Eastwood, where they lived, whose Piety and Learning make his Memory savoury to all who knew him.

They condemned and execute John Park and James Algie in Eastwood, Feb. 3.

Those Two Men lived in Kennishead in the foresaid Parish, and were joynt Tenants in a Bit of Land there. I am informed that James Algie was an ordinary Conformist, and heard the Episcopal Minister till within a few Weeks before this, when through the Influence of the other he gave it over.

Occasion of their being taken.

It is certain that both of them gave over that Land they had joyntly a Tack of, upon some Reason or other, which one who had been instrumental in bringing them thither took very ill, and drove his Resentments so far, as to inform against them, and sent a Nephew of his upon the Lord's Day, February 1. with a Letter to Mr. John Cochran of Fergusley at Paisley, Bailly of the Regality of Darnley, under which they lived, informing him, that those Two were Persons of rebellious Principles, disowned the King's Authority, and defended the Declaration of the Societies, adding, that it was his Business, as Judge ordinary, to notice them as he would be answerable.

The Bearer of the Letter was put in close Custody until the Forenoon's Sermon was over, and then a Party of Soldiers were ordered out, and the Two Men were seized in their own House just when about Family Worship, and carried down to Paisley that Night, and examined there upon the common Interrogatories. In which they not giving full Satisfaction, were left in Prison. And the Commissioners having a Justiciary Power for that Shire, met on Tuesday, and sentenced them in the Forenoon, and they were executed that same Day about Two of the Clock.

While they were in Prison, Mr. James Hay, afterwards Minister at Kilsyth since the Revolution, was sent to them by Mr. Matthew Crawford, who was much concerned in them, being some way Part of his Charge, but being denounced durst not go himself. Upon Conversation with them, he found they knew very little as to the debatable Points upon which they had been interrogate, only they had lately drunk in some of the Tenets of those who denied the King's Authority: But upon Conversation and further Instruction, they appeared very willing to quit them. And after some Pains taken upon them, they came to be satisfied to take the Abjuration Oath.

By Pains taken upon them in Prison they are brought to consent to take the Abjuration.

But it seems their Death was resolved on, whatever Condescensions they should make. And when an Offer was made, in their Name, in open Court, that they would swear the Oath required in the Council's Proclamation, the Laird of Orbistoun, who now managed Matters here and in Dumbarton Shire, according to the bloody imposing Spirit of the Times, answered, directing himself to the Two Pannels, The Abjuration Oath shall not save you; unless you take the Test, you shall hang presently.

This is offered in their Name, but the Test is pressed on them.

The Two plain good Men, having a just Abhorrence at the Test, replied, If to save our Lives we must take the Test, and the Abjuration will not save us, we will take no Oaths at all. And upon this qualified Refusal of the Abjuration, they were sentenced to die presently. Had the poor Men peremptorily demanded the Benefit of the Abjuration, even by the then

Upon the Refusal of which they are sentenced.

1685: Laws they could not have taken their Life, for they had no Facts at all against them, and the Test could not in Law be required of them; but they had neither Skill nor Courage to plead before Courts, and no Lawyers were allowed to argue for them.

This made the fore-said Gentleman, one of their Judges, after the Sentence was passed, boast in the Wickedness, and vauntingly say, They thought to have cheated the Judges, but by I have tricked them. So dreadful was the Thirst after innocent Blood in some entrusted by the Government with the Execution of the present iniquous Laws.

I have given a particular Detail of this Matter, because my Accounts are from Persons of the best Credit, who had Occasion to know it exactly, and it is a melancholy Proof of the Stretches made by the Executors of the wicked Laws now in Force, even beyond their own bloody Rules.

And executed
that same Day.

Those Two pious Youths were executed that same Day, within a few Hours of their Sentence, I might have said, of their apprehending, and they ly buried near Paisly. If it were worth while to remark it, this may serve to correct a double Mistake in the Account of these Two Men, in the Cloud of Witnesses, Pag. 286. that they are buried in the Parish of Eastwood, and that they suffered for refusing the Abjuration, which ought to have been qualified as above.

At their Burial
the Soldiers attempt to force People to approve of their Death.

I am informed by some yet alive, who were present at their Execution and Burial, that the Soldiers there present endeavoured to make the People who concerned themselves in their Burial, to approve of their Death, and declare they died justly, threatening them with present Imprisonment if they did not so, which is a new Instance of the Barbarity of this Period.

Unaccountable Severity to Robert King in Shaw-mill that same Day.

Another Instance of unaccountable Severity at this Court, upon the same Day, was in the Case of Robert King Miller at Poliock-shaws, in the same Parish of Eastwood, which may let us in to a further View of the Treatment Country People met with at those Courts.

Who had been formerly fined.

This good Man died but lately in a good old Age, and I have several Times had the Accounts of his severe Treatment from himself. Before this he had been twice fined for mere Nonconformity, in Forty Pounds Scots, and at both Times much more than the Sum was exacted by the Soldiers when they came upon him at different Times.

Remarkable
Firmness in his Wife Janet Scouler.

The Firmness and Composure of his Wife Janet Scouler, under the Severities of the Soldiers, was truly remarkable, and in my Opinion deserves a Room here. This excellent Woman was far beyond the common Size of Country People, for good Sense and solid Knowledge, and was really extraordinary for serious exercising Religion. I could insert several very singular Instances of it in her, and of the Lord's Manifestations of his Covenant to her, were this a Place for it.

One Day a Party of Soldiers came to their House and rifled it, taking away Two or Three Horses, and Five or Six Cows, and had plundered the House of any Thing portable. When they were doing all this, Janet was perfectly easy and composed, not in the least ruffled, so that the Soldiers could not but take notice of it. When the Cattle were driving along the Shaw-bridge, at the End of which their House was, Janet came to the Door, and looked after them. One of the Soldiers observing her, and being a little more merciful than the rest, turned about and said, Poor Woman, I pity thee. Janet answered him with a great deal of Gravity and Cheerfulness, Poor, said she, I am not poor, you cannot make me poor, God is my Portion, and you cannot make me poor. This was to glory in her Tribulation, and to rejoice at all Times, and bless the Lord continually.

Robert was carried Prisoner
Feb. 3. to Paisly.

To return to her Husband; a Party of Soldiers upon the 3 of February pretty early, came to his House, and brought him down Prisoner to Paisly. Nothing could ever be laid to his Charge but mere Nonconformity, he having never born Arms. He was presented before the Commissioners met upon the former Occasion, whose Severity was chiefly owing to the Violence of the Gentleman last named.

What passed
before the Commissioners.

When Robert King is before them, he was interrogate, if the Death of the Archbishop was Murder. He answered, he did not understand the Matter so far, as to determine in it. Again he was asked, if the King sinned in rescinding the Covenant. He told them, he would not answer to such Questions as these. After they had put several more to him, they put the Test to him, which he peremptorily refused.

In the Time of his Examination, the Two forenamed young Men, his Neighbours and Acquaintances, were hanging upon the Gibbet, before the Tolbooth of Paisly, where the Court sat. Robert was bid look upon these Two before the Window, and assured (the Threatning was illegal as well as barbarous) that if he took not the Test, immediately he would be knit up with them.

He refused for a good while. To fright him the more, they shut him up in a Corner of the Prison, permitting no Body but his Guard of Soldiers to be near him, and told him, he had but an Hour more to live; and the Trumpet was to be sounded thrice, and if he sat the third Summons at the expiring of the Hour, there was no Mercy for him. When he was sent off the first Blast was given, and in less than Half an Hour the next.

The poor Man, brought to this Pinch just from his Work, was much frightened, and no great Wonder, and fell into very great Confusion, and as he himself used to express it, was perfectly out of himself; and in his Fright, when warned before the last Sound of the Trumpet, he complied, and took the Test. This was Matter of heavy Vexation to him for many a Year; and the Lord gave him Repentance not to be repented of for this involuntary Fall, which was more the Sin of his Persecutors than his. This is a very affecting Instance of the Fury of this Time, and the barbarous Methods taken to bring poor People to Compliance with their Impositions.

I shall only add one other Instance of the Severity of this Court at Paisly, come to my Hand since writing what is above. Rolls of all the Inhabitants were called for, and because Thomas Crawford, then younger of Crawfords-burn, was not so timeous in giving a List of the Inhabitants of his Lands, as they would have had him, he is fined in an Hundred Pounds. Indeed it was afterwards remitted; and because Robert Shearer, Sailor in Crawfords-dyke, (yet alive) did not compare before them, the Commissioners ordered his Goods to be sequestrate, and his Wife to be imprisoned in Dumbarton Castle. The Execution of which was put upon their Master, the forementioned present Laird of Crawfords-burn; which invidious Work when he did not do, he was severely threatened to be represented to the Government; but this was happily prevented by Favour of the Lord Ross.

No further Accounts are come to my Hand of the Procedure of the Commissioners in other Shires, save those in the North, which will come in from the Council-registers, whence I come now to give a Detail of what concerns the Sufferers till the King's Death.

January 7. a Letter is read from the King, appointing the underwritten Noblemen and Gentlemen to be processed before the ensuing Parliament, and the Council form the following Act.

The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having a Letter from the King, dated Whitehall December 24. signifying, That his Majesty having indicted a Session of Parliament to meet at Edinburgh the 10 of March next to come; and seeing his Majesty's Royal Brother cannot stay so long, nor is it fit to keep the Members so long together, as Sixty Days may run from their first Meeting, before the Process, necessary to be raised against such as are accessory to the late treasonable Conspiracy, and other Crimes of Treason, can come in; and it having been ordinary in the Reigns of his Majesty's Royal Predecessors, to issue out Procellies in such Cases, for citing those who are to be accused; and therefore commanding his Advocate to raise Procellies before the said Session of Parliament, immediately at Sight hereof against the whole Persons aftermentioned, viz. Denholm of Westbiels, Stuart Son to Culnefs, Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, James Stuart Son to Sir James Stuart Provost of Edinburgh, the Lord Melvil, Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart, George Pringle of Torwoodlee, Andrew Fletcher of Saltoun, Hume of Bassenden, Hay of Park, Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, Walter Lockhart of Kirkcoun, Montgomery of Langshaw, John Weir of Newton, Mr. Gilbert Elliot Writer in Edinburgh, Campbel of Ardkinglass, Sir Hugh Campbel of Cesnock elder, Sir George Campbel younger thereof, the Heirs of the deceast Earl of Lowdon, the Heirs of the deceast Mr. Robert Martin, late Clerk to the Justice Court. The Lords give Warrant accordingly.

And January 9. I find, upon what Reason I know not, the Lords appoint the Advocate to begin a Process of Treason against Mr. Robert Martin, Mr. Gilbert Elliot, Mr. Robert Fergusson, Sir William Scot younger of Harden, Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, and Montgomery of Langshaw, notwithstanding they are cited to the Parliament. How far this is consistent with Rules and Forms, I leave to Lawyers to determine. We shall hear more of some of them just now from the Justiciary-registers.

January 8. the Council send a Commission North, and write the following Letter to the Bishop of Murray. 'My Lord, his Majesty's Privy Council having commissioned the Earls of Errol and Kintore, and Sir George Monro, to prosecute all Persons guilty of Church Disorders and other Crimes, in the Bounds betwixt Spey and Ness, including Strathispey and Abernethy, and their first Meeting to be at Elgin, the 22 of January instant, the Council have thought fit to recommend to your Lordship to advertise all your Ministers within the Bounds foresaid, to attend the said Commissioners the said Day, and to bring with them their Elders, and Lists of Persons guilty of Church Disorders, or suspect of Disaffection to the present established Government in Church or State, whereupon they are to depone. I am, &c.'

Perth Cancel.

And at the same Diet, they order my Lord Duffus, with the Militia Troop, to attend them; and January 9. their Commission is extended to Inverness, Ross, Cromarty, and Sutherland.

The Seed sown by the Banishments, after the first Introduction of Prelacy, of Mr. David Dickson, Mr. Robert Bruce, and others, and more lately by Ministers and Gentlemen banished thither by the high Commission, and by the Labours of Mrs. Hog, McGilligen, and others, were not yet worn out from that Country; and though there were but few comparatively with the West and South, yet there were more, than many imagine, dissatisfied with Prelacy and the present Methods. To bear down any such, that Commission is sent North.

The best and most satisfying Account I can give of this northern Commission is from the Registers, and I wish there had been as distinct Accounts of the rest there; but I find not one Word from any of them save this. Their Report is made to the Council, March 2. which, with the Council's Approbation of their Procedure, is as follows.

Report from the Commissioners for Murray.

Forasmuch as there being this Day given in to the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, the Address and Report following, of the Commissioners appointed by the King and Council, for pursuing and punishing of Delinquents within the District of Murray, as the same in it self, in Manner underwritten, at length bears. Follows the Tenor of the said Address and Report. Unto the Right Honourable, the Lord High Chancellor, the Lord High Treasurer, and remanent Lords of his Majesty's most honourable Privy Council, the Report of the Right honourable John Earl of Errol, and Lord High Constable of Scotland, John Earl of Kintore Lord Treasurer-depute, and Sir George Monro of Culrain, Commissioners of his Majesty's Privy Council and Justiciary, for the District of Murray, sheweth, That, in pursuance of the Commission and Instructions given to them, they, upon their first Arrival in Murray, issued forth Precepts for citing such disorderly Persons within the Shires of Banff, Ross, and Sutherland, (as being most remote) as were given them in their Instructions, and whereof they had got Information; and commanded the respective Sheriffs to cause summon all the other disorderly Persons, within these Shires, to appear at a certain Day. The Lords having proclaimed Protection to all Persons concerned, they discharged any to go out of the District without their Licence, and ordained all who came in to the District from the South Hand, to appear before them, and produce their Letters and Papers, and be examined. The Lords caused make up complete Lists of all the Heritors, Liferenters, and Wadsetters, within the District, and allowed them to meet and make Address of what they would offer for the Security of the Peace and Government; and accordingly, they all unanimously gave in a very loyal Address, and voluntary Offer of Three Months Supply to his Majesty, and the Burghs gave in the same. The Heritors likewise, and Burghs within the District, did all unanimously sign a Bond for securing the publick Peace, and for their regular Living. The Heritors also and Burghesses did take and swear the Test, and Oath of Allegiance, and asserted his Majesty's Prerogatives, except a few Heritors to whom the Lords thought fit not to tender the same at that Time, but who appeared to be willing to take it, and some loyal Persons absent on Excuses. The Lords did very strictly examine all the Ministers and Elders within the District, with several Persons of Honour and Loyalty, anent the Condition and State of the Country, and the disaffected and disorderly Persons therein, and libelled all Persons delated, banished some, fined others, and remitted a few to the Council, a List of all whom is herewith given in. The Lords were at much Pains, and took great Trial anent James Nimmo, Mr. Robert Martin, Pitgavie, and Park Hay, and anent the Plot, and contributing Money, and doing Favours to Rebels. The Lords ordered to imprison the Laird of Fowlis elder, (a disorderly Person not able to travel) at Tayn, and the Laird of Fowlis younger at Inverness, in case he refused the Bond of Peace; and gave Orders to apprehend, and send Mr. William Mackay, a vagrant Preacher in Sutherland, Prisoner to Edinburgh. The Lords cleansed the Country of all outed Ministers and vagrant Preachers, and banished Four of them for not taking the Oath of Allegiance, keeping Conventicles, and refusing to keep the Kirk, and fined one of them, being an Heritor, in Ten thousand Merks, and ordered them to be transported Prisoners to Edinburgh. The Lords ordered to apprehend the few Delinquents that were absent, and to commit them to Prison till they should sign the Bond of Peace and Regularity, and engage to keep the Kirk in Time coming. There being a good many Commons, and very mean People, delated and libelled for Church Disorders and Irregularities, and being all formerly fined, and almost all of them since regular, and the few had not been so, having sworn to keep the Kirk, and their Masters and Husbands having engaged for them, the Lords assolied them, and left Orders with the respective Sheriffs to put the Laws vigorously to Execution, against all Church-dissenters, and especially against such as were formerly disorderly, and were now engaged to live regularly, and to report their Diligence to the Council. The Militia Regiment and Troop did attend the Lords, whom they did view, and caused put in Order. The Bishop and Clergy of the Diocese of Murray, attended the Lords in a Body, and gave them their hearty Thanks for the great Pains and Diligence they had used to the Good and Encouragement of the Church and Clergy in that Place, and begged the Lords would allow them to represent their Sense and Gratitude thereof to the Lords of his Majesty's most most honourable Privy Council. Follows the List of the Persons banished, viz. Mr. James Urquhart, Mr. John Stuart, Mr. Alexander Dunbar, Mr. George Meldrum Ministers, Alexander and Mark Mavers Portioners of Urquhart, Donald and Andrew Monro's of Elgin, Alexander Monro sometime of Main; likeas a married Woman, Jean Taylor a Servant. List of the Persons fined, viz. the Laird of Grant in the Sum of Forty two thousand five hundred Pounds Scots, the Laird of Brody in Twenty four thousand Pounds, the Laird of Lethin in Forty thousand Pounds, Francis Brody of Miltoun in Ten thousand Pounds, Francis Brody of Windyhill in Three thousand three hundred thirty three Pounds, six Shillings and eight Penies, Mr. James Brody in Kinlee, in Three hundred thirty three Pounds, six Shillings eight Penies, Mark Maver Portioner of Urquhart, banished, and fined in Three hundred Pounds, Mr. George Meldrum of Crombie, banished, and fined in Six thousand six hundred sixty six Pounds, thirteen Shillings four Penies. Summa is One hundred and twenty thousand, nine hundred thirty three Pounds, Six Shillings, Eight Penies Scots. List of Persons cited to appear when called, viz. Thomas Dunbar of Grange, the Laird of Innes younger, William Brody of Coltsfield, William Brody of Whitewray, and Mr. Robert Donaldson in Arr. Nota. The Lords were at much Pains, and took great Enquiry anent a fiery Cross sent through the Country, to alarm the People, and hinder them to go out to the King's Host, against the Rebels at Bothwell-bridge; and as anent a Combination and Club, kept for carrying on and bringing in an Indulgence to Murray, the Depositions anent all which are herewith reported. Subscribed, Kintore, for himself, in name of the Earl of Errol, and Sir George Monro. And whereas the Consideration of the said Report, having been remitted to a Committee of the Council's Number, and they having, conform to the Reference made to them this Day, made Report thereanent, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, upon Consideration of the foresaid Address, and Report of the said Commissioners, with the Report of their own Committee aforesaid, do thereby declare, that they are very well satisfied with their Procedure and Diligence, and do approve thereof; and besides, did return their hearty Thanks to the Earl of Kintore, for himself and the other Commissioners, upon that account.

No Observations are necessary upon such Procedure against so many excellent Gentlemen; the Unaccountableness of this Treatment will appear much better from a Petition given in to the Council by the Laird of Grant, in April, desiring that Part of the Commissioners Sentence against him may be recognised, than from any thing I can say; and therefore I shall add it here, with the Council's Refusal, which is another Evidence of the Severity of this Period.

Petition Laird of Grant, for reviling the Sentence against him, with the Council's Act refusing thus.

E Edinburgh, April 16. Anent the Petition presented by Ludovick Grant of Freughie, shewing, That the Petitioner is charged by virtue of Letters of Horning, rait at the Instance of his Majesty's Cashkeeper, to make Payment to him of the Sum of Forty two thousand five hundred Pounds, Scots Money, conform to a Decreet obtained at the Instance of his Majesty's Advocate, against the Petitioner, before the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Privy Council, met at Elgin the Eleventh Day of February, One thousand six hundred and eighty five Years, within Fifteen Days next after the Charge, &c. And since the said Decreet is founded upon thir Grounds, viz. That the Petitioner's Wife confessed Two Years and a Half's withdrawing from the Ordinances, the having and keeping an unlicensed Chaplain, hearing outed Ministers preach several Times, and that the Petitioner confessed the keeping of the said unlicensed Minister, and hearing an outed Minister preach once, and pray several Times; it was humbly craved, that his Grace and the Council might resume the Consideration of the said Decreet, upon thir Grounds, 1mo. The Petitioner, with all Submission, conceives, that by no former Law, an Husband is declared liable for his Wife's withdrawing from the Ordinances. 2do. It is notourly known, that the Parish Church was vacant for one Year and an Half of the Time libelled, that the next Parish Kirk is Six or Seven Miles distant, and that the Petitioner's Wife, for the most Part of the remanent Time, was valetudinary, and given over by Physicians. 3tio. The Petitioner's Wife deponed expressly, That it was never her Principle to abstain from hearing upon the account of any Disloyalty, Disrespect, or Disaffection to the Government, and before and after the Time libelled she is a constant Hearer. 4to. It cannot be pretended, that any Conventicle was ever holden in any House or Fields belonging to the Petitioner, and neither the Petitioner nor his Wife did even hear any outed Minister preach, pray, except in the House of Lethin, when the Lady Lethin (the Petitioner's Mother in Law) was on Deathbed, there being none present but Five or Six of the same Family, which Hearing was merely accidental, without any Design, the Petitioner and his Wife being, by the Ties of Nature and Charity, obliged to attend their said dying Mother, in Time of her Sickness. 5to. Albeit the Petitioner and his Wife, upon Oath confessed, That Mr. Alexander Frazer, (who in the Decreet is called an unlicensed Chaplain) was their Servant, yet the said Mr. Alexander Frazer was an actual Minister under Bishops, who took the Oath of Allegiance, and subscribed the Declaration against the Covenant, being instituted by Bishop Murdo Mackenzie, into the Kirk of Daviot, which is one of the mensal Kirks of the Diocese of Murray, and thereafter dimitted his Charge by reason of his Infirmary, nor was he ever the Petitioner's fee'd Servant, but a Tenant, and was actually removed before the Act of Parliament ordaining Chaplains to take the Test, and before the Proclamation dated the Fourth Day of June 1683. discharging Chaplains in any Family without Licence from the Ordinary, neither was he ever pursued, charged, or sentenced, for any Cause whatsoever to this Hour; and in regard the Petitioner is most desirous, and cheerfully offers to give all the Evidences and Demonstrations of his Loyalty and Affection to the Government that can be demanded, and to assert the same with the deepest Protestations imaginable, and from which no Event whatsoever can be able to discharge him, declaring from his Heart all Thoughts in the contrary most nauseous and abominable; and therefore humbly supplicating that his Grace and remanent Lords of Council, would revise the said Decree, Grounds, and Warrants thereof, and in the mean Time stop further Procedure, it being hoped by the Petitioner, upon Perusal of the whole Matter, he would be found totally innocent. Which Petition being upon the 16 Day of April instant read in Council, his Majesty's high Commissioner and Lords of Council did remit to a Committee of the Council's Number, to consider thereof, and Decree foresaid for the District of Murray, and Grounds and Warrants of the same, and to hear the Earls of Errol and Kintore, Two of these Commissioners in the Affair, and to report, (Execution in the mean Time against the Petitioner being sisted.) And the said Committee having, upon the 18 of the said Month, met and called the Laird of Grant Petitioner, and heard him and his Advocates, and considered the foresaid Petition and Reasons therein mentioned, together with the Oaths of the Petitioner and his Lady, before the said Commissioners, and this Day made their Report in the haill Matter, his Majesty's high Commissioner and Lords of Privy Council do find that the Lords Commissioners of the District of Murray, have proceeded legally, and conform to their Commission and Instructions, in fining the said Laird of Grant Petitioner, in the foresaid Sum of Forty two thousand and five hundred Pounds, Scots Money, and the Letters and Charges at the Instance of his Majesty's Cash-keeper, against the said Laird of Grant, orderly proceeded; and ordain the same to be put to further Execution, conform to the Tenor thereof, ay and while the said Fine be fully satisfied and paid.

Further Account of this Court in Murray, from a Letter to the Author.

After what I have already inserted, I need scarce add any Thing from private Hands; but that the Reader may have a full View of this fore Persecution, I shall subjoyn a particular Narrative sent me by a worthy Gentleman in Murray, upon whom the Reader may depend for the Truth of it. 'The Members of the criminal Court which sat at Elgin of Murray, in the Beginning of the 1685. were the Earls of Errol and Kintore, with Sir George Monro, commonly called Major-general. As soon as the Commissioners came to Town, they caused erect a new Gallows ad terrorem. Most of the Presbyterians in this Country were summoned before them, tho' they had no Crimes to charge them with, but Absence from the Kirk, and being at Conventicles; none here having been at Bothwell, or in any Thing termed Rebellion.'

Laird of Brody fined.

'They fined the Laird of Brody, this Brody's Grandfather, in Forty five thousand Merks, merely upon his having a Conventicle in his House. That Gentleman went to London to get, if possible, some reasonable Composition made for his Fine: After much Pains and Expence he was forced to give Bond for Twenty two thousand Merks, to one Colonel Maxwel a Papist, to whom that Sum was paid, and the Colonel's Acknowledgment of it is yet among the Papers of that Family.

Brody of Lethin.

'Alexander Brody of Lethin in Forty thousand Pounds, and a Fifth Part more in case it were not paid in a Year. All they had against him was, that he would not depone he had not heard a Presbyterian Minister preach. His Fine was gifted to the Scots Popish College at Doway; and an Adjudication was led against his Estate, which yet stands in the Register of Adjudications. A Composition was made, and a great Sum paid to the Earl of Perth; and this Lethin yet hath the Earl's Receipt, if I remember, for Thirty thousand Pounds, which he hath promised me to send to you, if needful.'

Brody of Miltoun.

'Francis Brody of Miltoun, on the same Score was fined in Nineteen thousand Pounds, which was near the Value of his Estate, then perfectly free. This was given to Gray of Crichy, who adjudged the Estate, as appears yet in the Registers. The happy Revolution delivered him and many others.'

Of Pigganvie.

'David Brody of Pigganvie, was fined in Eighteen thousand Pounds by Tannachie, who was Sheriff-depute under my Lord Down, made Sheriff of Murray by the King, the heritable Sheriff at that Time being removed, as judged to favour Presbyterians. His Crime was the same with the Two former. A good Part of his Fine was paid.'

Francis

Francis Brody of Windyhill, was fined in a Sum near the Value of his Estate, which being but small, he got it down. A great many others were called before this Court, and imprisoned in Elgin Tolbooth, and some of them fined, of which I cannot give the Particulars, as Mark Mavor, Donald Monro Baxter in Elgin, John Montfod Chamberlain to Park, Jean Brody Relict of Alexander Thomson Merchant in Elgin, Christian Lestly Daughter to Lestly of Aikenwall, Beatrix Brody Relict of Lestly of Aikenwall, and many others I cannot name, were put in Prison; but King Charles's Death falling in, the Court rose, and they were liberate. Mr. James Urquhart, Mr. Alexander Dunbar, and some other Ministers were sent South to Prison, and continued in the Bass and Blackness.

Of Windyhill and others

Mackenzie of Siddy, by virtue of a Council Warrant, did likewise persecute a great many honest People. Mr. Hay, and others in the west End of this Country suffered by him, and he made an unhappy End, being killed by Coil McDonald. I am, &c.

I return to the Council Proceedings. January 17. the Council order the Advocate to pursue the Parishioners of Anworth, for Affronts done to their Minister, and the Parish of Carsphairn, for the Murder of their Minister by some skulking Rebels. I know nothing anent the Affront done to the Minister of Anworth, and say no further about it. But the Murder of Mr. Peter Peirson at Carsphairn at the Manse there, is a Fact, whereof no just Account, as far as I know, hath been yet given to the publick; and this, with the Murder of Bishop Sharp, are generally charged upon Presbyterians as Proofs of their practising the hellish and Jesuitical Principle of Assassination. I have said enough already upon the first, and here I shall give a plain Account of the Matter of Fact at Carsphairn, which I have from a Gentleman of undoubted Credit, who had the Detail of this Matter from the Persons concerned in this Wickedness, and another concurring Narrative from John Mathison, a very judicious and worthy Elder in the Parish of Glencairn, lately dead, who had his Information likewise from the Persons present.

The Parishioners of Carsphairn pursued for the Murder of their Minister by some skulking Rebels. Some Account of Mr. Peirson's Murder.

The regular and orthodox Clergy, as they were now termed, in the southern Shires, had various Treatment from People in their Parishes, in a Proportion to their Temper and Management. The Clamours made about the Insults made upon them, with the Acts of Council thereanent, I have noticed upon the former Book.

It is certain, several of them, who were violent Instigators of the Persecution, and active Informers of the Persecutors, met with proportioned Treatment, in itself uncivil and rude enough; but none I can hear of were wounded, far less murdered, as is given out, save this Man at Carsphairn.

Some Notice hath been already taken of Mr. Peirson's violent Measures, and how serviceable he was to the Laird of Lag, and other violent Oppressors of the People of Carsphairn, and in this he came, in his narrower Sphere, the nearest the Primate who met with the same Fate, of any I have heard of.

He was a surly ill-natured Man, and horridly severe. Several of his Brethren about the Time of the Societies Declaration, had the Caution to retire for a little; but he would needs brave it out. By the many Murders in cold Blood in the Fields, and the severe Commotions and Orders given out against them, it is certain the Wanderers were exasperated more than ordinarily. And I much suspect some of them were put upon the Heights and Extremities they ran to, by some wicked People who mixed themselves with them; and we shall meet with somewhat of this in the Matter before us.

Mr. Peirson's Temper.

Mr. Peirson was an unmarried Man, very blustering and bold, and used openly to provoke the poor People, by saying in publick Companies, He feared none of the Whigs, nor any Thing else but Rats and Mice. He lived at the Manse alone, without so much as a Servant with him, and kept still a Number of Fire Arms charged in his Chamber. He was openly a Favourer of Popery, and gave shrewd enough Signs of his being popishly inclined, by defending not a few of their peculiar Tenets. One Time in particular, in the House of James M'Virk, in the Holm of Dalquhairn, he defended Purgatory openly, and some other such Doctrines; and frequently, in publick Companies, he maintained that Papists were much better Subjects than Presbyterians, and other Positions abundantly irritating. He was a notorious Informer and Instigator to all the Violences in that Country.

Those Things I do not at all notice to vindicate the Fact I am going to relate, for I abhor and detest it; but that the Reader may know the true State of this Matter, and what unwarrantable Provocations this ill Man gave. Those, with what preceeded it, are so far from vindicating this Attempt, that I do not so much as plead them as Alleviations, but only narrate them as vouched Matters of Fact, which went before this Attempt.

Towards the End of the last Year, some few of the Wanderers, who were upon their Hiding in that Neighbourhood, entred into a Concert, with an express Proviso of doing no Harm to Mr. Peirson's Person, to meet together and essay to force him to give a written Declaration, that he would forbear instigating their Enemies, and other violent Courses, and deter him from them in Time to come, still expressly declaring they would do him no bodily Harm.

Persons concerned in the Attack on him.

Accordingly there met at the House of John Clark in Muirbroke, Three Miles from the Kirk of Carphairn, James M<sup>c</sup>Michael Fowler to the Laird of Maxwelltown, Roger Padzen in the Parish of Sanquhar, Robert Mitchel in the Parish of New Cumnock, William Herron in the Parish of Glencarn, and other Accounts add, Watson, with some others; and one Night, having Notice that Mr. Peirson was at home, they came to the Manse, and sent those named above to desire Mr. Peirson to speak with some Friends, who were to do him no Harm. One Account says, and it is not inconsistent with the other, that Two of them who were sent, got in, and delivered the Commission, which put Mr. Peirson in a Rage, and drawing a broad Sword, and cocking a Gun or Pistol, he got 'twixt them and the Door; upon which they called, and M<sup>c</sup>Michael and Padzen came to the Door, and knocked. The other Account makes no Mention of this Circumstance, but says, when they knocked at the Door, Mr. Peirson opened it himself, and with Fury came out upon them with Arms; and James M<sup>c</sup>Michael, as he said, laying his Account with present Death if he had not done it, resolved, if he could, to be before Hand with him, and firing a Pistol at him, shot him dead in the Spot.

The rest at some Distance hearing a Noise, came running up, crying, Take no Lives; but it was too late. However, they expressed their Detestation of the Fact, and separated from the Four or Five whom they had sent up. This Account I have all Reason to believe is true Matter of Fact, and I have candidly set it down as it comes from Persons who were present, and may be depended upon.

Remarks upon this Murder.

The Body of Presbyterians are no manner of way concerned in it, and the wandering Sufferers who bore Arms, and distinguished themselves from the rest of the Presbyterians through the Nation, as soon as they heard of it, discharged any of the abovenamed Persons to be admitted to any of their Societies, and would not be in their Company; which was all the Testimony they could bear against what was done, and so this Fact can no more be charged even on that Party, than the personal Faults on the other Side can be laid to their Door.

I only remark further, that Mitchel, Herron, and M<sup>c</sup>Michael were all of them killed one way or other this Year, Watson, if he be the same Person we shall afterwards meet with, shewed himself to be a Spy sent in among the Wanderers, and a Tool of the other Side, and Roger Padzen, when cast off by the rest, went in to the Army, and in a very little Time was taken on to be a Dragoon in Captain Strachan's Troop, and by his after wicked Carriage, made it very probable, that all the Time he was among the Wanderers, he was under Pay, and informed their Enemies of their Haunts and lurking Places. This is the fullest Account I can give of this Matter, and I make no Question but the Hand of Joab, and the Influence of such Villains as mixed themselves in among the People upon their Hiding, had we full Accounts, would be found to be in those Things, that look worst, done by them.

Council's Letter January 28. to their Commissioners to process three Persons concerned in a Scuffle where Captain Urquhart was killed.

To return to the Registers, January 28. the Council direct a Letter to those they had commissioned for Wigtoun and Kirkcudbright, about their processing such who had killed Captain Urquhart, and some with him; I know no more about it than what is in the underwritten Letter. It seems to have been some Engagement some of the Wanderers had with the Captain and his Party, wherein, it seems, the Soldiers have been worsted. The Letter runs.

Right Honourable,

His Majesty's Privy Council being certainly informed, that Captain Urquhart hath been killed, and some others of his Majesty's Forces killed and wounded, by some desperate Rebels in your Bounds, who had the Boldness to attack them, whereof Three were taken alive and made Prisoners.

The Council thinking it fit that Justice may be done upon those notorious desperate Rebels, upon the Place, for greater Terror and Example to others, do therefore require you, immediately upon the Receipt of this, to proceed and do Justice on them according to your Commission, you being first convened to this Purpose by Colonel James Douglas Colonel of the Foot-guards, whom we have added to your Commission, and punish them according to Law and your Instructions. And where they shall be found guilty, you shall forthwith cause burn their Houses and the Materials thereof, and secure their Goods for his Majesty's Use. And particularly if you find any of those Rebels have been maliciously and wilfully reset at the Houses of Star or Loch-head lying towards Kilrine and Craig-malloch, enquire into it. Your punctual and exact Obedience is required.

PERTH.

An Act Feb. 3. classing the Prisoners.

Upon the 3 of February the Council make an Act classing the Prisoners, which will let us in a little to the Way of their Procedure at this Time; and therefore I insert it. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council resolve, that the Prisoners in the several Tolbooths, shall be classed as follows.

Those

Those already sentenced to the Plantations for not taking the Oath of Allegiance, and will now take the Test, be liberate.

That those who are not sentenced, and will take the Oath of Allegiance, be in another Class, and liberate upon Caution and enacting themselves to live regularly, and appear when called.

That those who were in the Rebellion, or will not disown the late treasonable Declaration of War, be in a third Class, and remitted to the Justices.

That those who refuse the Allegiance, be libelled before the Council in order to Banishment.

And in regard the Prisons are already crowded and thronged with those who are already banished, and will not take the Test, the said Lords order them to be liberate upon Caution, as follows, viz. The Heritors above an Hundred Merks Rent, upon Caution to be found by the Persons who shall transport them, under the Penalty of a Thousand Merks, to take them off the Kingdom betwixt and the first of May next. And in the mean Time until the said Day they shall live peaceably, and compear before the Council if called, under the same Penalty. And all others under the said Rent, to be liberate, as said is, on Caution for the Penalty of Five hundred Merks Scots for ilk one of them.

I do not find that this Act of Council brought any great Relief to the Prisoners. However in pursuance of it, a Committee is appointed to inspect the Prisons of Edinburgh and Canongate, and their Report follows in the Registers.

February 5. The Council, having considered the Report of their Committee appointed to consider the Case of the Prisoners in Edinburgh and the Canongate, give Order to liberate Five or Six who have taken the Test, as likewise some others not banished who take the Oath of Allegiance. John Mossman in Caldermoor is remitted to the Justices, in regard he will not abjure the late Declaration of War, and in regard there is a seditious Letter found with him. They ordain Quintin Dick and Robert Slofs, fined by the Commissioners at Air, and banished, Duncan Fergusson, John Kellie, Mr. William Wisheart, Mr. George Room, Alexander Heriot, John Wallet, John Malcolm, Andrew McKartney, and William Sprout, banished by the Council, James Kirkwood, and Alexander Wallace, under Sentence of Death by the Commissioners at Air, who all refuse the Abjuration or Test, to be sent to his Majesty's Plantations. And some others are to be processed in order to Banishment. And others are referred to further Examination.

Report of the Committee to consider the Case of the Prisoners.

John Mossman

Quintin Dick, and Robert Slofs

Mr. William Wisheart, Mr. George Room, with others are ordered to the Plantations.

But the King's Death falling in to Morrow, altered their Measures with many here named.

King's Death altered these Measures.

S E C T. III.

Of King Charles his Death, February 6. the Accession of his Brother, with the more general Procedure of the Council, during the following Part of this Year.

The great Turn of Affairs by the Death of King Charles II. falls now in my Way; and I shall give some short View of that, and the Duke of York's Accession, before I come to narrate what was done through this Year, by our Scots Council, under a Popish King.

Matter of this Section.

A deep-laid Plot of Hell and Rome, for overturning the Religion and Liberties of Britain and Ireland, and introducing Popery and Slavery, hath been making great Advances now for many Years: And ever since the Duke of York had the Management of Things at Court, in Conjunction with French Milles and Pensioners, this Design went on very fast. The English Nation took the Alarm, and roused themselves in brisk Efforts to exclude the Duke of York from succeeding; and more than once their noble Attempts this way were crushed, as hath been noticed.

The Succession of a Papist opposed by the English.

When thus the Succession of a Papist is secured, the Duke and his Party turned uneasy that their bloody Measures went so slowly on. In Scotland indeed every Thing was carried as they would have it, and nothing was stuck at to weaken the reformed Interest, destroy and banish the best Protestants, and to pave the Way for bare-fac'd Popery. And this Nation was so far sunk, that the Opposition made to those Measures was very inconsiderable. It was not so in England, and therefore it was seasonable, not to say necessary, for that Party, King Charles should die.

When that Opposition is not through, Papists gauge that their Designs go on so slowly.

Especially when the King began to open his Eyes a little before his Death.

Especially when the King's Eyes began to open towards the Beginning of this Year, and it appears more than probable, he had resolved to alter his Measures, and make himself easy all his Life. The Bill of Exclusion had been stopped by the French Court, who struck up a Bargain to give more Money upon refusing to pass the Bill, than had been offered for a Consent to it: And now that the Duke's Succession was safe, his uneasy Temper began to discover itself; he was advancing in Years, and there was no great Prospect of his having any Children, and all the Hopes of the Roman Catholics centred in him, and no Time was to be lost for ripening the grand and extensive Work they had to do: Therefore the Duke's Party at Court lost no Time, and concerted such Measures, as, when the King came to smell them, effectually awakened him, but too late! Some Changes were made. Lord Lucas had the important Command of the Tower given him, but enjoyed it not long. The Manner of his Death is not unknown; it was very sudden, and when the King heard of it, he said, God have Mercy upon me, I may be the next.

King Charles dies, Feb. 6. at Whitehall.

In a very few Days his Death followed, February 6. and that in such a Manner, and such Circumstances, as (to express it in the Words of one of our Sufferers) must remain a Pro-blem to Posterity, whether he died a natural Death, or was hastened to his Grave by Treachery. This same excellent Historian Dr. Wellwood, in his Memoirs, balances the Facts and Appearances upon both Sides, and to him I shall refer the Reader in this nice Point, and only add here the Account of it published by Authority, London Gazette, N<sup>o</sup>. 2006.

Account of it published by Authority.

Whitehall, February 6. 1685. On Munday last in the Morning, our gracious Sovereign King Charles II. was seized with a violent Fit, by which his Speech and Senses were for some Time taken from him, but, upon immediate Applications, he recovered to such a Condition, as gave some Hopes of his Recovery, till Wednesday Night, at which Time his Disease returning upon him with greater Violence, he expired this Day about Noon.

Duke of York proclaimed.

Upon this the Privy Council met, and the Duke of York is declared King. In the Proclamation he is declared, by his Brother's Death, their only lawful, lineal, and rightful Liege Lord James II. to whom they acknowledge all Faith and constant Obedience. A Phrase, in my Opinion, which needs an Explication, before it can be well applied to any Creature, much more by Protestants to a profest Papist.

Proclamation continuing all in Places of Trust under the late King, with a singular Clause.

The new King, that same Day, issues a Proclamation, with a pretty singular Parenthesis in it. All in Places of Trust under his Brother, are continued in his princely Wisdom and Care of the State, (reserving to his own Judgment hereafter, the Reformation and Redress of any Abuses in Misgovernment, upon due Knowledge and Examination thereof.) This Reservation I leave to the Reader to interpret; I can only do it from this Prince's After-practice, from whence we may gather, that when the Reformation and Redress of a Protestant Kingdom is left to a Popish Prince's own Judgment, it will be by raising a standing Army of Papists, reducing Charters, corrupting of the Universities, and other Methods well known and felt under this Reign.

At the first Meeting with the Privy Council, the King made a Declaration, which hath been more than once published, 'That he will endeavour to follow his Brother's Example, especially in his Clemency and Tenderness to his People. He observes, That he (the King) was reported to be for arbitrary Power, but that was not the only Story made of him; that he would endeavour to preserve the Government both in Church and State, as it is now by Law established; that he knows the Principles of the Church of England are for Monarchy, and its Members have shewn themselves good and loyal Subjects, therefore he would always take Care to support and defend it; that the Laws of England are sufficient to make the King as great a Monarch as he could wish; and as he will never depart from the just Rights and Prerogatives of the Crown, so he will never invade any Man's Property; that he had often ventured his Life in Defence of the Nation, and still would go as far as any Man, in preserving it in all its just Liberties.

Those Assurances, at the humble Suit (so it was concerted) of the Lords present, were made publick; and how well they were kept, the Historians of this Reign do largely enough shew us: And now when we have the infallible Commentary of an After-practice, we may safely conclude all was calculated to gull and cheat the Protestants of England.

This seems to be the Model and such the first and second Declaration are since formed.

For the Benefit of such as have not the Declaration by them, I have insert the Words of it, on which this natural Remark arises, That it appeareth in its very Phrases and Expressions, which are capable of more Senses than one, to have been the Model according to which the Declarations of his pretended and attainted Son are formed, which his Party have spread since King George's happy Accession to the Throne. And all sincere Protestants may easily conclude, that the last Professions are so much the less to be depended upon, than those of his Father, by how much his Obligations to those Lands have been less, and his Education more deeply Jesuitical and tyrannical.

Tho' a Papist the King takes the English Coronation Oath, probably with some Changes.

Besides this Declaration, Care was taken at London, that this King, Popish as he was, should take the English Coronation Oath, but with what Alterations and Changes I will not take upon me to say. Firm Protestants at this Time had a violent Suspicion of unfair Dealing in this Matter, and it was publicly asserted by the chief Baron Aitkins, upon no meaner meaner Occasion than his administering the Oaths to Sir William Ashurst Lord Mayor of London, 1693. 'That as Alterations were made by Bishop Laud, in striking out those Words which were a Part of the old English Coronation Oath, That the King should consent to such Laws as the People should choose, when he crowned King Charles I. so at the Coronation of the late King James II. there was much more struck out of the Coronation Oath, which might be well worth enquiring how it came about.' I doubt not the chief Baron had Reason for what he said so publickly.

Yea, the Jest of his good Inclinations towards the Church of England, and Liberties of the Nation, was carried so far in his Speech to the Parliament of that Nation, and he and they were like to be so well for some Time, that King James's Friends over the Water were brought to a Stand, so that one of the prime Ministers in France wrote over to the Ambassador at London, June 29. this Year, in Terms no lower than these. 'The King's Speech is of a Strain that looks quite contrary to what we expected. The King (of France) can scarce believe there is any Change in the Affections of that Prince, yet knows not what to make of that new Manner of expressing himself on so publick an Occasion. If he and his Parliament come to a cordial Trust in one another, it may probably change all the Measures we have been so long concerting for the Glory of our Monarch, and Establishment of the Catholic Religion.' But they were quickly eased of their Fears, and fully satisfied of King James's good Intentions. I must leave those Things to the English Historians.

And his Profession of Regard to the Church and Liberties of England, are carried so high in his after Speech to the Parliament, that France is alarmed thereby.

That I may return to Scotland, February 10. our Managers have an Express bearing the King's Death, and a Letter from the Secretaries with the Draught of a Proclamation to be published immediately. The Secretaries Letter I have inserted App. N<sup>o</sup>. 101. B. and need not make Remarks. On so extraordinary an Occasion we see the suffering Party are not forgot; and, it seems, the King's faithful Servants at Edinburgh, cannot be entrusted with the Form of the Proclamation, but it is sent down from London.

Letter from the Sec. Secretaries to the Council, giving Account of the King's Death. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 101. B.

That same Day, February 10. the Council publish the Proclamation, which is added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 102. It is singular enough, yet I need not make many Remarks upon it. Their Compliments run so high upon the late King, as to place him assuredly in Heaven. And to the present King, after a Recognition of his Title by an Order from himself, they take an Oath of Allegiance and Supremacy in the very Proclamation, and involve all present with themselves in those. Those Methods are new; only I am of Opinion, the Prelatick Hierarchy in Scotland is now at its right Fountain, when owning the absolute Supremacy of a Papist. I shall only notice further, that in the Registers after this and the Proclamation, the Chancellor stands before the Archbishop of St. Andrews.

In the Afternoon the Council, after they had taken the Oaths, write a most loyal Letter to the King. And February 12. they send up the Earl of Drumlanerk to congratulate the King upon his Accession, and condole the Death of his Brother. I have before me the congratulatory Address of the Town of Edinburgh upon this Occasion, with the King's Answer. Both are, in my Opinion, so flat, that they need not be preserved in this Collection.

Congratulatory on the Accession of the King's Accession.

It is more worth while to notice, that our Managers at Edinburgh took no Care to have the King taking our Scots Coronation Oath. For any Thing I know, he might have swallowed it as well as the English. His loyal Servants here did not give him the Trouble of it, either as being intirely satisfied with the King's good Intentions, or willing to go along with his Designs be what they would. The Loss was not very great to Scotland, since his Religion, which led him to keep no Faith with Hereticks, could have furnished him with a Dispensation from his Oath, tho' he had taken it.

Our Managers at Edinburgh take no Care about the King's swearing the Coronation Oath.

However, his never taking any Coronation Oath for Scotland, made a good many question his Right and Title to govern, and reckon him, abstracting from his Religion, which by our fundamental Laws incapacitates him to rule, King de facto, but never de jure. Yea, this made his Forfeiture very easy to our Convention of Estates, April 11. 1689. and they very justly declare and find, that

And his not taking the Oath may question his Right to govern.

'Whereas he being a profest Papist, did assume the regal Power, and acted as King, without ever taking the Oath required by Law, whereby the King at his Access to the Government is obliged to swear to maintain the Protestant Religion, and to rule the People according to the laudable Laws; and did, by Advice of wicked and evil Counsellors, invade the fundamental Constitution of the Kingdom, and altered it from a legal limited Monarchy, to a despotick Power, &c. and hath exercised the same to the Subversion of the Protestant Religion, and Liberties of the Kingdom, inverting all the Ends of Government, that by all this he hath forfeited the Right to the Crown, and the Throne is become vacant.'

Declaration of the Convention of Estates as to this, April 11. 1689.

Plain it is then, that in Scotland we needed not concern our selves with the Debates our Neighbours had about Abdication; as in England he was found to have abdicated, so in Scotland, being a profest Papist, and never having taken the Coronation Oath, he was found to have assumed the regal Power, and only to have acted as a King, and by our Scots Law he was never King de jure.

Thus the Wicked were snared in the Work of their own Hands. His Servants in Scotland, for so I may call them, being intirely at his Disposal, even under his Brother's Reign, projected to please their Matter, and unhinge our Constitution, by waving the King's taking the Coronation Oath, and huddling over this important Matter, made so plainly necessary by our fundamental Laws, and hereby they framed the Net wherein he was taken, and laid the Foundation for a Process of Treason against themselves, had they been dealt by as they dealt with others, as well as of the Throne's being declared vacant.

And since I am fallen in upon Rights and Titles, the Reader will permit me to remark, as a Consequent of what is above, that our excellent Sovereign King George had a legal undoubted Right and Title to the Kingdom of Scotland, in case of Queen Anne's Demise, even antecedently to the Union of Scotland and England, and comes in by the Laws of Scotland, whereby all Papists are excluded upon the Queen's Decease, as our only rightful and lawful King, upon his taking the Coronation Oath, as King William and Queen Mary did upon King James's Forfeiture and Abdication, and succeeds upon that same Revolution and parliamentary Foot and Bottom, upon which Queen Anne succeeded upon the Demise of Queen Mary and King William.

And as none, who own the Revolution, can in the least hesitate upon his most excellent Majesty, his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, and their Issue, their Right and Title, so happily recognized and fixed by the explicate Declarations of the separate Parliaments of both Kingdoms, upon Foundations preceeding the Treaty then in View; so no Body who considers Matters, can have any Difficulty to believe and declare, that the attainted Pretender hath no Right or Title whatsoever to those Realms; and to be sure, no Scotsman who values our Reformation, Liberty, and unalterable Constitution confirmed by so many Laws and Oaths, can set up for that Nursling of Popery and Tyranny. If his pretended Father never had any legal Right, if the Throne by our Law was in a Manner vacant during his Assumption of the Royal Power, if by being a profest Papist, and not taking the Coronation Oath, whereby the mutual Relation twixt Sovereign and Subject is fixed, the Father had no Right, where in all the World can the Title be acclaimed by his pretended Son, not only a profest, but nicely educated, and carefully confirmed and bigotted Papist? Nothing certainly can make a Scotsman, and much more a Scots Protestant, fond of this Son of Rome, and Nursling of the late French Tyrant, with a View to his grand Project of the universal Monarchy, but plain Infatuation, and strong Delusions for not receiving the Love of the Truth. Our present Circumstances (November 1715.) made this natural Remark, from this Matter of Fact, offering itself in the Detail of this History, appear necessary at this Juncture.

The King continues all in Places of Trust.

To return again to the proper Subject of this History, King James after his Accession to the Throne, continued all the civil and military Officers in their Posts for some Time, and no other could be expected, since they were, generally speaking, of the Duke of Tork's Faction in his Brother's Time, and Matters went on much in the former Chancel. The publick Management, especially as to the Persecution, having been now for a good while in the Hands of the Duke's Servants, and such who were Papists or Favourers of them; and the Presbyterians, as we heard, found this sensibly.

Detail of the more general Actings of Council this Year.

When the Council is thus allowed to act by their new King, let me give some Narrative of their Procedure this Year. It is only their general Actings I'll reach in this Section, and shall reserve what relates to particular Persons to the following, and several of their Actings will come in upon their proper Subjects in the following Sections. We see they begin their Persecution very soon, or rather just go forward with it.

Letter Feb 12. to the Commissioners in the several Shires.

February 12. the following Letter is directed by them to the Earl of Carnwath for Clydsdale, Glencairn for Renfrew, Lord Bargeny for Air, the Laird of Orbistoun for Dumbarton and Stirling, Earl of Anandale for Nithsdale and Anandale, the Viscount of Kenmuir for Wigtoun and Kirkcudbright, Lord Jedburgh for Teviotdale and Jedburgh, Laird of Hayning for Selkirk, Earl of Hume for Berwick, and Laird of Blackbarony for Peebles. 'It having pleased Almighty God, to call from this temporal Life to his immortal Glory, our late dread Sovereign, his present Majesty King JAMES VII. having by his Royal Proclamation allowed all his Judges and Officers to act as formerly, until they receive new Commissions, the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council have ordered us to signify to you, that you continue to act by virtue of your former Commission in all Points.'

William Paterson, Col. Mackenzie.

Thanks given for a Defeat of Eighty Rebels, Council Addition to Passes.

The Letter to Carnwath bears Thanks to him, and Lieutenant-colonel Buchan, for their Activity against Rebels lately in Arms. And February 13. the Council record their Thanks to those for defeating Eighty Rebels in Arms, and killing one of them, and sending in Three Prisoners under a Guard. And February 10. the Council order all Passes, given according to their Act December 13. last, to have this Clause added in the Oath of Abjuration. I do solemnly swear not to take up Arms against the King, or any commissioned by him; and that the Passes be reprinted with this Addition. That same Day the Sheriff of Dumfries is appointed to convene the Shire, and provide for the Garison of Blackwood. I imagine that ought to be the Sheriff of Lanerk.

February 26. the following Letter is written to the Council Commissioners. ' Right honourable, His Majesty's Privy Council are well satisfied with the Accounts they have of your Procedure in prosecuting the Commission and Instructions given by them to you; and finding it fit for his Majesty's Service in the present Juncture, that you vigorously prosecute what remains by you undone, and particularly those Instructions relating to the Justiciary Part of your Commission, have recommended for that end, that you meet with all Diligence, and give over keeping particular Meetings, until the whole Business intrusted to you be perfected; and as to the Prisoners now in your Hands, you are forthwith to proceed against them according to Law, and report.'

Another Letter by 26. to the Commissioners.

To give the Country a good Idea of the new King at his Entry to the Exercise of the Government, an Indemnity is published at Edinburgh, very narrow and limited. We have heard, that somewhat of this Nature had been upon the file since last Year about this Time. It bears Date February 26. and is published March 2. The Name of an Indemnity was enough to fill People's Mouths with the Encomiums of the Tendernefs, Lenity, and what not of the King's Reign; but it was so clogged, that the common People could receive very little Ease; and the Improvements made upon it in the Favours of a Popish King, could make few Protestants, being flatly contradicted by Experience, and the daily Barbarities of those who bore his Commission.

Indemnity agreed to Feb. 26. and published March 2.

The Copy of this Indemnity, such as it was, the Reader will find App. No. 103. and I need make but few Remarks upon it, after what is already set down in this History. It is so narrow, that it scarce deserves its Name, and very much agrees with the Nature of these Favours Protestant Subjects may expect from a Popish Prince.

App. No. 103. Remarks upon it.

The King is made to commend his Brother's Clemency, as what aggravated what is now called Rebellion. I am apt enough to suppose, that King Charles's Government might have been much more easy than it was, had it not been for the Duke and Bishops; but the Virulence of the high-flying Prelatists, who really in some Things go beyond the more moderate Papists, with the violent Measures of the furious and bigotted Party, headed by the Jesuits and the Duke, forced the late King to Courses and Extremities perhaps otherwise he would not have gone to. And as a Pretext to clog the Indemnity as much as might be, the King declares, That Prudence and his Care of his People oblige him to inform himself of the chief Movers and Instruments of the present Commotions.

These are scored off and excepted from the Indemnity, and to bear them Company, all Heritors, Liferenters, Wadsetters, Burgettes, and vagrant Preachers, so very few remain, save Tradesmen, and Tenants in the Country, Cottars and vagrant Beggars, to participate of this Demonstration of the innate Clemency of his Majesty, which, he is made to add, both shined in the whole Line of his Royal Race, witness the Compassion shewn in the Matter of the Palatinate, to their own Flein, and the Irish Massacre, with the Procedure these Twenty Years and upwards since the high Commission.

This Indemnity seems to have been chiefly for Treason, &c. against the King's Government, which is but Three Weeks old or thereby, unless what followed, and the Laws of our Kingdom extend it further. In short, all who have any Benefit by it, are to be so loaded with Oaths, that, for what I can learn, very few pleaded it. The ordinary Exception of the Murderers of the Archbishop is continued, and those of Mr. Peirson Minister at Carlsruhe, Kennoway, and Stuart, are now claud with them.

March 2. the King's Letter is read, desiring the Lord Chancellor and Treasurer to come up to Court about Matters of great Importance, and requiring the Counsellors to continue at Edinburgh, but allowing them, upon any Emergency, to permit the Officers of the Army to go to the Country. March 6. the Advocate is ordered to process the Heritors of Irongray, for an Abuse committed upon their Minister; I know no more about it. And the Commissioners of the Shire of Lanark are appointed to meet and call together the Militia, and fine the Absents.

The Chancellor and Treasurer, since, came to Court March 2.

A Letter from the King is read March 8. which deserves a Room here. ' Right trusty, &c. Our dearest Royal Brother of ever blessed Memory, having upon a Letter from you, dated September 27. last, impowered his Advocate to refer to the Oaths of such as should be pursued for Conspiracies, Refet or Intercommuning, or Accession to those Crimes in so far as their Guilt might infer an arbitrary Punishment, and pecuniary Mulet; which being only to continue till the first of April next, we finding it expedient, very useful for detecting Crimes already committed, and deterring others from entering to such Combinations, do therefore renew the said Warrant, with those Alterations and Additions only, that this Our Warrant shall extend to concealing of Treasons, as well as to the other Crimes therein specified; and that the said Power shall be extended to such as derive Commissions from you, and shall continue till the Sitting of our Parliament, approving what is done by you, or any who had Power from you. Whitehall, March 3.

Letter from the King continuing the Power extending Crimes to the Oaths of Parliament March 3.

But such as refuse to swear the Clause not to rise in Arms, are to be detained as having committed a new Crime, and against whom the Government can have no Security. They order likewise all Prisoners, even Heritors, imprisoned for not taking the Allegiance, to be liberate upon their taking the Test. Colonel Douglas and others.

March 24. 'The Lords of Council being informed, that a Number of desperate Rebels in Arms hath gone through the Shire of Air, and no Notice is taken of them, Colonel Douglas, or the Commanders of the Garisons, are impowered immediately to punish the Commons who did not inform against them, according to Law, and to take Bonds of the Heritors on whose Ground they appeared, to compear before the Council in April. 'These termed desperate Rebels, now going up and down, were only a few of Mr. Renwick's Followers, coming and going to his Sermons in Arms. However an Handle is made of every Thing for establishing new Courts, and harassing the West and South. 'So March 27. a Commission with a Justiciary Power is granted to Colonel James Douglas, and others he deputes, in high Terms. It is annexed, App. N<sup>o</sup>. 104.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 104.

No Observes on it are needful, after what of this kind we have met with formerly. And April 16. a Proclamation is issued, ordering the Soldiers to pay what they take on in their Quarters. But this was of little Use, because there was none to execute it.

Commission to Lieutenant colonel Drummond,

The Council send West Lieutenant-general Drummond April 25. to harass the West and South, and that only for pretended Refet and Converse, when no other Thing could be laid to their Charge. His Powers are very large, as appears by his Commission, the Tenor whereof follows.

• JAMES, by the Grace of GOD, &c. Greeting. Forasmuch as, notwithstanding of all the Endeavours used by Us, for suppressing and punishing Rebels, Fugitives, vagrant and skulking Persons, who disturb Our Government, and Peace and Quiet of Our good and loyal Subjects, in the southern and western Shires; yet, by reason of the Refet, Supply and Harbour which they have, and is afforded from some Persons disaffected to Our Government in these Shires, their Number and Insolence still increases; and when any of Our Forces do march in Search of them, as they draw together in Companies and Bodies, nevertheless they dissipate and evanish, and are hid, sheltered, and maintained privately in the Houses of wicked and disloyal People, without being pursued, expelled, or Intelligence given of them, conform to Our Laws, and Proclamation of the Date of the Day of , to the high and manifest Contempt of Our Authority, and Affront of Our Government: And We being resolved to extirpate such Rebels, Fugitives, skulking and vagrant Persons, as disturb the Peace and Quiet of Our Government, and to punish severely, conform to the Prescript of Our Laws and Proclamations, all such Persons, whether Magistrates, Heritors, or others, as have been negligent in their Duty foresaid, have therefore thought fit, with Advice of Our Privy Council, to commissionate; likeas, We do hereby make and constitute Our trusty and well-beloved Counsellor, General-lieutenant Drummond, Master General of Our Ordnance, to be Our Commissioner and Justice in all the southern and western Shires, to the effect underwritten; with Power to him to call and hold Courts, at such Times and Places as he shall think expedient; and there to create Clerks, Sergeants, Dempsters, and all other Members of Court needful, to call Assizers and Witnesses, Absents to amerciate, Unlaws and Amerciaments to uplift and execute; and if he finds any Persons, Heritors, or others, guilty of Refet, Harbour, and intercommuning, or corresponding with Rebels, that he cause Justice to be done forthwith upon them, conform to the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Our Realm; with Power also to Our said Commissioner, to call and convene before him all Persons, whether Heritors, or Commissioners, upon whose Ground Rebels have appeared, and no Intelligence nor Advertisement thereof given, and to proceed against and punish them, according to the Laws of this Our Realm, and particularly conform to the foresaid Proclamation, of the Date

And to the effect these desperate Rebels may be totally reduced and expelled forth of this Kingdom, We hereby fully impower you Our Commissioner foresaid, to call to your Assistance all Magistrates, Heritors, Officers of Our standing Forces, and of Our Militia on the Place, and all fencible Men within the said Shires, from Time to Time, as you shall have Occasion, conform to your Instructions; and particularly by you are to take under your Command, those Highlanders now to be employed in Our Service, who all are hereby strictly required and commanded to march, concur with, fortify and assist you in this Our Service, and obey your Order, as they will answer the contrary on their Allegiance: And generally you are to do all and every other Thing which may conduce to Our Service, and the Peace and Tranquillity of this Our Realm: For doing all which which this shall be to you and them and all others concerned, a sufficient Warrant, and to continue and endure in full Force, until the First Day of June next, in case the same be not sooner recalled. And further, We hereby declare all former Commissions granted by Us or Our Privy Council, for trying or punishing the said Crimes in the Country, either to Noblemen, Gentlemen or Officers of Our Army, to be void and extinct. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Twenty first Day of April, 1685. and of Our Reign the First Year.

I stay not on Remarks upon the Severity of those, now under a Popish Reign. The Earl of Argyle's Attempt gave the Lieutenant-general and Managers other Work for some Time. However, by virtue of this and other Commissions, the West and South were sorely harassed this Year.

Orders to Lord Carmichael on a Conventicle.

May 25. 'The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, being this Day certainly informed, that there was a considerable Meeting of Persons hearing that supposed Preacher, ( a Disturber of the Peace and of all honest Men ) Mr. James Renwick, between the Kings-bill and Durmond, upon the Borders of Carlouk and Cambusnethan Parishes, in Clydsdale, where there were an Hundred armed Men, who were exercised betwixt Sun-rising and Eight of the Clock in the Morning, upon Friday last, and then after Sermon began again, and continued the rest of the Day. At which Meeting there were several Persons made their Repentance for their Offences, in taking the Oath of Abjuration, the Test, and hearing and communicating with indulged Ministers; and so were by him received into their Society, and some were delayed to a new Occasion, their Offences being many.' The Council send a Copy of their Information to my Lord Carmichael, with a Letter desiring him to enquire into it, examine and call all suspect Persons to an Account, and report. They add, that if Argyle take the main Land, 'tis probable he may fix in Carrick, and therefore desire my Lord may endeavour to keep the Country in Peace, and send Intelligence, and secure the Arms and Houses of all suspect Persons.

Order for burning on the Cheek, and whipping
Women at Glasgow.

July 14. the Magistrates of Glasgow present a Petition to the Council, shewing, ' That their Tolbooth is pestered with many silly old Women, who are a great Charge to the Town. The Council order them to be whipt, and burnt on the Cheek severely, who are guilty of Refet and Converse, and such as are guilty of ill Principles, that they be whipt, and all dismissed.'

publick Affairs

That same Day the Lord Carmichael is appointed to enquire into a Conventicle held in the Confines of the Parish of Carlouk, where there were some in Arms on Munday last, and report with all Speed. And upon the last of July they give Commission to the Lord Marquis of Douglas, Earl of Wintoun, Earl of Linlithgow, Viscount of Tarbet, Lord Livingstone, Lord Testar, General Dalziel, Advocate, Lieutenant-general Drummond, Abbotshall, Drumelzier, Gosford, Sir William Bruce, or any Three of them, to be a Committee for publick Affairs in the Intervals of Council.

Proclamation
August 11.

A Proclamation is published August 11. discharging all to meddle with the Goods and Gear of forfeited Persons, the Tenor whereof follows. ' James, by the Grace of God, &c. Greeting. Forasmuch as We, notwithstanding that several Persons do at their own Hand intronit with the Goods and Gear of these Rebels lately forfeited by Our Parliament and Justice-court, and others Fugitives and Rebels from Our Laws, and more especially cut and destroy the Wood, Trees, Plantings, and Orchards of the Lands lately belonging to them, in high Contempt of Our Authority, and to Our enorm Prejudice, these Lands being annexed to the imperial Crown of this Our ancient Kingdom; and We being resolved, that the former Transgressors, as well as these who may hereafter be guilty of the said Crimes, may be brought to condign Punishment, do, with Advice of Our Privy Council, hereby strictly require and command all Our Sheriffs and other Magistrates, within whose Jurisdiction the foresaid Abuse and Crimes have been committed, to make strict Enquiry and Trial anent the Delinquents, and sentence and punish them as well for their bygone Guilt aforesaid, as what may be done by them or any others in Time coming, according to Our Laws and Proclamations, as Committers of Theft, and for Refet of Theft, certifying hereby Our said Sheriffs and other Magistrates, that if they fail in their Duty herein, they themselves shall be liable, for concealing, to the same Pains or Penalties which might have been, or may be incurred by the said Transgressors, besides being otherwise punished as Our Council shall think fit: And for Encouragement of such as shall any wise discover either the Negligence, Tolerance, or Connivance of Our said Magistrates, or the Transgressors, so as they may be found guilty by Sentence, We hereby declare, that these Informers and Discoverers shall have for their Reward the one Half of their Fines, the other Half thereof being to be paid to Our Cash-keeper for Our Use. And that Our Pleasure in the Premises may be known, Our Will is, and We charge you strictly and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and all the other Market-crosses of the head Burghs of the Shires of this Kingdom, and there by open Proclamation, in Our Royal Name and Authority, make Publication of Our Pleasure in the Premises, that all Persons concerned may have Notice thereof, and give Obedience accordingly, as they will be answerable; and ordain the Sheriffs of the several Shires to cause publish this Proclamation. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the 11 Day of August 1685. and of Our Reign the first Year.'

September 9. the Chancellor being called up to Court; recommends it to the Committee for publick Affairs, to meet every Week, and call a Council, if need be. October 29. Information being given of Two Field-conventicles in Camnethan Parish, at which several Persons were present with Arms, and Mr. Renwick preached, Major Wedderburn of Gosford is order-ordered to enquire into the Persons present, and the Heritors, through whose Lands they passed, and report. In November, I find the Magistrates of Lanark and Glasgow ordered to be prosecuted for suffering Persons, in their Prisons for publick Crimes, to escape. And Alexander Hume, Sheriff-depute of Renfrew, sends in a Letter to the Council, giving Account of some Conventicles, and hath a Letter of Thanks sent him, with Orders to enquire who were present, and upon what Heritors Lands they were.

I am sorry I cannot, after this Year, give any more Extracts from the Council-registers, which end December 31. I am told the Warrants are all yet preserved, but from this Year to the Revolution none of them are booked. No doubt very remarkable Things might be found among them, but they are not sorted, and perfectly in Confusion. How no further of the Council's Procedure came to be recorded, I cannot say. Whether this came from the Surprize of the Revolution, or Negligence, or Shame, I do not determine. I am of Opinion, tho' what followed had been booked, we could scarce have met with worse than we have already.

Council-registers end with this Year.

SECT. IV.

Of the Sufferings and Treatment of particular Persons this Year, before the Privy Council.

THe more general Actings of the Council have swelled the former Section so much, that I have chosen to give the Treatment of particular Persons by itself in this; and it must relate to such as were made Prisoners last Year and this, together with great Multitudes banished toward the End of this Year. I just give it in the Order of Time from the Registers.

Subject Matter of this Section.

To begin with the Gentlemen in the West and South, who, we heard before, were brought to no little Trouble for pretended Reset and Converse, Church Irregularities, and the like, before the Council and Circuits, and upon their refusing the Test, imprisoned and fined to the Value of their Estates: Some Hints of their Case have been given upon the former Chapter, and here I only take Notice of what I meet with, concerning them this Year, in the Council-books.

The Treatment of the Gentlemen imprisoned last Year.

James Hamilton of Aikenhead we have once and again met with in this History, and February 13. he is liberate on Bond of Two thousand Pounds Sterling, to appear the 19 inst; and March 10. I find him liberate under the same Penalty, to appear when called. Mr. Andrew Kennedy of Clowburn, March 5. is liberate upon a Bond of Twelve thousand Marks to re-enter the Prison April 15. May 8. I find it represented to the Council, that he is sore afflicted with the Gravel, and they confine him to his own House, upon Bond to appear when called. It seems in a little he was called, for August 25. I find him ordered to the Canongate Tolbooth, because of the Throng of Prisoners; and September 11. the Council grant him Liberty to go out of Prison some Hours in the Day Time, but ordain one of the Keepers still to be with him.

Aikenhead.

March 12. Mr. Andrew Hay of Craignethan falling under Sickness in Prison, the Council allow him to be liberate, but confine him to the Town of Edinburgh, under Bond of Ten thousand Marks to compare when called, and order his former Bonds granted at Glasgow to be given up. That same Day William Fairly of Brunsfeld, who had been under Certificates from Physicians, liberate for a Fortnight under Bond of Three thousand Pounds Sterling, hath his Liberty prorogate by the Council under Bond, with the former Penalty of Three thousand Pounds Sterling; and April last, he is continued under Bond till he be called. March 14. the Laird of Kilmahew in Dumbarton Shire, of whom we have heard this Year already, is before the Council, and discharged from his Sentence.

Mr. Andrew Hay of Craignethan.

Napier of Kilmahew.

Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock petitions the Council, May 17. to be liberate, that he may attend the Funerals of his only Sister the Lady Calderwood. They grant him till April 2. under a Bond of Ten thousand Pounds Sterling, to re-enter that Day. He re-entred, and September 11. he is again liberate under Bond to re-enter October 12. under Penalty of Eight thousand Pounds Sterling.

Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock.

March 22. John Porterfield late of Douchal, and Alexander Porterfield his Son, supplicate the Council for Liberty. The first is refused, because under a Sentence of Forfeiture. His Son is let out, on Bond for the Sum in which he is fined. July 23. Douchal is allowed the Liberty of the Town of Edinburgh upon his Petition, but confined thereunto. And September

ber 3. the Council transmit the following Petition from him to the Secretaries; ' That whereas the Petitioner being desired by Sir John Cochran to give some Charity to the Lord Argyle, did heartily refuse the same, and having concealed the Design of the said Sir John, and not timeously revealed the same, which he did out of Ignorance, and not out of any evil Design, but did freely confess the same, which otherwise could not be proven against him, wherefore your Petitioner is forfeited, and hath a long Time been Prisoner; and seeing his Life is near at an End, I being of the Age of Seventy Two Years, and under many Infirmities contracted in the said Prison, it is therefore humbly desired that your Lordships would recommend your Petitioner to his most sacred Majesty, for a Remission to be passed gratis, containing Rehabilitation, &c. And it is hoped his sacred Majesty will be so gracious (considering that the Petitioner's Crime was not intentional, but in a manner ignorantly) out of that gracious Benignity and Goodness which Princes have been in use always to bestow upon the worst of their Subjects, being penitent, and allow your Petitioner a Competency to live upon, out of his own Estate, and take some seen Course with his Debt, which is very grievous to his Spirit; and your Petitioner shall ever pray. ' John Porterfield. And I find, September 16. an Address to the Council from Alexander Porterfield his Son, shewing that he hath nothing to pay his Fine with, seeing his Father is forfeited, and begs his Fine may be remitted, considering his long Imprisonment. The Council transmit this Address to the Duke of Queensberry.

May 19. Bannantyne of Craigmuir is by the Council ordered to be liberate, upon his Bond to leave the Kingdom, under the Penalty of his Fine. And June 12. George Hamilton of Brown-castle, petitions, ' That having satisfied his Majesty's Cash-keeper, for the Sum of Two thousand Merks imposed upon him as a Fine December last, and being orderly and regular, and willing to take the Allegiance, he may be liberate. ' He is liberate upon Bond of Two thousand Merks to compear when called, and to live peaceably and orderly.

July 9. John Crawford of Crawfordland, upon his Petition, is liberate upon Bond, under the Penalty of a Thousand Pounds Sterling, to live orderly and regularly, and to compear when called. That same Day, the Laird of Fairly is liberate on the same Terms. And July 30. William Cuninghame of Ashen-yards supplicates the Council, ' That having now been in Prison Nine Months since October last, and resolving to live loyally, as he has still done, and his Health being much broken, and his Estate within Seventy two Pounds Scots valued Rent, he may be liberate. ' He is let out upon Bond, under Penalty of an Hundred Pounds Sterling. August 25. John Whiteford of Balquhan, liberate out of Prison formerly, and confined to the Town of Edinburgh, in regard nothing is proven against him, tho' many Witnesses have been examined, his Confinement is now taken off, and he gives Bond, under Penalty of Five thousand Pounds Sterling, to compear when called.

September 9. John Hamilton younger of Halrcraig, is, upon his Petition, liberate, having been Ten Months Prisoner, and his Father being in a dying Condition, under Bond to re-enter Prison October 9. under the Penalty of Twelve thousand Merks. And September 11.
 the Laird of Craigends younger, is allowed to be liberate from Prison under a Bond of Four thousand Pounds Sterling to re-enter November 1. November 19. he is liberate, under Bond ' with the same Penalty, to re-enter the first of January next, that he may attend on his Affairs in the Session, and use Means for procuring his Fine.'

September 11. Petitions are given in by John Caldwell of that ilk, James Stuart of Hart-wood, and William Hamilton of Overtoun, Prisoners; and the Council transmit them to the Secretaries. Hartwood, being valetudinary, is liberate under Bond, with his Fine for the Penalty to re-enter September 24. And September 11. Muirhead of Bradisholm is liberate under a Bond of Four thousand Merks, to re-enter October 12. And Mr. John Bannantyne of Core-house is liberate, upon Bond, under the Penalty of his Fine, to re-enter that same Day with the former.

These are all the Hints I have observed in the Registers as to those worthy and religious Persons, and can follow them no farther for Want of the Records in the following Year.
 Those of them who were liberate under Bonds equal to their exorbitant Fines, came at length to make Compositions, and had vast Sums to pay, and the happy Revolution did only put an End to their Trouble, tho' nothing illegal could be proven against them.

To those I may subjoyn the Hardships of several religious Ladies I meet with in the Council-books this Year, for mere Non-conformity, and pretended Church-irregularities. I begin with those of that excellent Gentlewoman the Lady Colvil. Dame Margaret Weems, Lady Colvil, is, March 17. liberate by the Council, and confined to the Town of Edinburgh, the being indisposed, and by a Bond under the Penalty of her Fine she is to re-enter April 2. April 3. her Liberty, upon another Petition, is prorogate a Fortnight. And April 16. the Clerks of Council are warranted to receive Bond from her, under Penalty of Five thousand Merks, to re-enter Prison when called. That same Day the Lady St. Ford Prisoner in Culross is ordered to be liberate, upon a Bond under the Penalty of her Fine, to appear when called. April 24. her Bond is prorogate, as also the Lady Colvil's, to the last instant. And that Day they are both ordained to re-enter Prison. I meet with no more about them.

May

May 19. 'Margaret Muir Lady Tilen, and Patrick Maxwell her Son, who had been incarcerated in Dundee for alledged Irregularities, and being present at House and Field-conventicles, being found innocent, and her Son but eleven Years of Age, are ordered to be liberated.' June 3. Dame Anne Scot Lady Skelmorly, petitions the Council, 'That whereas a Decreet was past by Major White against her and her deceased Husband, for alleged Irregularities, and withdrawing from Ordinances, before her Husband's Decease; and a Committee of Council having met, tried that Case, and absolved her, and she being sickly and her Children sick, craving that she may be allowed to go to her House in the West.' Her Cause is continued till November, under Caution to the Value of her Fine, and Execution lifted against her, though not against her Son, who is also charged; and in November she is continued till the first of January. And June 8. Lady Mary Hope being called, and not comparing, is put to the Horn.

1685.

Lady Tilen and her Son of 11 Years of Age. Lady Skelmorly.

Lady Mary Hope put to the Horn.

Lady Abdean her Petition, July 29.

The hard Case of the Lady Abdean, will best appear from her Petition to the Council, July 29. as follows. 'Anent a Petition presented by Jean Melvil Relict of Mr. John Wardlaw of Abdean, shewing, That the Petitioner being, in absence, fined by the Sheriff of Fife and his Deputes, in the Sum of Three thousand Merks, for her alledged withdrawing from the publick Ordinances, and having meaned herself to the Council, they did take off the Contumacy for her Noncompearance, and she produced Certificates under the Magistrates Hands of Burntisland, where she lived, for her loyal and peaceable Deportment. The Council was pleased to turn the said Decreet into a Libel, and to reponne the Petitioner against the same, since which Time, as the Petitioner has been still ready to answer any Libel in Writ, which should be exhibit against her, notwithstanding whereof, she was frequently troubled and molested by Messengers, who threaten to poind her household Furniture, and carry herself to Prison, tho' infirm by reason of her great old Age, that she was not able, without Help, to walk out of the Room where she did ly; and seeing the Minister of Burntisland could only accuse the Petitioner of hearing of one Minister there, in the Time of the late Indulgence, to whom the most Part of the Parish resorted, and for whom the Heritors were preparing to buy or build a Meeting-house; and the Petitioner then thinking it was no Breach of Law to hear the said Minister, but how soon Authority discharged him, the Minister or Magistrates of the said Place will not assert, that ever the Petitioner went thereafter to hear him, or that ever she was at any Conventicle, but that she behaved kindly to all the orthodox Clergy, when they visited her. And therefore humbly supplicating the Council, to take her Condition to their Consideration, by which, as it will be found that her Liferent is narrow enough to support her old infirm Age, and therefore not able to pay the said Fine or any other, so that the Council would find, that she could not be accused of withdrawing from the publick Ordinance, so long as she had Health and Strength to go abroad, except the Time of the said Indulgence, as the Ministers and Magistrates of Burntisland could not deny; and in respect the Petitioner was reponed against the foresaid Decreet, that therefore they would be pleased to discharge Messengers and all others, to trouble her Person or Goods for the future. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having considered the foresaid Petition, do commend to the Lords Tarbet, Justice-clerk, and Cistlehill, or any one of them, to consider and examine the Petitioner's Cause, as is above represented, and to take her Oath, (if Need be) conform to their former Reference to the Sheriff of the Shire of Fife, or his Deputes, and to report what they find in the Matter, against the First Council-day of November next; and, in the mean time, discharge all Execution, real or personal, for Payment of the Fine abovementioned, till the said Day.'

Upon what Reason I know not, the Council, August 17. ordain her to be examined upon Oath by the Earl of Balcarras, notwithstanding of the Council's Act July 29. and if she refuse to depone, that she be held as confest. And October 15. the Council having considered a Bill of Suspension given in by the Lady Abdean Prisoner in Burntisland, for not paying her Fine imposed by the Sheriff-depute of Fife, do grant Suspension, upon her consigning a Thousand Merks of the Fine, in the Hands of John Malcolm Procurator Fiscal, and giving Bond to be regular, and appear when called. Such Treatment of so many excellent Gentlewomen, and some of them Persons of Quality, scarce hath a Parallel.

Her further Trouble.

I shall, in the next Place, take Notice of several others before the Council this Year. February 11. Robert Master of Burleigh, Alexander Master of Melvil, and the Laird of Kembachie, appear before the Council, and take the Oath of Allegiance, being cited from Fife to appear before the Council. The Two first give Bond, under a Thousand Pounds Sterling, to appear when called, and Kembachie under Five hundred, and his Bond to the Earl of Balcarras, at the late District in Fife, is given up. That same Day, Edward Jarvie Tenant in Bannockburn, imprisoned by the Committee at Glasgow, for withdrawing from publick Ordinances, in a Petition to the Council declares, he is willing to take the Abjuration; and they ordain the Magistrates of Glasgow to administrate it, and set him at Liberty, he giving Bond to live regularly, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks. And February 13.

John

1685.

Thus I have given what Accounts I have observed in the Council-registers this Year, which relate to particular Persons, and to vast Numbers who were banished. Several other Things relative to such as were proceeded before the Parliament and Justiciary, and the Prosecutions after the Earl of Argyle's Attempt, will come in under the following Sections.

S E C T. V.

Of the Procedure of the Justiciary Court this Year.

I Come now forward to give a Detail of the Proceedings of the Justiciary Court this Year, and having been so large in my Extracts upon the former Years, I may omit now many of the Forms and Circumstances, and shall give the Proceedings before them, and the publick Executions only in Hints, with some Things anent the Sufferers, from other Papers, as I go through.

Proceeds before the Justiciary this Year.

The Earl of Tarras's Process comes on January 5. this Year. By the Council-records September 16. last Year, I find, 'the Earl of Tarras, lately brought in Prisoner, desires to be examined. And December 16. the Advocate is ordered by the Council to process the Earl for 'Treason.' The Process, as hath been noticed upon Ferviswood's Trial, was upon his own Confession, and this Confession was brought as a Proof against Mr. Baily, and the Sentence and Process is delayed till now, that tho' he had confessed and come in the King's Mercy, yet he might not be under Sentence when adduced as a Witness. This Day he appears, and his Indictment is read, which is as follows.

Against the Earl of Tarras Jan. 5.

'Walter Earl of Tarras, you are indicted and accused, that where, notwithstanding by the common Law of this and all other well governed Nations, the concealing and not revealing of any treasonable Discourse, does infer the Pain and Punishment of Treason; nevertheless there being treasonable Designs in England for rising in Arms against the King our Sovereign, whom God preserve, and for killing, at least seizing his sacred Person, and the Person of his Royal Highness, and for forcing his Majesty to such Proposals, as they, the damnable Conspirators, should make; there was a Junctio likewise of the Scottish Nation, called up by them, who did meet and assemble themselves at London in the Months of February, March, April or May 1683. at which Meeting were present the Lord Melvil, Mr. Robert Baily of Ferviswood, Sir Hugh Campbel of Cesnock, Sir George Campbel his Son, Montgomery of Langshaw, Sir John Cochran, Mr. Robert Martin, and Mr. William Veitch an outed Preacher, and others, where, after they had most treasonably and seditiously misrepresented his Majesty's Royal Government, especially in Scotland, and the Administration of his Royal Highness his Majesty's Commissioner, and his Judicatories here, thereby to excite one another to the designed Conspiracy and Rising intended against him, and to serve as a Pretext to excuse their wicked Design of joyning with the Conspirators in England, they did send Mr. Robert Martin with a Commission unto Scotland, and he carried Letters, particularly a Letter to you the said Earl of Tarras, and the said Mr. Robert Martin having arrived here in Scotland in the Month of May 1683. he did address himself to the Laird of Torwoodlee, and they sent for the Lairds of Polwart, Philiphagh, and you the said Earl of Tarras, and before Polwart came, the said Mr. Robert Martin and you, or at least you and Philiphagh did talk of a Rising in Arms, upon a Suspicion that the Country Party in England should have thought of going to Arms, and if it were not fit, in that Case to seize upon the Officers of State, and other Officers here, and to surprise Berwick and his Majesty's Garrison of Stirling, and others, and his Troops of Horse and Dragoons in this Kingdom. After which you went to Gallowshiels, and met with the Lairds of Gallowshiels and Polwart, and after you had tried if the Laird of Gallowshiels would be secret, you did at last formally talk of rising in Arms, and of concurring with the late Earl of Argyle, a declared Traitor, who should land in the West, and of bringing the King, by Petitions or Force, to abandon his Royal Brother, and of delivering him up to a legal Trial, as a sure Remedy for settling all Disorders, and repairing all Grievances, both in England and here; and as a certain Step for secluding him from the Succession to the imperial Crown of his Majesty's ancient Kingdom; and if this was not done in the King's own Life-time, the Opportunity would be lost. And those Overtures were concerted between your Friends at London, and the Country Party, (for so you called the Conspirators) and then it was positively talked by one or other of you, that upon the certain News of England's being in the Fields, those of the southern Shires should presently rise, and to get as many as they could who should be able to deal with Stragglers, and that Officers should be trytied to command; that then the Earl of Argyle was to come from beyond Sea, and Sir John Cochran from England to the West Country. And there was a Sign and a Word appointed for those you call honest Men, to know one another by, and that upon the News you were to have from England, you were to meet upon Mid-summer. Which Overtures, or one or other of them, either you your self made, or heard and concealed the same, or at least you did talk what was to be done if England should rise in Arms; and did treat of giving them or the late Earl of Argyle, a declared Traitor, some Assistance here. And you being present when those, or such like Overtures as those, were treated, you did conceal, or not reveal the same. Wherethrough you are guilty, at least Art and Part of the treasonable Crimes abovementioned, which being found by an Assize, you ought to be punished with Forfeiture of Life, Lands, and Goods, to the Terror of others to commit the like hereafter.

His Indictment;

Found relevant.

His Confession

The Indictment was found relevant by the Lords, and remitted to an Assize. The Advocate for Probation adduces the Pannel's Confession, which likewise I insert.

Walter Earl of Tarras confesseth, 'That about the Time Sir John Cochran and Commissary Monro got their Commission for the Carolina Business, from London, Mr. Robert Baly of Ferviswood desired the Pannel to speak to Commissary Monro, to try if he could get him added to that Commission, and that Ferviswood told the Pannel he was going to London how-ever upon his own Expences, and that his and their going about the Carolina Business was but a Pretext and Blind; and that the true Design was to press forward the People of England, who would do nothing but talk, to go more effectually about the Business, and do something. Confesseth, Ferviswood did settle a Correspondence with him, whereby he was to give an Account to the Pannel what should pass between the Country Party in England, and the Scotsmen there: And on the other Hand, that the Pannel was to write to him what occurred here. Confesseth, Ferviswood said to him, that if the King would suffer the Parliament of England to sit and pass the Bill of Seclusion, that that was the only Way to secure the Protestant Religion. Confesseth, that Ferviswood said to him, that the King might be induced thereto, if the Parliament would take sharp and brisk Measures with him, or the like Words. Confesseth, those Words were spoken to him since the last Session of Parliament, and before Ferviswood and Commissary Monro went for London; that he gave the Pannel Account by Letters that Things were in great Disorder there, and that he hoped there would be effectual Measures taken to remedy them. Confesseth, Mr. Robert Martin came to Torwoodlee's House, May 1683. or thereby, and brought a Letter to the Pannel's Lady subscribed, and the Pannel knew it was Ferviswood's Hand then at London, and that Mr. Martin told the Pannel that Things in England were in great Disorder, and were like to come to a Height, and that the Country Party were considering on Methods for securing the Protestant Religion, and that the late Earl of Argyle was to get Ten thousand Pounds Sterling, whereas our Scots People sought Thirty thousand Pounds, which was to be sent over to Holland to provide Arms, and the said Earl was to land with those Arms in the West Highlands of Scotland, and that Ferviswood was to be sent over with the Money. Confesseth, Philippaugh and he went to Gallowshiels's House, where they met with Polwart and Gallowshiels, that it was talked among them there, that if England should rise in Arms, it were necessary in that Case, that so many as could be gotten upon the Borders should joyn with those to deal with Stragglers, and seize on Hories, that thereafter they should joyn with those that were in Arms on the Borders of England. Confesseth, that in the Case foresaid, it was said, that it was convenient that the Castle of Stirling, Berwick, and some other Strengths should be seized upon, and that the King's Officers of State should be seized. It was also spoken of, that some Persons should be employed to enquire what Arms were in that Country. Confesses, it was spoken then, that the best Time for Argyle to land in the West, was when there was some Stir in England or Scotland, or Words to that Purpose. Confesseth, that every one desired another to speak to such Persons as they could trust, by letting a Word fall indirectly, upon Supposition in case of the Rising in England, concerning preparing themselves; and that he was after told by Philippaugh, that there was a Word or Sign among them, the Sign was by loosing a Button on the Breast, and that the Word was Harmony. Confesseth, that at the House of Gallowshiels, he heard it spoken of, that the King by Petitions or Force might be brought to abandon his Royal Brother, and deliver him to a legal Trial, or to this Purpose, as a sure Method for settling all Disorders, and removing all Grievances both in England and Scotland, and a certain Step for secluding the Duke from succeeding; that he heard it talked that Sir John Cochran was to come to Scotland with the rest of the Scotsmen."

Verdict of the Assize.

Further, Philippaugh and Gallowshiels are adduced as Witnesses against the Earl, and their Declarations are already more than once printed. The Assize, January 6. bring in the Earl guilty of the Crime of Treason, and Art and Part therein, as being upon the Contrivance of the Conspiracy libelled, and concealing, and not revealing the same, and of Accession to the Design

Design of excluding his Royal Highness the Duke of York from succeeding, proven by the Pannel's Confession. The Lords sentence him to be executed as a Traitor, and his Fame, Name and Memory extinct, &c. in common Form, as above. 1685.
Sentence.

Upon the 4 of February, I find a Letter comes to the Council acquainting them, that the King grants a Remission to Walter Earl of Tarras, now condemned to die, as to his Life only; and orders him to be liberated upon his giving of good Security to the Council to compear when called. And March 10. the Earl is allowed by the Council to go to the Country for his Health, upon his Bond to compear when called. Remission.

The Criminal Court go on to execute some poor Country People, for not disowning the late Declaration of the Societies. January 19. Robert Miller Mason in Rutberglen, and Robert Pollock Shoe-maker in Glasgow, so he is designed in the Registers, other Accounts bear, he lived in Kilbyde Parith, are indicted for Treason, just in the Terms above in George Jackson's Case, December 8. last Year. The Probation is their own judicial Confession before the Council, that they do not disown the Declaration. The Ailize bring them in guilty; and the Lords sentence them to be hanged between Leith and Edinburgh, upon Wednesday January 23. Process against Country People for not disowning the Societies Declaration. Robert Miller and Robert Pollock. Sentence. Execution.

By other Accounts I find, Robert Pollock was taken a little before the Court in October last, and sent in to Edinburgh; that he died at the Gallowelee, in great Peace and full Views of his Right to eternal Happiness. Robert Miller died with the former, in much Serenity and inward Consolation. They were executed early in the Morning 'twixt Eight and Nine of the Clock.

This Declaration, as we heard, was a new Hundle to hurry a good many Country People into Eternity, who were not concerned in any Rising, but merely for their Opinion, and that they could not explicitly renounce the Declaration. And none of them that suffered at Edinburgh, as far as I can observe, were any way concerned in the framing of it, and few or none in the publishing it. I meet with no more publick Executions at Edinburgh, till Argyle was taken. The King's Death did cast Things into a new Shape: But we shall just now meet with abundance slain in the Fields without any Process. Remarks.

I go on to some Forfeitures before the Justiciary Court. Several who were cited to the Parliament, as we heard, ex abundanti, are cited before the Criminal Court, and forfeited. I can give no Reason for it, but in order to a present Intromission with their Lands and Rents, which both put Money in the Pocket of some People, and very much straitned the Gentlemen.

January 26. The Process begins against Polwart, Torwoodlee, and Saltoun. The Council, November 13. last Year, order the Advocate to pursue Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart for Treason, and November 15. he hath the same Orders as to Torwoodlee. Why they were both delayed till this Time, I know not; they were happily out of the Way, and the Process went on in their Absence. Process against Polwart, Torwoodlee, and Saltoun, Jan. 26.

The above Day, ' Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart, George Pringle of Torwoodlee, and ' Fletcher of Saltoun, being cited and called to appear, and underly the Law for ' Treason, in contriving the Death of his Majesty, and the Duke his Brother, overturning ' the Government, converse with Rebels, and concealing of Treason; and not compearing, ' are denounced Rebels, and put to the Horn, and all their Lands, Heritages, Goods and ' Gear forfeited to his Majesty's Use.' They are forfeited.

January 28. The Council pass an Act, which lets us into one Reason why those good Patriots were thus processed before the Parliament met. ' The Lords of his Majesty's Privy ' Council give Orders to secure the Goods and Rents of the Laids of Saltoun, Polwart, ' Torwoodlee, and other declared Fugitives before the Justices, to be made forthcoming for ' his Majesty's Use.' Their Rents intromitted with.

We have already heard of Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart upon the Second Book, and his noble Appearances for the Liberty of his Country, under the Oppression of the Duke of Lowderdale and his Party; and the same Spirit of Liberty, as well as his Concern for the Protestant Religion, moved him to appear against a Popish Successor, which we see from the Mouths of the Managers, was all that was in the pretended Plot and Conspiracy, about which they make such a Noise now: And this same Person had the Honour to appear once and again afterwards, when Earl of Marchmont, for the securing our holy Religion and civil Liberties from a Popish Pretender, by lengthning out the Entail, fixing it upon the august, and now royal Family of Hanover, and securing a Protestant Successor to this Nation, which the Historians of that Period cannot fail to observe to his Lordship's Glory. Polwart since made Earl of Marchmont, his Appearances since the Revolution.

Mr. Fletcher of Saltoun is likewise well known to the World, as one who endeavoured to make a Stand against every Thing he reckoned against Liberty and Property, and his Appearances in our Scots Parliaments since the Revolution, are generally known. He is lately deceased, and was one of the brightest of our Gentry, remarkable for his fine Taste in all Manner of polite Learning, and his curious Library, his indefatigable Diligence in every Thing he thought might benefit and improve his Country, his bold and brisk Appearances against what he reckoned Incroachments upon the Privileges of the Subject, as well as his Sobriety, Temperance, and good Management. Mr. Fletcher of Saltoun.

Torwoodlee.

Sufferings of the Family of
Torwoodlee

The Laird of Torwoodlee was likewise a Gentleman of a fine Spirit, and singularly religious. I think it will be acceptable to the Reader, to have here an attested Account, written with much Distinctness and Integrity, I have lately received of the Sufferings of that excellent Family of Torwoodlee, which the worthy Gentleman Mr. Pringle, his Son and Heir, is ready to vouch in every Article; and indeed he wanted not his own Share in the Sufferings of this Time, tho' then but a Youth: And I shall give the whole Narrative together in this Place, where it comes in natively, tho' some Branches of it relate to the former Period, and others to the succeeding Years, and I persuade my self the Reader will not weary of it.

George Pringle of Torwoodlee, in the Shire of Forrest, represented a Family that had the Honour and Happiness to be among the first who publickly owned and stood up for our holy Reformation from Popery in that Country; and through the several Descents of it since, they have adhered to the same Reformation Rights, under all the Attacks from the bloody Designs of Papists, or the violent Encroachments of the Episcopal Clergy and their Abettors.

This Gentleman in particular I am now accounting for, served the King in most of all the Actions he had against the Usurper in Scotland; yet this did not save him from the Violence of that Torrent, which carried almost all honest Men and Things before it after the Restoration. And tho' he had some of considerable Figure in that Ministry, his Friends, he was involved in the Fine-act, and obliged to pay a considerable Fine to the Publick, for his alledged Compliance with the Usurper, in acting as a Justice of Peace, a Crime so universal, one would have thought, that in such a Crowd of Delinquents he might have passed unobserved; but he had behaved himself with too much Vigour in restraining all manner of Enormities, not to be taken Notice of by a Court and Ministry that were upon the Plot to unhinge the Nations of all their Principles, religious, or moral, that so they might free themselves of every Thing that might be a dead Weight upon the Measures for our Slavery, then laid down. This, with his refusing the ensnaring Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy then imposed, were the true Ground of his Sufferings about the 1662.

Mr. Pringle from the 1662. to the Year 1681. lived in a close Retirement from all publick Business. Tho' he did not conform to Prelacy, yet he had no Share in those Struggles for Religion and Liberty at Pentland and Bothwell. His House was a Sanctuary for all the distressed that came to him, and these were neither few, nor of the meanest Quality; but as the Measures for our Slavery quickned, so did the Troubles of honest Men.

The Establishment of the Succession to the Crown upon James then Duke of Tork, gave a clear View to all thinking People, what was to be the Fate of our Religion and Liberty. The Oath called the Test, was to be the Shibboleth of that Time. The known Trial of the Earl of Argyle needs not be here repeated; but the Escape of that great and good Patriot opened a new Scene of Trouble to Mr. Pringle. My Lord came to his House, or near by it the Night of his Escape; his just Haste to be out of the Way had given him no Time to provide either Horses or Money sufficient for what was fit for him to do.

Mr. Pringle served him in both, and furnished him with a trusty Servant that knew the Roads, who carried him into England, but both Horses and Rider were known before he got out of the Country. From that Time he behaved to be upon his Guard. And one of these Horses that carried off the Earl was put in a Neighbour's Hand to compliment the Duke of Queensberry, which was accordingly done, yet there was no Safety for Torwoodlee at his own House, which obliged him to seek his Lodgings in several Retirements, which were kept so close, by God's Goodness to him, and the Faithfulness of those about him, that he could not be found out.

In this Time it was when the southern Shires were ravaged by the Laird of Meldrum's Oppression, commissioned from the Council, with whom joyned some other unnatural Country Gentlemen, such as Riddel of Hayning, Ker, Graden, Pringle of Blindlee, all whose Names are now sunk.

Summer 1684. Meldrum and Hayning having fined Mr. Pringle for Church-irregularities, exacted five thousand Merks Scots from him, with a Promise of Security against any further Prosecution, or if he were, that that Sum should be allowed in the first Payment. The Receipt is yet in his Son's Hands. But within some Weeks they being sharply reprov'd by the Managers of our Ruin, he was again cited before them, and fined in Two thousand Pounds Sterling.

But the pretended Plot being trump'd up, whereby Russel, Effex, Colonel Sidney and others were executed in England, and Jerviswood, that worthy Patriot, in Scotland, Mr. Pringle was sought for as concerned in it.

At that Time were taken up the Earl of Tarras, Philiphhaugh, and Gallowshiels; Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart and Torwoodlee escaped, the last by Meldrum's Friendship, who since he could not make good to him the Money he had got from him, did generously send him Advertisement, that he was to send a Party that Night to apprehend him. He continued lurking till he got over to Holland, that happy Receptacle for the distressed of all Nations.

But

• But to heighten his Family's Sufferings, about Eight Days after the former, there came a second Party to his House, where they seized his Son, who had been abroad at the first Search, a Youth then of Sixteen Years, and carried him to Edinburgh, where he was shut up in Prison for more than three Months, without the least Crime laid to his Charge. 1685.

• But the Prison came to be so crowded before that Time elapsed, that he was admitted to the exorbitant Bail of Five thousand Pounds Sterling, tho' still confined to the Liberties of Edinburgh, and in Two Months more was ordered to attend the secret Committee, that Court of Inquisition of those Times, where, by the Duke of Queensberry Lord high Treasurer, he was threatned with having every Bone of his Body broken, every Joynt disjoynted, his Flesh ript up, and boyling Oyl and Lead poured into him, if he did not acquaint them who informed his Father of the Party's Coming (a barbarous Office for a Son to turn Witness against his Father!) And the Executioner was accordingly brought. But upon second Thoughts his Punishment was turned to three or four Weeks close Imprisonment in the Castle of Edinburgh, where none were admitted to see him, or speak with him, except his Keepers, or what was worse, the Chaplin of the Garrison, and so he was admitted a second Time to a Five thousand Pounds Sterling Bail.

• It was fit now King Charles should die, and his Brother succeeds; upon which follows Queensberry's Parliament, where the finishing Stroke was given to the Nation's Liberty, and the King's dispensing Power established by Law, and these bloody and detestable Statutes enacted, that are, to the indelible Infamy of the Projectors, a Scandal to the Protestant Name, a Terror to that Age, and a Warning, 'tis hoped, to all Posterity, of the native Tendency of absolute Power, and indefeasible Right. All that were procellid before them were forfeited, among whom was Torwoodlee, who, among the rest of the Malheurs of his Forfeiture, had the Misfortune to be betrayed by his Friend at London; for when all, in the unhappy Circumstances of his excellent Lady, had secured their Liferents according to their Contracts, Mrs. Pringle was d med hers, which obliged that afflicted Family to transact with their Oppressors, at the Rate of Ten thousand Merks, more than they otherwise would have given for that oppressive Composition.

• Mean while Torwoodlee made another Escape to Holland, after the Miscarriage of the Earl of Argyle's Design to save his Nation, a Design that was reserved, it seems, for the glorious Achievement of the great King William. In magnis voluisse sat est.

• At that Time his Son was searched for by a Party a second Time, notwithstanding of the 5000 Pounds Sterling Bail; but he offered himself to the Government, and was confined for Three Months more to the Castle of Blackness, where he was barbarously used by the Governor, Livingstone of Badlormie.

• And as if the melancholy Lot of Suffering had been confined to Mr. Pringle's Family, his Brother, Mr. Alexander Pringle in Cadenlie, was involved in his Sufferings; for his Brother in Law, Hayning, stretched his exorbitant Power as far as it would go, till he left Mr. Pringle nothing he could be Matter of.

• His very Daughter that was married to Mr. Pringle of Greenknow, did not escape the inveterate Malice of those oppressive Times; for tho' her Husband was severely fined, of which his Sons have now the Receipts, yet she also was forced to attend the several Circuits of those arbitrary Judges.

• Whatever inward Supports Mr. Pringle might have during his Difficulties, I shall not pretend to tell the World; but I cannot forbear to mention the heroick Spirit of his Lady, who, in most of all the Parts of his Trials, gave him an Account of their Approach; and this not to affright or deter him from suffering for his Country's Interest, but to arm and prepare him for what he was to undergo. She bore all her Difficulties with an unexampled Serenity and Evenness of Temper; one Evidence of which was, when the Harpies of that Time came and seized her Estate, set her Lands, and runnaged her House, her only Son lay upon her Hand, despaired of by the Physicians, and her Husband in Hazard of a publick Death, for his firm Adherence to the good old Cause, she showed such Contentment and Acquiescence under all those complicated Disasters, as is rarely to be found; and in her darkest Night, rejoiced in the Faith and Hope of those Days she lived to see after the Revolution.

• She was a Daughter of Brody of Lethin, in the North of Scotland, a Name very well known for a staunch Attachment to their Country's Interest. She and Mr. Pringle were happy together in their mutual Love.

• After the Storm had blown over, he died July 1689. among the Midst of his Friends, regreted even by his Enemies. His Lady outlived him a Year and some Months, and left the World without Pain or Sicknes; both of them rare Examples of conjugal Love, Christian Patience, and an unshaken Steadiness to a good Interest.

• He was of a masculine Presence and Eloquence, his natural Temper facetious, but still he was a Check to all Exorbitancies. He served his Country in the Convention of Estates, called by the Instrument of our Deliverance, William Prince of Orange; and, with his ‘ Colleague Sir William Scot of Harden younger, voted the Offer of the Crown to him and his incomparable Princess, April 1689.

‘ This Gentleman, besides his personal Hardships, had suffered considerably in his Estate under our general Oppression; for, because they could not reach his Life and Fortune, they found Means to affect his Estate, for his Mother’s not keeping of the Church, to the Value of Three or Four thousand Pounds Sterling. She was a Daughter of the House of Kilmarnock.

‘ I cannot go into the Detail of every private Sufferer; but, considering the Smalness of that Shire of Forrest, there is none in the Country, I think, went beyond them in all manner of Trials.

When I have written over this clear and affecting Account, as the Reader and I am in the Debt of that Gentleman who sent it me, so I cannot but regret the Want of such distinct Narratives from other Parts of the Country, of many excellent Gentlemen and others. Such as have come to my Hands are carefully insert; and from them, and what is extracted from the publick Records, the Reader will be in Case to frame a tolerable Notion of this black Period.

Torwoodlee

21.

To give all I meet with together, as to this worthy Family, April 21: James Pringle younger of Torwoodlee gives in the following Petition to the Council, upon which they pass the following Act.

‘ Anent the Petition presented by James Pringle younger of Torwoodlee, shewing, That the Petitioner being imprisoned in November last, by an Order from the Lords of the secret Committee, and being thereafter examined, and having given full Satisfaction to the Council, as to any Questions proposed to him, he was thereafter set at Liberty, upon his finding sufficient Caution, that he should confine himself to the Town of Edinburgh and Liberties thereof, and should not depart from thence without Liberty from the Council or the secret Committee, and that he should appear before either of them when he should be called for: In obedience to which Order and Act of Caution, he hath constantly staid in Edinburgh, and hath never gone without the Ports since he was liberate; and seeing the Petitioner is become very tender, and is frequently subject to a Bleeding and great Pains, and that his Confinement to Edinburgh, especially in the Summer Time, will much endanger his Health, his Mother being old and infirm, and not able to wait upon him in Edinburgh: Likeas, the Petitioner shall always deport himself as a peaceable and loyal Subject; and therefore humbly supplicating his Grace his Majesty’s high Commissioner, and the Council, to consider the Petitioner’s Case, and his Innocency as to any Crimes, and therefore to discharge his Confinement, and to allow him to go home to his Mother’s House, for recovering of his Health. The Lord Commissioner, and the Lords of the secret Committee, allow the abovenamed James Pringle of Torwoodlee younger, to go to the Country, and to pass and repass, on his giving Bond with Caution as formerly, to compare when called by the Council and secret Committee.’

I meet with no more Forfeitures before the Justices till March 17. when Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, Montgomery of Langshaw, Mr. Robert Martin late Clerk to the Justiciary, Mr. Gilbert Elliot sometimes Writer in Edinburgh, Mr. Robert Fergusson sometimes Chaplain to the Earl of Shaftsbury being oft-times called, did not compare, tho’ cited according to Law, for their being accessory to the late horrid Plot against the Life of his Majesty and his late Brother Charles II. their Sovereign, being accessory to the Rebellion 1679. Refet and Converse with Rebels, and doing Favours to them, are deemed Outlaws and Fugitives, put to the Horn, and their moveable Goods and Gear to be escheat, and brought in for his Majesty’s Use.

‘ The Advocate declares he is satisfied no Act be extracted against them, till May 16. next, when at his Instance they are cited to appear before the Parliament.’

We have noticed the Reason why, tho’ under Citation, they are processed now. How far this Procedure agrees with Forms of Law, I must leave to others, with Righteousness and Equity it does not, I am perswaded; and the Advocate is so far convinced of this, that he is content Extracts be stopped till afterwards. One may then enquire why is the Act made, if the Execution of it be stopped? I shall give all I meet with in the Justiciary Registers, with respect to these Persons together.

May 5.

May 5. The Persons formerly cited to the Parliament, whom I need scarce resume, ‘ Ochutree, Polwart, Lord Melvil, Langshaw, Mr. Fergusson, Mr. Martin, Kirkcoun, Cultness, West-shiels, Salton, Earl of Lowdon, Torwoodlee, Bassenden, and Mr. Stuart indicted before the Parliament for Treason; yet that they may have personam standi, the Lords allow Relaxation to them, that they may propound their Defences before the Parliament May 15.’ But tho’ the Lords relax the Law that they may come further under the Lash of it, yet the Estates of those who were put to the Horn, and their Moveables, were not restored, and indeed rendred useless to them.

I meet

I meet not with them again till after the Act of Parliament is passed, and that Court risen, and then such as the Parliament had remitted to the Justiciary are procelled. July 16. a-
 ' nent the criminal Action intended and pursued before the Estates of Parliament, and now
 ' insisted upon before the Justiciary against West-shiels, Mr. James Stuart and Mr. Gilbert
 ' Elliot, Advocates. Their Indictment is read. West-shiels is indicted, that he hounded out Per' sons to the Rebellion 1679. and refet and harboured on his Ground Persons who had been
 ' there, corresponded with Bedlane a forfeited Traitor, and sent Money and Supply to him,
 ' particularly paid to Robert Blackwood Merchant in Edinburgh his Wife, Ten Pounds Ster' ling upon the said Traitor his Bill and Order.

Process July 16. against West-
 shiels, M. Stuart,
 M. Elliot and others.

Indictment.

' James Stuart, that by writing and speaking he had stirred up his Majesty's Subjects to ' Sedition (as before in his former Indictment narrated;) that in the Year 1683. he was ' in a most damnable Plot and Conspiracy, entered into by the late Earls of Shyrdenry, Essex
 ' and Argyle, Lords Ruffel and Gray, Major Holms, Colonel Richard Rumford, Sir Hugh
 ' Campbel of Cesnock and his Son, Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, David Montgomerie some' time of Langshaw, Sir Thomas Stuart sometime of Cultruff, Sir Patrick Hume sometime of ' Polwart, George Pringle sometime of Torwoodlee, Mr. Robert Martin, Mr. Robert Terges-
 ' son and other Rebels, for taking away the King's Life, and that of his late Brother Charles
 ' II. his Sovereign, for invading the Kingdom.

' And the said Sir William Denholm of West-shiels, James Stuart, and Gilbert Elliot, went ' over to Holland, and negotiated, consulted and contrived the said Rebellion and Invasion, and
 ' did treasonably and daily converse with the late Earl of Argyle and Mr. William Vetch, ano' ther declared forfeited Rebel.

' And an Act of Parliament remitting them to the Justiciary, was read, dated Edinburgh
 ' June 16. 1685. Our Sovereign Lord, with Consent of the Estates of Parliament, does hereby ' remit to the Commissioners of Justiciary the Process of Treason intended against the Heirs
 ' of the deceased James Earl of Lowdon, Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, James Stuart Son to
 ' Sir James Stuart late Provost of Edinburgh, Colin Campbel of Ardkinglas, Sir William Den-
 ' holm of West-shiels, John Weir of Newton, John Hay of Park, Sir William Scott younger
 ' of Harden, Andrew Fletcher of Salton, Hume of Bassenden, Mr. Gilbert Elliot, Walter Lock-
 ' hart of Kirkcoun, to be discussed by them upon Summons pursued before the Parliament, ' which is hereby declared to be as valid as the Persons had been summoned at the first In' stance before the Justices; and hereby impowers the Lords to proceed against them, and ' forfeit them for the Conspiracy, and Art and Part therein, concealing and not revealing
 ' the same, and other Crimes, notwithstanding they be absent.

The Lords find the Indictment relevant, and remit it to an Assize. The Witnesses are,
 ' John Cochran, sometimes Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, depones, that Sir James Stuart was ' at a Meeting in Holland with the late Earl of Argyle in April last; that Sir William Den-
 ' holm of West-shiels conversed with the late Earl of Argyle, came over with him, and was ' in the Rebellion, and the same as to Mr. Gilbert Elliot. John Cochran of Waterfide depones
 ' ut supra, and that Mr. Gilbert Elliot was Clerk to the Meeting of the Rebels. Mr. Wil- ' liam Blackadder Doctor of Medicine, depones, he saw all the Three in a Room with the Earl ' of Argyle, that West-shiels and Mr. Elliot came over with him. David Stuart younger of ' Cultruff depones, they were several Times in a Room with the late Earl of Argyle in Winter
 ' last. Mr. Thomas Archer depones, he saw Mr. Stuart with the Earl of Argyle at Utrecht
 ' Two Years ago, that West-shiels and Mr. Elliot came over with him. The Assize bring them
 ' in guilty, and the Lords sentence them to be executed to Death when apprehended, &c. and ' forfeit them. There is no more in the Registers about the rest remitted by the Parliament
 ' this Year.

Depositions of Witnesses.

Sentence!

I need not insist upon these worthy Gentlemen now forfeited by the Justiciary. Sir James
 ' Dalrymple of Stair is well known to the World, by his learned Works and shining Piety.
 ' I have said somewhat before of Mr. Stuart, for many Years King's Advocate since the Re' volution, a Person every way eminent for Religion, Learning and Law, and far above any ' Character in my Power to give. Mr. Elliot, since Lord Minto, is lately dead, and filled one ' Room in the Bench of Justiciary, where this unjust Sentence was given forth against him, as ' well as a Place, in the College of Justice, he so well deserved by his unshaken Probity, Inte' grity, and Boldness against all Unrighteousness and Vice. Sir William Denholm of West-shiels
 ' was a religious Gentleman, of excellent Abilities, of a plentiful Fortune, and got to Heaven
 ' some Years ago after all his Troubles. I find by the Council-registers September 11. that they ' ordain the Justiciary to examine Witnesses as to the Escape of this Gentleman. The Laird
 ' of Langshaw was a Gentleman of an old Family in Airshire, of an excellent and peaceable Dis' position, who sustained very great Losses for his hearty Appearances for his Country, and
 ' the King's Interest when at the lowest, and lurked a good while in Ireland, and after the Re' volution came home, and died in Peace among his Friends.

Character of
 some of the Gentlemen.

But I return again to the Registers. March 6. Mr. Alexander Shiels is before the Justi-' ciary. When I was about to give the Detail of this reverend Person's Sufferings, from his ' own original Papers in my Hands, I am prevented by a printed Narrative, published from

Mr. Alexander
 Shiels March 6.

a Copy of what he left as a Narrative, without any Design that in that Dress it should be published. I have not had Time to compare this with the Original, but I suppose there are no great Differences, and therefore I shall only set down what I meet with about him in the Records.

By the Council-registers I find General Dalziel ordered to send a Party to Leith, to bring up Alexander Shiels and John Frazer, Masters of Arts, Andrew Crawford, Charles Gray, William Cunningham, William Oliphant, John Martin, and John Foreman, sent down Prisoners from London; and March 6. Mr. Alexander Shiels being examined before the Lords of Justiciary, 'did abhor, renounce, and disown in the Presence of the almighty God, the late pretended Declaration of War, in so far as it declares War against his Majesty, and asserts it lawful to kill such as serve his Majesty in Church or State, Army or Country; and August 6. Mr. Alexander Shiels having signed the Abjuration, owned the King's Authority, but not upon Oath, is remitted back to the Council.' And by their Registers I find, August 7. he is sent under a Guard to the Bass.

This is all I have observed about him in the Records. I can only further refer the Reader to the printed Account, now in the Hands of every Body, where the Circumstances and Qualifications of his doing what is recorded in the Registers, will be found.

Further Accounts of Mr. Shiels.

Mr. Shiels was a Minister of extraordinary Talents and Usefulness, he was well seen in most Branches of valuable Learning, of a most quick and piercing Wit, and full of Zeal, and a publick Spirit, and of shining and solid Piety. By many original Letters of his in my Hands, I find him opposing the Heights which some of the Society People ran to; and whatever Lengths he went in the troubled and oppressed State of the Church, when Rules can scarce be kept, yet, as soon as a Door was opened for giving a Testimony against what he took to be wrong in the disturbed State Things had been in, he came in, and brought Multitudes with him to joyn in publick Ordinances.

At and after the Revolution he was of singular Use in the Army, and valued by that great Judge of Men King William. After he had served God there he came home, and was settled at St. Andrews, and was a successful, serious, and solid Preacher, and useful Minister in this Church, till being moved with Love to Souls, and somewhat of the old apostolick Spirit, he was pitched upon and prevailed with to go over with his Countrymen to our national Settlement at Darien in America, where, by Letters under his Hand giving a most particular Account of Matters there, I find his Spirit was sunk with the Divisions, Impiety, and Unrighteousness of too many of that Handful, and perfectly crushed with the fatal Disappointment of that Undertaking, which, he shews plainly, had it been faithfully and well managed, would have been of unspeakable Advantage to this Nation, as well as to the holy Christian Religion. He died in Jamaica of a short Sickness, after they had left Caledonia. After his Death this Church was brought under new Debt to him, by the publishing of his Essay upon Church Communion, which I wish were more read and considered by such who withdraw from this national Church.

Process against Thomas Kennedy of Grange.

Upon the 30 of March, the Lords have before them a Process of Treason against Thomas Kennedy of Grange, John Kennedy of Glenure, and Gilbert Macmichan of Kil-saint-ninians; all the Three are indicted of marching with Mr. John Welsh, Mr. John Black, and some Hundreds of Rebels to Air, and from thence to Bothwell-bridge. The Advocate insists only at this Time against Grange, who is absent. One Witness depones, he saw him with the Rebels, when the Heads were taken down at Air. Other Three swear, that they knew not Grange, but they saw one whom others called so, at Irwin, when Mr. Black proclaimed the traiterous Proclamation drawn at Hamiltoun. The Assize bring him in guilty.

April 1. the Lords sentence Kennedy of Grange to be executed to Death, and demeaned, &c. when apprehended, and forfeit him; and that same Day Glenure is pursued likewise, for his Accession to Bothwell. In his Defence he propounds, that he was before the Justiciary of Air, and absolved by them upon his taking the Test. The Advocate alledges, that he was indicted there only for Church Irregularities, and opposes the King's Letter empowering the Justices only to meddle with these. The Lords absolve the Pannel as res habenus judicata. What becomes of Macmichan I know not.

John Macghe of Larg, John Russell, &c.

May 6. the Justices go on to forfeit some more, for being concerned in Bothwell, in Absence, and one of them some Time ago dead. 'John Macghe of Larg in Galloway, deceased, by an Assize is found guilty of being in Arms in Company with the Rebels, at the standing Stones in Torchouse, and in Town of Wigtoun. When about Threescore Men came in there to search for Arms, June 1679. John Russel of Catcraig, and John Russel of Arnes in Dumbar-ton Shire, are found guilty by the Assize, of being in Arms with the Rebels at Bothwell. The Two last are sentenced to be executed to Death, &c. when apprehended, and all the Three forfeited, their Blood tainted, &c. in common Form.'

By the Council-registers I find James Napier, Aian Arkin, John Peirson, sentenced to die by Colonel Douglas and the Commissioners at Cumnock, are reprieved, and recommended to the Secretaries for a Remission. June 12. their Remission comes for the Crimes of concealing the Rebels who lately went through the Shire of Air.

The

The Trials of such as were processed after the Invasion made by the Earl of Argyle, Richard Rumbold, the Earl himself, Cultness, Mr. Thomas Archer, and several of the Earl's Relations, I shall leave to a Section by themselves. 1685.

July 30. the Advocate is ordered to process before the Justiciary, Thomas Stodhart, James Wilkison, Matthew Brice, Archibald Campbell, Edward Stit, David Low, Gavin Russel, William Cuninghame, John Muirhead, William Jackson, and Mr. Alexander Shiels, for Treason, Rebellion, and not owning his Majesty's Authority, as also the Heirs of the late Duke of Monmouth, Fletcher of Saltoun, and Claud Alexander of Newton.

August 6. Thomas Stodhart, James Wilkison, and Matthew Brice, are found guilty of Treason by an Assize, because they refuse the Abjuration; and the Lords sentence them to be hanged at the Grass-market, Wednesday August 12. Thus after the Soldiers are almost weary of killing in the Fields, for alledged refusing of this Oath, the Justiciary of new condemn some more upon this Score.

Thomas Stodhart,
James Wilkison, and Matthew Brice, sentenced
and executed.

By other Papers I find they were executed as above. I have no further of Thomas Stodhart, but what is in his Testimony published in the Cloud of Witnesses, where he says, he first received a Sentence of Banishment, and afterward, without the least Provocation given by him, he was called to abide an Assize, and condemned to die, because he owned the Authority only in as far as agreeable to the Word of God; and because he would not expressly disown and judge as to the apologetical Declaration. His Paper is very plain and natural for a common Country Man, and is as modest as many insert in that Collection.

Matthew Brice lived in the Parish of Carmunnock, and James Wilkison suffered with him and the former, not July 27. as the Cloud of Witnesses have it, for they were only tried August 6. but the Day named, for any Thing I know. These Two were mostly urged with the Oath of Allegiance and Supremacy, and being asked if they owned Authority; they answered, they cheerfully owned all Authority according to the Word of God. Upon this Restriction, and refusing the Abjuration, they were condemned.

Since writing what is above, I am assured by an unquestionable Hand, that this Month Gavin Russel, with Three others, were executed at the Grass-market; and that their Carriage and Speeches were much of the same Strain with Mr. Thomas Archer's, afterward to be insert. We see one of this Name is ordered to be prosecuted, but I have not observed him in the Justiciary-registers, tho' in such an Heap as is there, I may have overlooked him, and 'tis probable he was executed with these I have been giving some Account of.

That same Day they were executed, the Lords, as it were, ashamed of cutting off so many, precisely upon their refusing such an Oath, and against whom they had no Matters of Fact, have before them William Cuninghame, John Muirhead, and William Jackson, who having refused the Oath of Abjuration, and declared themselves willing to be banished, the Advocate deserts the Diet, and the criminal Process is dropped, upon their signing an Act of Banishment, never to return to Scotland without Licence, under Penalty of a Thousand Merks.

William Cuning-

August 18. Thomas Russel and John Henderson apprehended in Fife, as being Murderers of the Archbishop of St. Andrews, when examined, deny the Fact, but will not acknowledge it to be Murder; and are appointed to be kept close Prisoners. August 20. Russel is banished, and John Henderson is ordered to be tried before the Justices; but, October 17. I find they make their Escape from Prison.

Thomas Russel
derson.

September 19. John Welsh of Cornley forfeited, is committed to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh close Prisoner; and November 19. Edward Marshal forfeited for being at the Rebellion 1679. now Prisoner in Falkirk, is appointed by the Council to be brought in to Edinburgh; and, November 26. they recommend it to the Justices to meet, and appoint the Time and Manner of John Welsh of Cornley his Execution; and in regard Edward Marshal will not own the King's Authority, and was forfeited, that they name likewise the Day of his Execution.

John Welsh of Cornley, and
Ed. and Mar- shal.

November 30. the Justices meet, and come to the following Sentence. 'John Welsh of Cornley, who was forfeited July 6. 1680. and Edward Marshal Heritor of Keymuir, forfeited January 17. 1682. for treasonable Crimes mentioned in the Verdict of the Assize, and decerned to be executed to Death, demeaned as Traitors, and underly the Pains of Treason when apprehended; and now being apprehended, the Lords appoint them to be taken to the Grass-market on Friday December 4. twixt Two and Four in the Afternoon, and there to be hanged till dead.

Sentence.

December 4. I find the Council write unto the Secretaries for a Remission, in favours of Cornley, providing he take the Test, Allegiance, and Abjuration. The Managers had his Estate in their Hands very much since Pentland, and, I believe, he did not run to any Heights in his Principles, which could be a Pretext for taking his Life.

But Edward Marshal of Keymuir, suffered with John Nisbet of Hardhill. He lived in the Parish of Morrenside, and I have no further Accounts of him but what are in his Speech printed in the Cloud of Witnesses. Therein he leaves his Testimony against all who had gone contrary to the covenanted Work of Reformation, and acknowledges he was at Bothwell, and that he could never acknowledge it to be Rebellion. He further signifies, that in his 1685.

Examination, probably before the Council, he was interrogate, if he owned the Authority of King James VII. Answered, That he owned him as far as he owned God his Cause, and People. On which some present said, that was not to own the King at all; which, whether in Jest or in Earnest, had Truth in it.

Heirs of Martin and John Fergusson.

October 8. the Council order the Advocate to process the Heirs of John Martin in Air, and John Fergusson sometime in Enterkin-mains, for their being at Bothwell, and to take Precognition in Terms of his Majesty's Letter. Nothing offers this Year about them in the Justiciary Books.

I come to end this Section with the Process against John Nisbet of Hardhill, in the Parish of Lowdon. He had been a Person very active for Religion, and the preaching the Gospel in the Fields; and the Persecutors, as we have heard, had been very particular in their Enquiries after him, but he escaped till the Close of this Year. And I shall insert an Account of him, and his being apprehended, from the Cloud of Witnesses, and his Examination at Edinburgh, from an original Letter of his in my Hand, and his Process before the Justiciary, from their Books.

Some Account
of Hardhill.

About the Year 1664. Hardhill having had a Child baptized with a Presbyterian Minister, was sorely persecuted by the Curate, and he came the Length as to intimate from the Pulpit, that next Sabbath he was to excommunicate him; but in this he was prevented, being himself carried into Eternity before that Time came about.

Hardhill was both at Pentland and Bothwell. At Pentland he was so sore wounded, that he was neglected by his Enemies as dead, and yet crawled away and escaped. At Bothwell he was a Captain, if I mistake not.

He was a Person of much Courage and Hardiness, and of a considerable Warmth of Spirit, and great Zeal for what he set up for. He went to as great Heights as many of the persecuted Party, in setting up against the King's Authority, and in taking a different Course from the rest of the Presbyterians in this Church. He was employed in publishing most of the Societies Declarations at Sanquhar and other Places; and we shall, from his own Letter, find what Sweetness he had in his last Sufferings.

November.

In November this Year, he, with Three of his Fellow-sufferers, were surprised in a House in Finwick Parish, by Lieutenant Nisbet a Cousin of his own, as I am told, by a Party of Soldiers. They defended themselves, and when resisting, the other Three were killed upon the Spot, and Hardhill sore wounded. The Lieutenant caused bind him, and asked, What he thought of himself now. He answered, 'I think as much of Christ, and his Cause, for which I suffer, as ever; but I judge my self at a Loss being in Time, and my dear Brethren, whom you have murdered, being in Eternity.' The Lieutenant swore, he had reserved him for a further Judgment. John answered, 'If the Lord stand by me, and help me to be faithful to the Death, I care not what Piece of Suffering I be put to endure.'

By the Council-registers, I find, that November 12. they send a Letter of Thanks to Colonel Buchan, for taking Nisbet of Hardhill, and desire he may be sent in under Guard, and that Enquiry be made who harboured him; and, November 21. a Letter is read in Council, from the Colonel, with which he sent the Deposition of Hardhill, and Two or Three other Papers relative to the Societies. That Day probably he was first before the Council, who, November 26. order him to be prosecuted before the Justices.

From other Papers I observe, that the Party who seized him, carried him that Night to Kilmarnock, and next Morning to Air, where he was examined, and sent in under a Guard to Edinburgh. His Treatment there I shall give from a Letter before me, writ by himself to a Friend, and I shall insert much of it here, as the best Account I have of his Trial before the Council. He tells the Person he writes to,

from an original Letter.

'That he had left a Relation of the Manner of his taking, and his Examination at Air, in the West Country. When he came to the Guard, he endured much Reproach, and was vexed with a Multitude of idle and useless Questions.

'When he was brought before the Council, he knew Perth, Linlithgow, and Bishop Paterson, and several others were present. The Counsellors told him, they believed he was acquainted with every Thing among the Rebels, and the Lords of his Majesty's Council would take it as a Favour, if he would ingenuously tell what he knew, that the Peace and Good of the Nation might be secured. He told them, when they came to Particulars, he should speak nothing but the Truth, for he could say, he was more afraid to lie than to die; but he hoped they would be so much Christians as to press him to answer nothing that would burden his Conscience.

'They asked him, what they did in their Societies and Meetings. He answered, they sang Part of the Psalms, read some of the Scripture, and prayed Time about. They asked him next, why they were called Societies. He answered, he was surprised at such a Question, since the Thing was plain, and the Name such Meetings had in the best Times of this Church. They asked, where they were kept. He answered, in the wildest Mairs, and most retired Places. They asked, what they did at their general Meetings. While he stopped stopped a little, considering what to say to this, one of them answered, and gave a more particular and distinct Account of every Part of their Way, ( he says ) than he could do. 1685.

Then he was asked, if he would own the King's Authority. He answered, he would not. They asked his Reason, and posed him, whether he owned the Scriptures and Confession of Faith, naming several Places of Scripture, and the 23 Chapter of the Confession. He answered, he owned both with all his Heart, but the King was a Roman Catholick, and himself had been not only educate a Presbyterian, but solemnly sworn against Popery. They replied, what is that to you, his being Popish does not bind you to be so too, and hinders you not to live in your own Religion. He replied, the contrary appeared, and no Liberty was given to hear the Gospel, and they were put to the hardest Sufferings for hearing it. They said, it was not so, they might have the Gospel to hear when they pleased, but their wild Principles would not suffer them to hear it. He said, the contrary was well known, and that they had taken away Presbyterian Ministers, and left none in the Nation within their Reach, and put such in their Places as are profligate Wretches, so that poor People neither care, nor dare joyn with them.

They asked him next, if he, and such as he joyned with, were clear to joyn with Argyle. No more, answered he, than with you. Another asked, if they would have joyned Monmouth. He answered, No. Said another, in Banter, it seems they will have no King but Mr. Renwick, and asked him if he conversed with any other Ministers than Mr. Renwick. John answered, he did not.

This, adds he, is what past that was material. As to drinking of Healths, never one of them spoke one Word to me, East or West. As to praying for their King, one of them said, he knew I was that much a Christian that I would pray for all Men. I told them, I reckoned my self bound to pray for all, but Prayer being institute by an holy God, who was the Hearer of Prayer, no Christian was obliged to Prayer, when every Profligate commanded them; and it was of no Advantage to their Cause, when they suffered such a Thing.

He adds, ' How it may be with me afterwards, I cannot positively say, for the Lord is a free Sovereign, and may come and go as he pleaseth ; but this I can affirm, he hath not quarrelled with me for any Thing since I was a Prisoner, but hath always waited to supply with all Comfort, Consolation, and Strength, as my Necessity required. And now when I cannot lay down my own Head, nor lift it up without Help, and the Irons are upon my Legs, yet of all the Cases I ever was in, I had never more Contentment. I can now give the Cross of Christ a more noble Commendation than ever ; it was always pleasant and sweet, but never so pleasant and sweet as now : Under all my Wandrings in all my Toilings, a Prison was still terrifying to me, but immediately at my taking, he shined so on me, and ever since, that he and his Cross is to me far beyond whatever he was before. Therefore, let none fear or stand at Distance from their Duty for Fear of the Cross ; for now I can say from Experience, that it is as easy, yea, and more sweet to ly in Prison and Irons, than 'tis to ly at Liberty. But I must break off at present.

The Council having remitted this good Man to the Justiciary, by their Books, I find him indicted November 30. The Advocate restricts his Libel to his being at Drumclog and Glasgow at the Rebellion, fighting against his Majesty's Forces, and being at a late Field-conventicle, and being in Arms and Opposition to his Majesty's Forces when apprehended. The Lords find the Indictment relevant, and remit it to an Assize.

For Probation, the Advocate adduceth his own judicial Confession before the Council, as follows. ' John Nisbet of Hardhill, Prisoner, confesseth, when examined, That he was at the Rebellion at Pentland-hills in Arms ; that he was present with the Rebels at Drumclog, had Arms, and made Use of them against the King's Forces ; that he was with them at Glasgow ; that he was present at a Field-conventicle within these Two Months, betwixt Eglisham and Kilbride ; declares, that the late Earl of Argyle, the Time he was in Rebellion, sent one Clelland to him, and those who were in his Company, to see if they would joyn him, which they refused to do, in respect the said Clelland told them, that the said Argyle and his Party were against all kingly Government.'

Jo. Nisbet.

Before I go further, I take the Liberty to observe, That John Nisbet, in his own Account just now insert from his Letter, takes no Notice of this as the Reason why they joyned not with Argyle, tho' had it been Fact, 'tis probable he would have set it down to his Friend, as well as other Things of less Importance. And from the original Records of the Society People, in my Hands, I find a Question proposed what they should do, and whether they should joyn with the Earl of Argyle and his Party, at one of their general Meetings, where, I make no Doubt, Hardhill was ; and their Conclusion, and the Reasons of it, will best appear in their own Words. ' It being desired the Societies should joyn with those ‘ now appearing in this Land, and they expected to be more solicited for that end, wherefore it was judged nt to speak of, and deliberate upon this at this Meeting, whereby they might know one another’s Minds; and therefore it is declared, they could not espouse Argyle’s Declarations, as the State of their Quarrel, because not concerted according to the ancient Plea of the Scottish Covenants, and because it opened a Door for a sinful Confederacy; yet they were resolved, willing, and ready to do what lay in their Power, against the common Enemy.’ I need not vindicate the Earl of Argyle, and those with him, from any Designs against Monarchy; their own Declarations sufficiently clear them from this. And therefore, tho’ I have insert this Passage of Hardbill’s Confession, as it stands in the Records, yet I am scarce able to persuade myself, that John Nisbet gave any such Declaration; and I have met with so many Things not agreeable to Fact, set down in Sufferers Examination, either of design, or by Hate and Mistake, that this Clause inserted here hath very little Weight with me: However that hath been, this single Testimony can leave no Blemish either upon that Design in general, or that fine Gentleman Colonel Clelland, who was far from any such Republican Projects; however, it might be insert in the Registers by some People, with such a Design. But to return to the Records,

Sentence.

‘ This Confession being read to him, he adheres to it before the Assize, but refuses to subscribe it. The Assize bring him in guilty, and the Lords sentence him to be hanged at the Grass-market, December 4. betwixt Two and Four in the Afternoon, and that all his Lands, Goods, and Gear, be forfeited to the King.

Execution.

The Sentence was accordingly executed. Notwithstanding of his grievous Wounds, he was most unmercifully loaded with Irons all the Time of his Imprisonment. He died in much Assurance, and with a great deal of Composure and Christian Courage.

Thus I have gone through the publick Executions at Edinburgh this Year, except those which relate to the Earl of Argyle, and some with him.

No more Executions at Edinburgh till 1685. with Remarks upon this.

We shall meet with no more publick Executions at Edinburgh, till that of Mr. Renwick, in the 1688. Whether this proceeded from the Plan of the Removal of the penal Statutes, now a converting, or from what other Reason, I do not determine; but it must remain an indelible Reproach upon the Managers, under the last Seven Years of a profest Protestant’s Reign, that more Protestant Blood was shed, merely for Principle and Conscience, in some Months of that Period, than in all the Four Years Reign of a bloody Papist.

Indeed that same Blood so plentifully shed in the End of King Charles’s Reign, was certainly owing unto the violent Measures of the Duke of Tork and his Adherents, together with the active Importunity of some of our Bishops and Clergy, who came likewise very much into the Scheme now laying down, though not all of them. And I would not, by this incidental Remark, be thought in the least to soften the just Aversation every Man and Christian ought to have against Popery, which still is, and must necessarily be, of the same hellish, cruel, and inhumane Nature, under all its various Shapes. But this same great Spring of Cruelty and Severity, when in a more private Capacity, set nominal Protestants against real ones, and endeavoured to make them cut off one another; and when he came to a more extensive Sphere, and had laid the Plot to cut off the whole Protestant Name, for some Time he saw good to bind up the Hands of his Under-managers, still ready enough to persecuting Work, in order to get in the Abolition of the penal Laws against his Friends, and the Plot better carried on for his Project of the general Ruin of the Reformation.

And we shall find abundance of Blood shed in the Fields, and up and down the Country this Year, and some of the following also, by the Soldiers in their daily Murders, which no doubt likewise lessened the Number of those who otherwise might have been cut off with a little more Formality. I come next to give some Accounts of those.

S E C T. VI.

Of the Murders in the Fields, the barbarous Drowning of Women within the Sea-mark, the Murder at Polmadie, and others this Year.

Subject of this Section.

After the Accounts of the criminal Processes in the former Section, where some Sort of Form was kept, tho’ without Equity and Righteousness, let us now take a View of the less decent, and sudden Executions, as they were called, or rather authorized Murders in the Fields, which were extremely frequent, especially in the first Half of this Year. We have heard of the Warrants, may I call them so, given for them, and which is worse, and makes the Guilt more national, we shall find these unprecedented Acts of Council this Year, ratified in Parliament. 1685.

The Deaths of the persecuted Wanderers are so numerous, in the Space of Three or Four Months Time, that I cannot give Accounts of them all. The Soldiers did not give themselves the Trouble to keep close, even by the Orders given by the Council, and called no Witnesses in many Cases; and good Numbers were massacred, of whom no Accounts can now be given. Murders in the Fields numerous.

Perhaps no such Period as this Year, during some Months of it, hath ever been in any Protestant Country. I know of no Order to give them in, but that of the Time when they were committed, where the Dates are come to my Hand; and I have several other Narratives without any Date, save the Year, which shall likewise be added.

We have already had some Instances last Year, of Murders committed before these express Powers were granted to the Soldiers, and in December last, after the Orders, we heard of several cut off in the South. I come now to those of this Year.

January 23. Colonel James Douglas, Lieutenant Livingstone, and Cornet Douglas, with a Party of Horse, surpris'd the Six Persons underwritten, at Prayer in the Caldunes, in the Parish of Monigaff in Galloway. Their Names, and indeed it is all almost I can give in the numerous Instances before me, were, James Dun, Robert Dun, Alexander Macaulay, Thomas Stevenson, John McClude, and John Stevenson. Nothing was to be charged upon them, but that they were Persons upon their hiding, and at Prayer. Whether the Oath of Abjuration was offered or not, my Information doth not bear; but without any further Process they were immediately taken out, and shot to Death. Jan. 23. Six Persons killed in the Fields in the Caldunes.

Upon the 30 of the same Month, a Party of Fifty Soldiers commanded by John Dalziel, Son to Sir Robert Dalziel of Kirkmichael, and Lieutenant Straitoun, fell in with some of those who were upon their hiding, asleep in a Shiel in the Parish of Mortoun, in Nuthdale. My Information bears, they all made their Escape, but Daniel Macmichael who was sickly, and not able to flee. The Soldiers wounded him at his being taken, and he was that Night carried to the Parish of Durifdeer. The Captain put many Interrogatories to him, which he declined to answer, and laid many Things to his Charge, which he denied, and said he knew nothing of. At length he was told, that unless he presently submitted unto, and owned the Government both in Church and State, and as an Evidence of this, swear the Oath he offered him the Benefit of, the Law made him liable to present Death. Daniel Macmichael Jan. 30.

Daniel was a very sedate sensible Country Man, and said, Sir, That is what in all Things I cannot do, but very cheerfully I submit to the Lord's Disposal as to my Life. The Commander replied in some Pet. Do you not know your Life is in my Hand? The other modestly replied, No, Sir, I know my Life is in the Lord's Hand, and if he see good, he can make you the Instrument to take it away. Then Daniel was ordered to prepare for Death to Morrow; all he said, was, If my Life must go for his Cause, I am willing, my God will prepare me.

That Night he enjoyed a sweet Time of Communion and Fellowship with God, and great Outlets of Joy and Consolation, so that some of the Soldiers desired to die his Death, and not a few Convictions were left in their Bosoms. To Morrow January 31. he was brought out to the Fields at Dalveen, in the Parish of Durifdeer. He had the Liberty granted him, which many of his Fellow-sufferers had not, to pray, which he did to the Wonder of the By-standers. He sang Part of the Forty second Psalm, and read over the Sixteenth Chapter of John, and spoke with much Gravity and Solidity to Captain Dalziel. And then after the Napkin was put upon his Head, he said, 'Lord, thou brought Daniel through many Straits, and hast brought me thy Servant hither to witness for thee and thy Cause, into thy Hands I commit my Spirit, and hope to praise thee through all Eternity.' And then gave the Sign to the Soldiers to do their Work; and four of them who were appointed, shot him dead. So convincing was this Man's Carriage and Death, that some of the poor Soldiers were for some Time after in Confusion, for their obeying Commands in this Matter; but a little Money, and some more Ravages quickly calmed their Convictions. This Man lies buried in the Church-yard of Durifdeer.

Some time this Month, Thomas Mackassie, Son to John Mackassie in the Largs, in the Parish of Straitoun in Carrick, was dispatched very quickly. This good Man was lying in his House very ill of a Fever, Captain Bruce and a Party of Soldiers coming into the House, put their Questions to him, which he refusing to answer, and declining to take the Abjuration Oath, they took him out of his Bed to the high Road near by, and without any further Process, or any Crime I can hear of laid to his Charge, shot him immediately. Thomas Mackassie in Straitoun.

By attested Accounts from that same Parish, I find, that this Year Thomas Stevenson, Brother to John Stevenson in Barbeath, and John Stevenson, Son to Thomas Stevenson in Star, and James MacLave there; all in the Parish of Straitoun, were shot in the Fields without any Process, merely upon their refusing the Abjuration. Three others in that Parish killed this Year.

February was a very bloody Month. The King's Death put Things to some Stand at Edinburgh, and the Processes in Form and under Colour of Law, were not so frequent; but the Fury of the Soldiers up and down the Country seemed rather increased, by this Turn of The King's Death put a Stop to those Murders.

publick Affairs. I shall first give those Murders, whose precise Dates I have, and then add such as I find were some time this Month.

Upon the 19 of February, Captain Bruce with a Party of Soldiers, surpris'd Six of the suffering Wanderers, in Lochinkit-muir, in the Parish of Orr in Galloway, and shot Four of them upon the Spot, without any further Process, viz. William Herron, belonging to the Parish of Glencairn, John Gordon, William Stuart, and John Wallace, Galloway Men. The other Two seized by them, were Alexander Macrobine or McCubin, of the Parish of Glencairn, and Edward Gordon from Galloway. Then the Captain carried with him to the Bridge of Orr, where the Laird of Lag was violently pressing the Abjuration upon the Country People. When they came up, Lag presently would pronounce Sentence upon them, being, as we heard, one of the Commissioners in those Bounds, and they refusing to swear, the Captain insisted, that since Four already were summarily executed, an Assize should be called, and they found guilty. Lag swore bloodily, that he would seek no Assizes, and in a Bravado, said before all the Country People, that all who had taken the Oath had sworn these Mens Doom. The Captain got the Matter put off till to Morrow.

Two hanged near Irongray
Kirk Feb. 12.

And next Day they carried them to the Parish of Irongray, whither Lag and the Party were going, and hanged them upon an Oak Tree, near the Kirk of Irongray, at the Foot of which they were buried. When at the Tree Foot, an Acquaintance of the said Alexander's asked him, if he had any Word to send to his Wife. He answered, I leave her and the Two Babes upon the Lord, and to his Promise, A Father to the fatherless, and Husband to the Widow, is the Lord in his holy Habitation. When the Person employed to hang them asked him Forgiveness, he said, Poor Man, I forgive thee and all Men, thou hast a miserable Calling upon Earth. They both died in much Composure and Cheerfulness.

Five killed at
21.

Upon the 21 of the same Month, Captain Bruce, and some Informations before me bear, Colonel Douglas was with him, killed Five Men at Kirkconnel, but their Names I have not; and whether they may fall in with some whose Death I have without a Date, I cannot say; but in a few Days this Man sheds a great deal of innocent Blood.

A barbarous Murder at Dal-win in the Parish of Bar,
Feb. 28.

I have before me an attested Account signed by Persons present, of a very barbarous Execution in the Parish of Bar, upon the 28 of February. That Day very late, about Eleven at Night, Lieutenant, or Cornet James Douglas, with Twenty four Soldiers, surrounded the House of Dalwin, in the foresaid Parish, having got Information, that there were Whigs there. They apprehended David Martin, Brother to John Martin of Dalquhairn, who dwelt there with an old Woman his Mother; and finding Edward Ryan, a pious good Man from Galloway, lately come thence to buy Corn, who had fled in betwixt the Gavel of one House, and the Side-wall of another, they dragged him out, and took him through a Yard. He was asked where he lived, and told them, upon the Water of Mennock. When one of the Soldiers had him by the Arm dragging him away, without any Warning, further Questions, or permitting him to pray, the said Lieutenant, who was Governor of the Garrison at Balquhan, shot him through the Head, and presently discharged his other Pistol, and shot him again in the Head, when lying on the Ground struggling with Death; and one of the Soldiers of the Party coming up, pretended he saw some Motion in him still, and shot him a Third Time. Thus they delighted to mangle the poor People that fell in their Hands, and to abuse their very Bodies. He was but a Youth, and could not have been at Bothwell, or any of the Risings, and they had indeed nothing to charge him with but his hiding himself.

When they had thus dispatched this Man, the Soldiers brought out David Martin to the same Place, and after they had turned off his Coat, they set him upon his Knees beside the mangled Body. One of the Soldiers dealt with the Lieutenant to spare him till to Morrow, alledging they might get Discoveries from him, and stepped in betwixt him and Six Soldiers who were presenting their Pieces. Thus the Lord sometimes makes the Earth to help the Woman. The Lieutenant was prevailed with to spare him, and bring him into the House. However, David through the Fright and Terror, lost the Use of his Reason in a great Measure, and fell into a Palsy, and continued Bed-fast, and much useless for near Four Years, till his Death.

The Soldiers beat and wounded terribly Two other Men who lived hard by, against whom they had nothing, Thomas Abercromby Father and Son. They beat and abused the Women most barbarously, and carried away David Martin, and one of the Abercrombies, Prisoners with them to Colmonel, next Morning being the Lord's Day. This Barbarity needs no Observations, and lets us in to see the Manner and Temper of this Time, when Men devoured one another as the Fishes of the Sea; and from it we may guess at the Barbarities exercised in other Cases, where the Accounts are not so distinctly preserved as here.

killed this Month.

Not a few others were thus killed in cold Blood, without any Indictment or Process, this Month, of whom I have scarce any other Account but their Names. William Adam in Middle-welwood, who was in no porteous Roll, nor any Way chargeable, was threshing in his Barn, and seeing Sir John Dalziel's Company of Dragoons coming, fearing they should come in upon him in the Barn, and propose their ordinary Questions, went out at the back Door,

Door, and hid himself in a marish Ground among some Bushes. The Party seeing him flee, searched for him, and discovering him, instantly killed him. 1685.

Captain Bruce in the Parish of Kirkpatrick surprized, and instantly shot Three Men, Wallace, Edgar, and a Third whose Name I have not. And Colonel Buchan, with the Laird of Lee, and the Soldiers under their Command, without any Process dispatched Smith, in the Parish of Leshmahago. We heard of one of this Name formerly killed by the Soldiers.

The Accounts of this Month shall be ended with the Murder of that excellent Person John Bell of Whiteside, and Four more with him. I have little or nothing of any of the rest, but a pretty distinct Account of Mr. Bell, and it deserves a Room here, as what is Justice to the Memory of this good Man. John Bell of Whiteside, and Four others.

Mr. Bell was the only Son of a Gentlewoman, Heiress of Whiteside, who after his Father's Death was married to the Viscount of Kennmuir. He was a singularly pious and very sensible Gentleman, and since Bothwell he had endured a sore Fight of Tribulations. Immediately after Bothwell his House was rifled, Three good Horses taken away, and all the Furniture the Party expected to make any Thing of. Account of Mr. Bell of Whiteside.

In the Year 1681. Claverhouse came, and lay with a Party several Weeks at his House till they had eaten up all the Provision that was there, and when that was done, they forced the People about to bring them Provision, till they with their Horses eat up all his Medows. And when these began to fail them, they went off, spoiling every Thing in the House, and what they could not carry with them, they sold to the People about for Meat and Drink; yea, they broke down the very Timber of the House, and burnt it, and so spiteful were they, that they destroyed the Planting. Likewise they took with them his whole Stock of Sheep, which were many, and all his Horses. And Claverhouse took upon him, without any Warrant I can observe, to gift his whole Crop to the Curate, who accordingly took it all for his own Use. Many were the Straits this excellent Gentleman was put to in his Wandrings those Four or Five Years, which I must pass, and come forward to his Murder.

Some time this Month, Sir Robert Grierson of Lag, with some of Claverhouse and Strachan's Dragoons, probably upon some Information about Mr. Bell of Whiteside, came into the Parish of Tongland in the Stewartry of Galloway, and there, upon the Hill of Kirkconnel, surprized him, and David Halliday Portioner of Mayfield, Andrew McRobert, James Clement, and Robert Lennox of Iriltoun, and most barbarously killed them on the Spot, without so much as allowing them to pray, tho' earnestly desired, and, as several Accounts before me bear, after they had surrendred themselves, and he had promised them Quarters. And it is a frequent Remark in many Papers before me, that that bloody and unnatural Man used, whenever he seized People in the Fields, immediately to dispatch them, without allowing them Time to recommend themselves to the Lord.

In this Case Mr. Bell, whom Lag knew well enough, earnestly desired but a Quarter of an Hour to prepare for Death; but the other peremptorily refused it, cursing, and swearing, What the Devil! have you not had Time enough to prepare since Bothwell? and so immediately shot him with the rest, and would not suffer their Bodies to be buried.

A little after this barbarous Murder, the Viscount of Kennmuir, Claverhouse and Lag happened to meet at Kirkcudbright, where Kennmuir challenged Lag for his Cruelty to one whom he knew to be a Gentleman, and so nearly related to him, and particularly that he would not permit his dead Body to be buried. Lag answered with an Oath, take him if you will, and salt him in your Beef-barrel. Whereupon the Viscount drew upon him, and had run him through, if Claverhouse had not interposed, and parted them. Dreadful were the Acts of Wickedness done by the Soldiers at this Time, and Lag was as deep as any. They used to take to themselves in their Cabals the Names of Devils, and Persons they supposed to be in Hell, and with Whips to lash one another, as a Jest upon Hell. But I shall draw a Vail over many of their dreadful Impieties I meet with in Papers written at this Time.

This same fearful Work went on apace in March and April this Year. I begin with the Death of William Smith in the Parish of Glencairn in Nithsdale, a Country Man's Son there. Cornet Baily of the Garison of Kaitloch, March 2. met with this young Man in the Fields near his Father's House, and had nothing to lay to his Charge save his refusing to answer his Interrogatories, and carried him that Night to the Garison. To Morrow his Father hearing of it, prevailed with his Master John Lawrie of Maxwelltown, to meet with the Cornet at the Kirk of Glencairn, as he hoped, to get his Son liberate; but it proved otherwise to his great Grief. William Smith killed in the Fields, March 3.

Upon the Third of March, William was brought before them, and refusing to answer the Queries put to him, Maxwelltown immediately passed Sentence of Death upon him, by virtue of the Power he said he had as a Commissioner. The Cornet opposed this, as what was illegal, unless he would call an Assize and judge him; but this blood-thirsty Man would hear of no Delay, and threatned to delate the Cornet for sparing him so long.

Accordingly he was carried out to the Race-muir near by, and shot to Death by a Party of the Soldiers. He died with a great deal of holy Composure and Courage, and in full As-

rance of Faith, declaring to the Spectators that he died for no Rebellion, or any Crime could be laid to his Charge, but only upon Two Heads, for Converse with the persecuted People, as they came and went, which he had acknowledged, and his refusing to discover their Haunts and lurking Places. He said much for the Comfort of his Parents when he took his Farewell of them.

John Brown killed near Blackwood.

This same Month, as my Accounts bear, but perhaps this might fall out at another Time, since the Figures of the Years in some Narratives before me are faded, and the Ink ill, but the Fact is certain, Lieutenant Murray was going through the Parish of Lefmahagg, and met one John Brown in the Fields, and promised him Quarters at first, he making no Resistance, but afterwards changed his Mind, and without any Process or Sentence, shot him in a few Minutes, near the Blackwood in that Parish.

Five killed near Inglisfoun,
April 29.

Upon the 29 of April, there was a very bloody Murder committed upon Five Persons, near Inglisfoun, in the Parish of Glencairn. I give it here from a Narrative writ at the Time. Some of the Names differ from those in the Cloud of Witnesses.

One Watson
the Occasion of this, and the Surprising of several others.

The Occasion of their being seized, and of the taking and surprising of several others of the Wanderers at this Time, was this. A profligate villanous Informer, and Apostate, Andrew Watson, pretended to be a Sufferer, and last Winter and this Spring, went up and down among the People who were upon their hiding. I little question, but it was this same Watson formerly named, as concerned in the Murder of Mr. Penison at Carsphairn, and that he prompted them very much to that Attempt; and so cunningly was the Game laid, that when before that, the suffering People suspected him a little for his Forwardness, and Neglect, as far as they could observe of that Closeness in secret Duty they wished for; and after they had much deserted him since Carsphairn Business, he got himself to be apprehended, and carried to Dumfries, and had a sham Sentence of Death passed upon him, all by Concert. We need not doubt but he escaped; and he came, and again essayed to joyn the Wanderers, but they suspected him, and kept at Distance from him, so that at length he cast off the Mask, and listed in the Army.

However, by this Time, this base Deceiver came to be tolerably well acquainted with their Haunts, and lurking Places, and discovered them through Galloway and Nithsdale; and among others, he made known a Cave near Inglisfoun, which had been a Place of Safety and Secrecy to not a few, for several Years. Accordingly, Colonel James Douglas, and Lieutenant Livingstone, through By-paths, and unusual Ways, came suddenly to this Cave, and surprised in it, John Gibson Brother to James Gibson of Inglisfoun, Heritor of the Ground, James Kennoch in Glencairn Parish, Robert Edgar fled lately from his House for refusing the Abjuration, Robert Mitchel from the Parish of Cumnock in Air Shire, and Robert Grierson a Galloway Man.

When the Soldiers came up, they shot in on the Cave, and wounded one of them, and then rushed in upon them; and without any Questions asked, or Offers made, Colonel Douglas immediately passed Sentence upon them, to be taken out and shot, tho' nothing could be laid to the Charge of any of them, but that they were hiding. It was much that any of them were allowed to pray before their Death.

John Gibson was first shot, and permitted to pray, which he did to the Admiration and Conviction even of the Soldiers themselves. He sang Part of the Seventeenth Psalms, and read the Sixteenth of John, and after praying again, was shot. His Sister got in to him by the Compassion of some of the Soldiers, and he encouraged her greatly, and told her, this was the joyfulest Day ever he had in the World; and in a little, his Mother getting in to him, he requested her not to give Way to Grief, but to bless the Lord upon his account, who had made him both willing and ready to suffer for his Cause and Interest. The rest were dispatched all at once, without being allowed to pray separately. They had great Peace and Consolation, and all of them were shot dead, except one who was not perfectly killed; and when this was observed, one Fergusson an Apostate, and once among the Sufferers, now in the Army, drew his Sword, and thrust him through the Body. When the poor Man was weltering in his Blood, and that of his Brethren about him, he cried out, Though every Hair of my Head were a Man, I am willing to die all those Deaths for Christ and his Cause. These were his last Words. They ly buried in Glencairn Church-yard. Another Account bears, that an old Woman, the Mother of one of them, was seized by the Soldiers, and carried Prisoner to Dumfries, where she was threatened with Drowning, because she had reft her own Son.

John Semple in the Parish of
Dally.

A signed and attested Account of the Murder of John Semple, in the Parish of Dally, in the Shire of Air, in his own House at Eldingtoun, is come to my Hand lately, and I shall insert it in the Words of the attested Narrative.

John Semple was a Person who lived a very quiet and innocent Life with his Wife, and Three or Four Children; he never carried Arms, nor gave the least Disturbance to the Government, only from a Principle of Conscience came not to the Church to hear the Episcopal Ministers; and being given to Hospitality, and of a compassionate Temper, he did sometimes harbour those poor People who were then hunted for their Lives.

Upon

‘ Upon these Accounts, April this Year, Alexander Fergusson of Kilkerran, living at Moorstoun, a Country House about a Mile from Eldingtoun, went to Blaquhan Garison, commanded by Dundas, and informed against John Semple. The Commander detached a Party about Sun-set, Alexander Fergusson being their Guide, who conducted them first to his own House at Moorstoun, where they supped.’

‘ And about Midnight, when they reckoned he would be at home, and all ready for their Purpose, they came straight towards Eldingtoun, and surrounded the House. John Semple hearing the Sound of their Feet about the House, and a confused Noise of whispering, dreaded what was the Matter, and having a right Thought of their Design, considered with himself what to do in that Extremity, and at length concluded to venture his Escape out at a narrow Window, which while he was endeavouring, and half out and half in, Five or Six of the Party espied him, and discharged their Pieces at him, and killed him dead in the Spot.’

‘ After they had perpetrated this Murder, as if they had done some worthy Exploit, they and the said Fergusson went to the Barns of Bargeny, and drank and caroused till next Night. An honest Woman near that Place, in a little Time meeting with Fergusson, challenged him, how his Conscience suffered him to be thus accessory to the Death of that innocent Man, who left a Wife and Four or Five small thistle Children behind him. He scornfully replied, that it was a Piece of Kindness done to her and them, since her Husband, with those he entertained, would have eaten up all they had.’

This is attested by several honest People yet in that Parish, from their particular Knowledge of all its Circumstances, Gilbert MacLurken, Thomas Alexander, and others.

Some Time this Month, Peter Inglis, a very cruel Soldier, shot John Burrie in the Parish of Evandale, as he met him, altho’ he had his Pass in his Hand, and had shewed him it.
Nothing would satisfy this Man of Blood, but the Life of this Innocent, whom he would have to be one of the Wanderers. No doubt, in this Multitude of Murders at this Time, there are several of them not come to my Knowledge, and the Reader hath but short Accounts of some of them; but, from the particular and attested Narratives of others, he may form an Idea of the rest.

John Burrie in Evandale,

The Month of May opens to us yet a more dismal Scene of unaccountable Bloodshed; and I may well begin with the horrid Murder of that excellent Person, John Brown of Priestfield, in the Parish of Muirkirk, by Claverhouse, the First of this Month.

John Brown in Priestfield murdered May 1.

Scarcely ever have I met with greater Encomiums of a Country Man, than I have of this Person, from People of Sense and Credit yet alive, who knew him. He had a small Bit of Land in that Parish, and was a Carrier to his Employment, and was ordinarily called
The Christian Carrier. He had been a long Time upon his Hiding in the Fields, and was of great Use to, and took much Pains upon the instructing of several Youths, who were well-meaning in the main, but being now neglected in their Education, and wanting the Advantage of Sermons, needed Instructions when they came and joyned themselves to the Sufferers. He was of shining Piety, and had great Measures of solid digested Knowledge and Experience, and had a singular Talent of a most plain and affecting Way of communicating his Knowledge to others. He was no way obnoxious to the Government, except for not hearing the Episcopal Ministers.

Some Account
of him.

This good Man had come home, and was at his Work, near his own House in Priestfield, casting Peats. Claverhouse was coming from Lefmahago, with Three Troops of Dragoons; whether he had got any Information of John’s Piety and Nonconformity, I cannot tell, but he caused bring him up to his own Door, from the Place where he was. I do not find they were at much Trouble with him in Interrogatories and Questions; we see them now almost wearied of that leisurely Way of doing Business, neither do any of my Informations bear that the Abjuration Oath was offered to him.

With some Difficulty he was allowed to pray, which he did with the greatest Liberty and Melting, and withal, in such suitable and scriptural Expressions, and in a peculiar judicious Stile, he having great Measures of the Gift, as well as the Grace of Prayer, that the Soldiers were affected and astonished; yea, which is yet more singular, such Convictions were left in their Bosoms, that, as my Informations bear, not one of them would shoot him, or obey Claverhouse’s Commands, so that he was forced to turn Executioner himself, and in a Fret shot him with his own Hand, before his own Door, his Wife with a young Infant standing by, and the very near the Time of her Delivery of another Child.

When Tears and Intreaties could not prevail, and Claverhouse had shot him dead, I am credibly informed the Widow said to him, Well, Sir, you must give an Account of what you have done. Claverhouse answered, To Men I can be answerable, and as for God, I’ll take him into mine own Hand. I am well informed, that Claverhouse himself frequently acknowledged afterwards, that John Brown’s Prayer left such Impressions upon his Spirit, that he could never get altogether worn off, when he gave himself Liberty to think of it.

I have before me a very large and circumstantiate Account of the taking and Death of Peter Gules near Mauchlin, upon the 6 of May. The Information bears, that Four more were were put to Death with him, but none of their Names are set down, save John Bryce, who is taken with him, and joyned in the Indictment.

Peter Gillies, a Walker of Cloth in a Mill belonging to Sir James Murray of Skirling, in the Year 1674. was brought to great Trouble for having a Presbyterian Minister preaching in his House, by Mr. James Buchan Episcopal Minister in the Parish, and his Master; he was turned out of his House and Possession, and his Losses were very great. In the Year 1682. when in the Parish of Muirend-side, in the Shire of Stirling, he was again attacked by Mr. Andrew Ore Curate there, for Nonconformity, and had a Party of Soldiers sent upon him, and very narrowly escaped. However, he still continued at his Trade till the End of April, this Year 1685. when, the Day before the Highlanders came to Falkirk, the Curate went to West-quarter, and informed against him, and prevailed with him to get a Party sent to his House next Day.

Accordingly, the last of April, he and John Bryce a Weaver in the Parish of West-calder, who had come to him to get some Cloth he had dressing, were apprehended. Peter's Wife was but brought to Bed of a Child a few Days before, and very tender. In her Sight they threatened him with present Death, and hurried him away without allowing him to speak to her, or change his Clothes.

In less than an Hour's Time, a Party of Soldiers came back to his Wife with a Lie, saying, her Husband had signified that she knew where his Arms were, and if she discovered them, he would not be shot, if not, he would presently on their Return be dispatched. She was a calm composed Christian, and told them, He had no Arms she knew of, and if they got Liberty to take his Life, she would endeavour to say, Good is the Will of the Lord, and he who did all Things well, could not wrong her or hers. This put them in a terrible Passion, and they threatened to burn her where she lay, swearing she should live no longer, which was heavy Treatment, especially to one in her Case. They rifled the House, and took away every Thing portable, but some Bibles which they cast from them.

But I must pass many Circumstances in this particular Narrative before me. The Two Men were tied together, and driven before them. When they had carried them some Miles, they bound a Napkin over Peter's Eyes, and set him down on his Knees, to be shot with a File of Musketeers before him. In this Posture they kept him upwards of Half an Hour, and then carried him away with them to the West Country, whither they were marching.

May 4. I find them at Middle-welwood, in the Shire of Air, where Peter writes a Letter to his Wife, full of Affection and Serioulness, and leaves her and Five Children on the Lord, with much holy Confidence, and desires her to speak to some of his Relations, and reprove them for their Faults, which he heartily forgives them. He wanted not Impressions that he was to die, and would shortly be beyond the Reach of Enemies, after reading some of the Scripture, for which the Soldiers abused and threatened him.

That Day, they were carried down to Mauchlin, and, with some others, were examined by Lieutenant-general Drummond, and an Affize was called of Fifteen of the Soldiers, and an Indictment was given them, May 5. It may be, some of my Readers may desire to know the Form used in those summar Justiciary Courts; and therefore, it being short, is inserted.

Indictment-a gainst Peter Gillies and John Bryce

you and ilk one of you are indicted, that, contrary the Laws both divine and humane, the Laws and Practices of this Realm, and several Acts of Parliament, ordaining an humble Submission, by all Persons, to kingly Power and Authority, and an Acknowledgment of their just Power and Greatness, and of their full Consent to the Laws and Acts in their Jurisdictions, and giving sufficient Demonstrations of their Loyalty and Adherence to their Prince, as their Head and Sovereign, in all Things and Cases, when required; and the Opposers thereof, and Refusers to give sufficient Testimony of their Loyalty and Consent, as aforesaid, being justly to be reputed Enemies, and not Friends, Rebels and not Subjects, and, by the same Laws and Ordinations, are to be cut off from other loyal, obedient, true, conforming Subjects.

Yet true it is and of Verity, that you, in a manifest Contempt of those Laws, tho' living under a gracious Prince and Sovereign, having cast off all Fear of God, Duty and Allegiance to the King, have not only, contrary to the Word of God, and all Law and Equity, most traiterously and impiously shaken off all Love and Obedience to kingly Power, by a long Time homologating with the Principles of those rebellious Traitors, and Blasphemers of God and the King, joyning with them in their wicked Courses and Practices, wanting nothing but an Opportunity to murder and assassinate his Majesty's Subjects of the contrary Opinion; but also openly and avowedly disowned the King his just Authority and Government, adhered to the Covenant, owning and approving Raising in Arms against the King, and those commisionate by him, and refuse to pray for the King, whereof, and of the other Crimes specified, you being found guilty by an Affize, you and ilk

‘ You are summoned to compear before Lieutenant-general Drummond, Commissioner of Justiciary, within the Tolbooth or Court Place of Mauchlin, this Fifth of May, to answer to your Indictment.’

We may be sure such an Assize would bring them in guilty, and they are sentenced to be hanged at the Town End of Mauchlin, May 6. which was done accordingly. No Coffins were allowed them, nor dead Clothes; but the Soldiers and Two Country Men made an Hole in the Earth near by, and cast them all together in it.

Sentence and Execution, May 6.

Upon the 11 of May, we meet with the barbarous and wicked Execution of Two excellent Women near Wigtoun, Margaret Maclauchlan and Margaret Wilson. History scarce affords a Parallel to this in all its Circumstances; and therefore I shall give it at the greater Length, and the rather, because the Advocates for the Cruelty of this Period, and our Jacobites, have the Impudence, some of them to deny, and others to extenuate this Matter of Fact, which can be fully evinced by many living Witnesses. And I shall mostly give my Narrative of it, from an Account I have from the forementioned Mr. Rowan, now with the Lord, late Minister of Penningham, where Margaret Wilson lived, who was at Pains to have his Circumstances fully vouched by Witnesses, whose Attestations are in my Hand; and I shall add, to make the Account more full, the Sufferings of the said Margaret's Relations, tho' not unto Death, as coming in natively enough here, and what will hand me in to what I have most in View.

Two Women executed with- in the Sea Mark, at Wigtoun.

Gilbert Wilson, Father to the said Margaret, lived in Glenvernock, belonging to the Laird of Castleferriart, in the Parish of Penningham, and Shire of Wigtoun, and was every way conform to Episcopacy; and his Wife, without any thing to be objected against her, as to her Regularity. They were in good Circumstances as to the World, and had a great Stock upon a good Ground, and therefore were the fitter Prey for the Persecutors, if they could reach them.

Gilbert Wilson, Margaret's Father, his Sufferings.

Their Children, to be sure, not from their Education, but a better Principle, would by no means conform, or hear the Episcopal Incumbent. This was a good Handle to the Persecutors; so they were searched for, but fled to the Hills, Bogs, and Caves, tho' they were yet scarce of the Age that made them obnoxious to the Law.

Mean while, their Parents are charged at the highest Peril, not to harbour them, supply them, or speak to them, or see them, without informing against them, that they might be taken; and their Father was fined for his Childrens alledged Irregularities and Opinions, which he had no Share in, and harassed by frequent Quarterings of the Soldiers, sometimes an Hundred of them upon him at once, who lived at Discretion, upon any thing in the House or Field belonging to him. Those Troubles continuing upon him for some Years together, with his Attendance upon Courts at Wigtoun, almost once a Week, Thirteen Miles distant from his House, his going to Edinburgh, and other Harassings, brought him under exceeding great Losses. At a modest Calculation, they were above five thousand Merks, and all for no Action or Principle of his own, for he was entirely Conformist. He died some Six or Eight Years ago, in great Poverty, tho' one of the most substantial Country Men in that Country. And his Wife (1711.) lives a very aged Widow, upon the Charity of Friends.

His Son Thomas Wilson, a Youth of Sixteen Years of Age, this February 1685. was forced to the Mountains, and continued wandring till the Revolution, at which Time he went to the Army, and bore Arms under King William in Flanders, and after that in the Castle of Edinburgh. He never had a Farthing from his Parents to enter that Ground which they possessed, but having got together somewhat by his own Industry, lives now in his Father's Room, and is ready to attest all I am writing.

Thomas Wilson 16 Years of Age.

It is Gilbert's two Daughters, who fell into the Hands of the Persecutors, Margaret Wilson of Eighteen Years of Age, and Agnes Wilson a Child not Thirteen Years, that have led me to this Account. Agnes the youngest was condemned with her Sister by those merciless Judges, but her Father obtained a Liberation from Prison, under a Bond of 100 Pounds Sterling, to present her when called. However Gilbert had to go to Edinburgh before she was let out; but to all Onlookers and Posterity, it will remain an unaccountable Thing to sentence a Child of Thirteen Years to Death, for not hearing and not swearing.

Margaret Wilson 18 Years of Age, and Agnes 13 Years of Age.

In the Beginning of this Year, those two Sisters for some Time were obliged to abscond and wander through Carrick, Galloway and Nithsdale, with their Brothers, and some others. After the universal Severities slackned a little at King Charles's Death, the Two Sisters ventured to go to Wigtoun, to see some of their suffering Acquaintances there, particularly Margaret Maclauchlan, of whom just now.

When they came to Wigtoun, there was an Acquaintance of theirs, Patrick Stuart, whom they took to be a Friend and Welwisher, but he was really not so, and betrayed them; being in their Company, and seeking an Occasion against them, he proposed drinking the King's Health; this they modestly declined: Upon which he went out, informed against them, and brought in a Party of Soldiers, and seized them. As they had been great Malefactors, they were put in the Thieves Hole, and after they had been there some time, they were removed to the Prison where Margaret M'Lauchlan was, whom I come next to give some Account of.

This Woman was about Sixty three Years of Age, Relict of John Mulligen Carpenter, a Tenant in the Parish of Kirkinner, in the Shire of Galloway, in the Farm of Drumjargan, belonging to Colonel Vans of Barnbarroch; she was a Country Woman of more than ordinary Knowledge, Discretion and Prudence, and for many Years of singular Piety and Devotion: she would take none of the Oaths now pressed upon Women as well as Men; neither would she desist from the Duties she took to be incumbent upon her, hearing Presbyterian Ministers when Providence gave Opportunity, and joyning with her Christian Friends and Acquaintances in Prayer, and supplying her Relations and Acquaintances when in Straits, tho' persecuted. It is a Jest to suppose her guilty of rising in Arms and Rebellion, tho' indeed it was a Part of her Indictment, which she got in common Form now used.

For those great Crimes, and no other, she was seized some while ago upon the Lord's Day, when at Family Worship in her own House; which was now an ordinary Season for apprehending honest People. She was imprisoned, after she had suffered much in her Goods and Crop before she was apprehended. In Prison she was very roughly dealt with, and had neither Fire, nor Bed toly upon, and had very little allowed her to live on.

Joynly with Margaret M'Lauchlan, or M'Lauchlison, these Two young Sisters, after many Methods were taken to corrupt them, and make them swear the Oath now imposed, which they steadily refused, were brought to their Trial before the Laird of Lag, Colonel David Graham Sheriff, Major Windram, Captain Strachan, and Provost Cultrain, who gave all the Three an Indictment for Rebellion, Bothwel-bridge, Air's Moss, and being present at Twenty Field-conventicles.

No Matter now how false and calumnious poor People's Indictments were. None of the Pannels had ever been within many Miles of Bothwel or Air's Moss: Agnes Wilson could be but Eight Years of Age at Air's Moss, and her Sister but about Twelve or Thirteen; and it was impossible they could have any Access to those Risings: Margaret M'Lauchlan was as free as they were.

All the Three refused the Abjuration Oath, and it was unaccountable it should be put to one of them. The Ailize bring them in guilty, and the Judges pronounce their Sentence; that upon the 11th instant all the Three should be tied to Stakes fixed within the Flood-mark in the Water of Blednoch near Wigtoun, where the Sea flows at high Water, there to be drowned. We have seen, that Agnes Wilson was got out by her Father upon a Bond of an Hundred Pounds Sterling, which, I hear, upon her Nonproduction, was likewise exacted.

Margaret Wilson's Friends used all Means to prevail with her to take the Abjuration Oath, and to engage to hear the Curate; but she stood fast in her Integrity, and would not be shaken. They received their Sentence with a great deal of Composure, and cheerful Countenances, reckoning it their Honour to suffer for Christ and his Truth. During her Imprisonment Margaret Wilson wrote a large Letter to her Relations full of a deep and affecting Sense of God's Love to her Soul, and an intire Resignation to the Lord's Disposal. She likewise added a Vindication of her refusing to save her Life by taking the Abjuration, and engaging to Conformity; against both she gives Arguments with a Solidity and Judgment far above one of her Years and Education.

This barbarous Sentence was executed the foresaid Day, May 11. and the Two Women were brought from Wigtoun, with a numerous Crowd of Spectators to so extraordinary an Execution. Major Windram with some Soldiers guarded them to the Place of Execution. The old Woman's Stake was a good Way in beyond the other, and she was first dispatched, in order to terrify the other to a Compliance with such Oaths and Conditions as they required.

But in vain; for she adhered to her Principles with an unshaken Stedfastness. When the Water was overflowing her Fellow-martyr, some about Margaret Wilson asked her, what she thought of the other now struggling with the Pangs of Death. She answered, what do I see but Christ (in one of his Members) wrestling there. Think you that we are the Sufferers? No, it is Christ in us, for he sends none a Warfare upon their own Charges.

When Margaret Wilson was at the Stake, she sang the 25 Psalm from Verse 7. downward a good way, and read the 8 Chapter to the Romans with a great deal of Cheertfulness, and then prayed. While at Prayer, the Water covered her: But before she was quite dead, they pulled her up, and held her out of the Water till she was recovered, and able to speak; and then by Major Windram's Orders, she was asked, if she would pray for the King. She answered, she wished the Salvation of all Men, and the Damnation of none. One deeply affected with the Death of the other and her Case, said, Dear Margaret, say, God save the King, say, God save the King. She answered in the greatest Steadiness and Composure, God save him, if he will, for it is his Salvation I desire.

Whereupon some of her Relations near by, desirous to have her Life spared, if possible, called out to Major Windram, Sir, she has said it, she hath said it. Whereupon the Major came near, and offered her the Abjuration, charging her instantly to swear it, otherwise return to the Water. Most deliberately she refused, and said, I will not, I am one of Christ's Children, let me me go. Upon which she was thrust down again into the Water, where she finished her Course with Joy.

She died a Virgin-martyr about Eighteen Years of Age, and both of them suffered precisely upon refusing Conformity, and the Abjuration Oath, and were evidently innocent of any Thing worthy of Death; and since properly they suffered upon refusing the Abjuration, for refusing of which such Multitudes were cut off in the Fields with less Ceremony, and at the Time when these Murders were so common, I have brought them in here.

It is of more Importance to observe, that in the Council-registers, since I wrote what is above, I find what follows. 'April last, Margaret Wilson, and Margaret McLauchlison, under Sentence of Death pronounced by the Justices, are continued till and the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council recommend it to the Secretaries to procure their Remission.' The Day to which they are reprieved is blank in the Records; but I may safely suppose it would be for a longer Day than the 11 of May, there being scarcely Time 'twixt the 30 of April and that, to get a Return from the Secretaries. Indeed at this Time, a Recommendation from the Council for a Remission, was looked on as a material Pardon; and if I may conjecture, Gilbert Wilson, when he, as we heard, after the Sentence upon all the Three, made Application at Edinburgh, seems to have prevailed as to all the Three, and the Case was extremely favourable. If Matters stand thus, the People at Wigtown are deeply guilty, and had no Powers for what they did; and the Death of these Persons, was what the Council ought to have prosecuted them for.

This 11 of May hath been a black, and very remarkable Day for Blood in several Places. From Anandale I have a vouched Account of the Murder of Andrew Hislop, in the Parish of Hutton, there that same Day. Satan was now come down in great Rage in his Instruments, it was well his Time was but short.

Andrew Hislop was but a Youth, and lived, as did his Brother and Sisters, with his Mother, a very honest religious Woman. To her House, it seems, one of the suffering People, upon his hiding, had come, being indisposed, and after some Days Sickness, died there. She and her Sons fearing Persecution for Reset and Converse, after he was dead, caused bury him in the Night-time, in the Fields near by.

The Grave being discovered, Wester-raw came with a Party of Men, and most barbarously turned up the dead Body out of the Grave, and Coffin, and perceiving him a Stranger, strict Enquiry was made about him. They very soon got Notice that the Corps had come out of the abovesaid Widow's House.

Whereupon Wester-raw went immediately to the House, and spoiled it, taking away every Thing that was portable, and pulled down the House, putting the Woman and her Children to the Fields. When thus they are forced to wander, Claverhouse falls upon Andrew Hislop in the Fields, May 10. and seized him, without any Design, as appeared, to murder him, bringing him Prisoner with him to Eskdale unto Wester-raw that Night.

I said somewhat before, with relation to this bitter Persecutor Sir James Johnstoun of Wester-raw; and the Writers of the Cloud of Witnesses observe from Mr. Alexander Shiels's Account, I suppose, that he was once a Covenanter, a great Professor, and Zealot for the Presbyterian Establishment; and even when the Test began to be talked of, he pretended a Regard for Presbytery, and that he would not take the Test, but as soon as the Trial came to his Door, he took it, and turned a violent Persecutor of Presbyterians, as all Apostates generally are. He died about the Revolution, under dreadful Torture in Body from the Gravel, and in no small Agonies of Mind for his past Ways.

Andrew being taken upon his Ground, he would needs signalize his Loyalty in having him dispatched in the Fields; and as one impowered by the Council, he passed a Sentence of Death upon him. Claverhouse in this Instance was very backward, perhaps not wanting his own Reflections upon John Brown's Murder, the First of this Month, as we have heard, and pressed the Delay of the Execution; but Wester-raw urged till the other yielded, saying, The Blood of this poor Man be upon you, Wester-raw, I am free of it.

Claverhouse ordered a Highland Gentleman, Captain of a Company who were traversing the Country with him, to shoot him, with some of his Men. The Gentleman peremptorily refused, and drawing off his Men at some Distance, swore he would fight Claverhouse and his Dragoons before he did it. Whereon he ordered Three of his own Men to do it.

When they were ready to fire, they bid Andrew draw down his Cap or Bonnet over his Eyes. He was of an undaunted Courage, and refused to do so. He told them, he could look his Death-bringers in the Face without Fear, and had done nothing whereof he was ashamed; and holding up his Bible which he had in his Hand, charged them to answer for what they had done, and were to do, at the great Day, when they were to be judged by that Book. His Mother lost to the Value of Six hundred and Fifty Pounds Scots. In the Place where he was shot, he lies buried in Craighaugh in Eskdale Muir.

A Third Instance of the Bloodshed of this Day, I have before me, attested by Two Persons called to be Witnesses to it, in Terms of the Council's Act, tho' I find it not used almost any where but in this Case. It was committed at Polmadie, about a Mile South of the City of Glasgow. I shall give the Narrative in the Words of the signed Declaration. This violent and hairy Murder, for any Thing I know of, hath not been distinctly narrated hitherto; and yet it is as bare-fac'd an Instance of the Barbarity of this Period as many; and I hope it will be acceptable in the plain and natural Narrative of the Two Country People yet alive, attesting it.

We Undersubscribers, John Reid and Andrew Cochran, do declare, that we being then Servants in Shawfield, were about our Master's Business at Polmadie-mill, May 11. 1685. saw Major John Balfour, Captain James Maitland, Menzies, Mackenzie, and some others upon Horseback, come to Polmadie: Major Balfour seeing us at the Mill, asked us to whom we belonged. We answered, we were Servants to Sir James Hamilton's Tenants in Shawfield. The Major commanded us to stand still, till he told us what to do. We saw them apprehend Three Men, Two whereof were Weavers, whom they brought off their Work-looms, Thomas Cook and John Urie, who had nothing upon them but their working Clothes. Thomas Cook was first taken, and because he came not out to Balfour at the first Cry, the Major struck him on the Face with the Horse-whip, as the Blood so gushed out, that he could hardly speak. Then having a cocked Pistol in his Face, keeping his Thumb on the Dog, cried, Blood and Wounds, he was a Rebel. Within a little there came up One and twenty Footmen, and a Serjeant, who ran through the Houses, and apprehended Robert Tom a Land-labourer, upon whom Balfour set a Guard, saying, he was a strong Man, and called for Match to bind him, but found none. When all the Three were taken, the Officers consulted among themselves, and withdrawing to the West Side of the Town, questioned the Prisoners, particularly if they would pray for King James VII. They answered, they would pray for all within the Election of Grace. Balfour said, Do you question the King's Election? They answered, Sometimes they questioned their own. Upon which he swore dreadfully, and said, they should die presently, because they would not pray for Christ's Vicegerent, and so without one Word more, commanded Thomas Cook to go to his Prayers, for he should die. Thomas desired the Major he would let him live. The Major asked, how long. Thomas answered, Two Days. The Major swore again, he should live no longer. The other said, he could not help it then.

And immediately Balfour drew out Three Musketeers, and placed them behind him, while he sat upon his Knees praying. They took some Gravats from some of the Country Men standing by, and covered their Faces. Then the Major ordered Two of the Musketeers to fire, and if Thomas stirred after that, the Third was to fire, which was done, and he slain outright.

Then he commanded the other Two to bequeath themselves to God, for they were immediately to die, and straight did with them as with the first. All the Three were murdered within an Hour after they were apprehended. When dead, they drew off some of their Clothes, saying, they might do good to a Soldier; but when they perceived their Dogs licking the slain Mens Blood, they cast them on the Corps again, and ordered us to go our Way, and tell what we had seen.

We remember further, that Captain Maitland said to the rest of the Men of Polmadie, Why did you harbour those Men so near a Garison? and holding up his Hands, said, As the Lord liveth, I have no Pleasure in the Death of those Men. The rest of the Men in Polmadie were carried Prisoners to Glasgow, and from thence near to Dunotter, ere some of them could win off.

Andrew Cochran.

I shall only add, that I sent this Account to the Gentleman above named, Captain Maitland, who died much regreted a few Years ago; and he acknowledged, the Whole of the Country Mens Account was Fact.

*Andrew M.
Quaban*

The Seventh Person murdered this Day, I cannot give so distinct Account of as of the preceeding. Only I find Lieutenant Colonel Douglas upon the 10 of May came into an House in some of the neighbouring Parishes to the Newtown of Galloway, found a religious good Man, Andrew M<sup>c</sup>Quaban, lying very ill of a Fever, and putting his Questions to him, which he not being able, or, it may be, unwilling to answer, he caused the Soldiers who were with him, take him out of his Bed, and carry him with them to the Newtown, and next Morning shot him there, without any Process or Assize.

Upon the 13 of May, I find another good Man cut off, James Kirko in the Parish of Keir. This Man could not fall in with the strict Conformity, and Oaths now required, and was forced to leave his House, and wander. While he is on his Hiding in the Parish of Hollywood near Dumfries, a Person who professed no small Kindness to him, and yet refused him Lodging, directed him to some retired Place not far off, to lurk in, sent in to Dumfries, and acquainted the Soldiers that there were Wanderers not far from his House. And Captain Bruce came out straight with a Party of Dragoons, and seized the said James. When

When taken, the Captain offered him the Abjuration: This he modestly refused, as what he took to be inconsistent with his solemn Oaths to God. Whereupon he was ordered presently to prepare for Death: Which he addressed himself to, and sang Part of the 116 Psalm about Vows, and read a Portion of the Scripture, and prayed. Then the Dragoons pressed him to discover the Haunts of his Fellow-wanderers, and they would spare him. He excused himself, and said, he durst not redeem his Life at so dear a Rate.

After this they carried him Prisoner to Dumfries-water Sands, and there the Captain put some more Questions to him, which he declined to answer; whereupon he was ordered immediately to be shot. He begged the Captain would but spare his Life till to Morrow. No, said the Captain, no more Time, the Devil a Peace you now get made up. James said, Sir, you mistake it, you cannot mar my Peace with God. At this the Captain raged, and cried, Dogs, make ready, speaking to the Soldiers, for the Devil a Peace shall he get more, and so straightway he was shot, without allowing him so much as to pray.

I have some Informations before me of great Severities exercised by the Soldiers this Month, upon one Matthew Donald, who had been in Prison some Time, for mere Nonconformity, at Glasgow, which are not so full as I could wish; but he may upon the Matter be reckoned among those murdered this Month. This good Man fell very ill in the Tolbooth of Glasgow; notwithstanding he appeared to be in a dying Condition, he was sent out with some other Prisoners whom they were carrying into Edinburgh. When they came to Cadder, the dying Man's Strength failed him, and he could walk no farther. The Soldiers meeting with a Sledge on the Road, most inhumanely bound him to it, and dragged him away, and in a very little he died among their Hands on the high Road.

In Summer these Executions in the Fields slackned a little: So many had been butchered, that Subjects began to fail them; yet more Instances offer, several of which I have only the general Dates, that they were done this Year, and I shall be but short upon them.

June 10. the Lord Anandale, and Grierison of Lag, were pursuing some of the hiding People in the South, and searching for Nonconformists and such who refused the Oaths; and hearing of Four Wanderers in the Parish of Twinam, they hunted for them through all that Bounds with Sixscore of Horse in different Parties. My Lord Anandale and his Party fell in with David Haliday in Glencayre, and George Short; and upon their Surrender he gave them Quarters, till they should be tried to Morrow.

When that cruel Man Lag came up, he would have them shot presently as they lay bound in Tedders upon the Ground. They begged they might have to Morrow to prepare for Eternity, and my Lord Anandale told him he had promised so much: But nothing could move that merciless Man, he swore they should have no Time, and ordered his Men to shoot them straight. For some Time they refused, till he threatened to do it himself; and they were shot just as they lay bound on the Ground, and their dead Bodies continued in their Gore till next Day.

Some time this Year, there were Three Men in the Parish of Penningham taken and executed very summarily, William Johnstoun Gardiner to the Laird of Fintiloch, George Walker Servant in Kirkcaldy, and John Milroy Chapman, living in Fintiloch. The first of them had been abundantly conform, yea, had taken the Test some Time before; but after he had swallowed that Oath he fell under deep Remorse, and became seriously thoughtful about his Sins, Soul's State, and spiritual Things, about which he had no Concern before. Whereupon he deserted hearing the Curate, who soon informed against him, and he was forced to leave his House, and wander.

For some Time he with the other Two kept close in their hiding Places; but after many remarkable Escapes, they were at last taken by a Party sent out by Major Widdram, and brought in Prisoners to Wigtoun, where the Major examined them, and they declining to answer some of his Interrogatories, and peremptorily refusing to joyn in hearing the Episcopal Minister, without the Trouble of any Assize, or Trial, caused hang them all at Wigtoun the very Day after they were apprehended.

Some Time this Summer, Four Men were coming from Galloway, where they had been hearing Mr. Renwick in the Fields, to the Shire of Air, Joseph Wilson, John and Alexander Jamisons, and John Humphrey. A Party of Soldiers overtook them at Knockdon-hill, and upon their Confession they had been hearing a Sermon, they immediately shot Three of them. What were the Reasons of sparing Alexander Jamison, I know not.

Upon the same Day, the same Party of Dragoons took Simon Paterson and David Dun, for any Thing I can find, upon their being at the same Sermon, and carried them with them to the Gallows that was standing at Cumnock, and, without any Trial, Witnesses, or Jury, hanged them the same very Day.

About this Time, a very barbarous Murder was committed upon Thomas Richard in Greenock-mains, in the Parish of Muirkirk, a good Man near Eighty Years of Age. Peter Inglis Cornet, Son to Captain Inglis, with some Soldiers, pretended they were Friends, and some of the Remains of Argyle's Men. One of my Informations bears, that the better to carry on the Cheat, they had Bibles with them, and pressed and prevailed with Thomas to pray pray with them; and when at Prayer, some of them took Notes of some Expressions, and afterwards they advised with him upon a designed Attack which they pretended they were about to make upon a neighbouring Garison. Two other Narratives before me omit these Circumstances, and say, Captain Inglis came in to Thomas's House with Four or Five Men pretending to be Whigs; and after some other Discourse asked him, if he knew where any of the honest Party were. The old Man, in the Innocence of his Heart, suspecting no Cheat, answered, he knew not of any at present, but that he had lodged some of them some Days ago, and was not yet unwilling to give them any Entertainment he had. Thus the Jest was carried on for a little, till one of them bewrayed himself by an Oath, and then they all cast off the Mask, and carried the good old Man to Colonel Douglas then at Cumnock, who precisely upon this alledged Confession, without Jury or Trial, next Day executed him there. I am well informed from a reverend Minister present, that his Case was so favourable, that Three Ladies of the Episcopal Perswasion, upon hearing of it, went to the Colonel to beg his Life, but were not admitted; only they had a Message sent them, that he could shew no Favour to these People.

*William Paterson
in Cambusnethan*

Likewise this Year I find William Paterson, Son to Robert Paterson in Kirkhill, in the Parish of Cambusnethan, who was killed, as we heard, at Airs-moss, was shot in the Fields. This good Man was cast out of his House some Years ago by his Master Muirhouse, merely for Noncompliance with Prelacy. His poor Family was broken and scattered, and he himself forced to wander through many Difficulties, at length taken and sent away to be a Soldier abroad. There he made his Escape, and came home. After some time's hiding, he was again this Year taken in a Place called Charon-beugh, upon a Sabbath. There were Fourteen Persons in that Place, Ten of whom, on the Soldiers Approach, got into a secret Place in the Cave, William and Three others were taken, the other Three took the Abjuration. William refusing it, the Soldiers carried him with them to Evandale Castle, where that Afternoon, without any Trial, he was shot by Captain Bell.

Some other Murders may come in upon some of the following Sections, but those may suffice to give some View of the Bloodshed in the Fields this Year, and this Section is already long enough.

SECTION VII.

Of the Searchings, Oppressions, and Harassings through the Country, and other Sufferings of Presbyterians, not unto Death, till the Parliament met this Year 1685.

Hitherto upon this Year I have mostly given an Account of the Sufferings unto Death, at Edinburgh, and through the West and South: Let me now take a more general View of the Sufferings of such who escaped with their Lives, in the first Months of this Year, and the Difficulties and Harassings of the Country, which were heavy enough in their Kind.

I have already taken notice of the lamentable State of many Places by the Courts, and the Procedure of the Soldiers in pressing the Abjuration; and indeed it would be wearisome both to the Reader and me, to go through all the other Courts which were held, the fearful Spoils committed upon Parishes and Families, the many Wandrings vast Multitudes were forced to this Year, whereby they were in Deaths often. In this Place I shall only take notice of some before the Meeting of the Parliament, and leave the rest to another Section.

The Models and first Essays of that Persecution, which afterward was carried on with less Form and Order through the Kingdom, were many Times formed and begun at Edinburgh. Accordingly, in prosecution of the Act of Council formerly noticed, the Magistrates of Edinburgh publish a Proclamation January 9. for taking up exact Lists of all the Indwellers in the City and its Liberties, which I have added App. No. 105. I need make no Remarks upon it. Certainly it was hard enough to oblige People on Oath to give in Lists of Persons who had lodged with them for near Ten Weeks Time, especially such who kept publick Houses, and might have different Lodgers every Night.

It is not improbable the same Method was taken in most part of the other considerable Burghs. As this was an arbitrary Imposition, contrary to the Liberty of the Subject, so it was of no small Use to the Designs in Hand. I have formerly observed, that when the Persecution in strates of Edin-

in the Country turned warm, the Cities were a Kind of Refuge to the Sufferers. And now resolving to spare none, they endeavour to prevent this.

To help forward all the other Parts of Persecution through the Country, and according to the Instructions we formerly heard were given to Lieutenant-general Drummond, several new Garisons were planted, and the old ones strengthened. From what is narrated above, we may easily guess what a Burden these Garisons were to the oppressed Country, and what Difficulties they brought to the suffering Hiders and Wanderers.

Their Parties were almost continually in Motion; and when in the Garison they were still ready by Night and Day, to move upon the first Hints given them from the Multitudes of Informers and Spies they had every where, and attack Persons, Houses, or Parishes. Most of these Informations were groundless, and consequently many of their Attacks were upon innocent Persons, even by their own Laws; but readily they returned not empty, where there were no real Delinquents, they made some or other guilty, and it was easy now to do so. This Month the Garisons were strengthened or settled at Earlstoun, Waterhead, Machinmore in Galloway, and several Places in Air, Lanerk, and Nithsdale.

This Month the Town of Glasgow, and the Places round, were mightily oppressed with Searches, and they continued very frequent for Two or Three Months. Their Uneasiness to the Subject, and the Severities exercised at them, I have more than once pointed at; and I shall give only another Instance of the Treatment of poor People, at them this Month.

Thomas Jackson in the Parish of Eastwood, of whom before, was in the Year 1683. apprehended somewhere near Hamiltoun, and for mere Nonconformity banished to West Flanders. There he was sold as a Slave, and engaged in the War against the Spaniards. He took the first Opportunity that offered, and left the Service, and got into a French Ship coming home, and from France got over again to his native Country.

Towards the Beginning of this Year, in a close Search at Glasgow, he was taken by Major Balfour and Colonel Buchan. When seized, he made some Struggle to defend himself, and escape, in which he was fearfully wounded in the Head, and terribly mangled. Upon Examination they found he had been banished, and broke his Act of Banishment, and threatened him with present Death.

Accordingly he was carried down to the Green, and ordered to be shot. This did neither damp nor confuse him; he was ready for his Change, and no way discouraged. When the Soldiers were drawn out to fire upon him, and he set before them, and in some Measure had tasted of the Bitterness of Death, somewhat or other made them alter their Resolution, if it was settled before.

And he was sent back to Prison to endure greater Hardships. In a few Days he was sent in to Edinburgh, where he lay in the Thieves-hole, with Irons upon him, Two and thirty Weeks. All that Time he was never free of the Irons, both upon his Legs and Arms, except once for a few Hours, when he was brought before some Committee or other, who remitted him to the Irons again, for Seventeen Weeks more; at length he was banished to New Jersey, and died in the Voyage.

These Searchings continued at Glasgow, and it stood very hard now with all Nonconformists. On the 6 of March, Three honest good Men were seized, Robert Logan, George Muir, and John Gilfillan, who were upon their Hiding, merely because they could not fall in with the present Impositions. Major Balfour, (who when I write this, 1715. is among the Rebels at Perth, and in Fife) by his Informers, had Notice they were in the House of one Sarah Kirkland, and sent a Party of his Men, and seized them. Two of them, without any Power from, or Sentence of the Council, I have heard of, were sent off by the Major to the Plantations, the other was sent to Dunotter.

The Woman in whose House they were, though nothing could be otherwise charged upon her, was put in Prison, and for some Months kept there, and, in May, sent with other Prisoners to Dunotter, but happily by the Way found Means to escape. She was forced to wander up and down in remote Corners, till the Liberty 1687. The Soldiers, as was their Custom in such Cases, rifled her House and left her nothing.

About this same Time, a profane Fellow in Glasgow, John Speir, listed himself a Soldier under Major Balfour. The Army now was the common Shore for profligate and wicked Youths, and they were very fit Tools for Persecution. This Man got an Order to search Mrs. Gardner's House, Relict to Mr. James Gardner, a Presbyterian Minister, of whom before, and there he caught Mr. William Boyd, then a Student of Divinity, afterwards licensed abroad, and at the Revolution ordained Minister at Dalry in Galloway. In a little Time Mr. Boyd got out; but very soon after this, Speir was ordered to stand Sentinel at the Stable-green Port at Glasgow, and whether in Drink, or what the Reason was, I know not, but he fell off the Battlement upon the Port, and broke his Neck.

This same Month affords flaming Instances of the Severities of the Soldiers up and down the Country, and particularly of Claverhouse in more Places than one. Upon the Rumours of Argyle's Designs upon Scotland, and Monmouth's upon England, the Violences of the Army increased, and the Ravages now made, especially by Claverhouse in Clydsdale, Anandale, and

1685. and Nithsdale, may justly surprize the Reader; it is but some general Hints which I shall touch at, for Particulars would be endless.

Upon the 10 of March, all Freeholders, Heritors, and Gentlemen in Nithsdale and Anandale, and, I suppose, in most other Shires of the Kingdom, but I name those as being the Scene of the Severities now used, were summoned to attend the King's Standard, and the Militia in the several Shires were raised. Wherever Claverhouse came, he resolved upon narrow and universal Work.

He used to set his Horse upon the Hills and Eminencies, and that in different Parties, that none might escape; and there his Foot went through the lower, marshy and mossy Places, where the Horse could not do so well. The Shire he parcelled out in so many Divisions, and Six or Eight Miles square would be taken in at once. In every Division the whole Inhabitants, Men and Women, young and old, without Distinction, were all driven into one convenient Place.

When thus got together, he called out as many of them as he saw proper, at once, till he got through them, and interrogate them severally, if they owned the Duke of Tork, as he was formerly called, to be King. When they had done so, he took an Oath of all the Men that should stand by him, and still own him as King, and never do any Thing against him.

Not satisfied with this, he interrogate them next, if they had taken the Abjuration; and some, whom he suspected, he posed upon their Oath, whether they had ever repented their taking the Oath now imposed. If they answered, they did not, then he made them promise, upon their renouncing their Part in Heaven, they should never rue their so doing; and when they had complied with all his Impositions, he would let them go, saying, Argyle shall have a perjured Dog of you.

All this was done to great Numbers of poor Country People, surrounded all the while with the Soldiers, with their Guns charged, and under bloody Threatnings, they should presently die if they complied not in every Point. Where any refused to swear, his Way was most barbarous; the Man was carried some few Paces from the rest, and a Napkin tied up on his Face, and the Soldiers were ordered to fire either blank Powder, or to shoot over his Head. And when they had thus brought him under the Terror of Death, he was once more offered his Life upon his swearing, and promising to inform against all disloyal Persons. By those Methods he carried his Designs in a great Measure.

Somewhat yet more cruel, if possible, follows. All the Children in the Division were gathered together by themselves, under Ten Years, and above Six Years of Age, and a Party of Soldiers were drawn out before them. Then they were bid pray, for they were going to be shot. Some of them would answer, Sir, we cannot pray. Then they were ordered to tell when they saw Men and Guns in their House, and if any Men with Guns and Swords got any Meat in their House, or who took it to the Door to them, and such other Questions, and they should not be shot.

Several Children of Seven or Eight Years of Age, were carried about with the Soldiers, who sometimes would offer them all fair Things, if they would tell of their Parents, and what People used to come to, them late at Night, and go away early in the Morning, or if they knew where their Fathers were, and who in the House carried any Thing to them. At other Times they treated them most inhumanely, threatening them with Death, and at some little Distance would fire Pistols without Ball in their Face. Some of the poor Children were frightened almost out of their Wits, and others of them stood all out with a Courage perfectly above their Age.

These Accounts are so far out of the ordinary Way of Mankind, that I would not have insert them, had I not before me several Informations agreeing in all these Circumstances, written at this Time by People who knew the Truth of them; and I own, if Multitudes of Things done in this terrible Period, did not convince me that the Soldiers stood at nothing, tho' never so odd, that might serve their Purposes, I could not give that Credit to them I am forced to do.

I have omitted many Particulars and Circumstances of the Severities of Claverhouse in the South Country, at this Time; but there is one vouched Instance I cannot pass, which will support those Generals, and shew, that their out of the way Methods were not without some Success.

Severity to a Child.

In the Parish of Closburn, Claverhouse with a Party came to a Country Man's House, upon some Information given him against the Man. It was little Wonder People fled at this Time, when by any Means they could. Thus the whole Family, getting some Notice that the Soldiers were near by, fled, leaving a Child of Eight or Nine Years of Age in the House. Claverhouse finding he was the Man's Son, and that by fair Means he would answer no Questions, shot one of his Pistols at some Distance from him. The Child stood firm, and would answer no Questions. Then he shot another Pistol very near his Head, which terribly frightened him; and at length he told them all he knew anent his Father, the Family, and Neighbours.

According to the Informations thus gotten, he sent his Parties up and down the Country in quest of such as escaped him. Thus he continued until Argyle's Defeat, exercising all Manner of Severities, driving Thousands of Kine and Sheep from Eskdale, and the adjacent Country. After the Earl was taken, he went into Edinburgh to the Council, and boasted of the mighty Feats he had done in the South. 1685.

During those Months, and particularly that of April, the Parishes of Closburn and Dalgermo were sore harassed, as appears by many Instances before me. The Persecutors now here and there through the Country, had trained up many to be Spies, and taught them to feign themselves Sufferers; and when they came to be known in one Part of the Country, they would send them to another at great Distance, where for some time they were not known. Spies.

When they had been some while with the Wanderers, till they understood their Places of Retreat, they came off, and were Guides to the Soldiers; and as soon as by those Means any of the Sufferers were seized, the Houses where they were, were generally destroyed, and all in them portable carried off, the Doors taken off, and Windows turned out, and it was a great Favour if they were not burnt, as many indeed were.

It is observed in my Informations, that great Cruelties were this way exercised by Colonel Douglas. All Persons found upon the High-way, or in the Fields at their Work, were forced upon Oath to answer their Interrogatories, and, generally speaking, all who came to their Hands were forced to take the Abjuration; any who scrupled were immediately carried with them, and it was much if they were not shot on the Spot.

Many Accounts are come to my Hand, of the oppressive Carriage of the Soldiers in other Places at this Time, too long to be inserted. From West Calder, Livingstone, and the neighbouring Parishes, I find it observed, that when there had been some slackning of the Severities after the killing of Kennoway and Stuart, and in pressing the Abjuration, the savage Highlanders came in among them, towards the End of April, and all who had escaped the former Courts were sore put to it, and many made Prisoners. Severities in West calder, Livingstone, &c.

Their March was very swift and sudden, and a great many were surprised. It was generally reckoned their March would have been from Stirling straight to Glasgow, had it not been for the pressing Instances of some of the Clergy, particularly the Curates of Mid-calder and Livingstone, who were most earnest to have them among their Parishioners; and the first Companies of them were in West-calder, before the Country about knew of their coming. They searched for all Nonconformists and suspect Persons in that Parish Two Days, and committed great Spoils. Another Party was in Bathgate, and another in Shots Parish.

Great was the Spite and Virulence Mr. George Honnyman, Curate in Livingstone, manifested against the People in the West End of his Parish, at this Time, who kept not the Church so well as he would have had them, and several who had escaped at the Abjuration Courts. I must not enter upon all the particular Instances before me. He sent Directions and a written List to the commanding Officer at Bathgate, and the Names of such as he would have apprehended. Next Day a terrible Ravage was made, many, whose Names I omit, were taken. Six Horses were taken from the Fall-house, worth upwards of Four hundred Merks, and considerable Sums of Money, an Hundred Merks from some, and less from others; all which came to a very large Sum. William Lightbody, James Fairly, James Walker, Thomas Steil, and John Rankin, a Servant lesed a little in his Understanding, were carried Prisoners to Lanerk, and lay some Months there. And that Day the Three Parties before mentioned, made a diligent Search for Wanderers through Livingstone, Calder, Carnwath, and Auchter-muir. Share of Mr. George Honnyman in the Many remarkable Escapes and Deliverances ly before me in the Accounts from those Parishes, which I must omit, particularly of one young Man who was once among the Soldiers Hands, but not knowing him, he got off, for whom they said their Minister Mr. Honnyman had promised them Five hundred Merks. If they wronged their Friend they must be blamed. But the following Account, which several Informations before me bear, is yet recent in that Country, and, what I could not pass, makes the Soldiers Tale not improbable.

Amongst others in Livingstone Parish, upon whom Mr. Honnyman hounded out the Bathgate Party, they had particular Directions against Thomas and Robert Russels of Fall-house, Heritors. Their Horses satisfied the Highlanders, and they themselves were not seized. They would willingly have had their Horses back, and knew no Body could sooner prevail than their Minister; and tho' none of them had taken the Abjuration Oath, which was Honnyman's Quarrel with them, yet they were both his Hearers, and one of them his Elder, and they did not expect he would flatly betray them.

Accordingly they came to him, and besought him to interpose, that they might have back their Horses. At first he abused them terribly, for not appearing at the late Courts, and not taking the Oath, and giving an ill Example to others. They bore all, and insisted, he would make them some Help to get their Horses. At length he seemed to yield, and wrote a Letter directed to the Commander of the Forces at Lanerk, and after he had sealed it, gave it them, with Orders to deliver it themselves.

Suspecting nothing, they went away, and came the length of Carlouk, in their Way to Lanerk, where telling their Errand to some Acquaintances, and Jealousies arising, they agreed to open the Letter, and found as follows. 'Sir, I have sent you Two Rebels, grip them fast, all you have taken from them is too little.' Upon which they returned home, and heard Mr. Hounnyman no more, but when forced to it.

Severities to a Gentleman in Galloway.

Should I run through all the Particulars I have by me, of the Hardships and Severities up and down different Parishes these Three or Four Months, this Account would run a great length. I shall therefore end this Section, with a particular vouched Account of a Gentleman in the Parish of Anworth in Galloway, who, being forced to yield to what was against his Inclinations, and afterwards a Grief to him, shall be nameless. I only set it down as a new Instance of the Methods, and imposing Spirit of this Time.

The Laird of Lag sent a Party suddenly to this Gentleman's House, hoping to find him, but happily he was out of the Way. The Soldiers however stayed all Night in the House, and in the Morning spoiled it of all the Clothes they could reach, and carried off Five good Horses.

In a few Days Colonel Douglas, and the said Lag, came to the House with a Party, and missing their Prey, the Soldiers carried off what they left at their former Visit, and spoiled what they could not carry off for Bulk. They slit up Feather-beds and Bolsters, and turned out the Feathers, and carried off the Tiking, with all other Things in the House or Office-houses, that were portable.

Again, upon the 7 of April, Captain Douglas came out of Kirkcudbright with a Company of Foot, and made a narrow Search for the Gentleman, but found him not. The Foot were not a Mile off the House, till Lag came with a Party of Horse, and renewed the Search for the said Gentleman, and some others he alledged to be with him. He brought in all the Neighbours, and swore them under the most horrid Oaths and Imprecations, whether they knew any Thing about the Haunts of the Persons he was seeking.

It happened, that among the Country People, there was one of the same Name and Sir-name with a Person Lag was searching for, and this was Crime enough to the poor Man. It was averred by Lag, that he undoubtedly held Correspondence with the Rebel he was in quest of, and he treated him with abundance of Cruelty. He caused cover his Face with a Napkin, and set him upon his Knees to be shot, and ordered Three of the Dragoons to present their Pieces to shoot him. The Country Man's Wife being by, and seeing her Husband in this Case, cried out with Tears to spare his Life, and take him with them till they found the other they wanted. The poor Woman's Tears, I believe, had no great Weight with Lag; however, he caused untie him, and carried him with them, and another, who was a near Neighbour to one they were seeking.

They seized the Gentleman's Daughter, who either could not, or would not tell where her Father was. She was next asked, where she was last Night, when they were searching the House. The young Gentlewoman expecting no Hazard could ensue, said, she had been in the House of a neighbouring Gentlewoman; whereupon Lag immediately sent a Party with her to that Gentlewoman's House, and carried both away Prisoners.

With their Two Prisoners they went away to the Sea-shore, and searched among the Rocks at the Sea-side, leaving a Party of Horse at some Distance, to catch any they should chase out of the Caves about the Shore, and there they found the Gentleman and another for whom they were searching.

They returned by his House, which they now perfectly spoiled, destroying every Thing they had not rendred useless before. These Two, with the Two Gentlewomen, were carried to Wigtoun Prison. Upon tendering the Oath of Abjuration, one of them yielded, and Three refused; and in a little Time Two more took it, after an Assize had been sworn, and an Indictment given. Lag returning in a Day or Two, and hearing one had stood out, swore terribly, that he should be in a few Minutes, as he impiously called the future State, barking and flying, and called an Assize, who in a little Time brought him in guilty; and it was reckoned a mighty Piece of Lenity that his Life was spared, upon his complying at length. These are Part of their Ways.

S E C T. VIII.

Of the Actings of the Parliament, convened April 23. as far as they relate to the Church.

IT is now some Time since we had a Parliament in Scotland; the last was under the Conduct of a Popish Commissioner, and this Parliament purged of many excellent Patriots, was intirely obsequious to a Popish King. This Prodigy unknown since the Reformation, a Papist at the Head of Affairs, as in the former Session it produced the contradictory Test, very agreeable to introduce the Contradictions of Popery, so now further Measures are laid down to advance Popery and Persecution, and rid the King and his Under-managers of the Trouble they had from some firm Protestants, whom now they forfeit by whole Sale; and when there was scarce any Room to go beyond what the former Session of Parliament, and the Council since had done, all their iniquous and arbitrary Procedure is ratified, and some Improvements made upon them.

Summary of this Section.

The late King designed a Parliament should have sitten in March this Year; and a Meeting of Parliament was now become necessary in the Entry of this Reign, to levy Money, recognize the King's Accession without a Coronation Oath; and so by a Proclamation February 20. a Parliament is called to meet April 9. By another Proclamation, March 22. the Parliament is adjourned to April 23. And March 27. the Advocate is ordered to process (besides those formerly mentioned) before the Parliament, Thomas Kennedy of Grange, John Queensberry's Commission to represent the King in Parliament, was read in Council.

Parliament called.

The Parliament sat down at Edinburgh April 28. We have already had a just Character of this Parliament in Torwoodlee's Case above; and I shall only notice further, that the most part of the Acts of this Parliament were rescinded, as iniquous and greivous, after the Revolution in the Year 1693. I shall now give some Account of their Proceedings from the printed Acts and Speeches, and some Hints of their Procedure from some Notes I have before me, taken by one who was present at every Session.

Meets April 28

The Parliament was first entertained with his Majesty's Letter, which was backed by the Commissioner in a Speech, and this was seconded by Perth the Chancellor in a very remarkable Discourse; and this same Day the Parliament returned an Answer to the King's Letter. All these are already printed, but not being in every Body's Hands, I insert them App. N<sup>o</sup>. 106. It seems now, they behoved to be first printed at London; for at Edinburgh I find them reprinted by the Heirs of Mr. Anderson from the London Copy; the Reason of which I know not. I shall make a few Reflections upon them, which will tend to clear up some Facts and Expressions in them every Reader will not understand.

King's Letter. Commissioner and Chancellor's Speech, with the Parliament's Answer. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 106.

Some pretty remarkable Turns offer themselves in the King's Letter, which I doubt not were either framed by, or communicated with our Managers at Edinburgh. The King tells them, They had been eminent in Times past (the former Reign no doubt) in a Compliance with his Desires, to a Degree never to be forgotten by him, and he hopes, never to be contradicted by their future Practice. How far this Compliment was proper for him to give, them to receive, or honourable to the late King his Brother, I must leave to others; I doubt not in the least that the King speaks Fact; and as he had the intire Management of Affairs in Scotland during the last Years of his Brother's Reign, so the Parliament was very obsequious to his Desires, as the Sufferers felt with a Witness.

Remarks upon them.

The Truth of the subsequent Paragraph I cannot say so much for, That the aggrandizing his Power and Authority was necessary for their Safety, and to secure their Rights and Properties. This unlimited Way of speaking would suppose an Infallibility in Popish Kings as well as the Pope, and will be Matter of just Doubt with every Body of Sense. However, he assures them, he would maintain his Power and Authority in its greatest Lustre. And he was as good as his Word, and essayed it in the most extensive Way, when he assumed the dispensing Power.

He adds, his Design in this Parliament, was to secure their Religion; his was already secured to him by the Test Act, and they had a noble Guardian of him to theirs, against all Fanatical Contrivances, and Murderers, Assassines; and other hard Words against such who were called now Fanatics, Murders, and Assassinations, were peculiar to his own Religion, and abhorred by all real Protestants.

I only further observe, that to pave the Way for the dispensing Power he had in View, the Laws and Acts of former Parliaments are termed, The good and wholsom Laws by you hitherto offered: A very diminutive Way of speaking of the Laws already made, to the Legislature, which would not have gone well down in our old Scots Parliaments. In the last Place, he commends his Commissioner, as a Person zealous for his Interests in the Time of his greatest Difficulties. Which probably was a true Character, but how far for the Duke's Honour among real Protestants, is left to others to determine.

The Duke of Queensberry in his Speech, acquaints the Parliament, that the King's obliging Letter had left little to him to say; and when Matter fails, he falls a punning upon the Day (April 28.) and its being the Coronation Day in England, and his Majesty's taking their Advice as soon as he was upon the Throne, and the Honour they had to be the first Parliament under a Popish King.

Next he tells them, how mindful the King was of this Kingdom's Duty and Loyalty to his late Majesty, and himself when in Scotland. I did not know before that Loyalty had been due to any Subject, till we have it here extended thus far by this great Patron of it. Indeed the Duke of Tork was in effect King in Scotland before now. Then, to compose the Minds of faithful Subjects, he assures them of his Majesty's princely Resolutions to maintain the Religion, and Government of the Church established by Law, and of his Favour to the regular Clergy; and concludes what he is to say upon this Head, with some Encomiums upon their incomparable Prince. He was so indeed in more Respects than one, which the Reader may guess at.

His Grace comes next to put the Parliament in Mind of their Work, to assert the Prerogative of the Crown, and amply to establish the Revenue; and when they have thus settled their King, their next Work is to fall upon the Sufferers. The King expects, from their Prudence and Loyalty, effectual Means will be fallen upon for destroying that Party. This is Root and Branch Work indeed; and nothing will answer the Expectation of a Popish King, but the Destruction of Protestants. This had been the Council's Work for some Time, and the Parliament must ratify all they had done; and, to spirit them up to this Work of Destruction, he gives them Names, which, without any Stretch, might be easily turned over upon their bloody Persecutors, Enemies of Mankind, Wretches of such monstrous Practices, as past Ages never heard, and those to come will hardly believe, and execrable in their Villanies.

He insinuates, that they are no inconsiderable Party, and have Support and Correspondence not yet discovered; and therefore presseth, That they be not longer dallied with, but that the utmost Severity may be effectually applied, and all Ways taken to find out their Favourers, and their retired and secret Haunts. Higher he could not run, than the utmost Severities effectually applied; which indeed is a short Character of the Procedure of the Council and Army for some Time; but his own Conscience might know, and the Reader by this Time does know, how much those poor People he speaks of as Fanaticks, had been dallied with; and I question much, if any where, even in France or Turky, we shall meet with such bloody and inhumane Exhortations from a Throne, though they were very consonant, it must be owned, with the Religion of him who filled it.

Further, he comes to urge the Parliament, to manage the Prosecution of the Noblemen and Gentlemen alledged to be concerned in the late Conspiracy, with the utmost Violence; and aggravates that Conspiracy, far beyond any thing that ever could be really found in it; and requires Justice to be done upon the Concealers, as well as Advisers and Contrivers of it, as knowing it was only concealing of what, they alledged, the Laws required to be discovered, that could be proven against the Persons to be sifted before them. This remarkable Speech is concluded with a Compliment, as I take it, mainly to himself, That tho' his Unfitness to be Commissioner, was more obvious to himself than any of them; yet he was resolved to serve his Majesty firmly and boldly, as, he says, was his former Practice in other great Truits; and this way he would make up his great Defects.

The Chancellor succeeded the Commissioner in a handsom Speech, far better said than the other; but, as the Humour of this Time ran now, larded with most virulent Reflections upon the suffering Party. I cannot but notice one Part of it as the Height of Railing. The Chancellor complains,

‘ That a new Sect was sprung up from the Dung-hill, and the Dregs of the People, who kill by pretended Inspiration, who, instead of the Temple of the Lord, &c. have nothing in their Mouths but the Word of God, wresting that blessed Conveyance of his holy Will to us, to justify a Practice suggested to them, by him who was a Murderer from the Beginning; who having modelled themselves into a Commonwealth, (whose Idol is that accursed Per of the Covenant, and whose only Rule is to have no Rule at all) have proceeded to declare themselves no longer his Majesty's Subjects. He adds, Those Monsters bring a publick Reproach upon the Nation, while, in the foreign Gazettes, we are mentioned as acting the vilest Assassinations, and horrid Villanies.’

Here is a Heap of Scandal cast upon the Societies; for though the general Terms used now in the publick Papers, are levelled, so as they may reach all the Sufferers under the Terms of Fanaticks, yet this seems to point at their late Declaration; and yet they many times declared, they never allowed or practised Assassination. This Doctrine then must be left to the Chancellor's Friends the Papists, since the Society People say, they never wrested the Scriptures to defend, or pretended Inspiration to vindicate it; and, had they been for recriminating, they needed not have gone far off: The daily Murders in the Fields came much nearer Assassinations, than any thing ever they allowed. 1685.

They pleaded likewise, That Self-defence was no upstart Sect nor Doctrine, but as old as the Reformation, Christianity, or Humanity. It was false they were modelled into a Commonwealth; and whatever Overtures were made by one or Two this way, if any such were, ought not to be charged on the whole Society.

A considerable Part indeed of the Sufferers, and many more than under the last Reign, did not own the Authority of a Popish King, and could not subject to him. The Chancellor perfectly mistakes, when he says, they made an Idol of the Paper of the Covenant; but most maliciously and groundlessly terms it a curst Paper, which we need not be surprized at, from one who either had, or shortly did declare himself a Papist; and the Covenants are mostly levelled against Popery. I shall not say, but some ignorant People, then and since, may have in some Sense idolized our Covenants, and most excellent Things in themselves are apt to be so dealt with, and have run to some Extremities in their Opinion and Expressions, as to those solemn and religious Ties those Nations are under; but the most Part valued them, as they had good Reason, being national Actions, very much countenanced from Heaven, and really the Honour and Glory of those Nations.

On the whole, this unjust Charge given in face of Parliament, and published to the World, is indeed a publick Reproach upon the Nation, and being false, could not but expose the Reputation of the Kingdom, far more in the Eyes of Foreigners, than any of the little Stories he mentions in the foreign News-papers. I shall say nothing of the beautiful Picture he draws of his Master the King, in the Close of his Speech; I love not to rake in his Ashes; and Allowances must be made to a Servant, by this Time, I suppose, a Papist, and in such a Post; and there was need of all the Chancellor's Eloquence, to recommend a Popish Prince to a Protestant and free People.

When the Parade of those Speeches was ended, the Parliament, at that first Meeting, went through a great deal of Work, or rather consented to what the Managers had made ready to their Hand: Probably it would be their first Work to agree to an Answer to his Majesty's Letter, which is likewise in the last named Number of the Appendix.

Generally speaking, this is a Repetition of what was sent to them, and so the less needs be said upon it. They promise to leave nothing undone to extirpate all Fanaticism, especially those fanatical Murderers and Assassines. 'Tis good that any Distinction is made; but however, Extirpation is resolved upon against all, and in this they fully acted their Part in the following Acts.

They chime in with the offering of Laws to the King, the Phrase now so much in Fashion; and they desire his Majesty to expect, That they will think his Commands sacred as his Person, and that his Inclinations will prevent their Debates; Phrases agreeable enough to the Language of some of the former Parliaments. And they bring in my Mind a few Lines, written lately by a masterly Hand, which perhaps may not be unwelcome to the Reader.

- When first Mankind were sway'd by passive Rules,
- Princes turn'd Tyrants, and their Subjects Fools;
- These laid aside their Sense, those took the Sword,
- And I will be obeyed was then the Word:
- To which the silly senseless Slaves replied,
- We're all your Asses, pray get up and ride.
- If e'er their Sovereign bid them cut their Throat,
- The Wretch made no Demur, but cry'd, He'd do't.
- If Heads were sent for, unjust Sentence given,
- He that withstood his Prince, resisted Heaven:
- So rather than they would their King controul,
- The People damn'd themselves to save their Soul.

This Parliament indeed, as soon as the King's Inclinations were discovered by the Ministry, had few Debates: Every thing went smoothly on, all being upon one Lay, till next Year the dispensing Power awakned a good Number out of their Lethargy; and, at this first Sederunt, Two very material Acts were passed, besides what we have seen.

Decency and Form led them to begin with Religion, and accordingly, an Act, for the Security of the Protestant Religion, is drawn up, and voted immediately. Though one would think, this had been the greatest Work they had to do, under a Popish King, yet it is soonest got through. I doubt not but a preconcerted Draught was ready, and Argyle, and other Patriots and Protestants, who bred some Trouble about the Test, are out of the Way. The Act is so short, that it needs scarce be turned over to the Appendix, and runs, Act for the Security of the Protestant Religion.

‘OUR sovereign Lord, with Consent of his Estates in Parliament convened, ratifies and confirms all the Acts and Statutes formerly past for the Security, Liberty, and Freedom of the true Church of God, and the Protestant Religion presently professed within this Kingdom, in their whole Strength and Tenor, as if they were here particularly set down and exprest.’

Remarks on it.

It was not yet seasonable to appear openly against the Protestant Interest; and therefore, under Pretence of ratifying former Acts, without any thing of new Security offered, a loose and double Expression is thrown in, which might be in due Time explained, the true Church of God; and when this was explained, nothing but the mere Profession of the Protestant Religion remained ratified by this Act.

At the best we can suppose, here Matters are left as they were, Vox & præterea nihil; and since it was not convenient any thing should be done under his Majesty, that might thwart with Things and Acts of another Nature in View, the Laws for the Reformation are not yet abolished, but left as they stood, and no further Hedges added to hinder a bigotted Papist to model all at his Pleasure; and yet this Act was mightily magnified, as a Proof of the King's Sincerity in preserving our Religion.

The Parliament's Declaration before their Offer of Duty App. No. 107.

That same Day, the Parliament make their Offer of Duty to the King. This is in the printed Acts, and lies out of my Road. It is preceded by a Declaration, which I have annexed App. No. 107. that the Reader may observe how much the Spirit of Persecution had depressed and sunk the Scots Nation, and how slavish they are in their Politicks, and how little Sense of Liberty remained now with them. The Parliament, in this Declaration, runs out upon the Antiquity of our Nation, upwards of Two thousand Years, in an uninterrupted Line of One hundred and Eleven Kings, in pretty positive Expressions, whereby their parliamentary Authority is some way embarked upon the Advocate's Side, in his Controversy with the Bishop of St. Asaph.

Remarks.

I hope they are right as to the Antiquity of our Nation, but can never think, that the Blessings narrated in the Declaration, are owing to the absolute Authority, wherewith our Kings were invested by the fundamental Law of our Monarchy, for this Reason, that they had no such absolute Authority; and it is most plain from our History, and our oldest Records, that the Authority of our Scots Kings was very far from being absolute.

Next, they declare their Detestation of all Principles and Oppositions, contrary or derogatory to the King's sacred, supreme, sovereign, absolute Power and Authority, which none, whether Persons, or collective Bodies, can participate of any manner of way, or upon any Pretext, but in Dependence upon him, and by Commission from him. This is a Stretch of the Prerogative beyond Reason, Law, and Scripture, and to me appears to clash with several of our standing Laws, as to the Liberties and Privileges of Parliaments. Consequentially to this Declaration, they promise entire Obedience to his Majesty, without Reserve; which is certainly more than any Mortal, far less a Papist, ought to claim. They conclude their Paper with annexing the Excise to the Crown for ever; which is a Step of Loyalty, beyond what other Parliaments could hitherto be brought up to.

By this Time the Reader hath some View of the Progress this loyal Parliament makes in one Day. One would think, they needed have sit no longer, after they had made a Resignation of themselves, without Reserve, to their King, and that they might have left the rest of the Things to be done by him; but it was proper that some more particular Acts should yet be passed, under the Shadow of Parliamentary Power, which I shall just now come to.

Council's Proclamation for putting the Kingdom in a Posture of Defence. App. No. 108.

If once I had noticed, that the Privy Council, this same Day, emit a Proclamation, for putting the Kingdom in a Posture of Defence, which is likewise annexed App. No. 108. probably by this Time the Government had some Hints of the intended Invasion upon Scotland, by the Earl of Argyle; and with a View to this; the Council gives this Alarm to the Nation.

Remarks on it.

Observations upon it may be very short. The Title given to the late King, our dearest Brother, of renowned and eternal Memory, is one Evidence of the low Pass Religion is at, when the incommunicable Perfections of the Deity, are, without any Ceremony, attributed to Creatures in Flattery and Adulation. The Militia in the eastern Shires, and all the fencible Men in the northern Shires, are commanded to be in a Readiness, with Fourteen Days Provision; and only the Heritors, Feuars, Liferenters, and Wadsetters in the western Shires, have this Trouble given them. The Presbyterian Gentlemen, generally speaking, in those Shires, were either forfeited, or in Prison, and the rest had gone into the Test; but the common People, after so much Barbarity, could not be depended upon. Particular Care is ordered to be taken of the Coast-towns; and all are required to obey Collectors, Custom-house Officers, and Waiters, and rise with them upon their Call; and such who correspond with any now called Rebels, or do not inform against them, are to be reckoned Art and Part with them. This brought new Hardships upon the Sufferers.

To return to the Parliament, they are very close at their Work, and the most Part of their Acts, either directly, or by Consequence, relate to the Subject Matter of this History. Upon

Upon the first of May, Two Acts are made to facilitate Processes of Treason before the Justiciary, now in Dependence, and to remove Obstructions in the Road of forfeiting and ruining Noblemen, Gentlemen, and others. By one of them, 'The King and Estates of Parliament, approve and ratify the former Custom used by his Majesty's Commissioners for Justiciary, in proceeding against Pannels already in Prison, and indicted for Treason, in 24 Hours: But for the future his Majesty allows such Pannels to be cited upon 48 Hours.' This is not the last Instance we shall meet with of the Parliament's approving the irregular Procedure of the Managers of the Persecution at Edinburgh, yea, to do so, seems to be a great Part of their Work. They make Laws to look backward, and give a Kind of Parliamentary Pardon and Protection, for former Violations of the Rights and Liberties of Mankind. It is but a very little that they mend the Matter, and after they have made themselves guilty of the Irregularities of the Justiciary we have heard of, the Time is allowed to be doubled. I pretend to no Knowledge in criminal Forms, but 24 or 48 Hours appears to me a very short Time for Men to make Defences upon Life and Death. And this it self does not reach the Cases of several we have met with, who were taken, tried, and executed in less than 24 Hours. And the Act's being confined to Pannels in Prison, mends the Matter very little, since the Officers of the Army, and I know not how many others, were impowered to imprison when they pleased.

Act for allowing the Justiciary to proceed in Processes of Treason upon Citations of 48 Hours.

The other Act, of the same Date, statutes and ordains, 'That such who being cited to be Witnesses in Cases of Treason, House or Field-conventicles, or Church Irregularities, do refuse to depone, they shall be liable to be punished as guilty of those Crimes respectively, in which they refuse to be Witnesses; it being always declared, that those Depositions so emitted, shall not militate against the Deponent himself any manner of way.'

Act about Witnesses in Cases of Treason.

Certainly, it was neither the Necessity, nor Reasonableness of the Matter here statuted, which brought the Parliament into this Law, but merely to ratify and give Weight to the former Procedure of the Privy Council, and Justiciary. Some Reflections, I suppose, have been made already upon this Practice. It must be reckoned severe and hard upon a Man, because he will not witness against his Neighbour, Friend, or Father, for being at a Field-conventicle, to find him guilty, and send him in to Eternity, as is ordained just now by another Act.

Remarks:

It needs scarce be further observed, that this Act is calculated to expose the whole of the Sufferers to the Odium of the World. Treason and Church Irregularities are put on a Level, and classed together. And it is framed to encourage Deponents against the persecuted Party, by freeing them from any Share in the Guilt, that might fall upon them by their Deposition: But some of them, as we have heard, found that the Government wanted not other Means, when their Service was over, to make them as guilty as those against whom they are thus encouraged to swear against, even without using their own Depositions.

By the written Minutes before me of this Sederunt, I find that Cesnock's Bill for Exculpation, was this Day, May 1. before the Lords of the Articles, consisting of his Defences, that he was alibi, that such as he had conversed with, who were at Bothwell, had taken the Bond, that his Case was res habtenus judicata, and an Enumeration of the Steps of his Loyalty: But the short Hints before me do not bear what was done about it. We shall find him afterwards forfeited.

Cesnock's Bill for Exculpation.

Upon the 6 of May, Three other most iniquous Acts were made; the first whereof, my written Account says, was passed nemine contradicente; and all of them, with the former Two, were that same Day touched with the Sceptre, to the lasting Reproach of this Parliament, and as Evidences what Men, Protestants, and Presbyterians in particular, may expect under a Popish Prince. They deserve our particular Consideration.

The first of them is against the Covenants, and I insert it here. 'Our sovereign Lord, and Estates of Parliament, do hereby declare, that the giving or taking the National Covenant, as explained in the Year 1638. or of the League and Covenant, (so commonly called) or writing in Defence thereof, or owning them as lawful or obligatory upon themselves or others, shall infer the Crime and Pains of Treason.'

Act against the Covenants.

No doubt, by this Act, the Prelates and Enemies of Presbyterians, reckoned they had gotten the Grave-stone put upon the covenanted Work of Reformation; but a very great Body of People still owned it, and that notwithstanding this Iniquity established by a Law; and this Work, which was the Glory of these Kingdoms, had and hath its Witnesses, and even a Resurrection at the happy Revolution, when our Doctrine, Worship, Discipline and Government were legally settled.

Remarks

In the first Book of this History, some Remarks have been made upon the Treatment given by the first Parliament after the Restoration to those solemn and religious Ties upon those Nations. It was not so decent in King Charles II's Lifetime, to declare him a Traitor, and his Father much the same, for ratifying the National Covenant with the Explanation of it in Parliament. This Honour was reserved for his Brother, who had never taken the Covenants indeed, but probably was a good Catholick from his very Youth, at the Expence of contradicting his Father's dying Charge.

When I am upon this Head, I cannot but take notice of that remarkable Letter King Charles II. wrote with his own Hand to his Brother then Duke of York, to prevent his turning Papist, November 10. 1654. It hath been already printed, but being but in the Hands of but a few, I thought it a Piece of Justice to his Memory, to preserve it here, and it follows.

Dear Brother,

Cologne, November 10. 1654.

I Have received yours without a Date, in which you mention, that Mr. Montague has endeavoured to pervert you in your Religion. I do not doubt but you remember very well the Commands I left with you at my going away, concerning that Point, and am confident you will observe them; yet the Letters coming from Paris say, that it is the Queen's Purpose to do all she can to change your Religion; which if you hearken to her, or any Body else in that Matter, you must never think to see England or me again; and whatever Mischief shall fall on me or my Affairs, from this Time I must lay all on you, as being the only Cause of it: Therefore consider well what it is, not only to be the Cause of ruining a Brother that loves you so well, but also of your King and Country. Do not let them perswade you, either by Force or fair Promises; for the first, they neither dare nor will use; for the Second, as soon as they have perverted you, they will have their End, and will care no more for you.

I am also informed, there is a Purpose to put you into the Jesuits College, which I command you on the same Ground never to consent unto; and whenever any Body shall go to dispute with you in Religion, do not answer them at all; for though you have Reason on your Side, yet they being prepared, will have the Advantage of any Body that is not upon the same Security that they are.

If you do not consider what I say to you, remember the last Words of your dead Father, which were, to be constant to your Religion, and never to be shaken in it. Which if you do not observe, this shall be the last Time you will ever hear from,

Dear Brother,

Your most affectionate Brother,
Charles R.

Remarks.

It had been the late King's Interest, if he had in the succeeding Part of his Life, discovered an equal Concern for the Protestant Religion, to what he shews in this Letter; and it held true in great Measure, That the Mischief which fell on him and his Affairs, was to be laid upon his Brother's turning Papist. However, this Letter was forgot, as well as his Father's Declaration to his Mother, That the Covenanters were his firmest Friends, when the King came in to Popery, and now to this virulent Act against the Covenants.

It was an Act very agreeable to the first Parliament of a Popish King, and a necessary Prelude to the Introduction of Popery to Scotland, the national Covenant being, since the Reformation, our great Barrier against Popery, and even the Explanation of it, a strong additional Security. And to promote this Reintroduction, now so much at the King's Heart, and less or more in his Eye in all his publick Steps, he sticks not to cast a Slur upon his Brother, Father, and Grandfather: Holy Mother Church, the scarlet Whore, is dearer to him by far than their Reputation.

It is hard to tell how much Iniquity and Wickedness is wrapped up in this short Act. Perhaps in part it was designed for a Vindication of the former Actings of the Managers, for several Years, against Multitudes whom they butchered, for little other Reason, than their adhering to those sacred Vows unto the Lord.

The declaring writing in Defence of the Covenants to infer Treason, was evidently unreasonable and severe, but very agreeable to the Popish Methods of keeping People in gross Ignorance of the Truth, to say nothing of its bringing many eminent and learned Divines through all the Reformed Churches, whom I could name, under the Guilt of this statutory Treason.

I do not enter upon the Irreligion and Impiety of this singular Act. Multitudes have unanswerably proven, that nothing is contained in those solemn Transactions with God, but what, prior to the superadded Religion, and Tie of those Oaths, was morally obliging upon the Consciences of all, by the divine Law. What a dreadful fighting against God, and counteracting of his holy Law, a casting his Cords from them, and his Law behind their Back, must the Authors of this Act then ly under?

In short, this was, as far as lay in the Parliament's Power, a national Step backwards to Rome and Popery, and a practical Renunciation of the solemn Resignation made of those Lands to the Lord; and consequently Matter of deep Mourning even to Posterity, and a Blot Blot upon a reformed Kingdom, which cannot be taken off by reformatory Acts, till we return nationally with Weeping and Mourning, and join our selves to the Lord in a Covenant never to be forgotten.

Here I cannot but observe, what I have from Two worthy Persons, present when the late excellent Dutches of Hamilton, more than once, told the Sentiments of Dr. Turret, since Day when the Conversation fell in upon the Sufferings of Presbyterians, for adhering to the Covenant, the Doctor spoke of the national Covenant with a great deal of Respect, and said, He believed it would never be well with Scotland, until we returned to that Covenant, and renewed it. This was when the Doctor was last in Scotland, about the 1683, if I remember.

Dr. Turret's Sentiments on the national Covenant.

Indeed, in my Opinion, this may be reckoned an overt Act of Treason against Heaven, and the one Lawgiver, who is able to save and to destroy, a national Sin, which tinctured our Cup very much, and a trampling under Foot the Glory of this Nation, an Act, in one Word, which could never have been made but by apostate Protestants, under a Popish Prince.

As the former Act was ungodly, so the next was unreasonable. The Articles of the Gentiles clause the Two together, in the primitive Times, and they have frequently since been found to be of a Kin. By this they obliged Husbands to be liable for their Wives Fines. The Unreasonableness of it hath been pointed at before. The Matter of this Act passed the Council with a considerable Struggle, and now it must have a parliamentary sanction, to take the Managers from After-inquiries; and this is almost the very Narrative of the Act.

No Pretence of Righteousness or Equity is alledged, but we are frankly, if not bluntly, and plainly told, 'Our sovereign Lord considering, that the Lords of his Privy Council, and others commisionate by his Majesty and them, have fined Husbands for their Wives, withdrawing from Ordinances, doth, with Advice and Consent of the Estates of Parliament, declare the said Procedure to have been legal, and ordains the same to be observed in all Time coming, and ratifies all Decrets and Sentences granted against Husbands for such Fines, reserving always Power to the Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, to absolve or mitigate the Fines of such Husbands, as are known to be of loyal Principles.'

The Unaccountableness of this Statute needs not be insisted upon. This Parliament, in their wonderful Power, declare a Practice legal, for which there was never a Law, and of which a just Reason can never be given, and ordain it to be observed in all Time coming; and though the Reservation at the End of the Act be added, in order to soften so shocking a Thing, yet really there is nothing here but a Blind, since the Council had this Power as to the Matter of Fines in every Case, and were ready enough to exercise it in the Procceses of Kin, Friend, and Ally.

Remarks on it.

Their Third Act this Day, runs yet deeper, and was framed, not only to look back to what was past, but to catch a great many Gentlemen and others, and bring them to Ruin in their Bodies and Estates. The illegal and harsh Sentence passed by the Judiciary, at the Direction of the Council, against that excellent Gentleman and Christian John Porterfield or Douchal, above narrated, made a terrible Noise, and was plainly enough perceived to have been in order to gratify a particular Manager with his Estate.

Adjoining
the Sentence of the Council against
John Porterfield.

It was necessary then ex post facto, to confirm this Sentence by a posterior Law. Therefore, 'the King and Estates of Parliament do ratify, approve, and confirm the Sentence of Forfeiture, pronounced by the Commissioners of Judiciary, against John Porterfield, sometime of Douchal, and the Interlocutor and whole Proceedings of the said Commissioners in that Process, and declare the same was conformable to the Laws of this Kingdom; and in general, statute and declare, that the concealing and not revealing of Supplie, given to, or demanded for Traitors forfeited for Treason, against the King's Person and Government, is Treason, and is to be judged of accordingly.'

Unhappy were the people who lived at this Time! for I scarce see how any Body almost of Business, could be free from the Things now made Treason. This Act was a Second Punishment for the same Fault, if it be a Punishment, and not an Honour, to be condemned by such a Parliament as this. This good Man, for any Thing I know, was neither called nor heard in his own Defence, before this Second sentence, and the Iniquity done to him is established by a Law, to be a Rule to judge others by.

Upon the 8 of May, the Parliament come to give the last Stroke, and I may say, to do their utmost against Conventicles, and the Liberty of the Gospel, in their Eighth Act against Preachers at Conventicles, and Hearers at Field-conventicles, which deserves a Room here as a flaming Evidence of the Wickedness of this Time. 'Our sovereign Lord considering the Obstinacy of the Fanatical Party, who, notwithstanding of all the Laws made against them formerly, persevere to keep House and Field-conventicles, which are the Nurseries and Rendezvous of Rebellion, therefore his Majesty, with Consent of his Estates of Parliament, doth statute and ordain, that all such as shall hereafter preach at any man's House or Field-conventicles, as also such as shall be present, as hearers, at Field-conventicles, shall be punished with Death, and Confiscation of Goods.'

Adjoining
the Sentence
of the Council against
John Porterfield.

It is an irksome Task I have brought my self under, to transcribe all those terrible Acts; and

Remarks

and it had been much for the Honour and Reputation of Scotland they had never been made. But since the Actors were not ashamed of such bloody Laws, it is but reasonable they should bear the just Reproach owing to them, by a faithful Narration of Matter of Fact; though it is with the utmost Regret I intermix my History with those unparalleled and sanguinary Acts.

If I did not fully know the native Spite and Enmity of many of the Managers against Presbyterians, and the preaching of the Gospel, which was, in the Case of Conventicles, heightened by the Virulence of the Prelates, and made them stand at nothing, that might bear hard upon those Sufferers; I would have been ready to imagine, that such an Act as this was made as a Preface and Inducement to all sober People, to remove the penal Laws in Gro, at the next Parliament, and Matters were screwed up to this Height, that all might break, and Papists get free. But it was better ordered in Providence, and the Shadow of parliamentary Power, was never got interposed in this Matter; and Presbyterians chose to ly under those horrid Laws for some Time peaceably, rather than have any active Hand in taking down the Fences of the Reformation; and any Thing done this way, as we will hear, was done by the assumed Power of a Papist.

To return, the Reader already knows, what the Law at this Time made to be a House-conventicle, wherever more than Five Persons not belonging to the Family, are in a House at Worship, or a Sermon; and in this Case he who preached or prayed must die, and have his Goods confiscated. If any such Law as this was made since Nero's Time, it is more than I know of, and sure it cannot be paralleled in any Protestant Country, and very little like it offers to me, even in Popish Countries, that Ministers of the Gospel, for preaching of the Gospel, and, according to their Charge from their Lord and Master, fulfilling their Ministry, should for this forfeit their Life.

Had it been restricted to preaching against the Government, there had been some Colour for so terrible an Interdiction; but for preaching Christ, and the saving Truths of the Gospel, in a private House, as the Apostles did, when most groundlessly Presbyterian Ministers had fallen under the Displeasure of the Government, and were never deprived or censured by any competent Power, that for this, I say, they should die, is a Wickedness beyond my Expression; and that Clergymen, Protestant Bishops, should not only approve and vote this, but press and procure its being passed into a Law, cannot but astonish Posterity.

The same Things, and several more might be said, as to Hearers at Field-conventicles, their being appointed to Death by the other Part of this Act. Any who look into the printed Acts will see, that by Act 5. Parl. 2. Sess. 2. Char. II. against Conventicles, it is declared to be a Field-conventicle, where there are more Persons present at Sermons preached in any House, than the House can hold, so as some be without Doors. By this Act I am upon, any Person present at such Meetings, is punishable by Death, and Confiscation of Goods, in the same Manner as the Meeting had been held in the Fields.

This Act, beyond Contradiction, discovers the true Spirit of Antichrist, that Malignity and Bitterness against the Gospel of Christ, and the pure preaching of it, to be now working; and Popery at this Time diffused it self every where from the Throne. Indeed the whole of the Managers almost were now either Papists, or ready to declare themselves Papists, or People of such slavish Principles, as to fall in with every Thing which would please the zealous Papist upon the Throne. This is the best and only Apology I know of for such Acts as those. They had promised to hold the King's Commandments sacred, and without Reserve, to obey him even in his very Inclination, when known; and they were as good as their Word.

Act concerning judicial Confessions.

Another Act follows that same Day, concerning judicial Confessions before the Justiciary, and it is statute, 'That all Confessions of Parties after an Indictment, in case of Treason, emitted before the Justiciary, and signed by the Pannel or Judges, are to be probative to the Assize, as if the same had been emitted in their Presence, and if the Assize attollie in this Case, they are liable to a Process of Error.'

I know not the particular Views of making this Act. Whether it was designed to vindicate their bringing in the Acknowledgments of Prisoners, before the Council and Committee for publick Affairs, as sufficient Documents before the Justiciary, because signed by the Clerk and some Lords, which the Act indeed comes not fully up to, or it may be the Managers inclined to be rid of the Gentlemen of the Assize in some Examinations before the Justiciary, where in some Cases they had proved troublesome to the Judges; and yet it appears highly reasonable, that the Assize being Judges of the Probation and Matter of Fact, ought to be present, and have all the Light they can during the Pannel's Examination, and not depend upon the Judges and Clerk, who are in this Case the only Witnesses of the Pannel's Confession; and accordingly their Presence was ordered by Act 90. Parl. 11. Jam. VI. But it was some easier to get judicial Confessions worded as the Clerk and Court pleased, signed by themselves, to be laid before the Assize; and this may be presumed to have been the Case of the poor ignorant Country People, who were soon, as we heard, circumvented by captious Questions, to declare they had owned the Covenants, and had been at Field-meetings, which was now Death.

The last Act I name, pass'd this Day, declares all Subjects who refuse to accept of the Offices of Magistrates, Justices of the Peace, Constables, Officers of the Militia, or any other Employment laid upon them by his Majesty or his Council, to be fineable for their Contempt. This was hard enough upon People of Conscience, who could not think of being Executors of these dreadful sanguinary Laws at this Time made, and proved a good Handle for exacting swingeing Fines from many worthy and excellent Gentlemen and others, who refused Concurrence in those Things. It was now an Happiness to be out of Scotland.

Act fining such who refuse to pay actively in the present Measures by taking Offices of Trust.

Upon the 13 of May, the Parliament pass the Act for Supply, which needs not be insert here. In short, from their alledged Sense of Hazard from Fanaticks, and because the present Forces may be too few for protecting the Country, they offer his Majesty Two hundred and sixteen thousand Pounds yearly, over and above the Five Months Cess already imposed, which amounts to Eight Months Cess yearly; and this they settle upon his Majesty during his Life, imagining, it seems, they would never be rid of Fanaticks while he lived and reigned. Indeed the Proceedings of this Period awakned People out of their Slumber and Security, and revived a Sense of Liberty, and Concern for Religion. This was truly the Character of the most Part now called Fanaticks; and if those be they, the Managers were not rid of them this Reign.

Act for Supply.

The same Day the Imposition of the Test is renewed by their 13 Act, for taking the Test; which being a little longer than those before, the Reader will find App. No. 109. By this Act the Test is extended to all Heritors, Liferenters, Tacksmen, &c. of the Protestant Religion, above Eighteen years. It is observed in a written Account of this Parliament before me, 'That the Bishops of Ross and Dumblain, reasoned against imposing Oaths on ignorant People; and humbly moved, that this might be further considered before the Act passed. To break this, or to wave it, Lawderdale, seconded by Eglintoun and Linlithgow, moved, that it should be extended to Women as well as Men. But this was not gone in to. Sir John Lawder moved first, that the Test should not be limited to those of the Protestant Religion, as being designed to exclude Papists, and Bishop Ramsay seconded him; but was answered by the Bishop of Edinburgh, who appeared a mighty Advocate for the Roman Catholicks that Day, and mostly insisted upon the Act against Separation in the Parliament 1670. which was restricted to these of the reformed Religion.' This Court Bishop carried his Purpose; and the Act was voted and touched that Day.

Act for taking the Test. App. No. 109.

What I have said before on the last Act of Parliament as to this Subject, will save me the Trouble of making Remarks here. The Duke of York's threatening, that the Edge of this Act should be turned from Catholicks, is now fully accomplished. And it was scandalous in Protestant Bishops, to appear for the Relief of Papists, when Protestants were tied down.

The Refusal of the Test is now only to be punished with such pecunial Sums as the Council thinks fit, and by this Act Women are delivered from the Test. And all such as have already sworn and signed, are not obliged to renew the same. Perhaps in all this Softness there might be a Snake in the Grass: But it were desirable, that the Equity of that Clause against renewing the taking of Oaths already sworn, were imitated more in the Imposition of publick Oaths. Lastly, what the Council, &c. did in offering the Test, is ratified, and declared to be good Service, that is, the Explication given by them, as I take it. And so the noble Earl of Argyle is vindicated upon the Matter, in offering an Explication to the Council, when he took the Test; and the most and strongest Reasonings against him in his Process, fall.

That same Day, in the Afternoon's Sederunt, their 16 Act, anent the Justices of Peace, is passed. It is very much calculated to carry on the Persecution up and down the Country; and so I have annexed it, App. No. 110. The Justices of the Peace were nominated by the Managers about Edinburgh, who took care to name such as were agreeable to their Designs. Those Justices of the Peace lived generally in the Country, and were at the Clergy's Hand, to apply to, and concert Measures for oppressing their People.

Act anent the Justices of the Peace App. No. 110.

In order to this, after an ample Confirmation of all their Powers, they have the Execution of the Law against Conventicles, irregular Baptisms and Marriages, and withdrawing from Church-ordinances, committed to them, and they are allowed to proceed summarily, and have the Fines given them that are not uplifted from Heritors. The Council, by the former Act of Parliament, are impowered to fine, at their Pleasure, such as are nominate, and do not wait on at the Meetings of the Justices, and to nominate Justices of the Peace, and enlarge their Powers; and what the Council does herein, is ordained to have the Strength of an Act of Parliament. It was above noticed, that this affords a good Foot for persecuting a great many worthy Gentlemen, who lived peaceably and regularly, and yet would not actively concur in the oppressive and bloody Measures now formed into Laws.

May 15. the criminal Process comes on against the Noblemen and Gentlemen underwritten, who, we heard, were cited to this Day; and I shall give all this Process together, in the different Diets of it, in this Place, from the written Account I have more than once referred to; and when this is over, which was one of the chief Works of this Parliament, we shall quickly get through the rest of the Acts. The late alledged Conspiracy was the Pretext of forfeiting those worthy Patriots; but this Process was really intended against them, because they were averle from Prelacy, Favourers of Presbyterians, and Possessors of good Estates.

Criminal Process against the Noblemen and Gentlemen underwritten

This Day the Parliament have read before them the King's Letter to the Council, and their Orders to the Advocate to cite them, the Dittay against them all, a Libel against Harden younger, Two additional Libels against Hay of Park, and Arckinglass. Then the Executions, and Oaths of Heralds and Witneiles are taken; and the Advocates for the Pannels, Mrs. Hume, Fletcher, Pringle, are admitted, and all Bills and Objections are remitted to the Lords of the Articles. There were present, Sir William Scot, Cesnock elder and younger, Hay of Park, John Weir of Newtoun, Campbel of Arckinglass. The other Sixteen, already named in the Citation, are absent.

Sir John Cochran.

Friday, May 22. Dittay is read against Sir John Cochran, Polwart, Torwoodlee, and the Heirs of Mr. Martin; and the Advocate insists imo against Sir John Cochran. The first Article of his Libel, anent the Plot, is voted relevant. Probation is, Alexander Monro, who is present, and adheres to his Deposition formerly given in Ferviswood's Process, and printed there, which is read to him, and he signs it. Then, contrary to repeated Promises and Declarations, as we have heard, Mr. Carstairs's printed Deposition is read, and the Clerks deponed they saw him sign it. Next, Burn and another English Man's Depositions, signed by the English Secretary, are read. Then the Advocate adduced the Form of Proceedings in the like Cases before the Parliament, in the Case of the Popish Lords, 1594. and against Robert Logan.

After all, the Advocate had a Speech to the Parliament, wherein we may guess he would aggravate the Conspiracy, from what we saw above in Ferviswood's Case. Then the Parliament voted the Probation sufficient.

The Advocate, in the next Room, insisted upon the second Article of the Dittay, seeking and collecting Money for the late Earl of Argyle; and for Probation, the Laird of Ponock, and Craigends elder, their Confessions in their own Processes were adduced, That Sir John had demanded from the First Fifty, and the other Twenty Pounds Sterling. This Probation is next voted good.

The Bishops remove under Protestation, and are called in again.

Then the Question was stated, Whether the Pannel being found guilty should be forfeited. Whereupon the Bishop of St. Andrews, in his own Name and that of his Brethren, desired to be excused, tho' they had voted in the Relevancy and Probation, as to this Vote, and asked Liberty to remove. When he removed, he gave in a Protestation, and took Instruments in the Register's Hands, that this should be but Prejudice to their parliamentary Privileges. The Bishop of Edinburgh, at his removing, had a stated Speech, exclaiming against Popery and Presbytery, as the great Enemies of Bishops, with a Deduction of the Sense and Opinions of Canonists, as to Bishops voting in Cases of Blood. When the Bishops had removed, they were called in again at the Advocate's Motion, he alledging the Parliament was not full without them, wanting one of the Three Estates. During the calling of the Roll they were silent.

When the Vote for forfeiting was over, Mr. Thomas Gordon read the Sentence, and the King's Trumpets sounded thrice, upon which the Doom was pronounced by the Dempter, and the Trumpets sounded again; and the Sentence was intimated at the Cross by the Lyon and Heralds. It is exactly in the same Terms with Ferviswood's. I shall, for Shortness, wave those Circumstances as to the rest.

Polwart, Torwoodlee, and the Heirs of Mr. Robert Martin.

That same Day in the Afternoon, the Dittay read and found relevant in the Forenoon, against Polwart, Torwoodlee, and the Heirs of Mr. Robert Martin, was admitted to Probation. The Probation was taken from the Depositions of Philiphaugh, Earl of Tarras, Gallashiels, and Commillary Monro, which are printed in Ferviswood's Case. The Register read the Act of Parliament James V. Parl. 6. Chap. 1. relating to Forfeiture, for Treason in the Predecessor. As to the Heirs of Mr. Martin, the Probation was voted good, and Sentence pass, at which the Bishops renewed their Motion, and did not vote, and Doom was pronounced, as in the Forenoon.

Sir Thomas Stuart of Cultnefs.

Wednesday, May 27. Dittay was read against Sir Thomas Stuart of Cultnefs. The Articles were his sending Meat and Drink to the Rebels at Bothwell, his resetting Men that went to and came from the Rebels, and his fleeing a little after, and taking Guilt upon him, being denounced Fugitive. Probation, James Cowper saw Cultnefs stand at his own Gate, and send off a Sledge with Bread, Flesh, and Drink, and that he took back his Gardiner and Butier, who had been at Bothwell. Another depones, he saw his Servants carry the foresaid Meat to Hamilton-muir. James Black depones, that he sold Six Gallons of Ale, carried it to Hamilton-muir, got Money from Cultnefs's Servant. Thomas Stevenson depones, he saw Cultnefs's Servants in the Rebellion. Probation is found relevant, Sentence voted, and Doom pronounced as above. The Reader will easily perceive, that nothing here proven by Two Witneiles militates directly against Sir Thomas; and this Sentence is much of a Kin with Blackwood's, and others we have heard of.

June 4. Mr. Robert Fergusson's Process comes on; and Mr. West and Burn's Declaration, printed in Sprat's History of the Plot, and elsewhere, are all the Proof against him, and he is sentenced as above. No doubt, he deserved the Sentence much more clearly than any of the Pannels, and if any formed Design was laid against the King and Duke, he was privy to it, and none of the rest were in the least accessory.

Mr. Robert Ferguson.

Some more of the Pannels are dispatched June 13. They begin with the Lord Melvil, and his Dittay is read, bearing, that he gave Intelligence to the Rebels at Bothwell-bridge, and his Accession to the Plot. Both are voted relevant separatim. As to the first Article, John Miller in Watersbaugh depones, That the Lord Melvil sent him upon Saturday June 21. with down their Arms and surrender, they would get good Quarter; that the King's Army was decamped that Night, and none knew whither they were to march, but the Duke of Monmouth; and that he went to the Rebels Camp, and Wisbaw went Three Miles with him; and that he met Cultness's Man, Thomas Steil, who told him Wisbaw had been at Cultness's. Wisbaw depones conform in omnibus. And John Strang, who kept a Pals for the Rebels, depones, John Miller came to him at Midnight, and let him see the Backs of his Letters. John Lockhart of Bars depones, he went with John Miller to Mrs. Nasmith's in Lamlinton, and that the Letters were directed to Mr. Welsh, Mr. Hume, and Robert Hamilton. This Probation is voted good. As to the second Article, for Probation, Commisary Monro's, and Mr. Carstairs's Depositions are adduced, and the Confessions of the Two Cessnocks, as agreeing with what Commisary Monro said of the Lord Melvil. This Article is also found proven.

Lord Melvil

Next, Montgomery of Langshaw's Dittay is read, and his Accession to the Plot found proven by Monro and Carstairs's Depositions, and the Cessnocks Confessions.

Montgomery of Langshaw.

They follow next that Day, and their Dittay is read, charging Cessnock elder with Accession to Bothwell, and both of them with the Plot. The Advocate restricts their Libel to the Plot, and for Probation, adduces Commisary Monro and the Gentlemen's own Confession, which was read, viz. 'That they acknowledged they were at the Meeting mentioned in Monro's Deposition, and threw themselves upon the King's Mercy.' And Mr. Carstairs's Depositions were read again. The Parliament found the Dittay proven.

Cessnock.

The Lord Melvil and Langshaw are sentenced, as the rest above, in common Form; but in Cessnocks Case, the Time and Place of their Execution is remitted to the King simpliciter, the Commissioner having signified, he had Instructions to spare their Lives, if they would be ingenuous.

After Sentence was pronounced with the usual Solemnities, old Cessnock desired Leave to speak a Word; and, Liberty being granted, he said, 'The Sentence was very weighty, and he wished it may be noticed by all concerned; but one Thing weighed him more than any thing which concerned himself, and that was, that his Creditors were like to suffer with him, and humbly supplicate, that his Grace the Commissioner might represent their Condition to the King's Majesty; for before they should be Losers, he would rather be content to starve.'

June 16. the Parliament remit the rest of the Persons cited before them, to the Justiciary, with Power to the Lords to proceed as if they had been cited before them, and dispensing with their not giving a List of Assize and Writnetles; and we have heard of the Procedure there already.

Others cited before them, remitted to the Justiciary.

That I may give all I have met with as to these Gentlemen, let me here subjoyn what I have observed this Year in the Council-registers, concerning some of them. April 29. I find the Council order Campbel of Ardkinglass to be transported from Blackness to Edinburgh, under a strong Guard. This seems to have been in order to his Appearance before the Parliament, but I meet with no more about him. August 14. Hay of Park is liberated, upon Bond of a Thousand Pounds Sterling, to live regularly and orderly; but the Persons I find most about, are Cessnock and Sir John Cochran.

Procedure against these Gentlemen, from the Council registers.

As to Cessnock, July 9. a Letter is read from Secretary Murray, that Cessnock's Remission is to be sent next Post; and, July 28. the Remission is come down, and the Council order the Keepers of the Seals to give the Remission gratis for Sir Hugh and Sir George Campbel of Cessnock; and, September 3. by a Letter from the King, Cessnocks elder and younger, are ordered to be sent to the Bass, till his Majesty's Pleasure be further known. September 18. the Council write to the Secretaries. 'My Lords, There being a Letter from the King, ordering the Two Campbels of Cessnock to be sent to the Bass, notwithstanding his Majesty's Remission for their Lives and Fortunes, and the said Cessnocks being put at Freedom and Liberty upon the said Remission, before the said Letter came, they desire to know his Majesty's Pleasure.' October 5. a Return comes from the Secretary, bearing, that he had received theirs, and communicated it to his Majesty; and he adds, 'I am commanded to let you know, that his Majesty is not well satisfied with the Delay that has been, in putting his Pleasure concerning the Two Campbels of Cessnock, in Execution; and 'tis now his Majesty's Will, that with all convenient Diligence, you cause them to be sent under a suffici-

Cessnock.

Sir John Cochran.

'ent Guard to the Bas, with the necessary Orders for their being detained Prisoners there during his Majesty's Pleasure.' Accordingly, the Council dispatch an Express to Lieutenant-colonel Murray, for apprehending them, and bringing them in to the Bas. This is all I meet with about those Gentlemen. And as to Sir John Cochran, August 17. I find the Council order a Party to be sent with Sir John Cochran and his Son John, with John called Colonel Aylie, to put them aboard the King's Yacht, to be transported to London. We shall, in the last Section, meet with some Things the Council represent about Sir John, when he is thus sent up.

Thus I have given as short and distinct an Account, of this remarkable criminal Process before the Parliament, as I could, mostly from the written Minutes before spoken of; and we shall meet with an Act annexing their Lands to the Crown, before we end this Section; but I return again to the Detail of their Acts, which concern the Subject Matter of this Work.

Forfeitures of Monkland, Fer-
riswood, and Argyle, ratified in Parliament.

Upon the 13 of May, where we left, the Parliament ratify the Processes of Forfeiture against Robert Hamilton of Monkland, Mr. Robert Bailly of Feriswood, and Archibald late Earl of Argyle. We have seen, these were Three of the most iniquitous Sentences pronounced by the Justiciary; and had not the Witnesses failed in Cesnock's Process, we should have had all the unjust Interlocutors upon that Head ratified this Day likewise, in all Probability.

Act for taking the Oath of Allegiance.

May 22. by their 17 Act for taking the Oath of Allegiance, the Parliament ratify all done by the Council, Justiciary, and such who were commisionate by them, in banishing, imprisoning, and fining such as refused the Oath of Allegiance, and the Assertion of the royal Prerogative, above inserted in this History; and ordain all Subjects to assert and swear the same, when required by the Council, Justiciary, or such as are commisionate by them, under the Pains of Banishment, Imprisonment, or any other Punishment determined by the foresaid Courts, not reaching to Life or Limb.

Tho' this be an Indemnity to the Managers for what is past, yet to me it appears to leave a Tash upon the former bloody Procedure of those Courts, where, as hath been observed, severals were condemned to Death on this head; and indeed this was the Case of the most part of poor Country People. However, the Voters of this Act bring upon themselves, all the innocent Blood shed by those iniquitous Sentences, and Multitudes died on this Score, and many at Sea, and in their Banishments.

Act ratifying the Opinion of the Lords of Council and Session, upon the Sentence
of Execution.

Tuesday June 2. the Parliament by their Act 23. ratify the Opinion of the Lords of Council and Session, November 22. last, mentioned before; the Act being singular and short, shall be insert here. 'Our sovereign Lord, with Advice and Consent of the Estates of Parliament, ratifies, approves, and confirms an Opinion given by the Lords of Council and Session, upon the Day of November 1684. whereby they find, that any of his Majesty's Subjects, being questioned by his Majesty's Judges or Commissioners, if they own a late traiterous Proclamation, in so far as it declares War against his sacred Majesty, and asserts that it is lawful to kill such as serve his Majesty, or who shall not disown the same, are thereby guilty of high Treason, and are Art and Part of the same treasonable Declaration; and also ratifies, approves, and confirms all the Processes of Treason led, or to be led thereupon in Time coming. Reflections have been made upon this Subject above. This Parliament seems to be tied down to approve every Thing done of late, by the Managers at Edinburgh, and to make Laws of their Practice, and to be Sharers with them in their Guilt. What an unreasonable Thing was it, brevi manu to make every one guilty of high Treason, who would not instantly disown that Declaration, and perhaps had never seen it, or when they heard it did not understand it? which, I am perswaded, was the Case of several who were at this Time butchered.

However, as the Parliament, so far as I observe in their Act, do not resume the Opinion of the Lords of Council and Session, upon which the Council's Act is founded; so they seem in their Approbation to restrict the Council's Act to Processes, and a formal Indictment, as the Lawyers had done. And even here they do not approve of the Orders given for shooting in the Fields, above narrated. That was a little too gross, to be swallowed even by such a Parliament as this.

Act, June 2. for Regularity.

At this Time, the Clergy could scarce be satisfied with any Methods could be thought on for bearing down Nonconformity. We have seen the bloody Laws already made, and the Execution of them put in the Hand of the Justices of Peace: But a new Way is yet fallen upon, in which they may with some more Ease, vent their Spite and Malice against such who could not joyn with them; and we need not doubt but the Parliament will fall in with every Thing which comes from them; and so, by their 24 Act June 2. for Regularity, which I have insert App. No. 111. they ordain, that Tenants be obliged by their Tacks to live regularly.

App. No. 111.
Remarks upon
it.

This Act had a double Advantage. It would bring Heritors and Gentlemen, who were any way favourably affected to the Presbyterian Establishment, to new Hardships; and likewise, it would afford a short Way for the Curate or his Substitute, to raise Processes before any any Court. The Reader will observe, that in the Act each Tenant obliges himself, his Family, Cottars, and Servants, shall live regularly, free of all fanatical Disorders, under Pain of Half their Moveables; and if the Matter fail in taking such Tacks, he shall be fined in a Year's Rent of the Lands. And all former Tacks without this Clause in them, are to be renewed; and if Tenants refuse to renew their Tack in this Form, they shall pay to their Master a Year's Rent. This is plain and short Work, and I wonder it was not fallen upon before this Time, when they were racking their Heads upon Methods for securing Conformity. Masters are both threatened and bribed to fall in with the Clergy and Government, in harassing the poor Country for mere Nonconformity.

How vastly do those Tacks differ from those, I am well informed were in Use among some excellent Gentlemen in the West of Scotland, particularly that eminently religious Gentleman the Laird of Carlton in Carrick, about the 1638. and afterward? The Tenants without any Force, and by their own hearty Consent, bound themselves in their Tacks against all Vice, swearing, lying, Sabbath-breaking, &c. and engaged to keep Family-worship Morning and Evening, bear Witness against, and reprove the Sins of their Neighbours, and the like, under such and such Penalties; and these Penalties were exacted strictly at every Baron Court, and faithfully applied for the Support of the Poor of the Parish.

Tacks by Presbyterian Gentlemen to former Times

By the Way, I cannot but declare my Opinion, that Gentlemen and Heritors might be singularly useful to the Reformation of Manners in the Country, if they would fall upon joint Measures, and make such Tacks once customary, and see to the Execution of them in their Courts. Than which, through the divine Blessing, nothing would tend more to stem the Torrent of Immorality, unless it be their own personal, sober, and religious Walk, without which the other will be almost impracticable, and, though practised, very much useless.

The next, and 25 Act of this Parliament, ratifies and confirms that hard and severe Act of Council above narrated, July 8. 1682. upon which Remarks have been already made. The Authority of Parliament is interposed, both for the more vigorous Prosecution of Contraveners, and the After-security of the Authors of such a rigorous Act, in case a Time of Inquiry should ever happen. Indeed the Managers screened themselves under the Authority of this Parliament, but every Body saw through those Fig-leaves. There were not many of the Council Acts, distressed the Country more than this Act did.

Act ratifying the Act of Council, July 8. 1682.

Their 26 Act about Adjudications for Fines, I leave to Lawyers to consider. It appears to me rigorous enough, that when Lands are adjudged for Church-irregularities, and there is a Competition of several Diligences, the King and his Donatar should be preferred to the real Creditors upon the Lands. This many Times is not done in Cases of Forfeiture for Perduellion it self, but lawful Creditors have their real Debts satisfied. But this Parliament prefer the violenting People into their Church Establishment, to Righteousness and Equity.

Act about Adjudications for Fines.

By the 27 Act, the Kingdom is secured against People coming from abroad, and a very unusual Hedge and Incumbrance put upon Trade and Business. The Council had done somewhat like this before, and therefore the Parliament must go some further. Every Master of a Ship must bring all his Passengers at their Arrival, before the next Magistrate, who is to secure them till they give such Accounts of themselves as may free them from all Suspicion. And the same must be done, when Passengers go out of the Kingdom; and that under the Pain of such Fines and corporal Punishment upon the Master of the Ship, as the Council shall think fit.

Act for securing the Kingdom.

To make their Processies for Treason the more troublesome to the Lieges, and easy to the Persecutors, they, by their 29 Act, approve of the Practice at the Circuit Courts, in citing Persons even for Treason upon porteous Rolls, by Messengers and Sheriff-officers. Whether this was disagreeable to former Practice, and the very Letter of some Acts of Parliament, I must leave to others.

Act about citing Persons Proceller upon the porteous Rolls.

In the written Minutes of this Parliament, I find this same Sederunt, June 2. they ratify and approve the Procedure of the Council and Justiciary; and in all Time coming, order all Persons who refuse to abjure the Sanquhar Declaration, to be prosecuted criminally.

June, 2. their Act for Security of the Officers of State, and others, is passed, and deserves a Room here, as a parliamentary Evidence, that the Severity of the late Years was so much out of the Road, that it needed an Indemnity. 'Our sovereign Lord considering the great and acceptable Services done to his Majesty by the secret Committee, his Majesty's Privy Council, and others his Judges and Officers, and being desirous to secure them for their Acting and Omissions in his Majesty's Service, in most ample Form, doth, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, indemnify and secure all and every one of his present Officers of State, the Members of the secret Committee, Lords of Privy Council, and all his Majesty's Judges, both civil and criminal; the Officers of the Army, and all others who have acted by his Majesty's Commission, or by Commission from his Privy Council, against all Pursuits or Complaints, that can be raised against them any manner of way, for their Actings in his Majesty's Service; as likewise for their Omissions, and wherein they have fallen short of their Duty, and that as fully as if every particular Crime or Misdemeanour were particularly specified in a Remission under his Majesty's Great Seal, or contained in an Act of Indemnity; requiring all his Majesty's Judges to interpret this Indemnity in the most favourable Sense, as they will be answerable.

Remarks on it.

One cannot but observe here, the Power and Stings of an evil Conscience. The Managers were, most of them, in Places of Trust, and had the Execution of the Laws in their own Hand, and at present were in no Hazard from Men. They had got the most and worst Part of their Actings already approved by the preceeding Acts of Parliament, yet they must have a general parliamentary Pardon.

I have heard of People now in publick Trust, who had Remissions from the Sovereign in their Pockets, in case of After-inquiries. And it hath been said, most Part of the present Managers had Papers of this Nature in their keeping, how truly I cannot say; but this is the first Instance I have met with, of a standing Blot recorded in the Laws of a Nation, by a Set of People upon themselves. And I hope this may be a good Apology for me, if any harsh Expressions have dropt in my Accounts of them. But however, by this they may have escaped Judgment from Men, most Part of them by this Time have felt, that this Indemnity is useless at an higher and more awful Tribunal; where, if Repentance and Faith in the propitiating Blood have not intervened, they have not escaped the righteous Judgment of God.

AA for the Clergy.

Passing the bitter and violent Address of this Parliament, against the good Earl of Argyle, and the Act of Annexation of his Estate, till they come in upon the next Session, I come to their Act for the Clergy, June 13. It ratifies all the former Acts, particularly those mentioned under the last Reign in their Favours; and not only ordains, that the Assassins and Murderers of Bishops and Ministers, should be punished, which is highly reasonable, but ordains the Parishioners where the Attempt is made, to pay such Sums to their Wives and Heirs, as the Council shall think fit, which looks like a punishing of the innocent with the guilty.

Yea, this Act makes the Attempt to break or rob the Houses of the Clergy, Death to the Invader. Before the Restoration, and since the Revolution, Presbyterian Ministers required no such Acts. I shall only notice, that a Christian and ministerial Carriage, and suitable Management of the ministerial Work among a People, is a better Hedge than Twenty such severe Clauses. At the Close, all the former Acts in Favours of Bishops and Archbishops, and the Government of the Church by them, are ratified in the general. There was no Difficulty in this, neither was it any Bar in the Way of the projected Design of introducing Popery, to which in Scotland Prelacy still led the Way.

AA annexing the Lands of the forfeited Gentlemen and Noblemen to the Crown.

By the 40 Act of this Parliament, 'the Lands of Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree, Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart, Thomas Stuart of Culneth, Pringle of Torwoodlee, George late Lord Melvil, David Montgomery of Langshaw, Sir Hugh Campbell of Cessnock, Sir George Campbell younger of Cessnock, Mr. Robert Martin, Walter late Earl of Tarras, Mr. Robert Bailly of Ferviswood, Thomas Kennedy of Grange, John Porterfield of Douchal, Mr. William and Alexander Gordons, late of Earlstoun, James Gordon younger of Craighen, are for ever annexed to the Crown, not to be dissolved from it but by Parliament, and that not upon general Narratives, but particular Causes and Services to be specified, that it may appear the same is not granted upon Importunity, or upon private Suggestions, but for true, just and reasonable Causes of publick Concern.'

All these worthy Persons, I think, have had a Room in the former Part of this History, and I say no more of them, but that they had Justice done them after the Revolution. This Annexation, with such Solemnity, to the Crown, was by People, who knew Matters, reckoned Grimace and Farce, and upon the Matter their Estates were already in the Hands of the chief Managers of the Persecution; and in the very next Parliament, we shall find Dissolutions of several of them made, upon no Considerations of publick Concernment, but to gratify particular Persons who had been active in the present Measures, and were Favourites, and made Use of to corrupt People into the Plot against the Protestant Religion. And it is certain enough the Rents of all of them, and Multitudes of others forfeited, were one way or other running to the private Use of Favourites.

I find there was an Act proposed in this Parliament, for taking away the Act requiring the Oaths from Advocates, Clerks, and Writers, but it was delayed by a Vote, and dropt. And June 16. the Parliament was adjourned to the last Tuesday of October, and afterward to April next Year, then we shall meet with the last Session of Parliament in this Reign. And the Commissioner in the King's Name, thanked them for their Loyalty and Pains.

Thus I have given as short and distinct an Account as I could, from the printed Acts, of the Procedure of this Parliament, and added an Abstract of their criminal Procedure, against the worthy Gentlemen and others abovenamed, from the foresaid written Account and Minutes.

General View of the Procedure of this Parliament.

From the Beginning to the End, their great Scope was to exalt the Prerogative of a Popish Prince, to approve the most severe and unaccountable Procedure of the Managers, further to load and burden the Kingdom with Cess and Taxes, during the King's Life, that there might be as little Use for any more Meetings of this Nature as possible; and indeed, had it not been to effly the rescinding of the penal Statutes against the King's Friends, probably we

we had had no more Parliaments; and lastly, to increase Hardships upon the Sufferers, and pave the Way for Popery, the first free Parliament we had, did cast what was now done. Let me come now to give some Account of the Attempt of the noble Earl of Argyle, to rescue his Country from those Evils.

S E C T. IX.

Of the unsuccessful Attempt of the Earl of Argyle, May 1685. to rescue the Nation and Church from the Burdens they were under, with some Account of his taking, Trial, and Martyrdom.

Hitherto I have seen no satisfying Account of this unsuccessful Essay, to recover the Religion and Liberties of Scotland, by the Earl of Argyle. There is a printed Letter, of the Date January 1686. giving a short, but true Account of the Earl of Argyle's Invasion, in the Year 1685. It is published in Holland, and the Style is such, or the Print so incorrect, that in some Places it is hard to make Sense and Grammar of it.

No distinct Account of the Earl of Argyle's Attempt hitherto published.

I have just now before me some short Hints, probably designed as Materials, from which an Account of the Earl's Attempt was to be given, with a Letter from his Lordship to Madam Smith at London. My Copy was taken from the Papers the Earl wrote with his own Hand, or dictated in Prison. Those Hints are evidently unfinished; but as to a plain Narrative, and the most considerable Facts, they are the best Account I have seen of this Matter. From both these, especially the last, and some Papers more common, I shall endeavour to form as clear a Narrative of this Matter as I can, till some better Hand, from more Materials, shall let us in further to it.

Materials from which the Account here is formed.

We heard before, the Earl got safe to London, after his Escape from Edinburgh Castle, and was entertained sometimes in the Country, and oft in the City by Madam Smith. The King was not ignorant of his being in the City, and very great Offers were made in his Name to the Earl, if he would fall in with the ruining Measures then on Foot, for establishing Popery and arbitrary Power; but this good and gallant Nobleman, would neither be cajoled nor corrupted from his Duty; and finding himself unsafe in England, he retired to Holland, where the Earl of Shaftsbury and the Duke of Monmouth were before him.

The Earl leaves England, and retires to Holland.

From several Persons who were Witnesses to the Earl of Argyle's Conversation in Holland, I am assured, that his Walk was singularly pious and religious. If he wanted those undeniable Evidences of pure Religion and undeiled, in his first Years, which I cannot determine; yet now, especially after his Escape, he gave undoubted Proofs of his being not only what he had still appeared to be, a firm Protestant and steady Patriot, but likewise an extraordinary Christian. He spent much Time in private religious Exercises, and Preparation for Death, which he reckoned not to be far off. He was a close Searcher of the Scriptures, pleasant and prudent in his Conversation, and frequently checked Looseness in Principles, and jesting with sacred Things, which were but too common at this Time.

His religious Carriage there.

During King Charles's Life, the Earl of Shaftsbury made several Proposals of doing somewhat to put a Stop to the Duke of York's Measures, and the Earl of Argyle was once, and but once, in Conversation with him. When finding Shaftsbury to be one, who appeared to him to have somewhat personal in View, rather than any Thing really for Religion and Liberty, the Earl declined meeting with him after that.

Once in Conversation with the Earl of Shaftsbury, and but once.

Monmouth was not forward to do any Thing during his Father's Life; but when he was dead, and that in so very suspicious a Manner, he, with the banished Noblemen from Britain, thought it high Time to bestir themselves, judging Things now come to a Crisis, by the Accession of a bigotted Papist to the Throne, and all like to go as Rome would have it.

Was in Concert with the Duke of Monmouth after his Father's Death.

Accordingly, in the End of February, in March and April, there were several Meetings kept in Holland; and an Invasion was resolved upon as necessary. The Duke of Monmouth, with the English Refugees, were to land in England, and the Earl of Argyle, with the Scots People, were to essay to land in Scotland; and it was agreed, that both should be as much as possible about the same Time. The Duke of Monmouth's Attempt I shall wholly leave to the English Historians, and confine my self to the Earl's Design upon Scotland.

In the Spring this Year an Invasion was resolved upon Britain.

I have before me the Minutes of a Meeting of our Scots People at Amsterdam, April 17

A Meeting of the Scots People at Amsterdam. Persons present at it.

O. S. this Year, and the Reader will desire to have them here. There were present the Earl of Argyle, Mr. Charles Campbell his Son, Sir John C. Chran of Ochiltree, Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart, George Pringle of Torwoodlee, William Lennox of West-

Their Resolutions.

Westbiels, George Hume of Bassindean, John Cochran of Waterside, Mr. George Wisheart, William Clellan, James Stuart Advocate, and Mr. Gilbert Elliot. Sir John Cochran was elected Protes pro hac vice. They unanimously resolve,

That the abovenamed Persons, and other Gentlemen of the Kingdom of Scotland, joyn-ing with them in a great Undertaking, intended by them in the Defence, and for the Recovery of the Religion, Rights, and Liberties of the Kingdom of Scotland, shall assume and take upon them the Quality and Character of a Council, for consulting and determining whatsoever relates to that great Undertaking, and Management thereof; and that so soon as they come to Scotland, such of the Nation as shall joyn themselves to them in the Prosecution of the said Undertaking, shall likewise have Access unto, and be joyned in the foresaid Council.

The Persons foresaid, in the Character and Quality above expressed, do resolve to make War to the Effect abovementioned, against James Duke of Albany and York, and such as shall adhere to him; and for the Command and Conduct of the Army they shall be able to gather together, they did unanimously choose and appoint Archibald Earl of Argyle, to the Office of Captain-general, with as full and ample Power as any Captain-general is ordinarily in Use to have from any free State in Europe.

They elected and nominated Mr. William Spence their Clerk, and recommend it to the said James Stuart, to perfect the Declaration of War they design to publish, and that against Munday next.

It is resolved, that Mr. William Veitch, Mr. George Barclay, and William Clellan, be dispatched to Scotland, and instructed for that Effect; and that the Earl of Argyle, Sir John Cochran, Sir Patrick Hume, George Pringle, and William Denholm, meet to Morrow at the Earl's Chamber, at Eight of the Clock in the Morning, to expedite their Instructions, and adjourn their Meeting till Munday at Eight of the Clock at Night, to Sir John Cochran's Chamber.

No doubt they met at the Time concerted, though I have seen no more of the Minutes of their Procedure, and I reckon then they agreed to the Draught of their Declaration, which shall in its own Room be inserted. Probably after that, they did not often meet, for the Time agreed upon 'twixt them and the Duke of Monmouth and his Company, was now ha-sting on. I find Mr. Barclay, and William (afterwards Lieutenant-colonel) Clellan, were in Scotland before the Earl came over, and no doubt kept by their Instructions.

The Earl and his Friends leave Holland
May 1. The Duke of Monmouth leaves it not for a Month after, which was to the Prejudice of them both.

Upon the 1 of May, the Earl and his Friends left Holland, with a very few Ships, and a considerable Number of Arms. The Money expended on these, was mostly raised on the Earl's Credit. The Duke of Monmouth, with the English Gentlemen, had faithfully engaged not to stay above Ten Days after them in Holland; but it was a Month before they landed in England. Whether this was done of design, or necessarily, I do not determine. It was rumoured, that this Delay was advised, that the English Forces might be poured down upon Scotland, and their Game thus be the easier in England. However, it is certain, the Duke of Monmouth was extremely concerned when the Earl's Party was broke, and the Earl himself taken; and indeed his Interest could not have met with a forer Dash. It is plain, the English not keeping to the Terms of Agreement, tended much to heighten the Earl's Malheurs, and to the Ruin of both.

The Earl's Design made known to the Government, and collisly en-terprised in Scotland.

The Court of England had very exact and particular Information of the Number, Force, and Designs of the Earl's little Squadron, before they came off. And Notice accordingly was given to the Managers in Scotland to be upon their Guard. Their touching at Orkney did further alarm Scotland; and so much had the late imposed Oaths corrupted the Generality, and so great was the Influence of the Managers, that there appeared a very general Opposition against the Earl's Attempt; and such was the Consternation and Terror upon Friends, and so far were they sunk by long Oppression, that at best they were silent, and would not so much as correspond with such as were sent over from Holland, and a coming.

In short, as the Earl himself in the foresaid Hints, more than once, remarks, the Lord's Time was not yet come. The Body of Presbyterians in Scotland, were sorely broken in the Place of Dragons, their Ministers scattered, and the Bulk of People, who wished well to this Enterprise, were perfectly dispirited under Twenty four Years sore Sufferings. The Furnace had not altogether healed the Rents and Breaches among them; and the Party who were in Arms, wandring and hiding in the Fields, too many of them were gone to those Heights, which did not permit them to joyn with any Frankness in this Design, as hath been observed; and the rest were miserably born down, and frightened with the Soldiers and Militia; and most of the honest Presbyterian Gentlemen were either in Prisons, or forfeited, and so scattered, as they could do nothing in Favours of the Earl. And above all, the Self-con-ceitdness, Cowardice, Ignorance, and miserable Differences among some who were embarked in the Design, spoiled all; so it is no Wonder I have a very melancholy and sorry Account to give of this Enterprise.

The Procedure of the Privy Council

Before I come to give an Account of the Earl's Attempt it self, I shall insert what I meet with in the Council-registers relative thereunto, till the Earl was seized, from which it will appear appear how exact their Information was. I take the Appointment I find in the Council-books, March 12. to have come from some Hints of a designed Invasion. 'The Marquis of Arbuthnot is ordered to raise Five hundred Highland-men, for securing the Peace of the Shire of Argyle, and that they have Meat and Drink provided, with Arms and Ammunition, out of the King's Magazine.' Their Information, it seems, has been very particular and early, for April 28. the Council write a Letter to the Lords Justices of Ireland, thanking them for sending down the Forces to the Coast, and acquainting them, that by this Time they reckon the late Earl of Argyle is sailed with Three Ships. That same Day they publish a Proclamation, ordering all the Subjects to be in a Readiness to assist the King in case of an Invasion. And next Day, April 29. they grant a Commission to the Marquis of Arbuthnot, to be Lord Lieutenant of the Shires of Argyle and Tarbet. He is ordered to march with some Forces to that Shire, and every Place he goes through is ordained to furnish him with Baggage-horses. And May 8. the Council declare, that by that Clause in the Marquis's Commission, That he should take Provisions necessary to such as were under his Command, they understand that he may take Quarters.

upon the Earl's Attempt.

May 11. the Council publish a Proclamation, ordering out all the fencible Men; which, since it is in common Form, with those at Bothwell and Pentland, needs not be insert. May 17. Letters are writ by the Council to the Duke of Gordon, and a great many others in the northern Shires, acquainting them, that the Earl of Argyle is appearing on the western Islands, and appointing them to call forth the Heritors. That same Day William Spence and Blackadder, are ordered to be brought South to Edinburgh. And May 19. all the Heritors on the South Side of Tay, are ordered to attend upon the King's Host. That same Day, 'Lord Neil Campbell, William Cochran younger of Ochiltree, the Master of Mulhal, and 'Pringle' younger of Torwoodlee, are required to enter their Persons within Twelve Hours, 'in the Castle of Edinburgh.' This is all I have observed in the Registers, till June 20. when the Earl of Argyle is ordered to be brought to Edinburgh under a Guard, as we shall hear. I return now to give a Narrative of the Earl's Attempt.

At first their Voyage was very promising, and in Three Days they were at Orkney, and happily escaped the dangerous Tides there; and under a considerable Storm they were kept together, and free of the Rocks, when they could neither see the Coast nor their Lanterns, by reason of a thick Mist: But next Day, unhappily they found themselves on the wrong Side of Orkney, and had missed the Passage 'twixt Orkney and Zetland; so they were forced to put in to get Pilots, not without Hopes of Assistance, but were disappointed.

They came to Orkney in Three Days.

Mr. Blackadder, Son to Mr. John Blackadder, of whom before, was sent in by the Earl to get Intelligence, and Mr. William Spence would needs go with him, to visit an Uncle of his who lived in Kirkwall, the chief Town in Orkney. Both were discovered, and caught by the old Bishop there. This was a great Loss, and alarmed the Country very much, and Notice was soon sent to the Government, of the small Force the Earl had with him.

Mr. Blackadder and Mr. William Spence, sent by the Earl to Kirkwall, and seized.

The Earl was peremptorily resolved to recover the Two Gentlemen, and ordered Sir Patrick Hume, with a Party of Fusileers, to attack the Town where the Bishop and they were, which might have been easily done; but some of the Company influenced the Earl, and much more the Masters of the Ships, pretending they might ly long there, detained by contrary Winds; so the Design was dropt, and only Five or Six Prisoners seized.

From Orkney the little Fleet hasted away by the Inside of the western Islands, as the shortest Course; and had they got thither straight, they would have surprized a Gentleman, Ballechan, in Ila, with Four or Five hundred Men: But the Wind calmed, and afterwards blew hard and contrary, which made them tack in to the Sound of Mull, that, if possible, the Earl might touch at Lorn, a Part of his own Lands. And if such as they expected had joyned them, that Country had been easily raised, and the Earl in full Time at Ila, to have surprized Ballechan and his Party; but they were kept back for Forty eight Hours, and missed him but by one Hour.

In Tobermore in Mull, they dropped Anchor, and were by several Rubs kept there Three Days, which was mightily to the Disadvantage of their Cause; for every Hour's Loss now was more than of a Day at another Time, and a Day like a Month. From Mull they carried Three hundred Men with them, and waisted over to Kintyre. Here they met with new Disappointments, many, from whom they expected much, failed them. However, in this Place they stayed some little Time, and sent over some of their Men to the Lowlands, to prepare the West to joyn them.

The Earl and his Company anchor at Mull, and sail to Kintyre.

At Campbeltown in Kintyre, was first published and dispersed the Declaration and Apology, &c. drawn up in Holland, as the forementioned Minutes bear, by Mr. Stuart that eminent Lawyer, and excellent Person. I have Two Copies of it under mine Eye; that printed at Campbeltown in Kintyre, in the Shire of Argyle, and the other reprinted some Time after in Holland, said to be taken from a correct Copy, which is inserted App. N<sup>o</sup>. 112.

Where their Declaration and Apology, &c. is published.

This Declaration and Apology the Reader will find drawn with a vast deal of Judgment, Candor and Calmness, and it contains a most pathetical and affecting Account of the present State of Things in Scotland, and the preceeding History will afford Vouchers for many

Mr. Charles the Earl's Son sent with Letters to his Friends.

Particulars in it. It might have been expected this Declaration would have much awakened the Kingdom, but indeed it had very little Influence that way.

When they were at Mull, or coming to it, the Earl sent off his Son Mr. Charles, and he went ashore at the Castle of Dunstaffage, with Letters to his Friends. Some, whom he supposed to be his Friends, basely discovered all, and others were very backward to joyn. The Lairds of Lochniel and Loup had Letters among other Gentlemen of the Shire. The First gave Mr. Charles his solemn Promise to joyn the Earl with all the Men he could raise, and that upon a Day appointed; and yet most treacherously he sent by an Express the Earl's Letters, and probably his Declarations, to the Council at Edinburgh, and afterwards joyned the Marquis of Athole, with his Forces, at Inveraray.

Mr. Charles used all his Interest in that Country to convocate them; but, except an Hundred or Two hundred Volunteers, he had very little Success. Some pretended they did not believe the Earl was come in Person, otherwise he himself would have come to the Shire; others professed their Willingness to stand and fall with the Earl, but pressed he might go and fight the Enemy, otherwise their Families lay presently at their Mercy; and indeed the best of the Gentlemen in the Earl's Company were for this, but it was as violently opposed by others.

All Mr. Charles got done, was putting a Garison in the Castle of Carnafory, the dwelling House of Sir Duncan Campbel of Auchinbreck, and the settling of himself with a few Men in a little Town belonging to Sir Duncan, about Four Miles distant; and informed his Father thence, of the State of the Country.

While the Earl was at Kintyre, he had Letters from Mr. George Barclay, who had been sent over, as we heard, and was a considerable Trustee in the Lowlands. By those he had Accounts, that all possible was done, in order to dispose the Country for befriending him; but no Assurances could be given of any considerable Party their joyning him; that several had the Matter under their Consideration, but were come to no Resolution. In short, all was but faint Probabilities.

Causes of the
ing so long in Kintyre.

Matters standing thus, we need not wonder the Earl and his Party stayed some Time in Kintyre. The Earl was indeed very much blamed, as losing Time, and giving his Enemies Time to draw together an Army; but Necessity hath no Law. And further, as was then given out, he had promised to the Duke of Monmouth, to continue in some retired Place of the Country, till he had Notice of the Duke's being in Action in England. He had likewise given Assurances of raising a considerable Number of Men in his own Shire, and we see how much he was disappointed. Scarce any of his Friends there, save Sir Duncan Campbel of Auchinbreck, with about Eight hundred Men, joyned him.

Very few resorted to him while in Kintyre; only he had one Addition of about Three hundred Foot, and One hundred Horse. Upon this small Accession, he proposed to send off a West-country Gentleman to the Castle of Ardmillan, who declined going till some Intelligence came; and then he was not only willing, but rash and hasty to undertake that Expedition, till, with much Difficulty, the Earl hindered him, having received Advices the Country was full of Forces, and some English Frigates upon that Shore.

The Earl
comes to Tarbet.

About this Time the good News came, that Auchinbreck's Men were ready; whereupon the Earl ordered him to march with them to the Tarbet, a very central Place, and opposite to the Lowlands; and thither the Earl came with his Three Companies from Ila, and Three Companies from Kintyre, commanded by Colonel Aylief, Robert Elphinstoun of Lapness, and Major John Campbel, afterward executed at Inveraray, and a Troop of Horse commanded by Rumbold.

APP. N<sup>o</sup>. 113.

At the Tarbet, upon the 27 of May, the Earl printed, and caused disperse his own Declaration, which I have annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 113. This Paper bears the Reason of it in its own Bosom. The Earl had concurred in the former large Declaration; but it was given out by his Enemies, that he had private Views to recover his own Estate, and the Lands of his Neighbours. This he fully obviates, and promises to pay not only his own but his Father's Debts. The other Particulars the Reader will find in the Paper it self, and so I say no more of them. This Declaration, it seems, very much displeased the Government, since they print it at full Length; whereas the former Declaration is printed in some short Hints, with perverting Clauses insert by way of Commentary, and for the Refutation of it, of which some Notice hath been taken. Both were published by Authority.

And modelled
his little Army.
The Officers.

At that same Place, about a Thousand Men joyned the Earl, mostly with Sir Duncan Campbel. Here the Earl modelled his very small Army into Three Regiments, which were not much above Five hundred Men per Piece. Sir Duncan Campbel, John Aylief, and the Laird of Lapness, were Colonels; Major Alexander Campbel, the Laird of Barbreck, and a Third, were Lieutenant-colonels; James Henderson, John Fullarton, and Major John Campbel, were Majors; and all inferior Officers were at this Time nominate, and this Handful put in the best Order might be.

The Earl was fully determined to have attacked Ballechan, who was lying about Inveraray, waiting for the Marquis of Athole and the Earl of Broad-albin their coming up: This was a very reasonable Proposal. That Gentleman had but about Six hundred Men with him, which might have easily been given Account of, and Argyle Shire settled and secured, and the Earl's Army at least doubled.

But I find in the abovementioned Paper, that Sir John Cochran and some others of his Party would by no Means consent to this; but were peremptory to have some Hundreds of Men, and Half of the Arms and Ammunition, brought from Holland, given Sir John, and him sent to the Shire of Air instantly: He was so peremptory, that he said, if no Body would go with him, he would go alone with a Corn-fork in his Hand. This was not the only Contradiction Sir John gave the Earl, if the Accounts of those Times may be credited.

To do every Man Justice, as far as my Accounts afford Materials in this irksom Story, I am apt to think, Sir John laid too much Weight upon some Informations which came from the Lowlands, and promised himself a great deal more than came to pass. I have before me a Letter without any Date; but I take it to be at this Time, from William (afterwards Lieutenant-colonel) Clellan, to Sir John, which, with some other Accounts of such a Nature, might have put an Edge on Sir John's Expectations, especially in a Matter he would so willingly have had true. It deserves a Room here, as what at least will let us into the Activity and Endeavours of that gallant Gentleman, in the Trust committed to him. It follows.

S. P. I.

If you knew what Hazards I have run, and Travel I have been at, you would be satisfied I have not been negligent. I have turned all Stones, and hope, by God's Assistance, Things shall go well. The great Multitudes of Enemies, and the Remissness of some Friends, have retarded mightily. By God's Help, I hope the Malecontents are gained, and begin now to act: I have this Order to write in their Names, that if Mr. Ker be for the Work of Reformation, carried on from the 1638 to the 1648. they are for him. Let him not spare to speak them fair, and not to be any way troubled for what they may write to him. Keep you strong where you are, and keep the Enemy in as great Vexation as you can, till you see a Beacon upon Lowdon-hill. I hope in Eight Days or thereby all shall be in a Flame. Send us Intelligence to Moffat-well, if possible, where I shall have a Man or Woman with a Knot of broad red Ribbons about their right Arm, to whom they shall give all their Intelligence. Haste to send it. The Enemies did prevent us as to Horses, but we are minded to retake them. If you could frequently alarm the Enemies, it would exceedingly weaken them. In short, Things are brought to a probable Posture.

Mr. Clellan's
Letter to Sir
John Cochran.

This Probability did misgive, and those termed Malecontents, the Society People in the South and West, fell into Differences, as we heard, as to the Terms upon which they would joyn with Argyle. But I can find nothing of their Scruples as to his being against Monarchy, and for a Commonwealth, which is a mere Reproach: And nothing was effectually done.

However, such Accounts as these made some of the Gentlemen stiffly oppose the Earl his going to Inveraray, when he had an excellent Prospect of many Advantages by so doing. To determine their different Sentiments, a Council of War was called, and there, contrary to the Earl's Sentiments, it was resolved to make an Invasion upon the Lowlands. The Earl calmly submitted, but indeed this Step was mightily to their Loss.

The Earl hindered from going to Inveraray, and it is related to in an Account upon the Lowlands.

At the Isle of Bute, another Stop befel them; a Company of Foot, and some of Rumbold's Horse, could not have Boats to come up soon enough, and waiting for them, the Earl was detained Three Days. When they arrived, the good Project upon Inveraray was laid aside, and the Forces transported, the best Way they could, to Cowal in Argyle Shire, just opposite to the Lowlands, whither the Gentlemen would be. And Sir John Cochran, Colonel Elphinstoun, and Major Fullartoun, were sent to the Lowlands.

Sir John Cochran and others sent from Cowal to the Lowlands.

By this Time the Coasts were guarded, and some English Frigats come up, so that Sir John durst not land in the Largs in Air Shire, as was projected, but put in towards Greenock for Intelligence, and some Meal for their Army.

He put in towards Greenock.

When they came within Musket-shot of Land, there appeared a Body of Horse upon the Shore. Sir John having the Command, ordered Colonel Elphinstoun to essay landing with about Twenty Men, which was all they could land at once for Want of Boats; but the Thing being impracticable at that Place, and the Colonel's Orders being only to obey in as far as reasonable, taking this to be just the losing so many Men, he flatly refused.

Sir John prevailed upon Major Fullartoun, with about a Dozen of Men, to attempt to land in another Place near by, which he did under the Fire of the Militia, and got safe ashore, and into a Sort of Ditch for Shelter. The printed Account aboven mentioned bears, 'That the Militia seeing them ashore, gave over firing, and the young Laird of Houffac, and What passed there.

Crawfordsburn, came up to the Major, and another with him, and had some Conversation, and passed their mutual Words of Honour, to use no Hostilities till the Parley was over. After they had asked some Questions at the Major, to his great Surprise, they discharged their Pistols at him, which happily missed him, and he returned his, and killed one of their Horses, and wounded another.

By this Time some more Men were landed to the Major's Assistance, and those with the first Party behaved so well, that the Militia retired to the Face of an Hill opposite to the Ships, who fired some Guns at them, which reached so near them, that they retired, and some did not draw Bridle till they came to Passy. This is the Account given in the printed Narrative beforementioned; I cannot assert it as certain, and have set it down as I find it.

Having communicated what is above, to a worthy Gentleman present at this little Scuffle, he is pleased to acquaint me, That the Heritors of Renfrew Shire, formed in a Troop under the Lord Cochran, at the Council's Appointment, were at this Time keeping Guard at Greenock. When Mr. Fullartoun landed near the Kirk of Greenock, John Houstoun younger of that Ilk, Lieutenant of the Troop, and Thomas Crawford of Crawfordsburn elder, Quartermaster to it, with some Gentlemen in Company, rode down towards Mr. Fullartoun and his Men, who had put up a Signal for Parley; and Houstoun having expostulated with the Major on their Invasion, he answered, They were come to their native Country, for the Preservation of the Protestant Religion, and Liberties of their Country, and it was Pity such brave Gentlemen should appear against them, in the Service of a Popish Tyrant and Usurper. Upon which Houstoun said he was a Liar, and discharged his Pistols amongst them, as did also the rest of the Gentlemen with him, and the Major and his Men returned their Fire very briskly, but did no Execution; only Houstoun's Horse being of Mettle, and unused with Fire, threw him, but he soon remounted, and returned to the Troop.

Upon their Flight, Sir John with the rest came ashore, and entered the Town of Greenock, and endeavoured to prevail with the Inhabitants, to joyn in Defence of Religion and Liberty. He seized about Forty Bolls of Meal, instead of the Two hundred the Earl had ordered him to bring for the Use of the Army; and then, upon a false Alarm, went off in the Night, and sailed back to Cowal, and there, too late, declared it was Folly to attempt the Lowlands as yet, they being every where guarded with Soldiers and Militia.

The Design upon Inveraray resumed under many Disadvantages.

All now left to the Earl, was to make the best he could in his own Country; and so he renewed his Design to attempt Inveraray, though now at a vast Disadvantage. Accordingly, he divides his small Army, and gave the one Half of it to Colonel Rumbold, and sent him to guard a Pass, by which the Marquis of Athole might attack him; and likewise to raise the Country as much as possible: The other Half he took with himself to Inveraray; but the Winds being contrary Six or Eight Days, and the English Frigats being come up, he was forced to shelter his Vessels under the Castle of Allangreg. There he took out such Arms and Ammunition as he at present stood in Need of, and laid them up in the Castle, which he fortified as well as in so short a Time he could, and then marched by Land to Inveraray, resolving to attack the Marquis of Athole, if his Ships should get up to him. He left Two Companies of Men in the Castle.

Colonel Rumbold, with about Five hundred Men, went and seized the Castle of Ardringlass; and when the Marquis of Athole sent off a large Fisher-boat full of Men, to know the Colonel's Numbers and Strength, Captain Duncanson manned out a little Fishing-scout, with Ten Men, and chased her within Pistol-shot of the Town, very much to his Honour: However, some Regiments were ordered from Inveraray, to retake the Castle of Ardringlass.

But the Earl, by this Time, was got up with the Regiments he had with him, to Rumbold; and the Enemy finding their Mistake, made a Halt at the Head of Lochfin. Upon which the Earl himself, with Five Companies of Foot, and Two of Horse, went to attack them, leaving the rest to be brought up by Sir Duncan Campbell. The Marquis of Athole being apprised of this, sent off some of his Men in Boats, to land upon the Earl's Rere, and cut off his Retreat; but Sir Duncan prevented that by his seasonable coming up.

The Earl gets a small Advantage over the Marquis of Athole.

But is forced to retire to the Castle of Ardringlass.

The Earl with the first named Companies, attacked the first Body of the Enemy, and entirely put them to the Flight, and pursued them a good while up a steep Hill, till the Ground grew so disadvantageous, that he saw fit to sound a Retreat. In this Action he had but one Man killed, and severals of the Enemy were killed and wounded.

After this Advantage the Earl returned to the Castle of Ardringlass, and designed next Day with his little Army to attack Inveraray, where the Marquis of Athole was reckoned Five thousand strong, to be sure the Earl was scarcely 1200. But unhappily the King's Frigats and Men of War, at this Time were coming up pretty near the Castle of Allangreg, where the Earl's Ships were; and some of the Gentlemen who would not come with the Earl to Ardringlass, and had differed with him all along, threatened to quit all and go to the Lowlands: The Earl therefore, after Four or Five Hours refreshing his Men, was obliged to return to the the Castle of Allangreg with Three Companies of Foot, ordering the rest, under Rumbold and Sir Duncan, to meet him at the Kirk of Glenderule, if there was need; which they did. 1685.

Thus a second Time the Earl was marred in his Design upon Inveraray, when it had most probably succeeded, tho' the Marquis of Arbuthnot had double his Numbers, since upon this small Ruffle great Numbers of the Marquis's Men left him. In short every Thing went cross the Earl's Designs, and that when just about to be happily executed.

When the Earl came to Allangreg in this critical Juncture, he resolved to man out Four Prizes he had got at Sea, and Thirty large Cowans or rather-boats, with the Thousand Men he had with him, and joyn his own Three Ships with them, and attack the Men of War that were coming up; but another Mutiny was raised among the Seamen, by those who still embarrased the Earl, so the Design was entirely broke, and the Earl forced into the Measures of those, who, cost what it would, resolved to be at the Lowlands.

Thus the Castle of Allangreg was left to the Laird of Lapsford, with a sufficient Garison, and Men to guard the Ships, and the Governor ordered, in case he was not able to hold it out, to blow up the Magazine, and either to draw up the Ships, so as they might be recovered, or to sink them. But Two Days after the Earl with the Forces had left them, the Garison forsook all, being, as they said, in Want of Provision, leaving a Train of Powder to blow up the Castle, and neglecting the Ships intirely; and which was worse, they left behind them the few Prisoners taken at Orkney, who being left at Liberty, immediately acquainted the Captains of the Frigats, who came ashore in long Boats, discovered the Train, and seized all.

No wonder that this vexed the Earl, when the Garison came up to him in his March, toward the Head of the Gareloch; and now nothing was left him but to march into the Lowlands, under a Thousand Disadvantages. In the Way they met and defeated several of the Enemy's Parties; and such of them who escaped, alarmed the Country before the Earl, and distressed up the regular Forces, acquainting them of the Road the Earl had taken; so that when he crossed the Water of Levin, a little above Dumbarton, he found all the King's Army and Militia upon him, treble to him in Number, and the Earl of Dumbarton on their Head.

Here the Earl of Argyle took up a Ground, which was inaccessible and safe, but they could not stay in it for Want of Provision. By their miserable Divisions they lost another Opportunity here, to have fought a Part of their Enemies before General Cannon, or Ammunition were come up. This was pressed by the Earl, but he was over-ruled. When all the King's Army was come up, and they must either do or die, the Earl calls his Council of War.

The Bulk of the Gentlemen were for marching by the Enemy, and letting them fall upon their Rere, which, in the foresaid Hints, says the Earl, would have been present Destruction. The Earl and Aylieff were for engaging, knowing indeed they were treble their Number, but that likewise they wanted not Friends among them. This was violently opposed by the other Side, as perfectly impracticable. Rumbold moderated their Heats, and a Night Attack was agreed upon; but the Earl was again over-ruled and balked in that also; so that it ended in a Retreat to Glasgow, or Bothwell-bridge, and so towards the South.

Accordingly Fires were kindled, and Men left with them, which took so well, that they got all pretty well 'twixt the Enemy and Glasgow. Several of their own Number gave them false Alarms, pretending to see Parties marching towards them, and such like Imaginations. Sir John Cochran is charged in the printed Account, as being very instrumental in discouraging the Men, and pressing them to separate and flee; how truly, I am not at this Distance to determine.

But it is certain enough, their Guides misguided them, and carried them near Four Miles about, and instead of leading them to Glasgow, brought them down upon Kilpatrick; and the Earl, in the foresaid Hints, says, he was a Mile in the Dark before he perceived the Cheat, and could neither help it, nor perswade them to halt to draw up, so that their Retreat turned to a Rout. He stayed in the Rere, and sent Rumbold to the Van to stop them, but, says he, it was impossible, and concludes, so I was left necessarily to be taken.

At Kilpatrick a few of them put a Militia Company to Flight, and had it been possible to have rallied their scattered Forces, they might have got out of the Reach of the Enemy; but that was impracticable, when a good many of themselves urged separating and fleeing.

Sir John Cochran, Sir Patrick Hume, and some other Gentlemen went straight to Clyde, and would not so much as stay to reason the Matter with my Lord Argyle. They were received with the Fire of some of the Militia Horse, when they came to the other Side. The Laird of Lapsford, the Laird of Barbreck, with a few Soldiers, coming up in another Boat, fired at the Militia, and obliged them to bear off with some Loss, and having got ashore, they joyned the rest, and were pursued for some Time by Two Troops of Militia, commanded by Captain Clellan of Fasken. At length a Scuffle happened near Muirdyke, in Lochrumnoch, wherein Captain Clellan and some others were killed, and the Laird of Blair, (other Accounts make it Sir Adam Blair of Carberry.) with some others, wounded. Upon the

to the Earl's Attempt, and the Scuffle at Muir-dyke, from a Narrative by

other Side, a Gentleman of the Name of Campbel was killed, and Major Henderson, and Mr. Archer (of whom afterwards) was sore wounded.

Having given this Account of what passed since the Earl's coming from Holland, before I enter upon the Earl's personal Misfortunes, let me subjoin here several other Hints concerning this Attempt, and particularly the Encounter at Muir-dyke, from a Narrative come to my Hand, since I wrote what is above, written by a Person of good Reputation yet alive, who came over with the Earl, and was present at the Muir-dyke Encounter. 'When we set sail from Holland, we were not above Three hundred Men in all, but had our Three Ships laden with good Arms and Ammunition. We had a quick Passage, but came to the wrong Place of the Kingdom, Orkney, where Two of our Men were taken. When we came about to the Earl's Country, a good many Highlanders joyned us. Upon Notice of an English Man of War in Pursuit of us, we went down a little Creek to the Castle of Alangie, where we lodged all our Arms and Provisions, and built a Fort on the West Side of the Castle, and planted some Cannon, in case the Frigats should come down. We left an Hundred and Fifty Men there, and went in quest of the Marquis of Athole's Men, who constantly fled from us. Thus we were taken up several Days: Mean while the Frigats came down upon the Castle, which our Men could not defend, and were forced to quit it, laying a Train to blow all up, which misgave, and all fell into the Enemy's Hand.'

'This mightily discouraged the Earl, and we left pursuing Athole's Men, and marched to the Lowlands, hoping our Numbers would increase. When at Night we were setting our Watches, a Party of the King's Troops appeared, so that instead of getting Rest, we marched all Night towards Glasgow; and after we had sent out for Provision, which we very much wanted, the whole of the King's Army appeared; so we drew up on a Muir Side, there being a Water 'twixt us and them, being firmly resolved to fight them, tho' much inferior in Numbers; but they never approached us all that Day. At Night we marched off, leaving great Fires in our former Camp, and our Leaders mistaking the Way, led us into a Moss, which quite disordered us, so that though we were a good Army at Night, there were not Five hundred of us together in the Morning. Our Discouragements being great, Multitudes, and Kumbold, and many brave Men who had no Mind to part with us, lost their Way. Those who kept together came to Kilpatrick. We crossed Clyde, where was a Troop of Militia Horse, which Sir John Cochran and Polwart soon defeated, and made them run more than a Mile before they halted: So we sent the Boat to and again, till we brought over an Hundred and Fifty Men, and the Earl with the rest refused to come over. On the South Side of Clyde we refreshed our selves with some Provision, in a Gentleman's House at the Water Side, which had been designed for the King's Forces, and indeed we needed it, for some of us had tasted little these Three Days; then we resolved to march in a Body South to England.'

'But the Militia Troops we had chased from the Water Side, had got Two others joyned them, and came toward us, which made us alter our Rout. Sir John Cochran divided us in Three Companies, one he commanded himself, Polwart the other, and Major Henderson the Third. We went to attack the Militia, who fled, and we saw no more of them till the Afternoon. Two Troops commanded by Captain Clellan, and my Lord Ross, with some Militia, came near us, who now were decreased to about Seventy, and attacked us; we stood our Ground, and had Mr. Thomas Archer wounded. A Treaty was begun, and they offered Quarters, which we refused, and got into a little Fold-dyke, which was a kind of Defence unto us. There they made a furious Attack upon us, wherein Captain Clellan was killed, and renewed their Attack, wherein we were told my Lord Ross was in Hazard; and if he had not had Harness, would have been killed, as several others were. We had one Man killed, and Two wounded; and Sir John Cochran had Two Shots, which lighted on his Buff-coat, and smarted much, but did not pierce it. After this, the Enemy retired a little, and compassed us round at some Distance, which gave me (says the Writer) Opportunity to observe Mr. Archer lying, who was extremely weakned by his bleeding. He was carried into the Herd's House, where the Enemy afterward found him, and he was taken into Edinburgh.'

'When Night came, Sir John ordered us to march out from the Fold we were in, in a close Body, and endeavour to force our Way through them, apprehending they resolved to guard us in till more Forces should come up. But we found them retired to Kilmar-nock, and so after staying about a Day's Time together, in a Tenant's House of Sir John Cochran his Father, and upon hearing that the Earl of Argyle was taken, Sir John dismissed us, and we separated, and shifted for our selves the best way we could.'

To return to the Earl thus deserted, and almost alone, he rode about a Mile in the Road to Glasgow, accompanied only with Sir Duncan Campbel, Major Fullartoun, Captain Duncan-son, and his Son Mr. John, and sent off Sir Duncan and the Captain to make a new Levy, if possible; and after having laid down a Method for Correspondence, parted with them, and went to a certain House, where one lived who had been his Servant some Years, hoping to be safe there, but was peremptorily denied Access.

The Earl
crosses Clyde.

This

This forced him and the Major to cross Clyde, and they went straight to the Water of Inchaban, where at the Ford he was stopt by a Party; whereupon the Earl turned his Horse, and went up the Water Side. Fullartoun entertained the Party at the Water in the mean Time, partly by fair, and at length with brisk Language, till the Earl was a little off, pretending he would not be forced or stopt. Mean while, a Country Fellow came and told the Commander of the Party, that the other was not a Country Man, and that he had parted with his Horse, and taken the Water upon his Foot, upon which a Party was ordered up to him. This the Major endeavoured to prevent, and offered rather to yield himself, than that the Country Man his Guide should be troubled. The Earl was in a mean Habit, and the Major in good Clothes. To this the Commander of the Party condescended; but as soon as the Major was disarmed, he sent off Two to take the supposed Guide, contrary to Agreement; which the Major seeing, railed at him, and grasping at one of the Swords, resolved either to kill or be killed. But he was soon overpowered, and carried away Prisoner, and afterwards very wonderfully escaped, of which I want the Particulars.

1685.
And is taken at the Water
of Inchaban.

By this Time, those sent came up to the Earl, and fired at him while he was in the Water: He got through the Water, and presented a Pocket Pistol to some who met him upon the other Side, but being spoiled with the Water, it did not fire. One of them seeing this, cut him on the Head with a broad Sword. The Laird of Greenock came up with another Party, and immediately knew him, and seized him, and carried him in Prisoner to the Earl of Dumbarton, at Glasgow. The Country People, when they knew it was the Earl, regretted what they had done most bitterly. This is the Story told by the printed Account, but very confused and indistinct, and in some Circumstances I scarce find it agree with other Accounts I have heard.

Therefore I add the Earl's own Narrative of it, from the forsaide Paper so oft cited. The way of my taking was in short, when our Friends had run so far, that to follow and rally them would never do, I was past a Possibility of getting to Argyle Shire. I attempted to hide, but I fell from one Difficulty into another, till Two Militia Men fell upon me, after I had laid by my Sword to pass for a Country Man. I answered their Challenges civilly, but at last they laid Hands upon me, one upon each Side, all of us on Horseback. I grappled with both, and one of them and I went to the Ground; but I got up, and rid myself of them both, by presenting my Pocket Pistols. After that Five came on me, and fired close at me, without touching me, and I was like to get rid of them, till they knocked me down with their Swords. As soon as they knew what I was, they seemed to be much troubled, but durst not let me go.

The Earl's
own Account of his being seized.

Thus I have brought this great and gallant Nobleman again into the Hands of his Enemies. He was most unaccountably treated by too many, embarked with him in the Design for rescuing this Nation: Never any Enterprize he designed almost, but he was crossed in it; and he never had any Success but once, when he went over their Inclinations, and left them behind him at the Castle of Allangreg. And one is almost ready to say, that it had been Scotland's Interest and his own, if he, and those who still thwarted with him, had never met again, and that he had suffered them to go to the Lowlands, as they threatened; but this excellent Patriot was but too well-natured to such unreasonable Proposals as were advanced, and too ready to expose himself, rather than suffer any Thing to fall in contrary to that Harmony he so vehemently wished for.

Remarks on the whole.

I shall shut up this lamentable Narrative of this Matter, with a few Passages more from the Hints dashed down by the Earl when in Prison, which will give us farther Views both of the Earl's excellent and Christian Temper, his Sufferings, and the Uneasiness he had from those who were with him.

After the Account of his being left and taken, he says, 'Even in this I found many concurring Providences, which said, God would have it so. I submit to the Lord's Providence in it, I hope all is for the Good of my Soul. There are some hidden ones, but I see no great Party in this Country, that desire to be relieved; only my poor Friends in Argyle have appeared in all Scotland. I was busy this Day (those Hints are written in Prison a few Days before his Execution) treating for them, and in some Hopes; but this Evening Orders came, that I must die upon Monday or Tuesday, and I am to be put to Torture, if I answer not all Questions upon Oath, yet I hope God shall support me. My Wife is now admitted to come to me, so I will leave off further writing at present. If my Methods had been followed, in all Probability the Ships had been saved, and sent back, and Matters continued some Months, but there had been much Bloodshed. God hath ordered it otherwise, and certainly best, tho' not to the Humours of any engaged. I thank God I submit heartily to his Will.'

The Earl's
own Reflections.

At another Time he adds, 'Those who went with me kept continual Cabals, sent Messengers, received Intelligence by themselves, and acquainted me with but what they pleased, and were trepanned by Spies sent out by the Enemy; and to the last Hour never got me one Intelligence of Use, nor assured me of one Man to joyn with me; and when they spoke or sent to any, did it in their own Name. Once they perswaded me, like a Fool, to give 1685.

‘ a Letter of Trust to one they sent out, and, like the Raven, he never returned. They designed sometimes to have seized some of the Ships, Arms, and Provision, and effectually did break open, use, and embezel what they pleased, without me. Some of them lived riotously, and spent the Provisions as they pleased, so that many Arms were spoiled, and many lost, and Provisions were spent sooner than was necessary: And, except Two hundred Ducatoons I left, I spent all the Silver upon them, and they claimed all as their Due. After the Vessels were lost, they once, without my Knowledge, seized all my rowing Boats; and if I had not perceived it, were running away of their own accord, with as many as they could engage, even after I had undertaken my last fatal March, by their Advice.’

Upon another Bit of Paper the Earl goes on, ‘ I say not this to accuse any, but that you may pity me, and know the Providences, in bringing me to the Case I am now in, were numerous and very remarkable. It was the Hand of God, let us submit to it. We have not been thankful for former Deliverances, and we have too much trusted the Arm of Flesh. It was certainly a determined Counsel of God, not to deliver Scotland at this Time, nor by my Hand especially; I must be taken, as I was. But again, alas! whom is there to be delivered? I doubt not but there are some hidden ones, but the Generality have perverted their Way. Some frailty yielded, and intulily persisted even to the same Excess of Riot. The Heritors and Militia were trusted, yet the very Men we trusted have done us most, and, it may be, the only Mischief. Of the Militia who wounded and took me, some wept, but durst not let me go. - - - Friends were our greatest Enemies, all without Exception, both to betray and destroy us; and indeed - - - and - - - were the greatest Cause of our Rout, and my being taken, tho’ not designedly, I acknowledge, but by Ignorance, Cowardice, and Faction.’

The Earl adds upon another Piece of Paper, ‘ I am not pleased with my self, I have so hard Epitaphs of some of my Country Men; seeing they are Christians, pray put it out of any Account you give; only I must acknowledge, they were not governable, and the Humour you found begun, continued. Poor Rumbold was a great Support to me, and a brave Man, and died christianly. But unhappy Aylieff is still at Glasgow, he hath attempted to end himself with his Pen-knife.’

Those Hints give a naked Representation of Matter of Fact, and being from one of so great Probity and Religion as the Earl, their Truth cannot be questioned; they are the true Springs of this Business’s misgiving so miserably. They seem to be written by the Earl at different Times, probably as Materials of an Information to Madam Smith, to whom he wrote a Letter, among the last Things he did, which shall be just now insert, as I follow this extraordinary Person to his Martyrdom.

Council's Orders June 20. about bringing the Earl to Edinburgh.

The Earl being taken, was carried into the Town of Renfrew, and when at some Refreshment there, he said (as I am certainly informed) to Thomas Crawford of Crawfordburn, to whom he had a peculiar Regard, and after his taking by the Two Country Men at Inchanan Water, gave him a Silver Snuff-box as a Token of his Respect. ‘ Thomas, it hath pleased Providence to frown on my Attempt, but remember I tell you, ere long one shall take up this Quarrel, whose Shoes I am not worthy to carry, who will not miscarry in his Undertaking.’ From Renfrew the Earl was taken to Glasgow, and from thence was carried into Edinburgh, under a strong Guard. By the Council-registers, I find, June 20. they order Archibald late Earl of Argyle, to be brought along the long Gate to the Water-gate, and from thence to be carried up the Street, with his Hands tied behind his Back, bare-headed, in the Militia of Captain Graham’s Guards, with cocked Matches, and the Hangman walking before him; that the Horse Guards march before and behind, and he be carried to the Castle, and laid in Irons.

It was debated at Edinburgh, whether to intent a new Process upon this present Invasion, and pass Sentence upon him for it, or to execute him upon his former Sentence unrepented. To be sure, a Sentence upon the present Invasion, which might soon by the present Laws have been found Rebellion, would have been far more equal in the Eyes of many, but then it would have taken some Time; and such was the Zeal of the Managers, they would not seem to question the Injustice of their former Sentence, which every Body saw iniquitous, and all the World, and, I imagine, most of themselves by this Time were convinced of its Unrighteousness. However, to make short Work, they looked upon him as already condemned, and proceeded, without any Ceremony, to take away his Life.

This was the Opinion of the Counsellors at Edinburgh, and they had Orders from Court agreeable thereto, as we shall hear. Great Pains were taken to bring the Earl to a Confession, which might involve others in the same Measures they were resolved to take with him; and as he himself signifies above, he was threatened with Torture, but, as far as I can learn, they did not bring him under it. He was frequently visited by the Managers, and Committees of Council met, and he was brought before them. And the Interrogatories put to him by the Council deserve a Room here, from the original Copy I am favoured with by a Person of Quality.

- Who in Ireland? and why those in England or Ireland rose not?
- What Scotsmen were concerned, or if Stairs, Saltoun, or James (here is a little Blank in the Original, which I supply not, though I take it to be Mr. Stuart) were not concerned?
- If it was treated that the Duke of Monmouth should be King?
- Who was to be raised to the Throne, if this King was to be laid aside?
- Who was to have raised the Forces in the Borders and West at this Time?
- Why you imployed Rumbold or Baifour, being Assassimators, and why they went not rather with Monmouth, than came here?
- If there was any Delign for assassinating the Officers of State, or Garisons?
- Were there any Ships to land in Forth, Fife, or elsewhere, and if there be any Ships yet to come?
- Who were to joyn you in Murray, and why you resolved to touch there?
- Why Spence came to you, and what Correspondences he brought?
- Why you brought up your Ships to Clyde, knowing the King's Frigats would block you up there?
- Why were you so long in going to the West Country?
- If there was any of the indulged Ministers who corresponded with you since you came to Scotland? and what were the Names of the Ministers who were with you? and generally, who corresponded with you from Scotland, or any other Place?
- If William Cullen was sent by you from any Part of Holland, and where he was sent?
- and if any Person be sent to Galloway with Arms, or what Officers are sent to Galloway, or elsewhere, and what Correspondents they have?
- What did the Sum amount to, which you got to be the Fund of this War?

Interrogatories for the Earl of Argyle, from the Original.

At the End of the original Paper, whence I transcribe those Interrogatories, what follows is written by the Earl's own Hand, as I am assured by the Person who gave it me, and perfectly well knows the Earl's Hand. 'This is the very Principal of the Interrogatories given me, which I answered but in Part, according to a Paper under my Hand, and signed'

Argyle.

This Paper of the Earl's Answers I have not seen, which I am sorry for, and make no question but they were candid and prudent, and every way agreeable to his extraordinary Parts, Quality and Piety. This is all I know about him in Prison, till the coming of an Express from Court, for his Execution on his former Sentence, which was willingly obeyed by the Managers.

I find by the Council Registers, June 29. 'the Letter underwritten, from the King, read and ordered to be recorded. X. R. Right trusty, &c. We greet you well. Where-as the late Earl of Argyle is, by the Providence of God, fallen into our Power, 'tis our Will and Pleasure, that you take all Ways to know from him those Things which concern Our Government most, as his Assistants with Men, Arms, or Money, his Associates and Correspondents, his Designs, &c. But this must be done, so as no Time may be lost in bringing him to condign Punishment, by causing him to be demeaned as a Traitor, within the Space of Three Days after this shall come to your Hands, an Account of which, with what he shall confess, you shall send immediately to us or our Secretaries; for doing of which this shall be your Warrant. Whitehall, June 22. 1685.

King's Letter to the Council upon the Earl's being taken.

Melford.

That same Sederunt of Council I find what follows in their Registers. 'The Lords of Justiciary having referred the Place and Manner of the late Earl of Argyle's Execution to the Council, they require them, in obedience to his Majesty's Letter, to pronounce for Sentence against the said Earl, That to Morrow the 30 instant, 'twixt Two and Five of the Clock in the Afternoon, he shall be taken to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and shall be there beheaded, and his Head thereafter affixed to the Tolbooth of Edinburgh on an high Pin of Iron; and that the Magistrates of Edinburgh see the said Sentence executed accordingly, and receive the Person of the said late Earl at the Castle Gate of Edinburgh, by Twelve of the Clock precisely, from which they are to carry him down to the laigh Town Council-house with a strong Guard, where they are to keep him till the ordinary Time. They likewise grant Warrant to permit Eight of the Earl's Friends and Relations to be present on the Scaffold with him to Morrow, and no more.

Process and Sentence before the Just-iciary June 29.

By the Justiciary Books I find they obtemperate all, and what is there, follows. June 29. Intrat Archibald Campbel, sometimes Earl of Argyle, to hear and see the Time, Place, and Manner of Execution appointed to him. 'The said Day, forasmuch as by Doom and Sentence of Forfeiture pronounced upon the 23 of December 1681. Archibald Campbel sometimes Earl of Argyle, as being found guilty and culpable by an Assize, of the Crimes of Treason, Leasing-making, and Leasing-telling (for which he was detained in Prison in the Castle of Edinburgh, but after the Verdict made his Escape) was decerned and adjudged to be executed to the Death, and to underly the Pains of Treason and utter Punishment appointed by the Laws of this Realm, when apprehended, at such a Time, Place, and in such a Manner as his Majesty in his Royal Pleasure should think fit to declare and appoint.

Likeas, the Lords of Council, by their Act dated June 29. 1685. mentioning that they had received a Letter from his Majesty, dated June 22. instant, whereby his Majesty declares his Will and Pleasure, that Archibald late Earl of Argyle shall be demeaned as a Traitor, within Three Days after the opening of the said Letter; and they considering that the Lords of the Justiciary having formerly referred the Way, Manner and Place of his Execution, to his Majesty, they therefore, in obedience to his Majesty's Letter, do thereby require the Lord Justice General, Justice Clerk, and Commissioners of the Justiciary, to pronounce Sentence accordingly.

The Lords therefore decern and adjudge the said Archibald Campbel late Earl of Argyle, to be taken to the Market-cross of Edinburgh the 30 Day of this instant June 1685. and there, 'twixt Two and Five in the Afternoon, to be beheaded, and ordain his Head thereafter to be affixed on the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, on an high Pin of Iron: Which was pronounced for Doom.

The Earl's
Carriage before his Death.

I come now to give all I can recover, of the excellent and Christian Carriage of this worthy Nobleman, the Two or Three last Days of his Life; and I form my Narrative of it from Accounts left by Ministers and others present, one of them then waiting upon the Countess; and what I give is left under their Hand, and other original Papers I shall insert.

June 28. being the Sabbath before his Death, the Earl spent it in the most spiritual and heavenly Manner could be; and indeed to him it was a Prelude of the everlasting Sabbathism he was just entring upon. His Sister, the Lady Lothian, came to take her Leave of him, and was very much affected; which the Earl perceiving, said to her, 'I am now loosed from you, and all earthly Satisfaction, and long to be with Christ, which is far better. It seemeth, the Lord thought not me fit to be an Instrument in his Work, but I die in the Faith of it, that it will advance, and that the Lord will appear. Sister, I hear they cannot agree about the Manner of my Death: As to that I am at a Point, for I have given up my self to the Lord's Disposal, and am assured of my Salvation: As for my Body, I care not what they do with it. Be kind to my Jeany.' The excellent Lady answered, She would, and the more for his Cause; and Tears stopped her, and they parted.

While in the Castle, he had these remarkable Expressions in Conversation with a dear Friend. 'My gross Compliances are now sad and grievous to me, for these the Lord will not honour me to be instrumental in his Work; but I desire to die in the Faith of a Deliverance to his Church and People; and though I will not take upon me to be a Prophet, yet having strong Impressions thereof upon my Spirit, I doubt not but Deliverance will come very suddenly, and I hope I shall be well. It is true, my Family is low, and I have nothing to leave them, but if they seek God, they will be wonderfully seen to and provided for: And if they do not, I care not what come of them. I fear, some have eyed me too much as an Instrument. Lean not to the Arm of Flesh.

These Expressions speak for themselves. The Earl pretends not to prophesie, yet the Secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and was with him; and the Nearness of an Outgate to poor Scotland, was very much upon the Spirits of many at this Juncture. His Father, I may say, was our first and Proto-martyr, and after, his Son, and some few others, who, as we shall hear, suffered upon the same Account. We have not many more Sufferers to Death till the Deliverance come.

As the noble Marquis his Father went first, and his Blood opened, as it were, the Flood gates to a great Stream we have seen running, so the Son almost closes up this River of Blood Blood, shed for our Religion and holy Reformation. His Expressions are heroically Christian, with relation to his Family and Posterity, and some way prophetic; they have indeed been wonderfully seen to and provided for, and, even as to their outward Estate and Grandeur, advanced to greater Honour and Riches than the Earl or Marquis had. The Hundred-fold hath been in some Measure given them in this Life, and all the Lovers of their Country, Religion and Liberty, will pray, That such of their Seed as remain, may have it continued, and in the End have Life eternal.

The Earl was beheaded Tuesday June 30. In the Morning, he had, in the greatest Throng of necessary Avocations, much Calmness and Serenity of Soul, yea, much Joy and Peace in believing. We have observed the same with relation to his Father. To one standing by him the Earl said, I have more Joy and Comfort this Day, than the Day after I escaped out of the Castle; and I nothing doubt but it continued with him, until he entered into the Joy of his Lord.

He is beheaded
June 30.

This Day he wrote, and caused others write, several Letters to such as he had a peculiar Concern in. I begin with that he wrote with his own Hand to Madam Smith, because it gives us a very pleasant View how Matters were with himself. Any Body who knows the common Accounts of this Time, need not be informed, that this excellent Gentlewoman had been extremely useful to the Earl in his Design, and advanced vast Sums of Money for promoting it; and this Letter contains the Earl's last Token of Regard to her. And it follows.

His Letter to Madam Smith
that Day.

Dear Madam,

Edinburgh-castle, June 30. 1685.

- While any thing was a Burden to me, your Concern was, which is a Cross greater than I can express; but I have, I thank God, overcome all; and I hope God Almighty shall comfort you, and give you Joy in the Holy Ghost.
- I was hardly used at first by those in whose Hands I am, but God hath melted their Hearts, and now I am very civilly used. I die upon mine old Sentence, and nothing of what past lately, is to be in Publick on either Hand.
- Your Name could not be concealed, and I know not what any Paper taken may say, otherwise I have named none to their Disadvantage.
- I fought Liberty to send this, that you might not think I had forgot you, and I took it as a Kindness to have it granted.
- I thank God he hath supported me wonderfully.
- I have fully resigned all to his holy Will; I leave this World willingly, not for Fear of Trouble, but with Hope of Glory.
- This is all you can expect from me from such a Place. The Lord God be with you;
- bless, comfort and reward you, for all your Kindness to all Saints, and to

Your faithful Servant,

ARGYLE.

I pray, God bless all my Acquaintances with you.Directed on the Back,

For Madam Smith.

I am well informed, that the Earl dined this Day in the Castle, and was very pleasant and hearty at it; and being used to sleep a little after Meat, and knowing the Want of it might probably discompose him for his publick Appearance, he retired to the Closet, and laid himself down on a Bed, and, for about a Quarter of an Hour, slept as sweetly and pleasantly as ever he had done.

He sleeps most calmly a Quarter of an Hour before he was carried to his Execution,
while one of his Persecutors
is not so easy.

In the interim, one of the principal Managers came up to the Castle, by Orders from the Council, which sat in the Forenoon, to speak with the Earl about somewhat or other, before he came down the Street. He timed his Coming so, as he reckoned the Earl would be done with Dinner, if he could suppose him at a formal Meal, when so near his End, and so came just when the Earl was asleep.

The Officer of State came in, and asked for the Earl; his Friends told his Lordship, that he was taking a Nap after Dinner, as he used to do, and had left Orders not to disturb him. This was, and, one would at first think, not without Ground, reckoned a Subterfuge, and he insisted to see the Earl. He was assured of the Truth of the Thing, and, for his Satisfaction, the Closet Door was softly opened, and he saw the Earl sleeping as calmly as ever in his Life.

Such a Sight raised a Storm in the Bosom of the other, and he slept out of the Room without speaking one Word, and rather run than went out of the Castle, to the Lodgings of a Relation of his own, in the Castle-hill, and in much Confusion got into a low Chamber, throwing himself over in a Bed, groaning, and in no small Distress. When the Servants acquainted the Lady of the House, she came in where he was, and seeing him in Disorder, imagining it was some sudden Sickness, called for a Glass of Sack, begging his Lordship might take it. No, no, said he, that won't help me. She insisting to know what troubled him, he told her, I have been in at Areyle, and saw him sleeping as pleasantly as ever a Man did, within an Hour of Eternity; but as for me, &c.

This Account I have from unquestionable Hands, and it affords a charming View of the Power of Religion, and a peaceful Conscience in the greatest of Shocks, and may let us in to the inward Horror, and Stings of Mind some of the Persecutors had from an unseen Hand, when they had nothing to fear from Men. And really, the Circumstances of our Martyrs were even here, more eligible, than those of their Burriers.

The Time came, when the Earl must for ever leave the Castle, and go out to his Execution, and he was accompanied with several of his Friends, down the Street to the high Council-house, whither he was ordered to be carried before his Execution, as we have seen.

Here I find the Earl writing his last Letter to his dear and excellent Lady, which is so valuable a Remain of this dying Saint, that I should wrong the Reader not to insert it.

His Letter to his Lady, from the high Council-house just before his Execution.

Dear Heart,

Edinburgh, high Council-house.

‘AS God is of himself unchangeable, so he hath been always good and gracious to me, and no Place alters it; only I acknowledge, I am sometimes less capable of a due Sense of it: But now above all my Lite, I thank God, I am sensible of his Presence with me, with great Assurance of his Favour, through Jesus Christ, and I doubt not it will continue till I be in Glory.
‘Forgive me all my Faults, and now comfort thy self in him, in whom only true Comfort is to be found. The Lord be with thee, bless thee, and comfort thee, my Dearest.
‘Adieu.

My Dear,

Thy faithful and loving Husband,
ARGYLE.

This Letter, writ just as he was going to the Scaffold, breathes such an Air of solid Christian Piety, Affection, and the primitive Temper of the first Christian Martyrs, that I wish it may leave Impressions of the Reality of Religion, the Excellency of Christianity, and its glorious supporting Power, when all other Things fail, upon the Mind of the Reader. And certainly it ought to do so, when we see so great a Man stepping into Eternity in such Serenity, and admirable Composure, parting with his nearest and dearest Relatives, in so full Assurance, and Plerophory of Faith.

To me this cannot but be a bright Proof of the Earl's Conscience of his own Innocence, when under a Load of Reproach, and just stepping out to suffer, as an evil Doer, by Mens Sentence; and I can have no Doubt, but as his Cause was good, so his gracious God, whose he was, and whom he served, now gave him the first Fruits of that glorious Reward he was immediately to enter upon.

Another to Lady Sophia Lindsay.

Whether it was at this Time, or some former Part of this Day, that he wrote the following Letter to his Daughter in Law, Lady Sophia Lindsay, I cannot be positive. The Earl had an extraordinary Value and Affection for her, and the Two Letters generally go together in the Copies I have seen, so I am apt to think they are written at the same Time. Sure it deserves a Room here.

My dear Lady Sophia,

‘WHAT shall I say in this great Day of the Lord, wherein, in the Midst of a Cloud, I find a fair Sunshine. I can wish no more for you, but that the Lord may comfort you, and shine upon you as he doth upon me, and give you that same Sense of his Love in staying in the World, as I have in going out of it. Adieu.’

ARGYLE.

P. S. ‘My Blessing to dear Earl of Balcarras,
‘the Lord touch his Heart, and incline him to his Fear.’

He wrote another to Lady Henrietta Campbell and Lady Auchinbreck.

This Day, and probably at this very Time, the Earl wrote a Letter to another of his dear Relations, Lady Henrietta Campbell, Sister to the former, and Lady to Sir Duncan Campbell of Auchinbreck. This excellent and singularly religious Person being yet alive, should I say but a little of what I might and could say of her, it would offend, and her excessive Modesty forbids me; and therefore, without saying more, I shall add it here.

Dear

Dear Lady Henrietta,

June 30. 1685.

1685.

I Pray God sanctify and bless this Lot to you. Our Concerns are strangely mixed, the Lord look on them. I know all shall turn to Good to them that fear God, and hope in his Mercy. So I know you do, and that you may still do it more and more, is my Wish for you. The Lord comfort you. I am

Your loving Father and Servant,
ARGYLE.

When the Earl went to the Scaffold, the Council allowed Two Ministers to wait upon him, one of their Nomination, Mr. Annand Dean of Edinburgh, and the other of his own Choice, Mr. Laurence Charters, who, as we heard, was laid aside for not taking the Test, and preached for many Years after the Revolution. No Presbyterian Minister would they allow him, and indeed there were not many in the Kingdom at this Time, all of them being banished, or on their hiding.

Two Ministers wait on him to the Scaffold, with what palli-
ed.

Before they went out of the Council-house, the Earl in his pleasant Way addressed Mr. Annand, and asked him, if he thought the Pope was that Antichrist the Scripture speaks of? Mr. Annand answered, Yes, my Lord, the Protestant Churches hold so. But, said the Earl, what think you? I think so too, my Lord, replied Mr. Annand. Then said the Earl, Be sure you instruct the People so.

When they were mounted the Scaffold, before the Earl spake any, Mr. Annand addressed him to this Purpose. 'My Lord, you are now standing upon Mount Calvary, and ere long your Soul must be transported out of this Valley of Tears into an Estate of eternal Bliss and Happiness; and it is your Concernment to wish and pray that the Lord may carry you safe through that Valley of the Shadow of Death, and may give his Angels Charge over you, to attend you and carry you safe to his own Bosom, where you may be ever with himself throughout all the Ages of Eternity.' The Earl gave a very close and reverent Attention to his Advices, and turned about to Mr. Charters, who spake to him to this Purpose.

'My Lord, your Lordship is now standing upon the very last Nick of your Time, and I do not question but you have been busy ere now to get Matters ordered aright 'twixt God and you; yet it is of your last Concernment to be managing well this final Moment of Time that the Lord is pleased to allow you, and if there be any Sin unrepented for, to lay it open before God, who is ready to forgive all penitent Sinners.'

To this the Earl answered, 'It is true, Sir, I think it a Duty incumbent upon me to make an Acknowledgment of my Sins; and in order to that, I think this deserves the first Place above the rest, that I did not set Time enough apart to wrestle with God in private in behalf of his Work and Interest, and my own poor Soul; and likewise, that I did not worship God in my Family so much as I should have done, partly because it was too much the Custom of this Nation to neglect so heavenly an Exercise, and partly because I never looked on my self as a Person very fit for such an Employment, and likewise my public Failings, which are well known, and for which I have reason to be ashamed this Day.'

Mr. Annand here struck in and said, 'My Lord, you are not now to stand upon the particular Enumeration of your Failings and Shortcomings, but you are to know, that God is very willing and ready to pardon all Penitents.'

But the Earl, without taking any Notice of this Interruption, proceeded: 'Likewise, I have reason to bemoan this as a great Fault, that I did not improve the Time of my Banishment, and these three Years Respite the Lord was pleased to give me, so much for his Glory, and the Advancement of his Work and Interest, as I might have done in my Station; and I earnestly beg that one and all of you who see me die this Day, may be ware of those and the like Sins, as you would not desire the like or worse Punishments to be inflicted upon you; for I do really look on my Death as a just Punishment inflicted on me by God for my Sins, though undeserved at the Hands of Men; and I would have thought as little to have appeared in this Place some Time of Day after this Manner, as many of you who are now fatiating your Eyes in beholding me: But the Lord, in his divine Wisdom, hath ordered it otherwise; and I am so far from repining and carping at his Dispensations towards me, that I bless his Name, and desire heartily to give him endless Praise and Thanks for the same.'

After this he said, Mr. Charters, will you pray? Mr. Annand, it seems, reckoned this his Due, and so prayed. In his Prayer he had this Expression, 'That the Earl was not to look on his Body as any thing else, but a Litter that kept his Soul from soiling on high to enjoy the Company of his sweet Mediator Christ Jesus.' He said also, 'that it was very much to be regreted, that such a Pillar of the Church was falling this Day.'

I have heard it said, that this Expression was extremely displeasing to some of the Managers, and Mr. Annand was reprimanded for it, either by his Ordinary, or some other of the Bishops. It was Truth he said, and if he was sincere and serious in that Part of his Prayer, he might have Peace in it, though it was not done permissu Superiorum.

My Lord Argyle was for no such Commendations in publick, and as soon as Prayer was ended, he turned to Mr. Charters, saying, Sir, why don't you pray? Then Mr. Charters prayed most fervently and seriously. After him, my Lord fell down upon his Knees on a Cushion to pray. When he was kneeling, he was desired by some appointed to wait on him, to pray within himself, which he did for a considerable Time, having his Face covered, and his Hands clasped together.

Whether it was now or at his first coming up to the Scaffold, I know not, but, in the Audience of a vast Multitude, he delivered his Speech to the Spectators, which hath been more than once printed; but 'tis so apposite, grave, and Christian, that I cannot but place it here.

Earl of Argyle's last Speech.

His last Speech: ' Job tells us, Man that is born of a Woman, is of few Days and full of Trouble; and I am
' a clear Instance of it.'
' I shall not now say any Thing of my Sentence, or Escape about Three Years and an half ' ago, nor of the Ground of my Return, lest I may thereby give Offence, or be tedious;
' only, being to end my Days in your Presence, I shall, in some few of my last Words, assert
' the Truth of the Matter of Fact, and the Sincerity of my Intentions and Professions ' that are published.'
' That I intend mainly to say now, is, to express my humble, and, I thank God, cheerful
' Submission to his divine Will, and my Willingness to forgive all Men, even mine Enemies;
' and I am heartily well satisfied, there is no more Blood spilt, and I shall with the Stream
' of it may stop at me; that if it please the almighty God to say, as to Zerubbabel, Zech-
' riah iv. 6. Not by Might, not by Power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts.
' I know, Afflictions spring not out of the Dust. God did wonderfully deliver me, and ' provide for me, and hath now, by his special Providence, brought me to this Place. I ' hope none will either insult or be stumbled at it, seeing they ought not; for God Almighty
' doth all well, for good and holy Ends, though we do not always understand it. Love and ' Hatred is not known by what is before us. Eccles. ix. 1, 2, 3.
' Afflictions are not only foretold, but promised to Christians, and are not only tolerable, ' but desirable. We ought to have a deep Reverence and Fear of God's Displeasure, but ' with all, a firm Hope and Dependence on him, for a blessed Issue in Compliance with his ' holy Will; for God chastens his own, to refine, and not to ruine them, whatever the ' World thinks. Heb. iii. 10, 12. vi. 10. xii. 2. James i. 2, 11, 12. We must not shun ' Sufferings, we are called to them. Matth. x. 18---40. and xvi. 24, &c. We are called ' to imitate our Saviour in his Sufferings. 1 Pet. ii. 23. and iv. 16, &c.
' We are neither to despise our Afflictions, nor faint under them, both are Extremes.
' We are not to suffer our Spirits to be exasperated against the Instruments of our Trouble,
' for the same Affliction may be an Effect of their Passion, yet sent to punish us for Sin;
' though it is a Comfort when we can say of them with David, Psal. lix. 3. Not for my
' Transgression, nor for my Sin. Nor are we by fraudulent pusillanimous Compliance in wick' ed Courses, to bring Sin upon our selves, (faint Hearts are ordinarily false Hearts) choosing
' Sin rather than Suffering, a short Life with eternal Death, before temporal Death and a ' Crown of Glory: Such seeking to save a little, lose all, and God readily hardens them to ' proceed to their own Destruction.'
' I know, many, like Hazael, II Kings viii. 13. go to Excesses they never thought they were
' capable of. Let Rulers and others seriously read and weigh Prov. i. 20, &c. II Chron.
' xxv. 6---16. Prov. xxiv. 10, 11, 12. and xxviii. 10. and Isa. lix. especially Verse 15. and ' avoid what is bad, and follow what is good.
' For me, I hope by God's Strength to joyn with Job, xiii. 15. and the Psalmist, 23 Psal.
' 4. and to trust as Psal. cxlvii. 11. and shall pray as Psal. lxxiv. 19, &c. cxxiii. 6, &c. and
' Luke i. 74, 75. and shall hope as Psal. xciv. 15.
' I do hereby forgive all that directly or indirectly have been the Cause of my being brought ' to this Place, first or last, and pray God may forgive them.'
' I pray God send Peace and Truth to these Three Kingdoms, and continue and increase ' the glorious Light of the Gospel, and restrain a Spirit of Profaneness, Atheism, Oppressi' on, Popery and Persecution; and restore all that have backslidden from the Purity of their ' Life or Principles, and bless his whole People with all Blessings, spiritual and temporal,
' and put an End to their present Trials.'

‘ I intreat all present to forgive me wherein I have offended, and to concur with me, that the great, good and merciful God would sanctify my present Lot, and for Jesus Christ his sake pardon all my Sins, and receive me to his everlasting Glory.’ 1685.

‘ It is suggested to me, that I have said nothing of the Royal Family, and this remembers me, that before the Justices, at my Trial about the Test, I said, that at my Death I would pray, that there might never want one of the Royal Family, to be a Defender of the true ancient Apostolick, Catholick, and Protestant Faith, which I now do; and that God would enlighten and forgive all of them, that are either hid in Error, or have thrunk from the Profession of the Truth; and in all Events, I pray God may provide for the Security of his Church, and that Antichrist, nor the Gates of Hell may never prevail against it.’

I need make no Reflections upon this excellent Speech, it is solid and judicious, and favours strong of Heaven, and of one who had made the Law of God his Meditation, and had the Word for his Comfort in his Affliction.

When he had ended, he turned to the South Side of the Scaffold, and said, Gentlemen, I pray you do not misconstrue my Behaviour this Day; I freely forgive all Men their Wrongs and Injuries done against me, as I desire to be forgiven of God. Mr. Annand repeated these Words louder to the People. Then my Lord went to the North Side of the Scaffold, and had the same or the like Expressions. Mr. Annand repeated them again, and said, This Nobleman dies a Protestant. The Earl stepped forward again, and said, I die, not only a Protestant, but with a Heart-hatred of Popery, Prelacy, and all Superstition whatsoever.

Then he came to the Midst of the Scaffold, and took Leave of his Friends, heartily embracing some of them in his Arms, and taking others by the Hand. He delivered some Tokens to the Lord Maitland, to be given to his Lady and Children: Then he stripped himself of his Clothes, and delivered them to his Friends; and being ready to go to the Block, he desired, the Executioner might not be permitted to do his Office, till he gave the Sign by his Hand; and falling down on his Knees upon the Stool, embraced the Maiden (as the Instrument of beheading is called) very pleasantly; and with great Composure he said, It was the sweetest Maiden ever he kiss'd, it being a Mean to finish his Sin and Misery, and his Inlet to Glory, for which he longed. And in that Posture, having prayed a little Space within himself, he uttered these Words Three Times, Lord Jesus, receive me into thy Glory, and then gave the Sign by lifting up his Hand, and the Executioner did his Work, and his Head was separated from his Body.

Thus died this excellent, and truly great and good Man. His Character is far beyond any Thing can be offered by me, and I shall leave it to a better Pen. This much I may venture to say, he inherited, with his Blood and Estate, the noble and excellent Qualities of his Father.

I know no Family in Europe of this Eminency, whom the Lord hath honoured so much, as this of Argyle. Father and Son indeed, in the Style of the late Times, were Sufferers for Rebellion; but that Language is now out of Doors, and I hope ever shall; and to all Persons of Consideration and Reflection, they both shine brightly as Martyrs for Religion, Liberty, and their Country. And it is beyond Contradiction, the Lord wonderfully owned them both, and sealed a deep Sense of his own Favour upon their Souls; and in such a remarkable Manner carried them through their last Appearances, as Enemies behoved to acknowledge God was with them, and in them, of a Truth.

After their Death, the Lord to whom they committed their Family, then very low, hath singularly appeared in its behalf. That extraordinary Genius, and accomplished Statesman, the Earl's Son, had an eminent Encomium bestowed upon him by no less a Judge of Men than King William, and was advanced to be a Duke; and at this Day (November 1715) Providence is honouring his Grandchild to defend poor Scotland from the same Plot of Rome and Hell his Grandfather essayed to break; and I hope God will honour him effectually to dissipate that same Popish and malignant Party, and some of the very same Persons who had a good Share of the Bloodshed I have been describing.

The Procedure of the Parliament against the Earl, and the Desolation made upon his Lands, with the Trials and Execution of severals, upon the score of this Attempt, I shall refer to the next Section, this being already so much swelled.

Let me conclude with observing, that the Earl was so full of Composure, and the Thoughts of his Death were so easy to him, that the Day before his Execution he wrote those following sort, pleasant, and affecting Lines, as his own Epitaph, which deserve a Place here.

Thou Passenger, that shalt have so much Time
To view my Grave, and ask what was my Crime:
No Stain of Error, no black Vice's Brand
Was that which chas'd me from my native Land.
Love to my Country, twice sentenc'd to die,
Constrain'd my Hands forgotten Arms to try.
More by Friends Fraud my Fall proceeded hath,
Than Foes; tho' now they thrice decreed my Death.

On my Attempt tho' Providence did frown,
His oppress'd People God at length shall own.
Another Hand, by more successful Speed,
Shall raise the Remnant, bruise the Serpent's Head.
Tho' my Head fall, that is no tragick Story,
Since going hence I enter endless Glory.

Turned into Latin by Mr.
William Jamison.

This Epitaph of the Earl's own Composure, was turned into Latin Elegiacs, by the reverend and learned Mr. William Jamison, Preacher of the Gospel, and History-lecturer in the University of Glasgow, my dear and much honoured Friend; and they having so much of the Spirit of the original Lines in them, I have likewise added them, with Two Lines of his own, which dropt from him when translating them, as a just Debt he owed to this great Man. And tho' they were written in the Days of his Youth, a little after the Earl's Death, I am perswaded he needs not be ashamed of them in his advanced Years, and after he hath favoured the World, and defended the Interests of Religion and the Church of Scotland, by his learned and larger Performances, even tho' blind from his Infancy.

*Audi, hospes, quicunque venis, tumulumque revisis,
Et rogitas quali crimine tinctus eram.
Non me crimen habet, non me malus abstulit error,
Et vitium nullum me pepulit patria.
Solus amor patriæ, verique immensa cupido,
Dissuetas jussit sumere tela manus.
Opprimor, en! rediens, vi sola, & fraude meorum,
Hostibus & savis victima terna cado.
Sit licet hic noster labor irritus, haud Deus aequus
Despiciet populum secula cuncta suum.
Namque alius veniet fati melioribus ortus,
Qui toties ruptum sine beabit opus.
Sat mihi credo datum (quamvis caput ense secetur)
Hinc petor atherei lucida templa poli.*

Heu! decus hic patriæ, proditur a patria.*

Remarks on the Accounts given by the English Historians of this Attempt.

After so large Accounts of this Attempt, I shall not make any Remarks upon the indistinct, and, in several Circumstances, false Narratives given of it by the English Historians. I wish Mr. Archdeacon Eachard had reconsidered his Narrative of the Earl's Attempt, as he hath done that of his Trial, and he would have found Cause to acknowledge his Partiality here, as well as formerly. His Abbreviate of the Earl's first Declaration, p. 750. is taken from that published by the Earl's Enemies at Edinburgh, to expose him, and ought not to be palmed on the World as his. Multitudes of other Reflections might be made, almost on every Sentence Mr. Eachard hath in this Matter; but I hope the preceeding Account will set this Affair in such a just Light, as we shall have no more so gross Misrepresentations from English Writers.

S E C T. X.

Of the Acts of Parliament against the Earl of Argyle, the Execution of Rumbold and Mr. Thomas Archer, and the Forfeitures and great Trouble others were brought to for this unsuccessful Attempt.

None executed after the Earl for this Attempt: save
Mr. Archer.

Here I am to bring in what further hath come to my Hand, as to the Earl of Argyle's fruitless Attempt for the Religion and Liberty of his Country; and it is but a Hint I shall give of the Parliament's Procedure against him, after his being taken, and the Fellow-sufferers with him. Indeed it was much, considering the Manner of the Managers after Pentland and Bothwell, that none were executed after the Earl, but worthy Mr. Archer. Whether this proceeded from the small Numbers that were taken, or from the Change

Change of Measures and Intentions hinted at before, I do not determine. The Popish King, having rid himself of the Earl here, and Monmouth in England, and there being few or none who resorted to them, perhaps designed to shew some Lenity, that People might be the better disposed to favour the taking off the penal Statutes.

I begin with the Procedure against the Earl, by the Parliament sitting when he made his Attempt, and shall subjoyn somewhat about the Severities used upon the Shire of Argyle, and then come forward to the Executions and Forfeitures upon this account.

The Parliament made Two Acts with relation to my Lord Argyle, their 36 and 40 Acts, which are both printed, and I shall not swell the Appendix with them. Allowances no doubt must be made at a Juncture when they were frightened with an Invasion, yet there appears a Virulence in them, which even this will not vindicate.

Two Acts of Parliament about the Earl

June 11. they pass their first Act, which they term, Address against the arch Traitor Archibald Campbel, sometimes Earl of Argyle. Many Observes might be made upon this Address. The Character the Parliament give their Popish King, for extraordinary Prudence, Courage, and Conduct, is not easily to be reconciled with the mad Steps taken in a Protestant Country, during his Reign. His Courage and Conduct may be quelled at, from the known Accounts of his Management after the Prince of Orange's Arrival.

The first dated June 11.

Remarks on it.

The Parliament are pleased to bestow the Epithets of hereditary and arch Traitor upon the Earl. I know not if their Successors, the High-lifers, would so far debase their sacred Phrase of hereditary Right, as to apply it to those they reckon Traitors, tho' greater Paradoxes have been advanced, than to say hereditary Right, as maintained by them, is hereditary and continued Tyranny. The Family of Argyle may glory in, and boast of a successive, and, if they like the Word, an hereditary Appearance for Religion and Liberty; but for Treason, they have been all along free of it.

They insist upon King Charles II. his restoring the Earl after his Father's Forfeiture, as an Aggravation of the present Attempt for his Country, and his raising the Family of Argyle to a greater Lustre than ever. Providence hath done so indeed now after their pretended Treason, but how King Charles did it, I am to seek. And as the Earl was all along loyal beyond Exception to that Prince, and this necessary and lawful Attempt was delayed till the Accession of a bigotted Papist to the Throne, so this is a very ill Argument ad hominem, under this Reign; since every Body then knew it was the Duke of York, who for the Earl's hearty Regard to the Protestant Interest, and appearing for it in Parliament, had meditated his Ruin, and resolved upon his Death at his first Trial, tho' I am sure it was no personal Pique for this, that moved the Earl to make this Essay, but his Regard to Christ, and his Country.

The Earl's supporting the fanatical Party under the last Reign, does not appear, unless they mean Protestants by Fanaticks, and he himself owns his Compliances with all that came about, till the Test, and that with Regret.

It were tedious to run through all the Misrepresentations in this Address; and upon those they found the petitory Part of it, That the Earl might find no Favour, which would be easily granted by a Popish King, who had been seeking his Life before he had such an Handle as now he hath; but beforehand, and most needlessly, they will involve themselves in his Blood.

What follows is very agreeable to those bloody and violent Times, but a little extraordinary. They beg, That the Earl's Family, the Heritors, Ringleaders, and Preachers who joyned him, should be for ever declared incapable of Mercy, and bearing any Honours or Estate in the Kingdom, and all Subjects discharged, under the highest Pains, to intercede for them any manner of way. This needs no Remarks, it is so perfectly agreeable to the Principle of rooting out of Hereticks. But what would have come of many of them, had they been so dealt with after their joyning Cromwel, and upon other Occasions I could name! They close the Address by pressing the King to enquire into the Abettors of the Earl abroad, with a Design, in some at least, to fix this Attempt upon the next Protestant Heir and Successor, but in vain; and shut up all with an Offer of their Lives and Liberty in their King's Defence.

By their other Act, June 16. they annex the Offices belonging to Earls of Argyle, to the Crown. They have a base and unjust Innuendo, if I mistake it not, reflecting on the Reformation it self, that the Family of Argyle, in the last Age as well as this, did commit execrable Treason: And upon this Narrative, they for ever annex the many and honourable Offices that noble Family enjoyed, to the Crown inseparably; yet, the very next Parliament, they are parcelled out to Papists and Favourites.

The other Act June 16.

Let me next take Notice of the Council's Actings after the Earl's Death. July 1. the Earl's Speech, with Lieutenant-general Drummond's Letter (which I have not seen) concerning the Earl of Argyle's Arms and Ammunition, is ordered to be transmitted to the Secretaries, with the following Letter.

My Lords,

Council's Letter to the Secretaries, the Day after the Earl's Execution.

His Majesty's Royal Letter, of the 26 of June last, anent the disposing of his Forces to ly in Anandale, Nithsdale, or other Places nearest the Town of Carlisle, on the Scottish Side, until further Order, was opened and read in Council, and an authentick Extract thereof was immediately transmitted by the Clerks of Council, to the Earl of Dumbarton, Commander in Chief of his Majesty's Forces, who will certainly see his Majesty's Commands exactly obeyed: But as it is our Duty to give ready Obedience to all his Majesty's sacred Commands, so we are bound, by our Fidelity, humbly to represent what seems to be expedient for his Majesty's Service, which is oft-times more obvious to us who are near hand, than it can be at a Distance. In the present State of Affairs, we wish and hope that his Majesty shall not need to withdraw the few standing Forces which are here, from this Kingdom; for albeit the great Strength of this Rebellion be broke, by the Blessing of God, (and indeed it is the Work of God, and not of Man) yet there are none killed, and few taken; so that a great Number of the late Argyle his Accomplices, are yet lurking in the Country, where there are a vast Number of Fanaticks ready for all Mischief, upon the first Occasion: And their Malice fancies Grounds of Hope on false Reports of the late Monmouth's Victories, and we doubt they will conclude that these few Forces are strong, and the King too weak in England, when they perceive that these few Forces are called from hence, whereupon they may be easily encouraged to rise in Multitudes, and, in several Places, both to ruine the Country, and to cut Mens Throats; and this Day we have Information from my Lord Dumbarton, that they are seizing Horses up and down the West Country, which is a great Symptom of their designed Rising: But if the standing Forces be rightly posted, and actively managed, it may be expected that this Rebellion will be so far crushed in a short Time, as to incapacitate them from rising any manner of way. The late Argyle was beheaded Yesterday, and his Head ordered to be affixed on the Tolbooth, that being the Sentence, which was the utmost that the Crime he was condemned for could bear; and the Three Days appointed by his Majesty's Letter, could not allow a new Process, and the most Part thought it unfit to have intended a new one, altho' there had been Time; but his Majesty's peremptory Commands left no Room for such Considerations. Yesternight we had an Account, that Sir John Cochran, with his Son John, (called of Waterfide) and a Stranger with them, were taken lurking at the House of an Uncle of Sir John's, but we want yet the Particulars. We have sent your Lordships herewith, a Copy of the late Argyle's Speech, (the Original, all writ with his own Hand, we have) and, upon Oath, he declared that he had neither directly nor indirectly left any other Speech or Paper upon this Occasion. Your Lordships will be pleased to remember to send down the Remission to the Two late Lairds of Cesnock, which was sent up some Time ago, marked with my Lord Advocate's Hand. These Things we desire your Lordships to represent to his most sacred Majesty, whose Royal Commands shall be obeyed by the Council, in whose Name this is signified to your Lordships by

My Lords,

Your Lordships most humble Servant,

PERTH Cancel. I. P. D.

Postscript.

Receive the Inclosed from General-lieutenant Drummond, giving an Account of the Arms and Ammunition belonging to the late Earl of Argyle and the Rebels, and acquaint us with his Majesty's Commands anent the Disposal thereof.

Return, July 9.

This Letter needs no Reflections. July 9. the Council have a Return from the Secretary, signifying theirs came by the flying Packet, and the King is resolved to have the Detachment of the standing Forces posted near Carlisle; that Cesnock's Remission is to come next Post, with his Majesty's Pleasure about the Arms and Ammunition.

Ravages committed on the Earl's Lands.

After the Parliament's Procedure with the Earl, when alive, we need not be surprized at the horrid Barbarities committed upon his Lands, had it not been done by some of his nearest, tho' unnatural, Relations. I have heard much of the extraordinary Cruelties exercised in Argyle Shire, after the Earl's taking; but being favoured with no particular Accounts from thence, I can only give some general Hints, contained in the forementioned printed Letter.

As soon as Athole and Broad-albin heard of the Earl's being taken, they exercised great Severity upon the Friends and Tenants of the Earl. Four or Five Gentlemen of the Name of Campbel, after they had gotten Protection and Quarter at their Surrender, were sent to Athole by a very near Relation of the Earl's, with Letters pressing earnestly their being

being punished as Rebels. The Marquis, with all Care and Diligence, caused put them to Death with Eighteen more.

He would have gone on in this Work, had not the Privy Council, upon Representations made to them of his Barbarity, sent an Express, discharging any more Lives to be taken, till further Orders from them; which, 'tis said, were unwillingly obeyed. Great were the Severities exercised in besieging Sir Duncan Campbell's House; and Dugal M'Intosh of Dunardary was executed in Sight of the Garrison there; and many more had gone the same Way, notwithstanding of the Council's Orders, under Pretext of taking that Strength, had not these in the House, having Notice of the Earl's being taken, surrendered it upon very honourable Terms: Notwithstanding of which, about Three Days after, contrary to the Articles, the Marquis thought fit first to plunder the House, and then to burn it. Then he harassed and plundred the whole Country, for Thirty Miles about Inveraray, which belonged to the Earl and his Friends; and the Spoil carried away to the Marquis's Lands is beyond Computation.

All this did not satisfy, but Parties were afterwards sent to pull down Houses, break Mill-stones, and burn the Woods. In this last their Spite was remarkable, the upper Part of the Timber was cut down and disposed of, and Fire set to the under Part, and the very Roots burnt: This was done both to barren and Fruit-trees. Great Barbarities were exercised towards the poor Women who came to look after their Husbands Goods, and the whole Shire of Argyle was dreadfully depopulated.

And when Providence was pleased to send a Relief to the starving People, by a remarkable Take of Herring, especially about Lochgil's Head, and the poor People were making some Shift to support themselves, the Marquis of Athole's Men came down upon them, and broke their Boats, and burnt their Nets. The Government was so sensible of those Exremities, that in a short Time the Marquis lost his Lieutenantancy of this Shire, and it was given to Lieutenant-general Drummond.

To end this general Account; notwithstanding the Earl's Cause was most just, yet he, his Family, and Friends were ruined as much as lay in the Managers Power. His Estate was given to Strangers, his Children brought to extreme Necessity, his Creditors defrauded of their just Debts, and his Friends and Vassals were oppressed and harassed continually. Yea, to that Height of Madness did some Bigots run, that an Act was a framing, to be presented to the Parliament, for the utter abolishing of the Name of Campbel.

So high did the Tide run at this Time against this noble and excellent Family, that the Earl's Brother, that excellent Person Lord Nell Campbell, could have no Liberty to live at his own House; but, as we have heard, was conned at Edinburgh; and when the Act of Parliament obliged all Protestant Heritors to take the Test, and my Lord could not obtemper, he was forced to go in the Hazard of his Life to America, and leave his Lady and Family behind him.

We have heard of Sir Colin Campbell of Ardkinglass before. He was apprehended in his own House, and kept Prisoner, I think, since the Close of the last Year, and cited in, and tried before the Parliament for alledged transmitting of Money for the Earl's Use when abroad, entertaining Mr. Thomas Forrester and some other Ministers in his House. After the most exact Enquiry, nothing of Moment was evidently proven against him; however his Trouble continued a good while, because in Principle he was against Prelacy, and did not swear the Test. Thus far I have abridged the abovementioned Letter.

In short, the Oppressions of almost all the Gentlemen and Heritors of the Name of Campbel, through the Kingdom, were great, and many more than I can run through; a few will come in from the Judiciary Registers ere I end this Section. Generally speaking, they were heartily averse from Prelacy and Popery; and consequently the Managers in Church and State resolved to be at them, and great Numbers were forfeited. We have heard of the Earl of Lowdon, and C'sack elder and younger, and we shall meet with Auchinbreck, Barbreck, Allangreg, Otter, and others.

I shall now give what I meet with in the Council-registers, relative to those concerned in the Earl's Attempt, leaving what is there relating to such as were before the Judiciary, to be brought in afterwards.

June 24. the Council issue a Proclamation for apprehending several Traitors and Fugitives, which I have annexed App. N°. 114. The Reader will perceive in it the bitter and venomous Spirit of the Penner of it, against the noble Patriots, who had embarked in the Design of recovering the Religion and Liberty of Scotland.

To blacken the Earl's Expedition, they publish to the World Colonel Aylieff's Design to make himself away; which as it does not at all affect this Attempt, so it might be the Effect of their own Severities; and I find the Fact very much questioned by Persons of good Sense, who lived at that Time: However, personal Failures of Persons engaged in a good Cause, do not affect the Cause itself; and 'tis a proof, People are reduced to their last Shifts when those Things are insisted upon by a Government.

Hardships on the Earl's Family, and an Act of Parliament projected by him against the Name of Campbell.

Sir Colin Campbell of Ardkinglass

Procedure of the Council against him with Argyle.

Proclamation June 24 App. No. 114.

Remarks on it.

1685.

After this Preamble, Rewards are offered to such who shall apprehend John Cochran of Ochiltree, Patrick Hume of Polwart, Archibald Campbel Son to Lord Neil Campbel, Charles and John Campbels Son to the late Earl of Argyle, Pringle of Torwoodlee, Sir Duncam Campbel of Auchinbreck, Eighteen hundred Merks for each. A small Sum, when compared with that set on Mr. John Welsh, the Murderers of the Archbishop, and others, long ago, and for Sir William Denholm of West-shiels, Balfour, and Fleming, Murderers of the Archbishop, William Clellan and David Stuart younger of Cultness, a Thousand Merks. The last is described by an Epithet, I am perswaded, he glories in, Grandchild to Sir James Stuart sometime Provost of Edinburgh; though they designed it as a Reflection on that worthy Person's Memory. And they put a Thousand Merks on every Minister who was with Argyle; and then goon to make it Treason to harbour, reset, correspond with, or comfort any of those Persons. And any who shall not give Intelligence of them, or Assistance against them, are declared Art and Part of their Treason, and accessory thereunto.

Notwithstanding of this severe Clause, they were sheltered and harboured by many; particularly, that eminent religious Lady, Eleonore Dunbar Aunt to the present Earl of Eglintown, did enquire diligently after the Gentlemen lurking in the Country, and getting notice of Sir Patrick Hume of Polwart, and the Laird of Kaitloch, she invited them to Kilwinning where she lived, and maintained them for several Weeks in an empty House there, till they were safely conveyed to Holland. The Countess of Lowdon did employ a trusty Servant, and sent Money and other Things to Gentlemen lurking in the Country. There was also a singularly pious Woman in Irwine, Jean Rollock, who harboured David (since Doctor) Dickson for several Weeks, till he got safe to Holland.

And to make new Grounds of Oppression to the Country, all the Subjects are discharged to harbour, reset, lodge, or entertain any Person whatsoever, unless they have a Pass from those authorized lately to give it. I have already observed the Hardships of this as to the Lieges Trade and Liberty, and those Orders brought Multitudes to very great Straits and Difficulties. This Proclamation is ordered to be read from all the Pulpits in the Kingdom, which would be carefully seen to by the Lords of the Clergy.

That same Day, with the abovenamed Proclamation, the Council give Orders to disband the whole Militia Regiments, through the Eastern and Northern Shires. July 6. William Cochran of Ochiltree younger, is allowed to go about his Affairs, upon Bond, to compare when called, under the Sum of a Thousand Pounds Sterling. His Father was now seized, as we have heard.

Militia dissolved. William Cochran of Ochiltree liberated.

Prisoners sent to New England. William Blackadder appears before the Council; a Remission comes down to him.

Marquis of Arbole's Commission for the Shire of Argyle, July 16.

The same to Drumakill and Arnprior for Dumbarton and Stirling.

King's Letter July 24. about the meaner Prisoners.

July 9. Fifteen Prisoners taken with Argyle, of the meaner Sort, are banished to New-England, and given to William Arbuckle on his Petition to the Council. July 14. Mr. Blackadder taken in Orkney, appears before the Council, acknowledges the King's Authority, and his sacred Majesty to be his Liege Lord, and upon his Desire of some Time to consider the Oath of Allegiance, the Council allow him till Thursday; and September 3. I find a Remission comes down to Doctor William Blackadder.

July 16. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council empower John Marquis of Arbole, to keep Watch in the Shires of Argyle and Tarbet, and to take under his Protection the said Shire against Thefts, Robberies, &c. with Power to him, for that Effect, to convocate his Majesty's Lieges in Arms, and to follow, pursue, take, and apprehend any Person or Persons guilty of, or accessory to the said Crimes, either by Reset, or otherwise, till they be brought to a legal Trial; and further, is authorized to seize upon, and retake the Goods and Gear reset and stolen from any of the Inhabitants. We have heard how much this Commission was used against Argyle's Friends and Tenants there. That same Day, William Buchanan of Drumakill, and Buchanan of Arnprior, have the same Powers given them for the Shires of Dumbarton and Stirling. And July 20. the Council take off the Confinement laid upon the Captain of Carrick, and several other Gentlemen of the Name of Campbel, upon their taking the Oath of Allegiance.

July 30. a Letter from the King is read in Council, as to the Prisoners of the more common Sort. Right trusty, &c. Whereas We are informed that a greater Number of Rebels are taken Prisoners than we think fit to be executed, according to their Deservings, We do hereby authorize you to order our Advocate, to prosecute before your selves, such of the meanest Sort as you think convenient, and banish them to the Plantations; with Certification, that if they return without Leave, they shall be denounced as Traitors. We do also authorize you to prosecute before our Justiciary, in order to their Execution, such of the said Rebels as you shall think fit, for deterring others from committing such Crimes for the Time to come. For all which this shall be your Warrant. Whitehall, July 25.

M E L F O R D.

Accordingly we have seen great Numbers of them banished and transported towards the End of this Year, upon the 4 Section. August 4. Major General Drummond is empowered to seize all the Arms brought in by Argyle, wherever he finds them. December 3. I find Letters are written to the several Shires, that Lists be sent in of Heritors who attend not on the King's Host.

Host. The Returns are to be made next Year: And since I want the Council Registers, I can give no Account whether any Prosecutions followed. No more offers upon this Head, save what may come in upon the last Section.

I come now to give the criminal Prosecutions of those who were with the Earl before the Justiciary; and I shall begin with Rumbold and Mr. Archer, who were executed, and then touch at some others who were before the Criminal Court, and yet escaped with their Lives.

Prosecutions before the Justiciary.

Not long after the Earl, that gallant and good Man Colonel Rumbold was taken. I have no distinct Account of the Manner or Place; but am told, that being attacked by the Country Militia, he made his Way easily through them, and being of great Courage, Skill and Strength, when Two or Three attacked him at once, he was abundantly able for them, and maintained a running Fight, and was like to get off, till one of them wiser than the rest came up and cut his Horse's Legs miserably, and disabled him so, that he was no longer of Use to him; and then he was soon oppressed with Numbers, and terribly wounded.

Rumbold taken soon after the Earl.

When the Accounts came to Edinburgh, that Rumbold was taken, and coming in Prisoner, June 22. The Council ordain the Magistrates of Edinburgh, as soon as he comes to the Water-gate, to put him in a Cart, and cause the Hangman put a Rope about his Neck, and the Hangman's Man going before him leading the Horse, Rumbold being fettered and bare-headed; and Captain Graham is to receive him with Drums beating, and Colours displayed, and carry him to the Cattle: And June 23. the Advocate is ordered to process him before the Justiciary. And June 25. before the Justiciary meet, the Council make the following Act and Recommendation. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do hereby recommend to the Lords Justice-general, Justice-clerk, and remanent Commissioners of his Majesty's Justiciary, to meet to Morrow by Ten a Clock in the Forenoon, and to call the Dittay of high Treason against

As to the Manner of his being received at Edinburgh.

Rumbold, commonly called Colonel Rumbold, or the Maltster; and after he is found guilty of the said Crimes, do recommend to the said Lords, to cause him, the said Rumbold, to be immediately taken from their Bar, to the laigh Council-house, to be examined by the Magistrates, and hear Prayer in the ordinary way; and that Order may be given by them to the said Magistrates, that a Scaffold and an high Gibbet be erected above the Cross, towards the West, and that after he is examined, and Prayer heard, they cause him be led down by the Hangman, having his Hat, to the Scaffold, and there to be hoisted up the Gibbet, with a Rope about his Neck, and immediately to be let down, and the Rope being about his Neck, his Heart to be cut out by the Hangman, and shown to the People upon the Point of a Bayonet or Dagger, round about on the Scaffold, who is to express these Words, Here is the Heart of a bloody Traitor and Murderer, and which thereafter the Hangman is with Disdain to cast in a Fire prepared on purpose on the Scaffold, and thereafter his Head is to be cut off, and shown to the People by the Hangman, in Manner foresaid, and expressing the former Words; and then his Body is to be quartered, and one Part thereof to be affixed at the Port or Tolbooth of Glasgow, another at Jedburgh, a Third at Dumfries, and a Fourth at the Newtown of Galloway, his Head being to be affixed at the West-port of Edinburgh, on an high Pole; and do ordain the Magistrates of Edinburgh to see this Order put in Execution accordingly.

As June 26. about his Execution.

We may easily guess from this severe Act, how this Gentleman would be treated when before the Managers. I am well informed, that when examined by the Council, he was basely insulted, which did not much move him, but with great Calmness he owned the Cause he had appeared for, and his Joy in his Sufferings. Whereupon one of them railed on him, calling him a confounded Villain. With the utmost Sedateness he replied, I am at Peace with God through Jesus Christ, to Men I have done no Wrong, what then can confound me?

His Expression before the Council when insulted.

According to the Council's Act, the Justiciary proceed June 26. Richard Rumbold, designed Colonel Rumbold, Maltster at Rye, in the County of Hartford in England, enters the Pannel. His Indictment is read, that Richard Rumbold, the most execrable of all Traitors, did conspire, undertake, and endeavour to kill the King and his late Majesty, at their Return from New-market, and being disappointed in this, he fled over to Holland, was with the late Earl of Argyle, and with him invaded this Kingdom with Ships, Men, Arms, and Ammunition, upon the Procedure of the Justiciary against him June 26.

Day of May last, and sent over their treasonable Proclamations, convocate Subjects, and was in open Rebellion, and continued therein till taken.

The Advocate restricts the Libel to his being with that execrable Traitor, Archibald Campbell sometimes Earl of Argyle, and associated with him to invade this Kingdom, as above; and for Probation adduceth the Pannel's own Confession, as follows.

That he did associate himself to the Earl of Argyle, invade the Kingdom, was a Commander, and assaulted some of the King's Forces at Ardkinglaffs, where there was one killed on each Side; that he did not know John Balfour of Kinloch till aboard, that he was designed to have been a Cornet of Horse, and was in the Highlands. Confelleth, he knew James Stuart, who was privy to their invading Scotland; that the said Mr. Stuart said to him, that the Earl of Argyle would spoil all by landing in the Highlands, and lingering there, that the best and surest Way for them was, to land in the main Land, in the West of Scotland, land, and offer Arms to such as would take them; that he heard the late Earl of Argyle say, Mr. Stuart had given the Duke of, Monmouth Counsel to assume the Title to the Crown.

Sentence.

Very soon the Affize found him guilty, and the Lords pass their severe Sentence, That he be taken from the Bar to the laigh Council-house of Edinburgh, &c. just in the Terms of the Council's Act above mentioned, and ordain this Sentence to be put in Execution this 26 Day of June, twixt Two and Five in the Afternoon.

Which was put in Execution.

Accordingly it was put in Execution in every Article of it. Rumbold, when brought to the Scaffold, was so weak, that he could not walk his alone, but was supported by Two Officers, and not being able to stand, he was led to the North Side of the Scaffold in that Posture, and directed his Speech to the People to this Purpose.

His Speech at his Execution, June 26.

Gentlemen and Brethren, it is appointed for all Men once to die, and after Death is the Judgment; and since Death is a Debt all of us must pay, it is a Matter of small Moment and Consequence, what way it be done. But seeing the Lord is pleased to take me to himself after this Manner, as it is somewhat terrible to Flesh and Blood, yet, Glory to him, it is not terrible to me in any wise. I bless his Name that hath carved out such a Lot to me, and I desire to magnify and bless his holy Name for it, that it is upon no ill Account, but for owning and adhering to his distressed Work and Interest.

Here they beat the Drums, at which he shook his Head, and said, Will they not suffer a dying Man to speak his last Words to the People? and then went on.

And for my avowing to be against Popery and Prelacy, these Two superstitious and pernicious Devices of Men, obtruded on the Church of God. I am so confident of the Righteousness of the Cause, and my Innocence in the Matter, that though every Hair in my Head were a Man, I could willingly part with them for it. I confess, Enemies think they have gotten their Foot on the Neck of the Protestant Interest now; but I am persuaded it is as true, as that I am this Day entering into Eternity, That Christ shall be glorious in these Lands, and even in poor Scotland, and that shortly: And it is like, many who see me die this Day, may be Witnesses thereof; yea, he shall govern those Nations with a Rod of Iron, and that to the Terror of his Enemies.

This was just the present Sense and Feeling of his Soul. He was not able, through Pain and Weakness, to form any premeditated Discourse, but off hand spoke out the present Thoughts and Sentiments of his Heart. After this he addressed himself to the Lord in Prayer, with the greatest Cheerfulness and Composure. His Expressions in Prayer, as far as they could be remembered, were to this Purpose.

His Prayer.

O Lord, I have been a great Sinner, and I desire thou mayst get this Opportunity for expressing thy great Mercy in pardoning great Sins. Thou hast allowed me a considerable Time in the World, and I am turned gray-headed in my Sins, but thou hast commanded the Ends of the Earth to look to thee and be saved, which I desire to do this Day, and thou hast said, that those who come unto thee, thou wilt in no wise cast out. I cast my self wholly on thee, and trust thou wilt be as good as thy Word. I desire to embrace Christ on his own Terms, and beg thou may safely guide me through the dark Valley of the Shadow of Death, and make thy Rod and Staff comfort and support me. It is true, I am going to die, but what is the Matter? though I had a Thousand Lives to lose, if so be I may gain the last grain Weight of Glory to thy holy Name thereby, I am content.

When he prayed for the Extirpation of Popery and Prelacy, and other Superstitions out of God's House, the Drums ruffled again. After the Prayer was ended, the Executioner kneeling, begged his Forgiveness. He answered, Yes, good Fellow, I forgive thee and all Men. Then after he had prayed again within himself, and given the Sign, he was executed and quartered, as in the Sentence. Let me only add, that August 4. the Council order Rumbold's Head to be taken down and put in a Chest, and sent to London in a Ship, to be disposed of as his Majesty pleases.

Mr. Thomas Archer next prosecuted.

It was some longer Time before Mr. Thomas Archer was executed; and I shall in this Place give any short Hints I have of this excellent Person, and then go forward unto other Sufferers, not unto Death, upon the score of the Earl of Argyle's Attempt.

Some Account of him before his being seized.

The Reverend Mr. Thomas Archer, was Brother to John Archer formerly mentioned; and I have the following Accounts of him from Ministers and others yet alive, who had the Happiness of his Acquaintance. The Lord began very early to incline his Heart to Piety; and when he was little more than a Child, that eminent Minister, and extraordinary Christian formerly mentioned, Mr. Alexander Moncrief, gave him that Character, That he made Conscience of lifting his Bonnet, that is, of the most minute Actions of his Life, and did all with an holy Tenderness, and out of a Principle of Religion; and yet after he had gone through his University Studies, he wanted not Shakings and Exercise about the State of his Soul; at length he got comfortably out of all, and enjoyed much of a Life of Serenity and Consolation through the Remainder of his Time.

When he received his Degrees at the University, I think, of St. Andrews, it was with great Applause, and the Masters who examined him, declared they had not met with his Equal in Learning Learning for many Years. Some Years after, when Chaplain to the Lady Riddel, in that Country, he was licensed to preach the Gospel by Presbyterian Ministers, and his Sermons were very judicious, methodical, and most scriptural. He was so exact in what he delivered, that he neglected the Manner, being intent upon the Matter. He was not so acceptable to vulgar Hearers, as some other young Men far inferior to him in Abilities.

His Conversation was very grave, sedate, prudent, affable, and cheerful; he was an excellent Scholar, very bookish, and gave himself to Reading, Meditation, and Prayer. When staying in a Gentleman's House in the Merse, he was, about the Year 1682. taken Prisoner, for no other Fault than preaching the Gospel now and then; and, as we heard, he was brought in Prisoner, and continued some Months in the Canongate Tolbooth.

There he improved his Time very closely, and in a little, made himself absolutely Master of the Hebrew Tongue, and was a great Master of both the original Languages of the Scriptures. At length he was banished the Kingdom, and made to sign a Bond never to return to his native Country, without the Government's Allowance; and he retired to Holland.

In Holland, he mightily improved in all Branches of valuable Learning; and while there, was employed to correct the Dutch Edition of Pool's Criticks, then printing. He was there ordained a Minister of the Gospel by the Scots Ministers, from their deep Sense of his excellent Endowments. Mr. Robert Fleming, and Mr. Alexander Hastie preached at his Ordination.

He was assured that his Bond was got up by his Friends in Scotland, from the Council, otherwise 'tis probable he would not have consented to have come back. Being a Youth of great Gallantry and Spirit, he was prevailed upon to engage with Argyle.

After they were dissipated, he got over Clyde, and was in the Engagement at Muirdyke, where Sir John Cochran commanded: His Horse stumbling, fell to the Ground, and his Pursuers might easily have made him Prisoner, but such was their Barbarity, that before Mr. Archer could recover himself, one of them poured in a Pair of Balls into him, whereby he was sorely wounded, and while lying wounded, he was robbed of his Bible, Watch, and some Gold; and, as we have heard, after he had lien bleeding almost to Death, he was, by his Friends, carried into a Country House, where he was soon taken, and brought in to Paisly, where his Wounds were dressed, and were extremely painful to him.

Muirdyke.

Thence he was carried into Glasgow, where he remained some Days in great Distress, and very low; and was sent into Edinburgh, by Order of the Council. So extremely weak was he, that he was not able to sit upon a Horse, and therefore was sent East upon a Cart, and, with no small Difficulty, the honest People in Glasgow prevailed to get a Feather-bed laid under him.

Before the Council he was reproached bitterly, that he had broke his Engagement by Bond. This was no small Grief to him, and he regreted very much that he had been made to believe that his Friends had got it up; and the Council, July 13. put him over into the Hands of the criminal Court.

July 13. the Council remains to the Justiciary.

While in Prison, great Importunity was used with People in Power, for his Liberation; and it was represented he was in a dying Condition by his Wounds, and Physicians declared so much; but nothing would prevail with them. In all the Turns, they resolved to have some Ministers sacrificed to their Fury, the great Mr. Guthrie after the Restoration, the excellent Mr. Hugh Mackail after Pentland, Mr. King and Mr. Kid after Bothwell, and now worthy Mr. Archer. The Duke of Queensberry was addressed in a particular Manner, and even by his own Son, who had a high Value for Mr. Archer, but always received with Indignation; and he told his Son in very odd Terms, His Life could not be spared.

All those Endeavours failing, a Design was laid to have him secretly conveyed out of Prison, and it came so great a Length, that once the Sentinels had Money given them. A worthy Gentlewoman, yet alive, Mrs. Montgomery, Servant to the late excellent Dutches of Hamilton, bestowed Ten Dollars that way. In short, every thing was made ready, but he himself broke the Project, and told his Friends, that he reckoned himself a dying Person; and seeing he reckoned he could not serve his Master in any other Manner, he did not think it his Duty to decline a Testimony for him and his Truth, by a publick Death.

August 12. I find him before the Justiciary. He should have been brought before them twice formerly, but was perfectly out of Case through bodily Weakness, and by every Body looked upon as dying: Yet those merciless Men would take his Blood upon them. His Indictment was read, and he charged with Treason. Probation, his own Confession, 'That he had been in Company with the Earl of Argyle; that the Earl had imparted his Design to him of invading Scotland; that he went before to Ireland, to prevail with some Persons there to joyn the said Earl, but none came; he declines peremptorily to condescend upon their Names; that he continued with the Rebels till dissipated; that he was with Sir John Cochran's Party near the Stone-fold, and received a Shot in his Side, and was carried to a House near by, where he was apprehended; that he had a Sword.

Last Words
ny.

The Affize brought him in guilty by his own Confession, and the Lords sentence him to be hanged on a Gibbet, August 14. till dead. He was still delayed till Friday, August 21. when he suffered Death. I am sorry I have no large Accounts of his Christian and cheerful Carriage on the Scaffold, but shall here insert his last Testimony, which he drew up in Prison, and delivered as much of it as he was able at his Death, and I give it from the original Copy, yet remaining with his Friends.

The last Words and Testimony of Mr. Thomas Archer Minister of the Gospel, which he designed to speak on the Scaffold, August 21. 1685. and left with his Friends, subscribed with his own Hand.

MY Weakness being such, through long Sicknes, as I know not when I may be surprised with Death, and being perswaded in my own Mind, that in some weak Measure I desired to follow God's Call, whilst I came along with this (now broken) Party, and, that with some Simplicity and Self-denial, I desired to aim at God's Glory, and the Comfort of his Church.

I desire, in some Sincerity of Heart, to leave my Mind in these few Lines, for the Satisfaction of my Friends and others. The Apprehension I had of the great Danger of the Protestant Religion, and the Informations of the exorbitant Oppressions of Men in their Estates, but especially in their Consciences, even to their wasting, were my Motives to engage in this Enterprize, if not sufficient, I leave it to others to judge.

That Popery is like to be the Plague of these Lands, many now begin to be convinced that would not believe it before; the Atheism and Profanity of the Generation is a fit Disposition for it; and, it may be, the Evil of it may begin to be less seen, that it may be accounted a light Matter: But let that Scripture be seriously considered, Revel. xiv. 9, 10, 11. And the third Angel followed him, saying with a loud Voice, If any Man worship the Beast and his Image, and receive his Mark in his Forehead, or on his right Hand, the same shall drink of the Wine of the Wrath of God, which is poured out without Mixture, into the Cup of his Indignation, and he shall be tormented with Fire and Brimstone, in the Presence of the holy Angels, and the Lamb; and the Smoke of their Torment ascendeth up for ever and ever, and they have no Rest Day nor Night, who worship the Beast, or his Image, or whosoever receiveth the Mark of his Name.

It was always my Judgment, and I hope to die in it, that the Obligation of the Covenants is national, and indissoluble, and that even the Posterity renouncing them, shall be found guilty of horrid Perjury and Apostacy before God, since in them we first engaged immediately to serve him.

I own the alone Headship of our glorious Saviour Jesus Christ over his Church, to be a Truth from Scripture most clear and incontrovertible. To set up Officers over his Church, and not of his Appointment, to give Laws to her of that Nature, is an Usurpation most tearful, especially when it may be in the Hands of a Person, not a Member of the Church; and to rob the Church of the ministerial ruling Power communicated to her Officers by her Head Christ, or to hinder her of the due Exercise of it, is a Tyranny and Oppression most crying before God.

I have ever opposed my self to Contentions and new Differences, wherein (I thank the Lord) I have Peace without a Challenge as to the Thing. Divisions and Contendings have been the Undoing of this Church first and last, but, I think, more of late, and more shamefully than ever, the Matter being so small (if wisely considered) about which all this Noise hath been made.

I take not upon me to justify the indulged Ministers, neither will I rigidly condemn them; but if the separating from their Ministry, and pressing the Matter with such Heat and Violence, shall be found to be good Service done to Christ, I have read the Scriptures wrong; and the sad Consequences of it are convincing enough, if People were humble and convincible. It was this Contention which expelled that profitable and most edifying Exercise of mutual Prayer, and Christian Conference, (that I may say nothing how it drove from the Shepherds Tents) upon which followed a sensible Decay in the Exercise of Godliness.

I did devote my self to serve the Lord in the Gospel of his Son; I trust he hath accepted my Offering. I had some Willingness to do him Service upon Occasion, although, alas! my Dross of self and other Evils, cleaved fast unto me; yet he knows, that to edify his People, was the principal Thing, next to his Glory, I aimed at.

I have lived, and desire to die, hoping that the Lord will yet glorify his Grace and Gospel in the Land; and that he hath not brought us under the Bond of the Covenant, im-immediately to cast us off, (though we deserve to be cast off) but that the Children which are yet to be created may praise him.

Those sad desolating Strokes are so far from being a Stumbling-block to me, that they are rather a Confirmation. Sure the most pious People, and of the greatest Numbers likewise proportionably (to the yondmost of my Knowledge) is in Scotland of any Place in the Earth; and shall we think, that the Lord scourgeth them in the open Sight of others, for their Destruction! and not rather that he is beginning his Judgments at the inner House and Sanctuary! And others who now may laugh at our Calamity shall not escape, if Judgment begin at the House of God, 1 Peter iv. 17.

I desire to hope the Lord will bring his Third Part through the Fire, and will refine them as Silver is refined, and try them as Gold is tried; and God shall say of them, It is my People, and they shall say, The Lord is my God. Zech. xiii. 9.

Town the King's Authority, since he hath it not only by God's Providence, but by the Consent of the Estates of the Land, who have determined, that he is the lawful Succellor. And it is a Question, if he be worse than those whom the Prophets have been subject unto under the Old Testament, and those to whom the Apostle commands Subjection under the New. And if the Distinction betwixt the Authority it self, and the Exercise thereof, were rightly understood, I think there should be less poor Mens Blood spilt, and less Reproach cast upon Religion.

I thank the Lord, I have no Prejudice against any Man living, to the utmost of my Knowledge; but do most heartily forgive every Man, as I desire to be forgiven of God my self.

I resent and acknowledge my Weakness, in being a Witness against several worthy Persons, both present and absent, a worse Deed than Saul's consenting to the Death of Stephen; though, I think, I had no Eye to my own Safety, far less an ill Will at the Persons, all whom I highly honour, and of all whom I heartily intreat Forgiveness.

I desire to give a Farewel to the World, and all the Enjoyments thereof, and to my dear Relations, dear both in the Flesh, and in the Lord, in the firm Hope of the eternal Fruition of God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, whom I desire to choose for my Portion, and through my Saviour Jesus Christ, whom I have designed in some weak Measure to serve; to whom I commit my self as to a faithful Creator and Saviour.

Thomas Archer.

This solid and judicious Testimony needs no Commendation from me. I only add, that Mr. Archer was so very weak that Day he was executed, that he behoved to be carried to the Scaffold in a Chair, and in all Probability a few Hours would have carried him to Heaven though he had been spared. When coming out of Prison, he said, I bless my God, I have now no more to do but to die.

When upon the Scaffold, he prayed first, and then read Isaiah 65. and next spoke to this purpose as far as could be gathered. 'There is a great Confluence of People here, and I hope there are many who desire to be edified by this kind of Death, and I wish there were more. By reason of my Weakness and Sicknes, you cannot expect a long Discourse, nor with such Utterance as this Auditory requires. As to the Grounds whereupon my Sufferings at this Time are stated, I need not enlarge, they are well known; I shall only say this, as my Design was upright, so were my Motives in coming to Scotland in such a Time and Manner: They may call it Insurrection and Rebellion, but the Lord knows there was no such thing. My Motives were the great Apprehensions I had of Popery, and my Regard to the Kingdom and Interests of Christ here, and I wish every one were concerned with the Evil and Hazard of Popery.'

Here the Bailie interrupted him; whereupon he added, 'I shall only refer you to Revelations xiv. 9, 10, 11. and said to the Bailie, You cannot deny but Popery is hazardous; who answered, It is true, but there is no Fear of it here, blessed be God. Mr. Archer said, I wish to God it be so, and then continued his Discourse.

What I have further to say is, that as Christ hath a Kingdom, wherein and over which he reigneth as King, so he will suffer none to usurp that Power, which is his own Prerogative, and which he will not give to another, to constitute and appoint Officers contrary to his Institution.' When going on upon this Subject, the Bailie interrupted him again, saying, Sir, if you hold not off your Principles and Reflections, I will cause beat the Drums. Mr. Archer went on. 'Well then, I hope none of you who are the People of God, need stumble at our Fall, as if God would let the Work rest at us, for he has other Means, Ways, and Instruments nor us to make use of; for it may be well known to you from Scripture, that the People of God have got many Backsets one after another, but the Lord has waited for their Extremity, which he will make his Opportunity; and for this, take Notice of Micah iv. 10. I will bring them to Babylon, and there will I deliver them. So I pray and intreat you all to be concerned for your Souls Interest; as for my own Part, I know I have no more to do as to that. Fear of Death does not fright or trouble me, I bless the Lord for my Lot.'

His Carriage on the Scaffold
August 21.

1685.

Then he prayed again, and sang the 73 Psalm, Ver. 24. to the End, and died with great Cheerfulness and Joy. In him the Church of Scotland lost a burning and shining Light, who might have been long an useful Minister of Christ. One who knew him well, assures me, for Solidity and Learning he was qualified to be a Professor of Divinity in any University. He was about Thirty two Years of Age at his Death.

Process against
Sir David
Stuart and William Spence,

Having thus given Account of the Two worthy Persons who were executed for this Attempt, I come now to some of the Processes before the Justiciary, for Accession to the Earl's Attempt. July 16. Two excellent Persons are before the criminal Court, David Stuart (now Sir David) of Cultnesh, and Mr. William Spence Servant to the late Earl of Argyle. We have heard of the last his being seized at Orkney, from whence he was sent over to Edinburgh; and the first was taken a little after the Earl of Argyle, and carried into Edinburgh. By the Council-books, I find the Advocate is, July 13. ordered to process before the Justiciary, David Stuart younger of Cultnesh, Mr. William Spence, and Dunbar. This last I find no more about.

Probation.

The Two first are both indicted for Treason, and David Stuart's own Confession is adduced as Probation. ' David Stuart confesseth he went over to Holland, conversed with the late Earl of Argyle, that he came over with him to the Highlands, continued with the Rebels till taken; that he had a Sword, that he owns the King's Authority.'

Sentence.

' William Spence hath for Probation led against him, Mr. Thomas Archer, who depones, he saw him with the late Earl of Argyle, as his Servant. Mr. William Blackadder, Doctor in Medicine, depones the same. Both of them are remitted to an Assize, who bring them in guilty. And the Lords ordain David Stuart and Mr. William Spence, to be taken to the Cross of Edinburgh on Wednesday next, the 22 instant, and hanged.'

They are afterward rerieved.

The Lord had more Service for them, and the Sentence was not executed. All I find further about them is, July 20. 'The Lords of Council having considered the Addresses of David Stuart younger of Cultnesh, sentenced to die on Wednesday 22 instant, do reprieve them to September 3. August 17. Mr. William Spence is allowed to remove to a Chamber in Edinburgh, because of Sickness, and to be kept under a Guard. The Magistrates of Edinburgh are to be liable for him if he escape, and he is to re-enter Prison September 1. August 25. a Letter is read from the King, continuing the Reprieve of Cultnesh younger, till his Majesty signify his Pleasure to the contrary. That same Day Mr. William Spence his Reprieve is continued till November 1. he being a necessary Witness for the King. And September 3. his Reprieve is continued by a Letter from the King, till he declare his Pleasure to the contrary; and by a Letter from the King October 17. Mr. Spence is ordered to be made close Prisoner.' This is all I meet with about them in the Council-books.

Mr. Charles,
John, and Archibald Campbels, forfeited Aug. 1.

August 1. I find Archibald Campbell, sentenced to die by the Justices, appears before the Council, and declaring himself content to renounce all rebellious Principles, they reprieve him till December. And August 18. a Letter is read from the King, bearing, That it is his Royal Pleasure, that Charles and John Campbels Sons to the late Earl of Argyle, Archibald Campbell Son to the Lord Neil Campbell, should be spared as to their Lives, and be banished, but that the Sentence of Forfeiture be passed upon them.' The Council recommend to the Justices accordingly, and order Charles and John Campbels to be brought from Stirling to Edinburgh, in order to their Trial.

Accordingly, August 21. Charles Campbell is indicted for being in the Rebellion, and upon his Confession is sentenced to die, and the Day left to the Council's Pleasure. And August 25. ' John Campbell, Son to Archibald Campbell sometime Earl of Argyle, indicted for rising in Arms for committing Acts of Hostility and high Treason, treasonably corresponding with, harbouring, conversing with, and resetting the Earl of Argyle, a forfeited Traitor, so declared in May and June last; he confesseth, that he had joyned in Arms in the late Rebellion, with his Father the late Earl of Argyle, and conversed and intercommuned with him in the Terms mentioned in his Dittay, and comes in Will, and begs his Majesty's Mercy. The Lords ordain him to be executed as a Traitor, and demeaned, and undergo the Pains of Treason at such a Time and Place as the Lords shall think fit, and his Name, Fame, and Memory to be extinct, as in common Form.' The Managers thus endeavour to leave a Blot upon the Children and Relations of this noble Family, when for Shame's cause they could not embroil their Hands in the Blood of those Youths.

September 11. the Council order the Advocate to process before the Justices, Sir Duncan Campbell of Auchinbreck, Campbel of Parbreck, and Campbel of Knap, and all other Persons, who, they were informed, were with the late Earl of Argyle; and Witnesses are previously to be examined, conform to the King's Letter. And September 18. in a Letter to the Secretary, the Council signify, that by a Mistake Allangreg had been recommended for a Remission as to Life and Fortune, whereas they never recommend any for a Remission but as to Life.

This is all offers to me this Year of the criminal Prosecutions, upon the account of the Earl of Argyle's Attempt. In the Beginning of the next Year, we shall meet with great Numbers more processed, mostly in Absence, before the Justiciary, that their Estates might fall into the Hands of the Managers.

S E C T. XI.

Of the Sufferings and Hardships endured by the Prisoners sent to Dunotter, May this Year, with some further View of the Severities exercised through the Country, during the sitting of Parliament, and after the Earl of Argyle's Attempt.

HAVING been diverted a little from my principal View, by the remarkable Incident of the unsuccessful Attempt made for recovering our Liberty, I return again to the Sufferings and Hardships exercised through the Country, and shall enlarge a little upon the extraordinary Cruelty exercised upon the Prisoners sent to the Castle of Dunotter in May, and go through some other Acts of Severity against Presbyterians this Year.

Contents of this Section.

During the sitting of Parliament, a good many of the Persons who were the Springs of the Sufferings through the Country, were at Edinburgh, and so we shall meet with less Trouble through the West and South than, considering what passed in the former Years, one would expect. Indeed the Ravages of the Soldiers up and down, upon the first Rumours of Argyle's landing, were very dreadful; some of them have been hinted at, and a Detail of them would be endless.

Ravages of the Soldiers, through the Country.

Every Body who did not intirely conform to the Church Establishment, all who did not heartily fall in with the Oaths and Impositions now a going; yea, the very Friends and Acquaintances of such who were banished, forfeited, or upon their Hiding, though they did conform, yea, the moderate Part of the Conformists themselves, were fearfully harassed.

Parties of Soldiers were continually marching through the West and South, a good Number of them traversed the Hills of Carssphairn, and all that Country round, perfectly spoiling it as it had been an Enemy's Country. Claverhouse came through Nithsdale in the same Manner, and towards the Water of Ken. All they met with were forced to take what Oaths they were pleased to frame. And after Argyle's Defeat, Lieutenant Livingstone continued a good Space in the Newtown of Galloway, and brought the Country under the greatest Hardships, by Searchings and otherwise; and many were the wonderful Escapes and Deliverances the suffering People met with.

As the regular Forces harassed the Country, so did the Militia, which, as we have heard, were called out under the Prospect of Argyle's Attempt; and upon the Alarm of his coming to Orkney, circular Letters were written through the Shires by the Sheriffs, and Officers of the Militia, to the Heritors, to meet them at their particular Places of Rendevouze.

An original Order, now before me, is direct to the Laird of Duddingston, from the Sheriff-depute, which, being short, I insert here, as being no doubt the common Form.

Order to the Militia in Linlithgow.

' Sir, I desire you to meet the Earl of Linlithgow at Kincavel-muir, the 14 current, with Arms, on Horseback, with Twenty Days Provisions, by Ten Hours in the Forenoon, as you will be answerable to the Lords of Privy Council on your Peril. Given by Order of the said Earl, by

Sir, Your Servant,

Charles Stuart.

Both Militia and Army committed many Ravages. Particulars I cannot enter on. Many other sore Oppressions were made on particular Persons, by such as had Council and Judiciary Powers. I shall only give one Instance.

James Forsyth in the Parish of Lochnaben, or near by, had been brought to great Trouble for not hearing the Curate, who had either gone very near to pronounce, or actually had pronounced against him the Sentence of Excommunication. At length he was apprehended, but found Means to get out of their Hands. Not compearing before the last Court in February, he was denounced, and forced to lurk; and Wanderers being upon every Turn in Hazard of their Lives, he went into England, where he was seized, and sent down Prisoner to Sir James Johnston of Wester-rax, May 13. this Year.

James Forsyth in Lochnaben, his Sufferings.

Wester-rax indeed offered to let him go, if, with uplifted Hands, he would swear and say, God bless King James the VII. When James asked him what he meant by blessing the King, for his Part he wished him well, and that all spiritual Blessings might be upon him; the other answered, he meant, That he should own him as his lawful King, and that he should pray, Long may he live, and well may he prosper in all his Actings and Proceedings.

This, James said, he could not do, since he was a violent Persecutor of God's People, and a Papist. In a little Time he was examined by Claverhouse, and the foresaid Gentleman, and threatened with present Death; but Providence restrained them, and he was sent Prisoner to Edinburgh, and thence to Burntisland. His Wife having come to see him, they sent her Prisoner Prisoner with him, tho' they had nothing to charge her with, and she was big with Child. They were both sent, with others whom I shall presently account for, to Dunotter; there his Wife fell into her Pangs. The Keepers were desired to let her go to a private House to be delivered, but the barbarous Governor would not allow this; so she was delivered in Prison, and by ill Management, and Want of ordinary Accommodation, she died in a little Time.

Sufferings of the Prisoners
at Dunotter.

This brings me to the Hardships and Severities, wherewith the Prisoners who were sent to Dunotter Castle were exercised. I shall give the Reader as short and distinct an Account of this Piece of hard Treatment of the Sufferers, as my Materials afford me, mostly from the Papers of Mr. John Frazer, Minister at Alness, in the Presbytery of Dingwall, now with the Lord, who was one of them; and the distinct Narratives the forementioned Quintin Dick and Mr. William Macmillan have left, with some other Papers by me.

Mr. John Frazer's preceding Sufferings.

It may not be improper to bring in here a short Account of the preceeding Sufferings of the reverend Mr. Frazer, and they will hand me down to Dunotter Sufferings. This excellent and worthy Person had gone up to London, about the End of the 1678. or Beginning of the 1679. for his Safety and Improvement; and there he waited closely upon the Meetings of the Dissenters, until they were much born down in the Years 1683 and 1684. and the Ministers and Hearers haled to Prisons; and Informers at London turned very common, being encouraged by their Share in the Twenty Pounds Sterling every Landlord of the House, where a Conventicle was kept, was amerced in, besides the Fines of the Preacher and Hearers.

Mr. Frazer in his Account says, it was in the End of the 1684. there was a Meeting in Foster-lane near Guildhall, London, where most of them were Scotsmen, and Mr. Alexander Shiels preached to them. At this Meeting Mr. Frazer was taken. Mr. Shiels had not proceeded far in his Lecture, when they were disturbed by a Party of Soldiers, who apprehended Mr. Shiels and most Part of the Hearers.

They were all brought to Guildhall, where Bail was taken for their Appearance at the Lord Mayor's Court next Tuesday, where the City Recorder insisted, that special Notice should be taken of those Criminals, because mostly Scotsmen, and more than ordinarily seditious and rebellious against the King's Majesty and his Laws. The most Part were dismissed upon Payment of their Fines, and Ten or Twelve were committed to Newgate, and put into a common natty Room, near the vilest of Malefactors. Sir Andrew Forrester, Under-secretary for Scotland, was ordered to examine them in Newgate, and the Issue was a Resolution to send them Prisoners to Scotland, to be tried there according to the Laws of the Kingdom.

And about the Beginning of March, they were sent down in the Kitchin Yacht. They were manacled Two and Two as the greatest Malefactors, and this way passed through the Streets to their Vessel, and when brought up from Leith to Edinburgh, they were examined by the Council upon the ordinary ensnaring Questions, and not giving entire Satisfaction, all of them, save Mr. Shiels, were sent to Dunotter.

Occasion of the Prisoners being sent North.

The Occasion of Mr. Frazer, the rest of the London Prisoners and Multitudes with them, their being sent North, was this. The Accounts of Argyle's Invasion turned hot towards the Beginning of May, and the Managers at Edinburgh were alarmed with his being at Orkney, and coming about to the West; and fearing the Earl's landing, and not knowing what the Consequences might be, very suddenly it was resolved, that all the Prisoners for Religion, especially those from the South and West, should be sent to Dunotter Castle.

May 18 above
Two hundred embarked at Leith.

Accordingly Mr. John Frazer, Mr. William McMillan, Quintin Dick, with William Newen, and many others in Edinburgh and the Canongate Tolbooths, were, to their great Surprise, on the 18 of May taken out of their Prisons, about Three Hours before Sun-set, without suffering them to know what was to be done with them, that such of them as could, might have prepared some Way for such a Journey, and carried out of Town under a strong Guard, and delivered at the Nether-bow to Douglas's Regiment, who guarded them down to Leith.

There they were shut up so close in the Court of Guard, that their nearest Relations and Acquaintances were not so much as permitted to speak with them. From thence, with the Prisoners at Leith, making in all above Two hundred, they were carried down to the Shore, and put into open Boats, and hurried off the Shore, without allowing them to receive any Necessaries from their Friends and Relations, whereof good Numbers were waiting on to take their Leave of them, never expecting to see them again. Next Morning about Break of Day they were landed at Burntisland.

There, about Twelve Score of them were crowded in Two Rooms in the Tolbooth, where, through the Straitness of the Rooms, and Multitude of the Prisoners, their Miseries seemed to be but beginning for as much as they had suffered. And Mr. Dick remarks, that it was a Wonder to themselves how such a Multitude could subsist for Two Days and Two Nights, when they were denied Liberty separately to ease Nature, and had nothing allowed for their Subsistence; yea, a good many of them were not permitted to have Bread and Water for their Money.

When

When thus pent up at Burntisland, one came over from the Council, with Orders to bring back to Edinburgh as many of them as would immediately swear the Oath of Allegiance, with the Supremacy in it. About Forty, through the Extremity of their Misery and Hardships, complied; the rest owned their Allegiance, but stuck at swearing it with the Supremacy. 1685.

At Burntisland, after Two Days, they were committed to the Militia of Fife; and most of them had their Hands tied behind their Back, with Cords. Through their hard Usage at Burntisland, some of them were fallen under Rheumatisms, and other Dilempers, which made travelling a foot very uneasy, and would have hired Horses with their own Money, but this was not allowed.

The Prisoners were carried a foot, generally speaking, through By-paths, that the well disposed Persons in Fife, who came with Necessaries to the Prisoners, might be disappointed, as many were; and some who came were beat off by the Guard, and nothing was allowed to be given them. That Night they were brought to a small Village near Tatland, called Freuchie, and from thence next Day they came to the Water-side of Tay; their Accommodation at both these Places was very sorry.

Upon the South-side of Tay, the Tide not answering them, about Nine or Ten Score were crowded into Three little Rooms most incommodiously, till about Break of Day when the Tide made, and then they were ferried over to Dundee, and about Sun-rising, put into the Tolbooth there, where they continued till about Eleven of the Clock, and were allowed Refreshments for their Money. From thence they were brought to a Muir a Mile beyond Dundee, and delivered to the Earl of Strathmore's Regiment and the Militia of Angus, and marched, Man by Man, twixt Two of the Militia, till they were brought to Forfar, where they were again crowded into the Tolbooth to the great Prejudice of their Health.

From Forfar they were brought to Brechin, and rested a while in the open Fields near by, and had some Refreshments allowed them for their Money, which was now reckoned a great Favour. From thence at Night they were brought to the North-water, or North-esk Bridge; and there they were all of them set upon the Bridge, and the Soldiers kept strict Guard at both Ends of it. In this Posture they were kept, exposed to Wind and Weather all Night, without Meat or Drink. The Night was exceeding cold and stormy, and many of them by this Time weary and faint; yet they behoved to stand and ly as they best might upon the cold Bridge, till Three or Four in the Morning; and that Day, May 24. being the Lord's Day, they were carried to their resting Place at Dunotter. Some few found Means to get off by the Road, and they were, when they entred Dunotter, in all Eight Score and Seven Persons.

At Dunotter, they were received by George Keith of White-ridge Sheriff-depute of the Merns. This large Company was thrust into a dark Vault under Ground, one of the most uncomfortable Places poor People could be in. Their Treatment at Dunotter.

It was full of Mire, Ankle deep, and had but one Window towards the Sea. So throng were they in it, that they could not sit without leaning one upon another. They had not the least Accommodation for sitting, leaning, or lying, and were perfectly stifled for Want of Air; they had no Access to ease Nature, and many of them were faint and sickly. Indeed all their Lives were in great Danger.

In this miserable Vault about an Hundred of them were pent up all this Summer, and it was a Miracle of Mercy they were not all killed. The Barbarities of their Keepers and the Soldiers are beyond Expression. The Prisoners had nothing allowed them but what was paid for, and Money was paid for cold Water. And when the Soldiers brought in Barrels of Water, and had sold it out in Parcels to them till they began to weary of it, they would pour it into the Vault to incommode them the more.

Considerable Numbers of them died, and no Wonder, through such Hardships; and it was boasted off as an undeserved Favour by the Soldiers, that they received the dead Corps, and disposed of them as they pleased, for none of their Fellow-prisoners were allowed to see them interred; it was too great a Favour to allow them so much of the free Air.

When the whole Number had continued for some Days in the great Vault, the Governor was pleased to remove about Forty of the Men to another small Vault, which being narrow and low, they were not much less straitned than in the great Vault; and they were in hazard to be stifled, there being no Air nor Light there, but what came in by a very small Slit or Chink. The Walls, it seems, were a little decayed, and some little Air came in at the Bottom of the Vault; and they used one by one to ly down on their Belly on the Bottom of the Vault, that they might have some of the fresh Air. By this Means, some of them, particularly the reverend Mr. Frazer, contracted a violent Cold and Dysentery.

After some Time spent in this melancholy Posture, the Governor's Lady came in to see the Prisoners in the Two Vaults, and prevailed with her Husband to makethem a little more easie. Twelve of the Men were removed from the Forty to a better Place, where they had Room and Air enough, and the Women were removed from the large Vault, and put into 1685. Two several Rooms. This was indeed a great Kindness, but they had abundance of Hardships remaining.

Somewhat has been already hinted as to their Strait for Meat and Drink; nothing was allowed them but what they bought, and the Governor made even a Monopoly of this. When the Country People about, were bringing in Provisions to the Prisoners for their Money, they were stopped, and the Soldiers were ordered to allow them no Access; and one of them was very roughly treated, for insisting to get in to the Prisoners with what he had to sell. The Reason of this was, the Governor's Brother, who lived at Stone-bive, not far from Dunotter, resolved to have any Money the Prisoners had, and none was suffered to provide for them but he.

Some of them
essay an Escape from one of the Vaults.

Such who were in the great Vault, were in the greatest Misery, and not a few of them died. It was no great Wonder, that under such greivous Hardships they essayed all innocent Methods for their own Safety. In order to this, they endeavoured, and got at length out by the Window in the Vault, which was just over the Sea, one Night, and crept along a most dangerous Rock, to the utmost Hazard of their Lives; and indeed it was one to Ten, that they were not either crushed by their Fall, or drowned in the Sea.

Fifteen retaken.

Some Twenty five of them escaped before the Alarm was given to the Guard, by some Women who were washing near the Rock, and the rest were stopped. Upon the Alarm, the outer Gates were shut, and the Hue and the Cry raised, and all possible Means used to retake them. Fifteen of them were apprehended, and it was a Wonder all of them were not caught, being so weak that they were not able to flee far, and the Country round about being disaffected to them and their Way.

The barbarous Torture of
and others.

Such as were seized were most barbarously used. I have the Accounts of this mostly from the foresaid William Niven, who was one of those who were retaken. Not only were they most inhumanely beat and bruised when apprehended, but, when brought back to their Prison, they were put in the Guard-house, bound and laid on their Backs on the Floor, and most dreadfully tormented.

In Three different Parts of the Room they were tortured. The said William, with Peter Russel, and Alexander Dalglish in Kilbride, were laid upon their Backs upon a Form, and their Hands bound down to the Foot of the Form, and a fiery Match put 'twixt every Finger of both Hands, and Six Soldiers waiting on by Turns, one after another, to blow the Match, and keep it equal with their Fingers.

Alexander Dalglish dies.

This was continued for Three Hours without Intermission, by the Governor's Order, merely for the Fault of essaying to escape at the Hazard of their Lives. By this Treatment William Niven lost one of the Fingers of his left Hand. Alexander Dalglish died of the Pain, and the Wounds he got, and an Inflammation rising thereupon; and several others had their Fingers burnt, and the very Bone turned to Ashes, and some, besides the last mentioned, died of this Torture.

Some Accounts of those Barbarities were sent into Edinburgh, and Methods taken to lay them before the Council. By the Influence of some there, not altogether so merciless as others, Orders were sent to the Governor to treat the Prisoners with a little more Humanity, and to accommodate them with some better Rooms.

Petition to the Council from the Prisoners,
with their Act,
June 8.

Since the writing of what is above, I find in the Council-registers, a Petition presented to the Council, in favours of the Prisoners at Dunotter, which, as containing nothing but what the Petitioners were ready to vouch, and consequently being one of the best Accounts of the Hardships used toward the Prisoners, I insert here, with the Council's Act thereupon.

Anent a Petition presented by Grizel Cairns and Alison Johnstoun, in behalf of Mr. William Macmillan, and Robert Young Wright in Edinburgh, their Husbands, and the rest of the Prisoners in the Cattle of Dunotter, shewing, That the Petitioners said Husbands, who are under no Sentence, with many others, having been sent Prisoners to the said Cattle, they are in a most lamentable Condition, there being an Hundred and Ten of them in one Vault, where there is little or no Day-light at all, and, contrary to all Modesty, Men and Women promiscuously together, and Forty two more in another Room, in the same Condition, and no Person allowed to come near them with Meat or Drink, but such Meat and Drink as scarce any rational Creature can live upon, and yet at extraordinary Rates, being Twenty Penies each Pint of Ale, which is not worth a Plack the Pint, and the Peck of sandy dusty Meal is afforded to them at Eighteen Shillings per Peck, and not so much as a Drink of Water allowed to be carried to them, whereby they are not only in a starving Condition, but must inevitably incur a Plague, or other fearful Diseases, without the Council provide a speedy Remedy; and therefore humbly supplicating, that Warrant might be granted to the effect underwritten. The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council, having heard and considered the foresaid Petition, do hereby continue that Part of the Desire, for Liberty, till they consider further of the Petitioners Cause; but, in the mean time, give Order and Warrant to the Deputy-governor of the Cattle of Dunotter, to suffer and permit Meat and Drink, and other Necessaries, to be brought in to the Petitioners by their Friends, or or Servants, at the ordinary easy Rates, and to allow the said Mr. William Macmillan and Robert Young, a distinct Room from the rest; and in regard of the Heat of the Season of the Year, that all the Prisoners may be so accommodated without Throng, that their Health be endangered as little as possible. 1685.

This no doubt enraged the Governor exceedingly, and he drew up a Paper, by way of Declaration, in his own favours, wherein the Subscribers testified they were gently treated, and wanted not Conveniencies since they came to Dunotter: A very few, by Threats and Promises, were prevailed upon to sign it, but the rest peremptorily refused it, which further enraged the Governor, and they were yet more hardly dealt with.

By the Council-registers, I find, July 13. the Earls, Errol and Kintore, or any of them, are appointed to go to Dunotter, and examine the Prisoners, and notice who of them are content to take the Test, who will take the Allegiance with the Supremacy, or the Allegiance simply, or who will engage to live regularly, and keep their Parish Kirk, and appear when called. Council send some to examine them.

Accordingly, about the Middle of July, the Earls of Marischal and Kintore came to Dunotter. This was their Way now: After they hoped that poor People's Patience was worn out, they came with new Offers, and Temptations to quit their Principles.

The Questions proposed to the Prisoners were, 'Whether they owned the King as their lawful Sovereign, and would subject to his Authority, and to all in Authority under him; whether they would pray for the King; whether they disowned the apologetical Declaration; whether, upon Oath, they were ready to assert, that it was unlawful, upon any Pretext whatsoever, particularly that of the Covenant, to rise in Arms against the King, or any employed by him?'

A considerable Number of them gave some reasonable Satisfaction, in several of those Questions; but all refused the Oath of Allegiance, as imbodyed with the Supremacy.

I do not observe any Report from these appointed, in the Council-books; but, toward the End of July, the Prisoners are brought South, and the Council, July 24. 'impower the Earls of Marischal, Errol, Kintore, Panmure, and the Lord President of the Session, to call before them the Prisoners in Dunotter Castle, and banish such of them as take not the Oaths of Allegiance and Abjuration, whether Men or Women, not already banished, and deliver them with such as are already banished, to such as the Council shall grant Warrant, to be transported to his Majesty's Plantations, with Certification, that such as shall return to the Kingdom, shall incur the Pain of Death.' They are brought South toward the End of July.

Accordingly, great Numbers of them were banished, as we have seen upon the fourth Session: And, July 26. probably upon the Report of the Counsellors last named, 'John Hamilton in Millholm, John Orr in Lochwinnoch, David Fergusson in Bridge-end of Glasgow, Alexander Small in Evandale, Matthew Lowdon in Srathewan, Robert Semple in Lochwinnoch, John Orr there, Gavin Semple in Evandale, John Steil there, George Brown servant to the Lady Argyle, William Brown in Evandale, John Reid in Kilbride, John Marshall in Glasgow, Prisoners, having taken the Allegiance, are liberate, under Bond of Five thousand Merks each, to compear when called.' Whether all these were from Dunotter, I cannot say, but I know most of them were there; and, July 30. 'the Council resolve to meet themselves at Leith, and sentence the remaining Prisoners from Dunotter, by Banishment, detaining, or liberating as they find Cause.' Most Part of them were given to Pitlochy.

This is the shortest Account I could gather up of the remarkable Sufferings of those Prisoners. I have some of their Letters before me, full of Seriousness and Religation; and after I had written this, there is come to my Hand a large Account of the Sufferings of Eupham Threpland, Spouse to George Macbirnie Merchant in Dumfries, who was one of the Prisoners at Dunotter. It contains a very particular and pointed Relation of her Sufferings since her Husband's Death, and particularly at Dunotter, in some Sheets of Paper; and, in this Place, I shall bring in a short Abstract of it, since this Work is growing so much upon my Hand, and the rather, that it lets us into some more Particulars of Dunotter Sufferings. Particular Sufferings of Eupham Threpland at Dunotter and elsewhere.

Mr. Macbirnie, who could never be charged with any thing of real Disloyalty, after he had been tossed since Middleton's Parliament, with Finings, Confinings, Wandrings, and Imprisonments, contracted a Sickness whereof he died, 1681. His afflicted Widow was sorely persecuted for mere Nonconformity and refusing the Oaths imposed, and was forced to flee and wander from one Place to another, for the Space of one Year. During this, some of her small Children, who were not in Case to be transported, were frequently frightened by the Sheriff-officers searching her House. She returning, and taking them to another private Retirement in Dumfries, the Sheriff-depute getting Notice of this, with one of the Bailies, came and broke open the Doors, hurt and frightened the Children, (some of whom, for fear, crept under a Bed) and carried the Mother away to Prison.

To Morrow he brought her before his Court, and, because she would not swear how many Conventicles she had been present at, give up the Names of the Ministers, and promise to hear the Curates, he fined her in a Sum she was unable to pay, and arrested all she

she had a Right to, and her Household Plenishing, so that she had not so much as Linens to change her self and Children.

In this Strait, she sought a Loan from him of what was her own, during his Pleasure, and was forced to give Bond and Caution, to make all forthcoming to him. Mean while, the Officers took and sold what of her Goods they saw fit, because, as they said, the Sheriff-depute had not paid them for their Service. This, and Two Years and an Half's Imprisonment, disabled her from making her Goods forthcoming.

We shall just now hear, that she was sent to Dunotter, where she continued Three Months, and thereafter Nine Weeks at Leith in Prison; during all which Time, upon every Occasion, she still declared, that it was neither Contempt of Authority, nor Prejudice at any Man's Person, was the Cause of her Nonconformity, but real Scruples of Conscience.

During her Imprisonment at Dumfries, her Family was frequently quartered upon; and when any Disorder happened among the Soldiers, they would put them in the Chamber where she was Prisoner, she having no other Company with her, Night and Day, but them, and some of her own Children.

She was called before Colonel Douglas, Queensberry's Brother, and, upon refusing some Oath he put to her, she had an Indictment given her, and was laid in the Thieves-hole for a Fortnight, where she had no Company but a poor demented Man, and a Woman suspected of Murder. After this she was brought before Colonel Douglas, Lag, Earlsball, Claverhouse, and an Assize. The Judges proposed many Questions to her upon Assassinations and Murder. She declared she was neither Author, Approver, or Actor of any such Practices, and regretted that she should be suspected of any such Things, having been so long in Prison; and desired her Widowhood, and the Case of her poor Children, might be considered, and her vast Losses by her long Imprisonment. The Colonel said, she could not be but guilty of all that could be laid to the Charge of any, tho' she had carried so as nothing could be proven; and urged her to give Bond of Five thousand Merks, to depart the Kingdom by the 20 of May; and not being able to do this, she was committed to Prison for Two Months, tho' nothing could be proven against her.

About the 5 of May, a Party of Soldiers came into Dumfries, to carry away the Prisoners there, about Twenty Nine in Number; some of them aged Persons, some Women with Child, and a Cripple, who was forced to walk Forty Miles on his Crutches, till he got a Country Horse. At this Time, Mrs. Macbirnie was confined to her Bed, and rendered secure by some Promises made her.

However, when all the rest of the Prisoners were delivered to the Guard, a Corporal came to her, acquainting her, she behoved also to go with them. She told him, she was not able to travel, and had made no Provision, and was no way accommodated for such a Journey. He insisted, and Two Town-officers came from the Bailies, as they said, to help her down Stairs, for indeed she was not able to walk. Accordingly, she was instantly carried away, and not being able to travel, was set behind one of the Dragoons, and carried into Edinburgh, and then down to Leith, where, without being permitted to refresh themselves, they were freight hurried into a Boat, and carried over to Burntisland.

There they found the rest of the Prisoners on their Way, as we have heard, to Dunotter, and I shall now only remark some Passages not hinted at in the former Account. The Laird of Gosford was sent over by the Council, and after some of the Prisoners had taken the Oaths then imposed, the rest were committed to the Fife Militia. Lieutenant Beaton of Kilrinnie was very rude, and beat some of the old Women among them, when not able to walk so fast as he would have them, thrusting them forward, and crying to the Soldiers to thrust their Pikes in them, for they were feigning themselves, calling them old Bawds and Witches, wishing the Devil to take them and their Religion.

In their Journey, when thrust into Houses and Tolbooths, they were so throng, that they were almost suffocated, and several of the Women fainted. By the Way the Pipers derided them with their foolish Songs. When they came into Dunotter, they were put very hard to it for Thirst, and intreated the Soldiers to draw them some Water from a Well in the Clois, or permit them to do it. The Soldiers drew them a Barrel of Water, and when they, unwilling to use them to this Custom of selling Water, refused them Money for each Draught of it, the Soldiers poured it in among them in the Vault where they were, which very much incommoded them.

The more earnest Intreaties they used, and Letters of Recommendation they got, to George Keith their Governor, the more severe and hard he grew upon them. He absolutely refused to permit the Country People to help them with Bed-clothes, neither would he supply the Poor among them with Meal, as the Council, they were informed, had appointed. He forced them to buy all their Provision from a Relation of his, who furnished them with what was very insufficient. They were sadly disturbed by the Sentinels when at Workship.

At length, when several of the Prisoners were dead, through this harsh Dealing, and many of them sick, and all of them in a very lothsome Condition, for Want of Change of Clothes, the Governor, for Fear of an Infection, separated some of them from the great Vault, and put them in different Rooms, some of them in other Vaults, without Air or Light, others to ruinous high Chambers, where the Windows were all open, and no Fence against Wind or Rain; and they were not so much as allowed to light a Candle, to look after the Sick and Dying in the Night Time.

Several of their Friends, who came to visit them, were made Prisoners, and sent with them to the Plantations; and when the Council ordered them back to Leith, they were lightered and bound in Two's and Three's, with Cords. At Leith, about Eighty of them were ordered, by a Committee of Council, to the Plantations.

Mrs. Macbirnie escaped Transportation, by a Mistake of her Name in the Clerk, and continued a good while in Leith Tolbooth, and at length was liberated on Bond to compare when called. However, the Sheriff-depute kept Possession of her Goods, and threatened her Person if she returned to Dumfries, arrested the Rent of her Houses, and in Collusion with a Gentleman who pretended a Right to a small Interest belonging to her, past a Decree of removing in his Favours, without summoning her or her fatherless Children, and she knew nothing of it, being at Edinburgh, till the other was in Possession.

Having thus given some View of the Sufferings of those good People sent to Dunottar, I come now to glean up some other Severities used up and down the Country this Summer; and I shall be very short upon them, for Instances are endless, and by this Time in some Measure needless.

Upon the 6 of June, Claverhouse, with a great Body of Militia, and some Soldiers, came down the Water of Nith, and in the Parish of Kirkconnel, and on both Sides of the Water, he apprehended Multitudes both Men and Women; they were mostly remitted to the Officers of the Militia, and they caused many to swear never to lift Arms against King James VII. under Pretext of Religion; and with others they went further, and obliged them to swear, that if they were taken by a contrary Party, they should use all Endeavours by Night or Day, even to the Hazard of their Lives, to leave them, and inform the Commanders of the King's Forces, or the next Magistrate, of the Numbers and Strength of these on the other Side.

This Imposition of Oaths, in so arbitrary a Manner, hath been once and again observed as one of the unaccountable Burdens of this Period. However, such as would not presently swear whatever was put to them, the Forces and Militia carried them about with them Prisoners, wherever they went, binding them together in Two's and Three's, to their great Hurt in their Business and Bodies; and Claverhouse and others would mock them, telling them, they would not weary to run from Hill to Hill to hear Sermons, and direct the Rebels. Horrid and blasphemous were some of the Expressions used by the profane Soldiers, which ly before me, but I shall not pollute my Paper, nor the Reader's Eyes with them.

This same Month, Gilbert Macadam, Son in Law to the forementioned James Dun in Blue-whar, in the Parish of Dalmellington, was murdered, which I might have noticed upon the Sixth Section. In the Year 1682. he was taken Prisoner, and carried into Dumfries. His Crime was mere Nonconformity. His Father in Law went in and gave Caution to produce him when called, under Four hundred Pounds Penalty, which was, upon his Noncompearance, exacted. In a little Time Gilbert was taken again, and carried in Prisoner to Glasgow, where refusing the Oath of Allegiance with the Supremacy, he was banished to the Plantations, and went off in Captain Gibson's Ship. His Father gave him Twenty Pounds Sterling with him, and by this he bought his Freedom in America, and returned back this Year; and upon a Saturday's Night, in the House of one Hugh Campbell, near the Place of Kirkmichael, being with some of his Friends at a Meeting for Prayer, a Company of Militia, under the Command of Colzean, surrounded the House. Gilbert was most obnoxious, had he been taken, and essayed to escape: The Soldiers perceiving him, discharged their Pieces, and killed him. He had really bought his Freedom, and was convict of no Crime since. He was a Person of shining Piety.

James Brown in the Parish of Coulter, was very barbarously treated, about the Middle of June this Year, of which I have before me an attested Account. When fishing, he was discovered by Claverhouse when ranging up and down the Country, and apprehended. A Powder-horn was found upon him, and that was Fault enough. Claverhouse declared he was a Knave, and must die. Accordingly, Six of the Dragoons dismounted, and he is set down before them to be shot. By the Intercession of the Laird of Coulterallers, providentially present with Claverhouse, his Execution was delayed till next Day, and James carried away by the Soldiers to the English Border, and from thence to the Tolbooth of Selkirk, being all the while bound with Cords. After some time's Imprisonment there, he happily escaped.

Upon the 13 of June, I find Two Regiments of Soldiers come into New Galloway, and dividing themselves to different Places, they quite ravaged the Country, without any pretended-Crime. They destroyed vast, and almost incredible Numbers of Sheep and black Cattle, belonging to such who were alledged not to conform, and People that were related to them. This Summer Claverhouse, in his March from Galloway to Air, assembled all the Men in the little Town of Dalmellington, and near by, and obliged them by Oath to renounce the Covenants, and purge themselves of Refet and Converse with Rebels. New and ensnaring Oaths were never wanting upon every new Turn this Year. George Macadam Merchant there, and another of the same Name, with Thomas Slofs, refusing to swear, were carried Prisoners to Edinburgh, and detained there a long Time.

About this Time, the whole Army came to the West Country, and the Abuses and Ravages committed by them in going through the Country, and where they stayed any Time, cannot be calculated; but the Reader will be in Case to make some Estimate, from a distinct Account I have from living Witnesses in the last named small Parish.

Ravages committed by the Army this Summer in the little Parish of Dalmellington.

The whole Forces under the Earl of Dumbarton, together with the Lothian Militia, in all about Six thousand Men, encamped about Three Weeks in the Corn and Medow Grounds, about the little Village of Dalmellington. My Lord Stair and Cesnock's Lands were appointed for free Quarter, and indeed entirely plundered by the Soldiers, and the whole Parish fell under the common Calamity. Any Rooms or Farms possessed by any of the Relations of the Wanderers and Sufferers, were abused in a particular Manner.

That the Reader may have some View of the miserable State of Things under this Oppression, I shall point at a few Particulars. The following Troops were sent to the following Rooms, Fourteen Days upon each, at free Quarter. A Troop consisting of Sixty Horse and Men, in the Nether-laicht, possessed by James Dun. Another Troop was quartered upon the Dunaskies, possessed by Two Tenants, Ronald Rob, and Anthony Bizzart. A Troop upon Minivoy, posselt by William Macadam; and Fifteen Horse and Men were quartered upon John Paterson in Pennyveinzie. The Reader needs not my Help to compute what Oppression this was to those honest People.

That very first Night the Army encamped there, were brought into the Camp from Blue-what, Five Score of Nolt, Fifteen Score of Sheep, as is attested by John Macadam and John Davidson, Herds there, yet living. These were all quickly consumed, and nothing ever was paid for them. William Hoitson of Beubeoch, sustained the Loss of Eighteen Score and Fourteen old Sheep, Nine Score of Lambs, and Fifteen Nolt, besides all his Household-plenishing, with Two Bolls of Bear, and Five of Meal, which he is ready yet to verify, and severals of his Neighbours yet alive.

William Hoitson was never convict of the least Irregularity, and no Crime against the Government could so much as be alledged; only he was married to James Dick, Tacksman of the Ground, his Daughter, and he was a Nonconformitt.

Besides all this, and much more, which cannot be calculated at this Distance, the Inhabitants of the Town lost much, by the seizing of their Household-turniture, and every Thing in the way for the Use of the Camp, and by a general Plunder when the Army removed. This may give us a View of the Oppression of this Army. Had Materials come to my Hand as distinctly from the rest of the Country, as from this Parish, what a black View might we have had! In short, great and unspeakable were the Hardships the West and South were brought under this Summer, after the Defeat of the Attempt made by Argyle, though the Earl had no Assistance from this Country. The Army were triumphing in their Success, and kept no Bounds in what they did.

William Marshall.

In July this Year, William Marshall, Smith in Glasgow, was apprehended in Evandale, when going to hear a Sermon, as was pretended, merely because he wanted a Pass, and straightway carried in Prisoner to Edinburgh, and in August was banished to the Plantations, without being convict of any Crime but Nonconformity.

A Gentleman fined in near 6000 Pounds, for his own and his Lady's Nonconformity.

I shall end this Section with an Account of a very exorbitant Fine. In September this Year, when Executions were very much over, the old Trade of Fines for Conventicles was revived. There is before me an original Letter from a Sheriff Clerk, to a Gentleman, dated this Month: The Direction is torn off, but I have Ground to think it is some Gentleman in Strathgry Shire or Fife, of whose Circumstances I cannot judge; but the Sum is evidently exorbitant, and lets us see at what rate Fines were now accumulated for Irregularities, to the Ruin of Gentlemens Estates. The Letter follows.

Honoured Sir,

I Love not well to be the first Author of ill News, but I find my self concerned to give you an Account, that the Sheriff hath this Day signed a Decreet against you and your Lady, for a great and prodigious Sum, for House-conventicles, and withdrawing from the Church these many Years. It comes near to Sixty thousand Pounds Scots. I shall forbear extracting till the 29 instant, when the Sheriff will be here. My Lord Balcarras is to be here on Thursday next; so it is fit you bestir your self to see what may be done to stop it. I have done all I can for you, but in vain. Sir, I am,

Your humble Servant,
Al. Napre.

Of the Hardships of the Prisoners transported to America, with Pitlochy, in September, particularly those of the Laird of Barmagechan.

HAVING in the former Section given the History of the Sufferings of these good People, who were taken to Dunotter this Summer, I am now to follow a good many of them to America. Contents of this Section.

Argyle's Invasion being now over, and no more Fears from that Airt, the Council began to weary of the Prisoners at Dunotter, and brought them back to Leith, as we have seen, where another Essay was made to bring them to comply with the Impositions now put on People in their Circumstances; and upon their Refusal, they resolved to send good Numbers of them to the Plantations, and so rid themselves of any more Trouble about them.

Accordingly, after near Three Months severe Treatment at Dunotter, they come to Leith. Two of them were left behind as dying Men, of which worthy Quintin Dick, so frequently mentioned, was one, and in his Remarks formerly cited, he hath some sweet Observations upon Providence timing his Sickness at this Juncture. He recovered in some Time, and was overlooked, and got safe home to his own House, and lived some Years to reflect with Pleasure, and record the Lord's wonderful Steps of Kindness to him, and his Goodness under, and after all those fore Troubles he underwent.

Not a few who were in the great Vault were sick, and allowed Horses upon their own Charges. The Reverend Mr. Frazer was very infirm and weak, and yet the Captain by no Means would permit him to have the Benefit of an hired Horse, as several others had. The Foot had Sixty six Miles to travel, and their Hands tied behind their Back with small Cords. From Dunotter they were carried to Montrose Tolbooth the first Night, from thence to Arbroth, from thence to Dundee, from thence, upon the Sabbath, to the Cowpar of Fife, from thence to Burntisland, and thence to Leith.

The Council were pleased to come down to Leith, and sit in the Tolbooth there, and spent some Time in the Re-examination of the Prisoners. It was but very few complied with their Impositions, and they were dismissed. Others who were very weakly, and had some Friends to intercede, got off upon a Bond of Compearance when called, as Mr. William McMillan, who gave Bond as above, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks. The most Part of them refusing the Oaths, and to satisfy in other Particulars, were perpetually banished to America, and many of them were gifted to the Laird of Pitlochy, to be carried thither.

William Hanna, formerly mentioned, in the Parish of Tunnergarth, when brought before the Lords, and refusing the Oath of Allegiance with the Supremacy, was threatened with Banishment. He told them, that he was now too old to work, or go to War, and he reckoned he would be useless there. Old General Dalziel took him up very bitterly, and replied, he was not too old then to be hanged, and he would hang well enough. That same Day, as my Information bears, August 22. the General died suddenly, and William's Age and Sickness prevented his being carried away with the rest. In a few Weeks he fell very ill in Prison, and appearing to be in a dying Condition, he was liberate, and got home, after very hard Sufferings for Three Years and more.

The Names of as many as are come to my Hand, who were banished, shall be insert just now. Let me only remark, that such who had not to pay their Freight, were gifted to George Scot Laird of Pitlochy, who freighted a Newcastle Ship, Richard Hutton Master, bound for New-jersey; and all the Persons now banished, were committed to his Care.

I cannot give an Account of all the Names of such as were banished with Pitlochie; the Reader hath not a few of them above, Section 4. Several of their Testimonies and Letters they wrote to their Friends toward the End of August are before me; and particularly an original Letter, from about Twenty eight of them, dated Leith Road August 28. 1685. directed to their Friends, too long to be here insert. In short they signify, That now being to leave their own native and covenanted Land by an unjust Sentence of Banishment, for owning Truth, and holding by Duty, and studying to keep by their Covenant Engagements and baptismal Vows, whereby they stand obliged to resist, and testify against all that is contrary to the Word of God and their Covenants; and that their Sentence of Banishment ran chiefly because they refused the Oath of Allegiance, which in Conscience they could not take, because in so doing, they thought they utterly declined the Lord Jesus Christ from having any Power in his own House, and practically would, by taking it, say, he was not

King and Head of his Church, and over their Consciences; and on the contrary, this was to take and put in his room a Man whose Breath is in his Nostrils, yea, a Man that is a sworn Enemy to Religion, an avowed Papist, whom by our Covenants we are bound to withstand, and disown, and that agreeably to the Scripture, Deut. xvii. 14, 15. They go on to leave their Testimony against the Evils of the Times, and for the Preaching of the Gospel in the Fields and Houses, and sign as follows.

Others banished with Pitlochie.

Besides those I have before me, Letters of John Arbuckle, John McQueen, a Letter signed I. D. and K. G. and another signed Janet Symington, all of them banished at this Time, with many others whose Names are not come to me; we shall just now find some of them among those who died at Sea in the Voyage.

In the same Ship likewise were Mr. John Frazer, and that excellent Gentleman Robert McLellan of Barmagechan, of whom more just now, William Niven in Pollockshaw, with a good many others who had endured Dunotter Cruelties. And 'tis mostly from Mr. Frazer and Barmagechan's Accounts of this Voyage, that I am to frame the following Narrative of it. Several others were likewise in the Vessel, who retired from their native Country to settle in America, as the Reverend Mr. Archibald Riddel, whom we had in the former Part of this History, and his Wife, and several of the Relations of such who went over.

They sail from Leith Sept. 5.

The Prisoners lay some Time in the Road of Leith, before all was ready, and sailed the 5 of September. Informations before me bear, that Pitlochie tampered with some of them, particularly James Forsyth, to get Money before they sailed, offering, for Five Pounds Sterling paid now, to set him at Liberty as soon as they came to Land. But James answered, he would give him no Money to carry him out of his native Land, adding, he had done nothing worthy of Banishment.

Their Hardships in the Voyage.

After they had turned the Land-end, the Fever began to rage in the Ship, especially among such who had been in the great Vault of Dunotter. Not a few of them were sick when they came aboard, and no Wonder, considering the barbarous Treatment they had met with; besides, much of the Flesh which the Captain of the Ship had provided for the Prisoners began to stink before they sailed out of Leith Road, and in a few Days it was not eatable.

In a Month's Time the Fever turned malignant, and few or none in the Ship escaped it; in so much that it was usual to cast over Board Three or Four dead Bodies in one Day. Most of the Ship's Crew, except the Captain and Boat-swain, died. Pitlochie who had freighted the Ship, with his excellent Lady, died likewise, and so enjoyed nothing of the Produce of near an hundred Prisoners gifted him by the Council; and near Seventy Persons died at Sea.

Prisoners who died at Sea.

I have before me a List of the Passengers and Prisoners who died at Sea. It concerns the Design of this History only to record the Names of the Prisoners, and they are as follows; Thomas Graham, Gilbert Monorgan, John Smith, William Cunningham, John Muirhead, Thomas Jackson, Katharine Kellie, Andrew MacLellan, Thomas Russel, John Hodge, Thomas Gray, John Ramn, John Swinton, John Kippen, William Spret, James Wardrope, John McKenna, Thomas Finlater, John Hutchison of Wardlaw, William McMillan, Agnes Cobalt, John Kirkland.

Perhaps several of the Passengers might be likewise Sufferers, but able to pay their Freight; but I have not set them down, for Shortness. I find further in the List, Mr. John Vernor and his Wife, Pitlochie and his Lady, and the Lady Aitherny, Mrs. Riddel, Mrs. Eupham Rigg Lady Aitherny's Daughter, William Rigg her Son, Mr. William Ged, and Mr. William Aysdale Minister.

Notwithstanding of this raging Sicknefs, and great Death, much Severity was used toward the Prisoners at Sea, by the Master of the Ship and others: Those under Deck were not allowed to go about Worship by themselves, and when they essayed it, the Captain would throw down great Planks of Timber upon them to disturb them, and sometimes to the Danger of their Lives. We have heard of the Badness of their Provisions already.

Many were the Disasters of this Voyage. The Ship was at the utmost Hazard by the breaking up of a Leak at Two several Times. They had several Calms, and some pretty severe Storms. The Captain, after Pitlochie's Death, began to tamper with Mr. Johnstoun his Son in Law, who now had the Disposal of the Prisoners; and it was projected to carry them into Jamaica or Virginia, and the Master offered to take all the Prisoners there from him, and pay him in Bulk. It was urged for this, that the Markets were much better there for Servants than at New-jersey.

When

When they are thus treating, and near an Issue, very much for the Advantage of the Passengers and Prisoners, the Wind turns straight for New-jersey, and they were forced to sail with it. There they arrived about the Middle of December, after they had been about Fifteen Weeks at Sea. At their landing many of them were sick; and Mr. Frazer observes, that a worthy Gentleman from the West of Scotland died among their Hands as they were carrying him ashore. The same Person observes, that 'partly of such who voluntarily offered themselves to go abroad from the Kingdom of Scotland, and partly of such who were persecuted by Banishment, there were upwards of 60 died at Sea, whose Blood (adds he) will be found in the Skirts of Enemies, as really, as if they had died at the Cross and Grass-market of Edinburgh.

1685.

They arrive at New-jersey in December.

Before the Prisoners came ashore, it was once intended by Mr. Johnstoun, to whom Pitlochie had made them over, to stop their getting out of the Ship, till they should all of them, under their Hand, sign a voluntary Declaration, as it was called, that they offered Four Years Service at that Place. But this they would not yield unto; yea, a considerable Number of them joyned in a Protestation against their Banishment, with a large Narrative of the Hardships they endured during their Voyage, and formerly, for Conscience sake.

Their Treatment there.

When the Prisoners came ashore, the People who lived on the Coast-side, and had not the Gospel settled among them, were harsh enough to them, and shewed them no Kindness. A little way up the Country there was a Town where there was a Minister settled, and the Inhabitants there were very kind to them. When they had Information of the Prisoners Circumstances, they invited all who were able to travel, to come and live with them, and sent Horses for such as were not, and entertained them that Winter freely, and with much Kindness.

In the following Spring, Mr. Johnstoun, upon his Father in Law's Gift of the Prisoners, pursued them, and got them all cited before the Court of that Province. After hearing both Sides, the Governor called a Jury to sit and cognosce upon the Affair. They found that the Pannels had not of their own accord come to that Ship, nor bargained with Pitlochie for Money or Service, and therefore, according to the Laws of the Country, they were absolved; upon which most of the Prisoners retired to New-england, where they were very kindly entertained, and employed according to their different Stations and Capacities.

Pitlochie proposed to be enriched by the Prisoners, and yet he and his Lady died at Sea in the Voyage. He sold what remained of the Estate to pay the Freight, and much of the Money remaining was spent upon the Law-suit in New-jersey. Thus it appears to be but an hazardous Venture to make Merchandize of the suffering People of God.

A good many of the Passengers and Prisoners died in the Plantations, the rest returned to their native Country at the happy Revolution. Mr. Riddel, William Niven and others, and particularly the Laird of Barmagechan, of whose Sufferings I come now to give a more particular Account from a Narrative I have from his nearest Relations.

Robert Maclellan of Barmagechan, in the Parish of Borg, and Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, was born of Parents who were Presbyterian, and carefully educated in the Principles of the Church of Scotland. In his younger Years he profited much under the Ministry of that excellent Person Mr. Adam Kae Minister at Borg. After he was forcibly removed from them, and a Curate obtruded, Mr. Maclellan, with the godly and religious People in that Parish, found it their Duty to disown the Episcopal Minister, as neither called of God to that Place, nor invited by them.

Detail of the Sufferings of Robert Maclellan of Barmagechan, with some Hints at those of Mr. Archibald Riddel and his Son.

Great was the Oppression of all that Country, as hath been noticed, for their faithful Adherence to Presbyterian Ministers, and Barmagechan had his own Share. In February 1666. Sir James Turner sent a Party of Soldiers to his House, and there they lived at Discretion, till he paid the exorbitant Sums of Money Sir James was pleased to demand for his Nonconformity.

After they had eaten up what he had, and destroyed much of his Plenishing, and taken away what they could not destroy, and were still coming back in Parties, Mr. Maclellan was advised to go and wait upon Sir James, and seek an Order for removing his Soldiers. Sir James, instead of this, seized his Person, and confined him in his Court of Guard, till he should pay his Fines for Nonconformity, and the Cess likewise imposed at this Time for maintaining the Army.

Here Barmagechan continued some Time, till the Soldiers, having no more Subsistence about his House, were removed; and they were next sent to that of his Mother in Law, a worthy old Gentlewoman, till she should pay her Fines for Nonconformity, and her Share of the Cess.

All this Time, Sir James had not let him know what Sum he would take for his Fine; at length, after his House and Goods had been destroyed, he liquidate the Fine to Six hundred Marks, and sent a Party of Horse to quarter upon him, and ordered him to pay to each of them Two Shillings Sterling a Day, as long as they lay upon him, which was till he paid his Fine.

This heavy Oppression put Mr. Maclellan to rise with others of his Neighbours, against Sir James, and he was with that Party who were defeat at Pentland; after which he fled to England, and lived privately Four Years. His Estate was forfeited, and a Friend of his compounded the Forfeiture for Two thousand Merks, which he paid. The Severities of the Government slackning a little, he returned to his own House, and lived privately for some Years.

Yet not so privately, but the Curate and others about knew he was there; and because now and then he went and heard Presbyterian Ministers, the Soldiers were hounded out upon him, and he was sadly harassed for several Years, so that he scarce had any Liberty to live at his own House.

He joyned again, with others in his Circumstances, at Bothwel Rising, after which he retired a second Time into England, and was a second Time forfeited, as we have heard. The Violences done to his Family and Friends about this Time, were many and inexpressible. Claverhouse came with a Party to his House, and after he had seized the Corns and Cattle, he was going to take away all his Moveables, but a Composition was made, and an hundred Pounds paid him. The Lady Nithsdale, a bigotted Papist, got a Gift of his Forfeiture, as likewise of many others in that Country, and miserably oppressed his Tenants, drove their Cattle, and exacted much more than their Rent.

His Family was thus scattered, and he upon his hiding in England, where, towards the End of the Year 1684. Squire Dacres seized him, with several other Scotsmen lurking thereabout, and sent them Prisoners to Dumfries. Mr. Maclellan never disowned the King's Authority, as several about this Time did, yet was as harshly dealt by as any of them.

He was close confined in the Castle of Dumfries, and laid in the Irons for several Days. From thence he was carried to Leith with the rest of the Prisoners, and in a little Time brought up to Edinburgh, and put in close Prison, with Fetters on his Arms. Thus he continued from November, till May this Year, when he was sent to Dunotter, and had his Share of the Severities of that Place. When they came back to Leith, he was banished to America, and Three of his Children went with him in Pitlochy's Ship. His Wife, with Three other Children, were left in Scotland upon the Care of Providence.

It pleased the Lord to preserve him and his Three Children in the Voyage. He himself was extremely weakned by Sicknes, and behoved to be carried in Mens Arms out of the Ship, when they landed. However, in a little Time after he was ashore, his Health returned, and he with his Family set up in a Plantation at Woodbridge in New-jersey, which he purchased.

In this Place he had the Advantage, which he very much valued, of having the Gospel preached to him and his Family, by Mr. Archibald Riddel, who stayed with him at Woodbridge, having a Call from the Congregation there, as likewise from Ling-island, where he might have had a far greater Encouragement; but Mr. Riddel choosed Woodbridge, and it was well he did so, otherwise probably he had scarce returned to Britain, where all his Losses were made up, and he and his Four Children were in better Circumstances than he had conformed to Prelacy. There Barmagechan continued from December this Year, till June 1689. when they had Accounts of the comfortable Turn of Affairs in Britain; upon which he resolved to return to his native Country.

Accordingly, June 1689. they sailed for England, and were favoured with excellent Weather, so that they found themselves on the Coast of England the Second of August; but there they were taken by a French Man of War, and carried Prisoners to Nantz. From thence they were carried to Rochford, a common Goal, where there were near Two hundred Prisoners, English and Dutch, who were almost all sent to Thoulon. They were chained Two and Two by the Arm, and at first, each Ten Pair were tied with a Rope; but that was found such an Hindrance in the Journey, that after the second Day's Journey the Ropes were no more used. Mr. Riddel was chained to his Son, a Boy of Ten Years of Age, for whom they were at the Pains to make Three different Chains, before they got one small enough for his Wrist.

In this long and wearisom Journey several of the Company died. When Mr. Maclellan, through Weariness and Age, was unable to travel, he made Application to the Captain of their Guard, that he might be allowed the Benefit of one of their Carts, to help him forward some Part of the Way. He was answered by many Lashes on the Face with his Whip, by which he lost the Sight of one of his Eyes.

After Six Weeks Travel, they came to Thoulon, where they were not allowed a Land Prison, but were put into a large old Ship lying upon the Sea. There he continued Nineteen Months, and came through much Sicknes, and had none to look after him but his Son, a Boy scarce Twelve Years of Age, who was now and then permitted to come ashore.

Barmagechan and his Son, with a few others, being sick, continued there, but all the rest, after a Month's Rest, returned the same Way they came, to Rochford, and thence to Denain near St. Malo, where Mr. Riddel continued more than a Year, in a Vault of an old Castle, with some Hundreds of other Prisoners. They lay on Straw, never changed save once a Month, Month, and were oppressed with Nastiness and Vermin. After Two and Twenty Months Imprisonment, Mr. Riddel and his Son were exchanged for Two Popish Priests, whom the Council of Scotland gave for them. 1685.

At length there came an Exchange of Prisoners, and those at Thoulon were liberate; but the French King would not allow them to come back through France, but gave them a Pass, and put them into a Ship going to Genoa. This occasioned a new Scene of Difficulties to them.

At Genoa, Barmagechan got into an Hamburgh Vessel, bound for Cadiz in Spain, whence he came in a Fleet bound for Amsterdam; but meeting with a Storm on the Back of Ireland, the Ship he was in was forced into Bantry-bay in Ireland. There the Irish seized upon their Company, stripped Mr. Maclellan of his Cloths, and he continued Eleven Days among their Hands, under terrible Hardships.

When Notice was given to the Government, the Ship was looked after, and the Irish obliged to bring back the Prisoners, and they with the Ship sailed up to Dublin. Through the Inhumanities he met with among the wild Irish, his Nakedness and Want of Necessaries, Mr. Maclellan fell very ill for some Weeks at Dublin, but it pleased the Lord to recover him; and as soon as he was able, he came down to the North of Ireland, and got home safe to his own House at Barmagechan, the last Day of October, 1691.

Thus, from the attested Relation of this Gentleman's nearest Friends, I have given the Reader a Taste of his long and sore Distress for Conscience sake. He felt first the Fury of the Party in Scotland, who were upon the French and Popish Bottom, then of the French King, and last of all of the Irish Papists; their Methods of Cruelty were much of a Piece: And as the Severities of the first, were the Inlet to the rest, so they exceeded them in their Length, and some other Circumstances. And after all, this excellent Person had no Reparation after the Revolution, only he possessed his own Lands again.

S E C T. XIII.

Of the Sufferings and Deaths of which I have not the particular Dates, with some other incidental Things, this Year 1685. not formerly noticed.

I Come now to end this Year, wherein so great Abundance of Matter hath offered. Some very barbarous Murders, not observed in their own Room, for Want of their particular Dates, I have referred to this Place; and I shall add some other Particulars, which come not so well in under the former Heads. Matter of this Section.

The Multitudes of Murders in cold Blood, and other Cruelties committed this Year, is the Occasion why I want the exact Dates of several of them; yet I am not willing the Reader should want any Informations come to my Hand, of the Severities exercised; and therefore I insert them here, without any Order, just as they offer. Some of them might have appositely enough come under the former Sections; but I have reserved them altogether for this.

I may well begin with Andrew Macgil Son to John Macgil of Aryclaioch, in the Parish of Ballentree in the Shire of Air. This young Man was taken about the last of December 1684. He was all along a Nonconformist, and it was alledged he had been at Bothwell, but there was no Proof of it I can find. In a Day or Two after he was taken, he was executed at Air in the Beginning of this Year. I have no more about him, but, I suppose, it has been upon the account of his Refusal to disown the Societies Paper. John Macgil of Aryclaioch executed at Air.

His Father's Sufferings were not small last Year and this; and the Reader may take a short Hint of them from an attested Account before me. After Bothwell, the Laird of Broich came and dispossessed him of his House, and seized his Moveables, which were bought back for a considerable Sum. In the Month of March this Year, as if the Execution of his eldest Son a little before, had not been enough, Colonel Douglas came and spoiled John Macgil's House, and what the Soldiers carried not away with them, they endeavoured to make altogether useless. His Father's Sufferings.

And to complete the Barbarity, the Colonel caused carry out John's remaining Son, Fergus Macgil, from his Bed, where he was lying very ill, to shoot him before his Door. What the Pretext was I cannot say, my Information not bearing it. When the Soldiers carried him out, Fergus was so weak, that he fainted among their Hands, and so, it seems, Humanity

nity prevailed for once, and they left him in his fainting Fit, to be looked after by his Friends.

This same Summer, when John had again plenished and furnished his House and Room, Colonel Buchan came upon him with another Party of Soldiers, and took away what was portable, and spoiled the rest. The Colonel interrogated John, if he thought it lawful, in his Opinion, to defend the Preaching of the Gospel by Arms. This good Man answered, He thought it was; and thereupon he carried him away Prisoner with him, in which Condition he continued some Time, till, at my Lord Bargeny's Intercession, and upon paying an exorbitant Fine to Ardmillan, he was let go.

Thomas Richards
in Straw's sick-an his Sufferings.

In the same Parish I find another good Man, Thomas Richards in Strawbraickan, this Year, brought to the Gates of Death, and much Trouble. He was obliged to hide, for refusing the Oaths now imposed, for a considerable Time; at length he was surprized by a Party when asleep in an House where he was hiding. Buchan's Soldiers carried him away with them to Stranrawer, whither they were going, and brought him back again to Ballen-tree. Here his Friends set upon him, and endeavoured to bring him to a Compliance, but could not prevail. Then the Commander of the Party ordered him to be bound, and carried out to the Fields, and gave Order to Four of his Men to shoot him. When lying bound there, Matters were so ordered, that his Friends came thronging about him, and begged the Soldiers might spare him but a little, and they hoped to prevail with him to comply. Thomas hearing this, called out to them, that their dealing with him would be altogether in vain, adding, he was not unwilling to die, especially among his Friends, and even a violent Death, before he made any sinful Compliances. Upon this his Christian Gallantry and Resolution, the Captain thought good to proceed no further.

Thomas was taken into Glasgow, where, after a Month's Imprisonment, his Ears were cropt, and he was, with several others, put into a Ship going to Jamaica, and there sold as a Slave for Seven Years. This he endured, with abundance of Hardships. And when his Time was out, and he just coming home to his native Country, he sickned and died in that Place. When he was carried into Glasgow, he had Six good Horses taken from him; many of his Goats were shot, and his House plundered, without any Compassion shewed to his Wife and Four small Children.

the Family of
Inglistoun.

About the Time when the Five Men were, as hath been observed, murdered at Inglistoun, the Heir of the Estate, who was formerly forfeited, had his Lands given to the Laird of Stonehouse, and he not only possessed the Lands, but uplifted Two thousand and forty eight Pounds of the Lady Inglistoun's Portion not paid, and reduced her and her Children to the greatest Straits, merely for pretended Converse with her Sons and Friends, who did not comply with the Iniquity of the Times.

Cruelties upon
Sarah Stuart
Spouse to William Kennedy in Penningham.

Another Instance of singular Severity comes to my Hand, from the Parish of Penningham, this Year. By Order from David Graham, Sheriff of Wigtoun, a Party of the Soldiers, with the Sheriff-officers, came to Barn-kirk, a Part of Castlestuart's Lands in that Parish, and there apprehended a Gentlewoman, Sarah Stuart, Spouse to William Kennedy, who, for Non-compearance, had been denounced. They cut the Roof of the House, and threw it down to the Ground, after they had seized and spoiled the Plenishing. Then they forced the Gentlewoman to go with them a foot, Six Miles of Galloway Measure, to Wigtoun, bearing in her Arms a Child not yet Three Quarters old, and to leave her other Three Children without so much as a Servant to look after them, tho' the eldest was but of Eight, the next of five, and the other not Three Years of Age.

At Wigtoun she was, with her sucking Child, kept in Prison Eleven Weeks. This Gentlewoman was no way obnoxious to the then Laws, being a Conformist with Prelacy, and nothing could be said against her as to her Religion and Practice, only they would oblige her to swear she would never converse with her Husband now put to the Horn; but as soon as she knew where he was, she would discover him, and inform against him, that he might be apprehended. This she peremptorily refused.

Thus the Religion and Government of this Time, was calculated to eradicate the very Principles of Nature; and Wives this way were forced to concur in shedding the Blood, or at least ruining the outward Estate of their Husbands, who, for Conscience sake, could not comply with the Impositions of this Period. I see no Parallel to this, unless it be that Practice of some of the most wicked of the Papiists, who caused some Children kindle the Fagots wherewith their Parents were burnt; and indeed the same Spirit inspired both.

Sufferings of
John Wallace of Knoxybae, in
New Glenluce.

John Wallace of Knoxybae, in the Parish of New Glenluce, was seized this Year for refusing the Abjuration. A Party of Colonel Buchan's Men spoiled his House, and took away every Thing in it that made for them; and to complete their Villanies, they brought in good Numbers of Sheep to the Church, and killed them there; and for Dispatch, they kindled a Fire of the Seats and Forms of the Church, at which they roasted the Sheep, and otherwise readied them for themselves. I should not have set down so odd a Step in Christians and Protestants had I not the attested Account of it under the reverend Minister of that Parish his Hand, which he hath from many living Witnesses.

This Year I find great Numbers dying in Prisons, and in the Road to them, and in their Banishments. The Accounts of these are not so full as I could wish, yet they deserve their Room here, as really Sufferers unto Death for Conscience sake, as well as such as were shot in the Fields, and executed publickly. The Reader may guess what Numbers of those were at this Time, from the Accounts I am to set down of Ten or Twelve of this Sort, from the Shire of Nithsdale, and what Multitudes we might have had from other Places, had they been as carefully observed.

Death of many in Prisons this Year.

James Glover of the Parish of Tinwald, was apprehended by a Party of Soldiers, for Non-compearance and Nonconformity, and in his taking he was sore mangled and wounded. He was carried into Dumfries almost in a dying Condition, and from thence taken into Edinburgh, where he died in Prison, an Instance of their Cruelty, and a Witness for the Truth.

James Glover

Andrew Fergusson, in the Parish of Glencairn, was apprehended by another Party this Year, and refusing to comply with the Oaths imposed, and to answer their Interrogatories, he was carried away Prisoner to Glasgow, where he died in much Trouble and Sickness, brought on by the Severities exercised upon him.

Andrew Fergusson

John Munil had been long harried, for his refusing to hear the Curates, and fled to England; there he was seized, and sent to Dumfries, from whence he was carried into Edinburgh, where he died in Prison, under much Serenity and Peace, owing to his last the Truths for which he was persecuted.

John Munil

James Muncie a Burgess in Dumfries, was much harried, because he would by no Means be prevailed with to take the Test; at length he was sent Prisoner to Edinburgh, where he died in much Comfort and Satisfaction of Soul, taking his Sufferings to be very clearly stated, in refusing an Oath so plainly contradictory.

James Muncie

John Muirhead hath been transiently noticed already. He had been once a Bailie in Dumfries, and was much persecuted upon the same Score, and still persisting to refuse the Test, was sent Prisoner to Edinburgh, where in Prison he fell in a Distemper, which, though severe at first, appeared not very hazardous, but by no Means would the Managers allow Physicians, or a Surgeon to be brought; and he died at Leith for Want of proper Applications.

John Muirhead
Bailie in Dumfries.

James Carran Burgess of Dumfries, for his Church Irregularities, as they were called, and his mere Nonconformity, was banished and sent to the Plantations, where he died a Witness for the Truth in a strange Land. I question not but several Hundreds died in their Banishment, Accounts of whom cannot now be recovered.

James Carran

Andrew Hunter, likewise a Burgess of Dumfries, was apprehended for his refusing the Oaths; and though he was a very old, decrepit, and infirm Man, yet he was carried to Prison, and closely shut up. There he sickned very fast, and his Illness turned dangerous. All he begged, was only the Liberty to be carried to his own House in the Town, where he would have been some better looked after. This could not be granted, and he died in the Prison.

Andrew Hunter

John Stock, Burgess in the same Town, upon his Refusal of the Test, was sent in Prisoner to Edinburgh, whence he was carried to Dunotter, where, through Want of Necessaries, and ill Accommodation, he sickned and died, as did several others, whose Names cannot now be retrieved.

John Stock

Elizabeth Glendonning, Spouse to John Panter in Baragan, of the Parish of Durisddeer, for Noncompliance, and not hearing the established Ministers, was imprisoned for some Time, and sent to Edinburgh, where she died in Prison.

Elizabeth Glendonning

John Renwick, a Burgess in Dumfries, for Noncompliance with the present Impositions, was sent Prisoner to Edinburgh, and banished to New-jersey, in Pitlochy's Ship, where, with Multitudes of others, he died.

John Renwick

Andrew Macleffan, a Freeman in the same Town, for refusing the Test, was in the like Manner banished his native Country, and died in the same Vessel.

Andrew Macleffan

James Sittlington, in the Parish of Dunscore, likewise died there.

James Sittlington

I formerly noticed that excellent Gentlewoman Elizabeth Hunter, Lady Kaitloch, who was turned out of her House, and with her small Children put to the greatest Hardships and Straits; and at length they were forced to leave the Kingdom, and go over to Holland, where, after much Trouble and Sickness upon her Children, she died this Year.

Lady Kaitloch

Besides those Deaths and Banishments this Year, I have several Instances before me of severe Scourgings of honest People, upon their Nonconformity; and the Persecutors not satisfied with this Punishment, sent a good many of them off to the Plantations, after they had endured those.

Many scourged, and afterwards banished.

Two of the Women sent from Dumfries to Dunotter, were scourged at Dumfries by the Hands of the Hangman, merely because they would swear no Oaths, and refused to engage to hear the Curate of their Parish. The youngest of the Two was sent over to Jersey with Pitlochy.

About the same Time, another honest Woman, upon the same Accounts, with a Man whom they had prevailed upon to take the Test, merely because he would not depone, what

what wandring Persons they had entertained, were bound together, and scourged through the Town of Dumfries by the Hangman.

Another poor Woman in Anandale, having hired Two Persons to shear with her in Har-vest, who wanted Pailles, was for this scourged in the same Place; and they alledged a great deal of Lenity was exercised, that she was not sent to the Plantations.

Jean Dalziel, an honest Woman, a Tenant of Queensberry's, was banished to the Plantations, because she would not promise upon Oath, that she would never converse with her own Husband, now declared fugitive.

Agnes Harestones, another of Queensberry's Tenants, was sentenced to the Plantations, because she would not promise to hear the Curates, and discover Fugitives. She and her Husband had Eighteen Children; yet such a Family made not the Persecutors in the least relent.

Other Hardships at this Time.

I find it further remarked at this Time, that when People were prevailed upon to swear the Oaths now imposed, the Managers obliged them likewise to promise to stand at the singing of the Doxology, give all Encouragement to the established Clergy, apprehend all Fugitives and Wanderers; and when they could not apprehend them, that they should raise the Hue and the Cry after them for Three Miles.

If I should enter upon the Spoilings and Fines imposed upon Sufferers this Year, I might fill many Sheets. Some Hint of these may be given, by way of general Estimate, at the End of this History. Two Instances offer here, well vouched, of Losses this way, mixed in with other Hardships.

William Campbell of Middle-welwood, his Sufferings.

William Campbell of Middle-welwood, was this Year seized, merely for Refet of his Brother John. Both of them were sent Prisoners to Edinburgh, carried thence to Dunotter, and afterwards banished to New-jersey. When this Gentleman had with some Difficulty got free of Pirlochy's Representative, he came home, and next Year was taken by a Party of Craig's Troop, and carried Prisoner to the Canongate Tolbooth, where, after long Imprisonment, he at length got out upon paying a Fine of Twelve hundred Merks.

Thomas Abercrombie in the Parish of Bar.

The other Account I set down from an attested Relation, chiefly, that the Reader from its Particulars may be able to guess at the Losses of honest People in this Period, not only from their Fines, but the Circumstances of their Finings, and the Trouble they were necessarily obliged to before they got rid of them. This will appear from the Case of Thomas Abercrombie in Dalwyne, in the Parish of Bar.

For dry Quarters in the Year 1678. at the incoming of the Highland Host, he expended a great Sum. In the Year 1679. he suffered a great Loss from the quartering of Dragoons for some Time upon his House, and they spoiled it when they went off. In the Year 1683. he paid an Hundred Pounds to Ardmillan, for alledged hearing of Presbyterian Ministers, many Years ago, with Fifteen Pounds to his Son James Crawford, and Fifteen Pounds to the Soldiers employed against him by Ardmillan. Upon the Fifteenth of November last Year, at Midnight, in his own House he was apprehended, without any Reason given, and carried away Prisoner, and he had Money largely to give before he got off. Besides, the Soldiers spoiled his House, turned down his Corn-stacks, and abused his Victual.

In May and June this Year, the Soldiers, in coming and going, took of his Sheep at their Pleasure, and killed and ate them. In July, the Camp being near his House, his Loss cannot be estimate. Thomas himself was taken Prisoner July 18. His House was spoiled, and he sent into Edinburgh. There he was threatned with the Plantations, when the rest of the Prisoners were sent thither. To prevent this, he made some Interest, and gave Sir George Mackenzie Ten Crowns, to Sir William Paterson Five Crowns, to the Under-clerks and other Servants Twelve Crowns.

After this paving of the Way, he petitioned the Council for his Liberation; which was granted upon his paying an Hundred Pounds Fine, and giving Bond to compear when called; and at his Removal he had Thirty Pounds to pay to the Keepers. After he came home from Edinburgh, he was attacked by Hugh Muir Bailie of Carrick, for not hearing the Episcopal Minister, and paid him Fifty Pounds, and Five Pounds to his Officers.

All this he underwent for mere Nonconformity; any Concern in the Risings was not alledged against him. And from this we may easily guess what vast Sums were raised, and how much Multitudes were squeezed merely for not joyning with the Prelatical Establishment.

Other Matters
this Year molt-ly from the Council Registers.
Warrant to print Jerviswood's Trial.

It is now high Time to come to an End of my Accounts of this severe Year, by gleaping up some few Things more, which come not in so directly upon the former Sections, and yet may tend some further to clear up the History of this Year, mostly from the Council Registers.

By those I find, the Council, that same Day upon which the News come of King Charles II. his Death, February 10. give Warrant for printing Jerviswood's Trial, the same being first seen and perused by the Lord Register and Advocate.

Procedure about the indulged Ministers.

The Procedure of the Council relative to the indulged Ministers this Year, offers next, and I shall give what is come to my Hand about them, in this Place. March 12. The Lords ‘ Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council having considered the Addrefs of Mr. Andrew Miller indulged at Neilstoun, Mr. James Curry at Slotts, Mr. A. Murray of Woodend, and Mr. Robert Mowat late Minister at Heriot, Prisoners, desiring Liberty for some Time : The Lords, in regard of their long Imprisonment and valetudinary Condition, give Order to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, to liberate them on Bond of Five thousand Merks, that they shall not exercise any Part of their ministerial Function in this Kingdom, and live peaceably, and compear when called.’

1685.

Mrs. Andrew Miller, James Curry, A. Murray and Robert Mowat.

Those worthy Ministers had continued in Prison since the End of the last Year ; and however the Council’s Act carry a Clause in it obliging them to desist from their Ministry in Scotland, yet I cannot find that they homologate this, yea, their Acts of Liberation did not contain this. Mr. Andrew Miller’s original Warrant for Liberation is before me, and I insert it as what was the common Form, used as to all of them who were liberate at this Time.

Edinburgh, March 12. 1685.

‘ The Lords of his Majesty’s Privy Council, having considered a Petition presented by Mr. Andrew Miller late Minister at Neilstoun, Prisoner in the Tolbooth of Edinburgh, supplicating for Liberty, do hereby give Warrant to the Magistrates of Edinburgh, and Keepers of the Tolbooth thereof, to set the said Mr. Andrew Miller at Liberty, in regard sufficient Caution is found for him, that he shall live peaceably, and compear before the Council when called for. Extracted by Act for Mr. Andrew Miller’s Liberation.

Will. Paterson Cl. Secr. Conc.

‘ This is the true and just Double of the principal Warrant for setting the said Mr. Andrew Miller Minister, at Liberty. Extracted by me

J. Cameron Clerk.

March 14. ‘ The Council order Mr. Campbel, and Mr. Duncanson to be liberate on Bond of Five thousand Merks, to remove off the Kingdom betwixt and the Day of , and mean while that they exercise no Part of the ministerial Office, and live peaceably. And March 17. Mr. Andrew McClean, Mr. P. Campbel, Mr. David Simpson, indulged Ministers in Argyle Shire, liberate upon the same Terms.’ And Mr. John Duncanson and his Cautioners being absent, the Lords declare his Bond forfeited, and order him to be put to the Horn. April last, Mr. John Oliphant indulged Minister, is liberate as above. We have heard of Mr. John Knox before. And May 8. Mr. John Bell indulged at Ardrossen, his Liberty is continued Six Months longer, under Caution to remove off the Kingdom. August 14. the Council order Mr. David Simpson late Minister at Kintyre, going to New-jersey, to have his Bonds given up.

Mrs. Campbel, Duncanson, Maclean, P. Campbel, D. Simpson, John Oliphant, John Bell.

Those and other indulged Ministers not named in the Registers, were at this Time liberate, and retired to their own Houses, and some of them continued at the Manfes where they had been indulged, and preached to their own Families, and some others now and then in their Houses, but no more in the Churches ; and so Matters stood till the Liberty, which we shall meet with next Year save one.

A good Number of Letters, from the Prisoners, at Glasgow and Edinburgh, in Tolbooths and Irons, and from aboard the Ships going to the Plantations, ly before me, which I can say no more of, but that they favour much of their Piety, absolute Resignation to the Lord’s Disposal, and Satisfaction with their suffering Lot. One thing I cannot altogether pass, as an Evidence of their righteous Temper, and the Unrighteousness of their Persecutors. What several of them regret most in their Letters to their Friends, is, that by the Soldiers seizing and carrying off any Thing they had, their lawful Creditors are like to be defrauded, and lose considerably at their Hands. Some of them lament, that tho’ they had more than would have cleared all their Debts, and for some Time supported them and their Families ; yet by the Ravages committed upon them, their Neighbours are like to be considerable Losers, which vexes them much.

Further Accounts of the Prisoners and the Banished this Year, from their own Letters.

By an original Letter, dated Canongate Tolbooth August 10. 1685. I find the Subscribers of it were banished by the Council to Jamaica. They direct it to their Friends, as the Testimony they leave to the Cause for which they suffer. ’Tis too long to be insert. They declare the Ground of their Sentence of Banishment, is their disowning the Authority of a Papist, whom, they say, they can never own as their King. They leave a great many very good Directions to their suffering Friends as to their Carriage, and sign 1685.

Another Letter lies before me from James Rae banished this Year to Jamaica, to his Friends, dated from aboard the Ship, Newhaven, December 21. this Year. Probably they were all sent to Jamaica together. The Letter is full of Piety and Composure of Mind. He acquaints them, he had a very sensible Warning and Impression that he was near a great Shock the Day before he was taken; and since that Time he was no way discouraged, but cheertully left himself upon the Lord. He declares his Fears, that sad Days are abiding the Church of Scotland, and his Perswasion, he will keep a Remnant safe till they see the glorious Delivery, and a far more glorious Church than ever had been in Scotland.

Alterations in civil Offices this Year, and Additions to the Council.

The Alterations in civil Posts this Year, ly not so much in my Way, yet I shall notice the Hints I have observed as to those in the Council Books. April 9. a Commission is read to the Duke of Queensberry, to be Commissioner to the Parliament. And that same Day, a new Commission comes down to the Council. All that were in the former Commission were the King's Friends while Duke of Tork, and some Additions are made. April 21. the Duke of Hamilton, the Earl of Dumfries, and Colonel Douglas are added to the Council. June 8. the Council is appointed to meet every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday. June 20. Colonel Graham of Claverhouse is admitted a privy Counsellor. And July 23. Hugh McKay of Skourie is admitted a privy Counsellor. April 16. John Marquis of Athole is declared Lord Privy Seal, and Sir James Fowles of Collingtoun Justice Clerk. June 22. the Duke of Queensberry is declared Lord high Treasurer, and Conitable, and Governor of Edinburgh Castle. July 24. by a Letter from the King, the Viscount of Tarbet is allowed to continue in his Office of Clerk of Council, Registers and Rolls, and Senator of the College of Justice, notwithstanding the Honour of a Viscount is conferred upon him. August 25. upon General Dalziel's Death the Council appoint a Scheme of his Interment to be delivered to the Lyon King at Arms, and the Castle is ordered to fire at the Removal of his Corps. And Nov. 26. William Drummond of Cromlix gets a Commission to be Lieutenant General of his Majesty's Forces in Scotland.

Monmouth's Defeat, July 6.

The Affair of Monmouth's Invasion upon England, I leave unto the English Historians; it was ill concerted, and worse executed. Upon Munday, July 6. the Duke's little Army was defeat near Bridgewater, and next Day the Lord Gray was taken by the Lord Lumley, and in a little Time the Duke himself, who was brought up to the Tower, July 13. There is an Account before me of this Matter, printed by Authority, which, in a most invidious Paragraph, bears, 'That upon the Duke was found a Manuscript of Spells, Charms, and Conjurations, Songs, Receipts, and Prayers, all written by the Duke's own Hand,' which I leave to be exposed by others, as false and calumnious. The Reader will find a better Account of this ill managed Affair, in Dr. Wellwood's Memoirs, and other Writers of Reputation.

Mortification for building a Church, turned to the building a Manse to the Bishop of Edinburgh.

July 14. a Letter from the King is read in Council, bearing, 'Whereas in the Parliament 1681. the Money lodged in the Hands of the Magistrates of Edinburgh, for building a Church in the Grass-market, was ordered to be applied to Uses as near the Will of the Defunct as possible; the King now requires it to be applied to the building of a Manse to the Bishops of Edinburgh. The Council accordingly order the Magistrates to apply it, and to pay Interest for the Money till the House be built.' I leave it to better Judges to determine, whether it was in the Power, even of the Parliament or the King, to alter the Destination of a Mortification, from the building of a Church, to the building of a Manse; and much more, whether it was not a counteracting the Will of the dead, to ordain the Interest of that Money to be paid to the Bishop, as I am told it was; and in the mean time nothing is done for building a Manse.

Proclamation,
September 16. for keeping the King's Birthday.

Upon the 16 of September, the Council emit a Proclamation for keeping the King's Birth-day, October 14. as a solemn anniversary Thanksgiving. It being pretty singular, I insert it here.

FORasmuch as it having pleased almighty God, to set our most rightful redoubted Sovereign, James VII. by the Grace of God, of Scotland, England, France and Ireland King, Defender of the Faith, &c. peaceably upon the Throne of his Royal Ancestors, our most august and glorious Monarch, notwithstanding the hellish Plots and Machinations against the sacred Person of our late King (of ever blessed Memory) and of our said present Sovereign, (whom God long preserve) and also notwithstanding of the desperate and traiterous Endeavours of those who lately, by armed Force, invaded these our sovereign Lord's Realms of Scotland and England, of design not only to have subverted his Majesty's Royal Government, but even to have embred their wicked Hands, in the sacred Blood of our said sovereign Lord the King, and utterly to have destroyed all his Majesty's faithful and loyal Subjects; which traiterous Attempts, by so signal and remarkable Instances of the divine Providence, have been so miraculously defeated and confounded: Of all which his Majesty's Privy Council being deeply sensible, they hereby, in his Majesty's Royal Name and Authority, ordain and appoint the Fourteenth of October, being his Majesty's Royal Birth-day, to be solemnly kept and observed throughout this Kingdom, for this Year, and yearly yearly hereafter, as an anniversary Day of Thanksgiving, for his Majesty's happy Birth, and therein to commemorate his most conspicuous Entry to his Royal Government, and miraculous Deliverances aforesaid, and that all Signs and Demonstrations of Joy, on such solemn Occasions accustomed, be performed by all his Majesty's Subjects. And further, recommend to the Right Reverend the Archbishops and Bishops, that they cause the Ministers in their respective Dioceses, for this Year, and yearly hereafter, upon the said Fourteenth of October, with the People at divine Service in the Church, devoutly give solemn Thanks to almighty God, and celebrate his holy Name, for his so signal Goodness and Protection to our said gracious Sovereign, and in him to these his Kingdoms: And that all his Majesty's good Subjects may have Notice, and be certified hereof, his Majesty's Privy Council doth hereby require and command his Majesty's Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Maces of the Privy Council, Pursevants, and Messengers at Arms, forthwith to pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and there having his Majesty's Coat of Arms displayed, by Sound of Trumpet, and open Proclamation, in his Majesty's Name and Authority, make Publication of the Premises; and ordain the Sheriffs of the several Shires of this Kingdom, to cause publish the same at the Market-crosses of the Head Burghs of their Shires, and the Magistrates of Burghs respective, as they will be answerable at their highest Peril, that none may pretend Ignorance. And the Sheriffs aforesaid, are hereby strictly required, to cause deliver to the Ministers within their Sherifdoms respective, a printed Copy of this Act, that they may, from their Pulpits, on the Lord's Day preceeding the said Day of publick Thanksgiving, after divine Service in the Forenoon, read the same to the People, and give them the necessary Exhortations upon this Occasion.'

Reflections on this are unnecessary, after what hath been said in the first Book on anniversary Days. It may be of more Use to observe the direct Incroachments made upon the Privileges of the Royal Burghs, at this Time. September 19. a Letter is read, with relation to the Election of the Magistrates of Edinburgh, which is as follows.

Incroachments made on the Royal Burghs.

JAMES R.

Right trusty, &c. We greet you well. Whereas the usual Time of electing the Magistrates of Our City of Edinburgh, is now approaching, We do hereby authorize and require you, upon Sight hereof, to call for the present Magistrates, and signify Our Pleasure unto them, That they and the present Town-council continue as formerly, in the Exercise of the Government thereof, and that they forbear to proceed to any Election of Magistrates or Town-council, for the ensuing Year, until We shall think fit to declare Our Pleasure to the contrary: For doing whereof, this shall be to you and them respectively a sufficient Warrant; and so We bid you heartily farewell. Given at Our Court at Windsor, the Twelfth Day of September, 1685. and of Our Reign the first Year.'

King's Letter September 12. about the Election of the Magistrates of Edinburgh.

By his Majesty's Command,

MELFORD.

Upon reading of this, the Magistrates of Edinburgh are called before the Council, and his Majesty's Pleasure is intimate to them; and, in case any new Counsellors be chosen already, the Magistrates are appointed to resume the old Counsellors, that so the Town-council may remain entire as formerly, until his Majesty's further Pleasure.

And to put all relating to this together, October 5. another Letter from the King is read. Right trusty, &c. Whereas We judge it a Matter of Importance to Our Service, and the Advantage of Our good People in Our City of Edinburgh, that a Person of known Loyalty and Integrity, be elected as their Provost for the ensuing Year, We have thought fit to authorize and require you, after the Receipt of this, to call for the present Magistrates, and recommend to them Bailie Kennedy, as Our particular Choice, to be elected Provost of that Our City at this Time, leaving them to the usual Methods of electing the rest of the Magistrates and Town-council. For doing whereof this shall be your Warrant.'

Another, October 1. naming the Provost of Edinburgh.

Windsor, October 1.

MURRAY.

The Council appoint the Counsellors in Town to be present to Morrow at the Election, and see it orderly proceeded in. Remarks upon such a Letter are obvious. At the same rate the King might have nominate the rest of the Magistrates and Town-counsellors at Edinburgh, and in all the Royal Burghs; and in effect, the whole Privileges belonging to that Body,

Remarks

Body, so often ratified in Parliament, were entirely overthrown: And we shall just now meet with the King, dispensing with another Act of his own Parliament, about the Test.

Letter, Council to the King, about the Lord Register and Secretary their corresponding with Lord Melvil,
and the Advocate's
Malversations,
September
21.

While those bold Steps are taking at London, which were a Preface to what followed in England, as to Corporations, much of the same Nature, our Managers seem not to be altogether of a Piece among themselves; and Informations are taken from Mr. John Veitch, and some Accounts said to be given by Sir John Cochran, with relation to the Register and Secretary Murray their corresponding with the Lord Melvil, and some Malversations of the King's Advocate. Without dipping at all into this Part of secret History, I shall lay before the Reader what I meet with in the Registers about it.

The Letter underwritten, directed to his sacred Majesty from the Council, being brought in from the Committee appointed in the Forenoon for that effect, being read, the same was approved of and signed, and ordered to be delivered to the Lord Marquis of Atchew, to be by him presented to his most sacred Majesty, which Letter he accordingly received, with the principal Examinations of Mr. John Veitch and Mr. William Spence, upon Oath, there being no Copies left, by the Council's special Order. Follows the Tenor of the foresaid Letter.

May it please your most sacred Majesty,

According to your Majesty's Commands given by your Royal Letter, we have by your Proclamation, adjourned your Parliament to the first Thursday of April 1686. in the usual Manner. As also, in obedience to your sacred Commands, in another Letter of the same Date, we did intimate your Royal Pleasure to the Council of Edinburgh, to continue the Town-council as formerly, and to forbear to proceed to any Election of Magistrates or Town-council, for the ensuing Year, until your Majesty declare your Pleasure. We judge our selves always obliged to inform your Majesty, as being of great Importance to your Majesty's Government, and of the highest Concern to all your faithful Servants, that the Committee for publick Affairs having appointed Two Days last Week for searching of Prisons, and Examination of Prisoners, they reported to us, that in the Examination they found by Mr. William Spence, that Sir John Cochran's Son had been questioning him, if he had carried on any Correspondence betwixt the Lord Register, and the late Lord Melvil, by which it would appear, that Sir John Cochran's Son had been practising him, with a Design to accuse the Lord Register, which Correspondence is declared by the said Spence to be utterly false. There was another called Mr. John Veitch, who was close Prisoner by the Lord Chancellor's Order, and therefore when the Council called for him, they removed all the Clerks, and that Veitch did give his Oath in Writ, whereof, he said, he had sent an exact Double to the Lord Chancellor, after his Lordship's going from this, which reports, as if Information had come from a Rebel, or some of their Correspondence, of your Advocate's Malversation in your Majesty's Service, which he also denies upon Oath. We have likewise Information, that albeit Sir John Cochran would not voluntarily expose his Secrets and Discoveries, until he saw your Majesty, no not to your Officers of State; yet some have told here a Day or Two after Sir John had parted from this, that he was to accuse the Earl of Murray of conversing with Traitors, and we having sent for Sir James Roch-head the Informer, we find he is gone for London. This in Fact we humbly lay before your Royal Wisdom, as Matters of extraordinary Weight, lest by such Practices your Majesty's Service may be more endangered, than by the Enemy's open Endeavours; and albeit such Informations are to be received against the best Servants, yet we in all Submission offer to your Majesty's Consideration, how far the Rage of defeated Enemies, (especially when induced by Threats or Promises) will prompt them to concur in ruining your faithful Servants, who have served your Majesty faithfully, in ruining of them: And we humbly offer these, amongst many Considerations, to your sacred Majesty, that from your royal and fatherly Interest in and over your Servants, such Directions may be given, and such Notice may be taken of these Informers, as will be most consistent with your Majesty's Interest, and with that which is a Part of it, your Majesty's Justice to your unjust Servants. There is one Welfsh, a forfeited Traitor, taken, and brought before us, whom we have remitted to the Justices, in order to his Execution; and albeit severals of these irreclaimable Rebels be still skulking in the Molles, yet at present there is a greater Quiet in the western Shires, than has been in them these many Years bypast, and all possible Care for their continuing so shall be taken by us. But since the Lord Privy Seal, who has been present with us, and whose eminent Appearance and Fidelity on all Occasions, in your Majesty's Service, is so known to all, especially to your Royal Self, is now going to attend your Royal Majesty, we leave a more particular Information to be given by him, of what relates to the foresaid or other of the publick Concerns of your Majesty's Service here, and what further occurs, shall be faithfully transmitted on all Occasions by, 1685.

May it please your Majesty,

Your Majesty's most humble, most faithful,
and most obedient Subjects and Servants.

October 24. the Council have the following Return to this Letter.

JAMES R.

Right trusty, &c. We received your Letter of the 21 of September, from the Marquis of Athole, by which We were much surpris'd, that you had taken upon you to examine Veitch, committed close Prisoner by Our Chancellor, with exprets Order, that none of what Quality soever, should have any Access to him, and to take up the Order given by Our Chancellor. Both which, We look upon as Actions of that Nature, as We cannot but admire how, or by what Perswasion you came to do them; for supposing it has been possible for Our Chancellor, to have done such a Thing without Our Order, and that it had really been amiss, yet We ought to have been informed, and Our Royal Pleasure known, before any Thing had been done contrary to the Order, especially where there was no Danger in a much longer Delay. This We look upon to be so much Our immediate Concern, that We must let you know how much We are dissatisfied with it, that for the future you might be more careful, that no such Practice may be. We do likewise find in that Letter, that some Rebels have been induced by Threats or Promises, to accuse some of Our faithful Servants. We doubt not, that before you sent Us that Information, you were acquainted with the Names of such as threatned or promised Rewards in so wicked a Matter, (as is well known to the World We would not suffer against the worst of Our Enemies) which Names We desire to be sent forthwith to Us, that We may make them Examples of Our Justice to Posterity. So We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 17 Day of October, 1685. and of Our Reign the first Year.

King's Answer Oct. 17.

By his Majesty's Command.

MELFORD.

Such a Letter required a speedy Answer, and so, October 25. they make the following Return.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

WE regret very much, that any Thing in our Conduct should have offended your sacred Majesty, whose Prosperity and Greatness we have ever designed in all our Consultations and Actions; and since your sacred Majesty has prescribed to us Measures, for our Conduct in the future, we shall by Obedience shew what have been our former Designs; nor would we insist upon what was done at the writing of the last Letter, lest it might seem a Justification, if your Majesty's exprets Commands in your Letter did not ordain us to give an Account of the Motives upon which we proceeded. As to what concerned the Examination of Veitch, we having seen my Lord Chancellor's Order, which bears nothing of any Warrant from your Majesty; yet we thought it our Duty, to have so much Respect to a Person of his eminent Trust and Merit, to continue Mr. Veitch close Prisoner, according to his Lordship's Order, without ever taking up the same from the Keepers, in whose Hands it did and still lies, notwithstanding that Mr. Veitch has both deposed to his Lordship and us, that he knew nothing of that Affair, nor would we proceed on that Examination, until we knew what he had said to his Lordship; and accordingly he continues still close Prisoner, so that whatever Enquiry may be made as to him, is still entire; nor would we take any Discovery from him, further than what was made to my Lord Chancellor, nor would we so much as keep a Double of the same, but transmitted it to your Majesty by an Officer of State, and Member of the private Committee. And one of the chief Motives that induced us to believe, that we might examine him, was, that my Lord Chancellor's Order did not expressly bear, that no Person or Judicature should examine him, which, if it had been, we would have had that just Deference to my Lord Chancellor's Order, as not to have examined him; but the Order bearing only, that no Person should speak with or see him, we only considered Veitch to be in the Condition of other close Prisoners, whom the Council uses to examine. But whatever the Practice has been, it is sufficient for us, that your Majesty has excluded all Examination in such Cases for the future, which we shall humbly and heartily obey. And to shew that no Interest of ours, did or shall induce us to believe, that your Majesty by your self or your Order, may not examine mine any Person whatsoever, either as to us or your Majesty's Servants; in we again renew the Acknowledgment in our former Letter, that Informations are to be received against the best of Servants; and we may be the sater in this Acknowledgment, that we are so happy as to live under a Prince who will protect the Innocence of his approved Servants. As to that Expression in your Majesty's Letter, that some Rebels have been induced, by Threats or Promises, to accuse your Servants, we humbly offer to your Majesty's Consideration the Clause of our Letter, which bears, that we in all Submission offer to your Majesty's Consideration, how far the Rage of defeated Enemies may prompt them to ruine your Majesty's faithful Servants, which was an abstract Consideration in the general without reflecting upon any particular Person whatsoever, or arising from any Examination mentioned in the Letter, but from the sad Experience we have of the Rage of your Majesty's Enemies against your Majesty's Servants, and the great Liberty they take to slander every Thing they think for the Advantage of their Cause; and in this Time, when your Majesty's Enemies have nothing left them but this Revenge, against those who faithfully serve, to name them, and who are irreconcilable with them and their Interest, upon your sacred Majesty's account, especially, beside our Ruin, they may project to themselves a Freedom from Death and Punishment, which, as they justly deserve, is the most Terrification of all Terrors. This is offered to your Majesty by,

May it please your sacred Majesty,

Your Majesty's most humble, most faithful,
and most obedient Subjects and Servants.

Mr. John Veitch
his Suffering
at this Time.

How this Matter ended, I cannot say. If the Procedure of the Council after this Year, had been insert in Registers, we might have known more of this, and other Differences which fell in among the Managers in this Reign, of which I am not in Case to give certain Accounts; and therefore I shall only further add, that that worthy Minister, mentioned in the Council's Letter, fell under a long Tract of great Severities, as appears by a Note sent me, written by himself at this Time, which is all I have about him, and it is as follows.

By Order from Chancellor Perth, Mr. John Veitch Minister at Westruther, was taken and carried Prisoner to Edinburgh, by Sir Adam Blair of Carberry younger, and lay all Night in the Guard kept at Holy-rood-house. October 5. he was sent to the Tolbooth by a most unusual Order, made close Prisoner, and his Keeper solemnly sworn, never to suffer any Word to come in unto him, or suffer it to go out from him, but with the Knowledge of the Council, or their Committee; and lest, in his Absence, any should speak to him in at the Door, and he to them, Two Soldiers were constantly guarding the Door. Pen and Ink were taken from him. This way he continued the Space of Twenty Weeks.

Council's Act
Oct. 5. about Books of Divinity.

October 5. the Council by an Act ordain, That no Books of Divinity be printed in this Kingdom, till they be revised and licensed by the Ordinary of the Place; and discharge all Stationers to sell any that are not licensed, under Pains of Confiscation. That same Day, I find a Process against the Dean of Glasgow, and Minister of Hamilton, before the Justiciary, for the crimen nefandum. He is assailed there, where Multitudes of innocent Persons had been made guilty. The violent Suspicions of Guilt, wherewith many in that Place were impressed, were not removed by the Lords Sentence, and he himself found proper to withdraw, and therefore I shall say no more of him.

Act Magistrates of Edinburgh, about setting Houses, and against Beggars, 1683. App. No. 114. B. King's Letter Nov. 12. dispensing with an Act of Parliament.

October 28. the Town of Edinburgh pass a very good Act, for delivering their Streets from Beggars, and anent the setting Houses to any People who are not free in the Town, which I have annexed App. No. 114. B. and such is their Zeal, that in this Act they cannot but oblige all to whom Houses are set, to Conformity and Subjection to the Church. What offers next, is of far more Importance, and with it I must end what I have to give my Readers from the Council-registers. November 12. a very extraordinary Letter is read, dispensing with an Act of the very last Parliament, requiring the Commissioners of Supply to take the Test. Most Part of the Persons, if not all in the underwritten List, were Papists, in favours of those his own Friends, the King very frankly breaks through a Law, to which he had given his Assent a few Months ago. Such Steps need no Observations, they are what Protestants may expect from a bigotted Papist; and so I just insert the Council's Act, King's Letter, and List, as they stand in the Registers. The Letter underwritten directed from the King's most excellent Majesty to the Privy Council, for dispensing with some Persons, Commissioners for Supply, their taking of the Test, conform to the List therewith sent; being read, was ordered to be recorded, and an Act ordered accordingly to be transmitted to the Persons therein mentioned; and to the Conveners of the Commissioners of the respective Shires therein concerned; of which Letter and List the Tenor follows.

JAMES R.

Right-trusty, &c. We greet you well. Whereas in the 12 Act of Our current Parliament, intituled Act of Supply, there is a Clause ordaining all the Commissioners therein named, to take the Oaths and Test appointed by Law, which Clause We judge fit, for Our Service, to require you to put vigorously in Execution, excepting these in the List here inclosed, whom We have dispensed with from taking the same, and such as We shall hereafter dispense with under Our Royal Hand. For doing whereof this shall be your Warrant, and so We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the Seventh Day of November, 1685. and of Our Reign the First Year.

THE Duke of Gordon, the Earl of Seaforth, the Earl of Traquair, the Lord Oliphant, Richard Cockburn of Clerkington, Alexander Irvine of Drum, John Gordon of Rothemay, Patrick Lesly of Balquhain, Sir George Gordon of Gight, William Menzies of Pittfodells, James Innes of Drumgask, Adam Gordon of Auchmacoy, Francis Gordon younger of Craig, Mr. Alexander Irvine of Larny, Mr. Richard Irvine of Kinktown, the Laird of Fetterneir, the Laird of Wartle-lesly, Alexander Frazer of Kinnaries, Macdonald of Binbecula, Macdonald of Largy, Macdonald of Cassiltown, Patrick Gordon of Glasfyrum, John Grant of Ballindallach, James Gordon of Camdel, John Gordon of Balderny, Alexander Gordon of Auchintoul. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 7 Day of November, 1685. and of Our Reign the First Year.

By his Majesty's Command.

MELFORD.

Toward the End of this Year, several Prisoners in the Canongate Tolbooth, found Means to escape. I have no Account of the Circumstances; but December 3. the Advocate is appointed to process the Magistrates of Edinburgh for their Escape. No question they were free from any Accession, being modelled to the Mind of the Court, and they easily got off.

Prisoners Escaped out of the Canongate Tolbooth.

The Rage against Presbyterians was not confined at this Time to Scotland, but reached even to the banished Ministers in Holland, with such as had retired thither for Shelter, as Mr. James Veitch, Mr. Alexander Picairn, Mr. George Campbell, Mr. Patrick Warner, and others at this Time there, and they were brought to some Trouble. The Occasion, as one of them informs me, was this.

A Fellow who had called himself Robert Smith, in the Parish of Dunscore, and pretended to have been at Bothwell-bridge, endeavoured to bear in himself upon the weekly Meeting which those reverend Ministers, and others of the persecuted Scotsmen, had for Prayer at Rotterdam. He got in so far upon Mr. Grier, a very good Man, and Member of the Meeting, that Mr. Grier spoke to Mr. Warner, to propose Smith's Admission to the Meeting. Mr. Warner did not like his Forwardness to be admitted to the Meeting; and, upon Inquiry, found that Smith was very big with a Popish Captain, and suspecting he might be a Spy upon them, he so effectually crushed his Admission to the Meeting, that it was never proposed, and he was not out in his Fears.

The Ministers banished, and returned to Holland, and meet with Trouble there.

Towards the End of the 1683. Smith went over to London, and made a pretended Discovery of what he said he had pickt up anent the Plot, in an Information given at Whitehall, February 24. 1683. for which, though Doctor Sprat is pleased to deny this, I have no doubt he had Money. This Paper is published by the Doctor in the History of the Rye-house Plot, and contains a vast Number of Lies, which I wonder the Government perceived not. The Falshood of, being in part self-contradictory, and plainly disagreeable to many Facts they could not but know.

The Occasion of it, Mr. Robert Smith.

This unworthy Fellow, partly in Spite, and partly to get his Hire, informs of many Facts scandalously false. It is not worth while to go through them now. He pretends to have seen Mr. Warner in the Council of War at Bothwell-bridge, whereas, from Drumlogie to the Debat, he was scarce ever within Forty Miles of Bothwell. I imagine it hath been from this scandalous Information, that the Process formerly mentioned, against the Reverend Mr. John Sinclair, Minister of Ormiston, was taken, and several Articles in Ceshock and other worthy Patriots Processes, formerly noticed.

English Resident insists, that the Scots Ministers at Rotterdam be apprehended or removed.

Upon this Information, it seems, (for I can learn no other Foundation for it) this Year Orders were given to the English Resident in Holland, to insist with the State General, either to apprehend or remove those banished Ministers from Rotterdam, and their Dominions. Some Thing was done to stop the Clamour the Resident made; but Care was taken to advertise the Ministers of their Hazard, and they stept a little out of the Way. Those worthy Men were put to some Trouble in the foreign Land to which they were retired; but the Lord was with them, and delivered them, and in a little Time now, a Door was opened for their Return to Scotland, and their being singularly useful for their Redeemer's Kingdom there.

Persecution this Year without Parallel, save in France.

Thus at some Length I have gone through this bloody Year; and the Narrative given of the Severities committed during it, no doubt, will astonish the Reader, and give him a fuller View, than perhaps he had of the vile Popish Spirit of Persecution now raging in Britain, which indeed hath scarce any Parallel, unless it be the Counter-part of the same Plot, against the Reformation, breaking out in October this Year, by the Revocation of the Edict of Nantz in France, and the most ungrateful and utter razing of that once glorious and numerous Protestant Church, with the bloody dragooning Conversion which followed upon it. The Scene is not altogether so black during the Three following Years I am to account for, and I shall now very quickly come to an End of this melancholy and irksome History.

By the French King's Edict revoking that of Nantz.

Having mentioned this dismal Alteration in France, I take it not to be disagreeable to this Work, to give the Reader the French King's Edict, which ruined that dear and once reformed Church. It hath been once and again printed in most Languages in Europe; but probably it will not be unacceptable to a good many, into whose Hand this History may come, to have it here; and I shall adjoyn to it a Copy of the Articles, and Form of Abjuration of the Protestant Religion, imposed upon our Brethren in France, toward the End of this Year. Once I thought to have turned them over to the Appendix, but falling in the End of the Chapter, they will make no Break in the History; and they deserve a Room in the Body of it, were it but to awaken our Sympathy with the noble Confessors of our Sister Church, yet remaining after so long and black a Night as they have been under; and to quicken any who have Interest at the Throne of Grace, to redouble their ardent Supplications for them, and the Lord's cherishing the Effays and Struggles good Numbers there at this Time seem to be making, to wrestle from under the Yoke of Rome and Popery.

It ought not to escape our Remark, and might quicken us to a generous Concern in those Points, that the French King never ventured upon revoking the famous Edict of Nantz, whereof Britain is the undoubted Guarantee, till once our Throne was filled with a bigotted Papist, his own Creature. And probably the Revocation had been sooner made this Year, if the French Court, as was noticed, had not been alarmed at King James's Declaration at his Accension, and much more with his Speech to his first English Parliament.

But quickly the King threw off the Mask, and satisfied his Friends, he was hearty in his Design of ruining the Reformation: He broke with his Parliament, and acted like a sincere Papist, as he was. Then was the proper Juncture to fall upon the Reformed in France, and this was not delayed unnecessarily one Moment. I have, with Surprize, observed a considerable Agreement betwixt a Collection of Edicts, Arrests, and Acts against the Reformed in France, from the Year 1660 to the Year 1683. where the Recueil I have, ends; and the Acts of Council and Parliament in Scotland, mentioned in the former Part of this History. The Steps taken, the Penalties, and the very Phrases in both, do very much agree. And, generally speaking, the French King hath the Honour of Precedency in this severe and antichristian Work. Whether our People copied after him I cannot say; but the Harmony is such, one is almost forced to suspect it.

Edict revoking that of Nantz.

In the Edict I am now to insert, we have a Copy cast to the King of England, which, had he not been taken short and stopped, I doubt not he would have carefully copied, in an Act rescissory of all our Laws since James V. and Henry VIII's Time. But passing those Remarks, I come to give the Reader a Copy of the French Edict, englished by an eminent Presbyterian Minister lately got to Heaven, at this Time, if I mistake not, at Paris, and I know it is exact.

Edict by the King, discharging all publick Exercise of the pretended Reformed Religion, within his Kingdom.

‘ Lewis, by the Grace of God, King of France and Navarr, to all present and to come:
 ‘ Greeting. Forasmuch as Henry the Great, our Royal Grandfather, of glorious Memory, being desirous, that the Peace he had purchased for his Subjects, after the great Da-

Images they had sustained by the long Continuance of foreign and domestick Wars, might not be interrupted upon the account of the Religion which calls it self Reformed, as had happened in the Reigns of the Kings his Predecessors, did, by his Edict given at Nantz in the Month of April, in the Year 1598. regulate the Conduct that was to be used towards those of the foresaid Religion, determine the Places wherein they might be permitted to exercise the same, appoint Judges extraordinary in the Administration of Justice to them; and did moreover make Provision, by particular Articles, as to every Thing he thought necessary for maintaining the Quiet of his Kingdom, and to lessen the Aversion that was betwixt those of the one and the other Religion, to the end he might be in a better Capacity to endeavour that which he had resolved to do, the reuniting of those unto the Church who had so lightly departed from it.

And whereas the sudden Death of the King our foresaid Grandfather, put a Stop to the Accomplishment of his Intentions, and even the Execution of the Edict it self was interrupted during the Minority of the late King, our thrice honoured Lord and Father, of glorious Memory, by the renewed Enchroachment of those of the pretended Reformed Religion, by means whereof they occasioned themselves to be deprived of sundry Privileges that had been granted to them by the foresaid Edict.

Nevertheless the late King, our foresaid Lord and Father, out of his innate Clemency, granted to them a new Edict at Nismes, in the Month of July 1629. by means whereof the former Tranquillity was re-established; and the said late King being animated with the same Spirit for Religion, as our Royal Grandfather had been, did resolve to imploy that Peace for effectuating so pious a Design.

But foreign Wars falling out a few Years thereafter, so that from the Year 1635. till the concluding a Truce with the Princes of Europe in the Year 1684. the Kingdom hath seldom ever been free from Agitation; it hath not been hitherto possible to make any further Progress for the Advancement of the true Religion, except by diminishing the Number of the Places, where the pretended Reformed Religion was exercised, by condemning those which had been set up without Warrant from the Edicts, and suppressing the * bipartite Courts, which were erected provisionally only, and for a Season.

God having at length permitted our People to enjoy a perfect Quiet, and we being dispensed from the Care of protecting them against our Enemies, we purpose to take the Occasion of this Truce, which we were the more easily induced to grant, that we might apply our self to the Means of accomplishing with Success the Designs of our said Royal Grandfather and Father; the which we also have entertained ever since our coming to the Throne.

* The Chamber bret By parties consisted, the one Half of Protestant Judges, and the other of Catholick.

We now perceive, with due Acknowledgments to almighty God, that our Endeavours have attained the End which we proposed, in as much as the greater and better Part of our Subjects of the foresaid Religion, have embraced the Catholick Faith. And since hereby the Observation of the Edict of Nantz, and of whatever else may have been enacted in favour of the said pretended Reformed Religion, becomes unnecessary, we judged that we could in nothing contribute more effectually to the utter extinguishing the Remembrance of the Troubles, Confusion, and Mischiefs which the Growth of that false Religion hath raised in our Dominions, and which gave Occasion to the foresaid Edict, and so many other Edicts and Declarations that did precede, and were made in Consequence of the same, than by an absolute Revocation of the said Edict of Nantz, and of all the particular Articles that were granted pursuant thereunto, and generally of all that hath been done since in behalf of the said Religion. Therefore

I. We give to know, that we, for these Causes and others us thereto moving, of our own certain Knowledge, full Power, and Royal Authority, have by this present, perpetual, and irrevocable Edict, suppressed and revoked, likeas we suppress and revoke the Edict of our said Royal Grandfather, given at Nantz in the Month of April, in the Year 1598. in the whole Extent thereof, together with the particular Articles concluded upon the 2 of May following, and the Letters Patents passed thereupon; as also the Edict given at Nismes, in the Month of July 1629. All which we declare void and null, as if they had never been made. As likewise all Concessions granted either by them, or any other Edicts, Declarations, or Acts, to those of the foresaid Religion, of what Nature soever they may be; the which in like Manner shall be held as they never had been granted: And in pursuance hereof, we will, and it is our Pleasure, that all the Temples belonging to those of the foresaid Religion, situated within our Kingdom, Territories, Lands, and Dominions subject to our Obedience, be forthwith demolished.

II. We prohibit all our Subjects of the foresaid Religion, henceforth to assemble themselves for the Exercise of the said Religion, in any Place or House, upon any Pretext whatsoever, or even in those Places which they held by Right of Possession, or of ancient * Bailiage, notwithstanding the said Rights have been corroborated by Acts of our Council.

* See the 9 and 11 Articles of the Edict of Nantz.

1685.

III. We in like Manner prohibit all Lords of what Degree soever, to hold the foresaid Exercise in their Houses, Mannors of what Tenure soever they be; all which we discharge under the Pains of Confiscation of Body and Goods in case of Contravention.

IV. We enjoin all Ministers of the foresaid Religion, who refuse to turn and embrace the Catholick, Apostolick, Roman Religion, that within Fifteen Days after the Publication of this our Edict, they depart forth our Kingdom and Lands under our Obedience, and that they abide not therein after the aforesaid Term, and that during the said Space of Fourteen Days they make no Sermon, Exhortation, nor exercise any other Part of their Function under Pain of being condemned to the Gallies.

V. Our Will is, that those of the foresaid Ministers who shall turn, shall continue to enjoy, during their own Lifetime, and their Widows after their Decease, so long as they remain in Widowhood, the same Freedom and Immunity from Taxes and Quartering of Soldiers that they enjoyed while they exercised the Function of Ministers: And moreover, we shall cause to be paid to the said Ministers, during their Lifetime, a yearly Pension, which shall be one Third more than the Allowances they had as Ministers; the one Half of which Pension shall be paid to their Wives after their Death, so long as they remain in Widowhood.

VI. If any of the said Ministers shall desire to become Advocates, or take upon them the Degrees of Doctors in Law, our Will and Intention is that they be dispensed with as to the Three Years Study appointed by our Declarations, and that after having undergone the usual Examinations and are thereupon judged capable, they be received Doctors, paying only the Half of the Fees that use to be exacted on that Occasion in each University.

VII. We discharge all private Schools for the Instruction of the Children of the said Religion, and generally all Things whatsoever that may import any Manner of Concession or Grant in favour of the said Religion.

VIII. As for the Children who shall be born of those of the said Religion, we will that henceforward they be baptized by their respective Parochial Curates. And for that Effect, do enjoin the Fathers and Mothers to send them to Church, under the Pain of Five hundred Livres Fine, in case of Failure, and that the said Children be hereafter educated in the Catholick, Apostolick, and Roman Religion; the which we straitly charge the Judges of the respective Places, to see punctually performed.

IX. And that our Clemency may be extended to our Subjects of the said Religion, who have withdrawn out of our Kingdom, Territories, and Lands of our Obedience, before the Publication of this our present Edict, we will, and our Meaning is, that in case they will return within Four Months from the Date of this said Publication, they may, and it shall be leifom to them to re-enter upon the Possession of their Estates and Goods, and the same to enjoy in all Points, as they might have done if they had always remained therein. And on the contrary, that the Goods of those who within the foresaid Space of Four Months shall not return unto our Kingdom, or Lands of our Obedience, from which they have withdrawn, shall remain and be confiscated by virtue of our Declaration of the 20 of August last.

X. We do reiterate our most strict and peremptory Prohibition and Discharge, to all our Subjects of the pretended Reformed Religion, that they do not depart, they, their Wives, or Children, out of our Kingdom, Land, or Territories subject unto us, nor thence transport their Goods or Effects, under the Pain of being condemned to the Gallies, for the Men, and Confiscation of Body and Goods, for the Women.

XI. We will, and our Intention is, That the Declarations made against the Relapsed, be put in Execution, according to their full Form and Tenor.

XII. Moreover, they of the said Religion, may, till it shall please God to enlighten them as well as others, abide in the Cities and other Places of our Kingdom, Territories and Lands subject unto us, and there carry on their Commerce, and possess their Goods, without Trouble or Molestation upon the account of their said Religion: Provided always, as said is, That they do not exercise the same, nor assemble themselves under the Pretence of Prayers, or other Worship of what Nature soever, belonging to their said Religion, under the above exprest Pains of Confiscation of Body and Goods.

Herefore We give in Charge to our beloved and trusty Counsellors, the Judges in our Court of Parliament, Chamber of Accounts, and Court of Subsidies at Paris, Bailies, Sheriffs, Provosts, and others our Magistrates, to whom it appertains, and to their Lieutenants, that they cause be read, published and registered, this our present Edict, in their Courts and Jurisdictions, tho' in Time of Vacation; and that the same they receive, and cause to be received, kept, and punctually observed, without contravening, or suffering the same to be contravened, any manner of way. FOR SO IS OUR PLEASURE; and to the end the Matter may be firm and stable, We have caused append our Seal to these Presents. Given at Fountain-bleau, in the Month of October, the Year of Grace 1685. and in the Forty third Year of our Reign. 1685.

De la Bayne.

It is perfectly out of my Road to make any Observations upon this revocatory Edict. Abundance hath been written upon it, and the Reader hath this Matter ſet in a due Light, in the History of the Edict of Nantz, and many other Writings of the French Proteſtants. It may be of more Uſe to the Reader, to add the Articles, to which theſe who renounced the Reformation were obliged to ſubſcribe, and the Form of their abjuring the Proteſtant Religion, which was this Year printed in Engliſh, under this Title.

A true and exact Copy of the ſeveral Articles, together with the Form of the Abjuration of the Proteſtant Religion, and Confession of the Romiſh, impoſed upon the French Proteſtants, taken from the Original, in the Hands of Bonaventure Le Brun Notary Publick of Rouen, 1685.

The Profeſſion of the Roman Catholick Apoſtolick Faith.

IN the Name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghoſt, Amen. I A. B. do believe and confeſs with a firm Faith, all and every Thing contained in the Symbol of the Faith which the Roman Church doth uſe, Viz.

Profeſſion of the Roman Ca-

with the Abjuration of the Proteſtant.

I believe in one God, the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and of all Things viſible and inviſible: And in one Lord Jeſus Chriſt, the only begotten Son of God, Begotten of his Father before all Worlds, God of God, Light of Light, Very God of very God, Begotten, not made, Being of one Subſtance with the Father, By whom all Things were made: Who for us Men, and for our Salvation came down from Heaven, And was incarnate by the Holy Ghoſt of the Virgin Mary, And was made Man, And was crucified alſo for us under Pontius Pilate, He ſuffered and was buried, And the third Day he roſe again according to the Scriptures, And aſcended into Heaven, And ſitteth on the right Hand of the Father. And he ſhall come again with Glory to judge both the Quick and the Dead: Whoſe Kingdom ſhall have no End. And I believe in the Holy Ghoſt, The Lord and Giver of Life, Who proceedeth from the Father and the Son, Who with the Father and the Son together is worſhipped and glorified, Who ſpake by the Prophets. And I believe one Catholick and Apoſtolick Church. I acknowledge one Baptiſm for the Remiſſion of Sins, And I look for the Reſurrection of the Dead, And the Life of the World to come. Amen.

II. I own and embrace moſt firmly, the Apoſtolical and Eccleſiaſtical Traditions, and all other Observations and Conſtitutions of the ſaid Church.

III. Likewise I receive the holy Scripture, according to the Senſe which the holy Mother-church hath held, and doth hold, to whom it belongs to judge of the true Senſe and Interpretation of the ſacred Scriptures; and I will never take nor interpret it, but according to the unanimous Conſent of the Fathers.

IV. I confeſs alſo, that there are truly and properly Seven Sacraments of the new Law, inſtitute by Jeſus Chriſt our Lord, and neceſſary to the Salvation of Mankind, altho' all of them be not to every particular Perſon, viz. Baptiſm, Confirmation, the Eucharift, Penance, Extreme Unction, Orders, and Marriage; and that they do confer Grace; and that Baptiſm, Confirmation, and Orders, cannot be repeated without Sacrilege.

V. I receive and admit alſo the Ceremonies received and approved by the Catholick Church, in the ſolemn Adminiſtration of all the abovementioned Sacraments.

VI. I embrace and receive all and every Thing that hath been determined and declared, concerning original Sin and Juſtification, by the holy Synod of Trent.

VII. I like-

- VII. I likewise profess, that in the Mass there is offered to God, a true, proper, and propitiatory Sacrifice for the Quick and Dead; and that in the most holy Sacrament of the Eucharist, there is truly, really, and substantially, the Body and Blood, together with the Soul and Divinity, of our Lord Jesus Christ, and that there is made a Conversion of the whole Substance of the Bread into the Body, and of the whole Substance of the Wine into the Blood, which Conversion the Catholick Church calls Transubstantiation.
  - VIII. I also confess, that under one of the Two Kinds only, whole Christ Jesus and a true Sacrament is received.
  - IX. I stedfastly hold there is a Purgatory, and that the Souls there detained, are helped by the Prayers of the Faithful.
  - X. Likewise, that the Saints which reign together with Jesus Christ, are to be worshipped and invoked, and that they do offer Prayers to God for us, and that their Relics are to be honoured.
  - XI. I affirm most stedfastly, that the Images of Jesus Christ, and the Mother of God, always a Virgin, and also the other Saints, ought to be had and kept, and that the Honour and Worship due to them, is to be given them.
  - XII. I also certify, that the Power of Indulgences hath been left in the Church by Jesus Christ, and that the Use of them is most healthful to Christian People.
  - XIII. I acknowledge the holy, Catholick, Apostolick, and Roman Church, the Mother and Mistress of all Churches.
  - XIV. I promise and swear a true Obedience to the Roman Pontiff, Successor to the most blessed Peter, Prince of the Apostles, and Vicar of Jesus Christ.
  - XV. I likewise receive and profess, without any Doubt, all other Things, left, defined, and declared by the sacred Canons, and general Councils, and especially by the holy Synod of Trent.
  - XVI. And I likewise condemn, reject, and anathematize all Things contrary, and all the Heresies condemned, rejected, and anathematized by the Church.
- Then, swearing upon the holy Evangelists, must be said,*
- I A. B. promise, vow, and swear, to hold and confess most constantly, to the last Breath of my Life, (with God's Help) entire and inviolable, this same Catholick Faith, out of which none can be saved, which now I profess of my own accord, and most sincerely; and I will take Care, as much as in me lieth, that it may be kept, taught, and preached by those that are under me, and by those the Care of whom doth appertain to my Charge.
  - So help me God, and the holy Gospels. Amen

Form of Abjuration.

I A. B. of the Parish of L. do certify all whom it may concern, That having become sensible of the Falseness of the pretended Reformed Religion, and the Truth of the Catholick Religion, of my free Will, and without any Constraint, have made Profession of the Catholick, Apostolick, and Roman Religion, in the Church of L. in the Hand of P. In Testimony of which, I have signed this Deed, in the Presence of the Witnesses undernamed, this _____ Day of _____ in the Year _____

I P. Incumbent of the Church of L. in the Parish of L. in Rouen, do certify, That this Day, being the _____ of _____ in the Year _____ have received the Abjuration of the pretended Reformed Religion, and the Profession of the Catholick, Apostolick, Roman Faith, which A. B. of the Parish of L. made in my Hands, in Presence of C. D. and E. F.

Bonaventure le Brun Notar Publick, in the Palace-yard, Rouen.

This may let us see the Greatness of our Delivery at the late glorious Revolution, by the Hand of King William; and how much we were again brought under the greatest Debt to a kind Providence, by the seasonable Accession of our Sovereign King George to the Throne, when we were just upon the Brink of such Edicts, Professions, and Abjurations as those: And from them we ought to make an Estimate of the Lord's Goodness to poor Scotland, in blessing the Arms of his Majesty, under his gallant General and Commander in Chief, John Duke of Argyle, to the chasing of the Pretender to the Crown of these Realms, educated in the Faith just now set down, and so wedded to it, that he refused to be crowned, as I am informed, at Scone, till once he received the Pope's Grant of Britain and Ireland, in due Form, who, he said, had the only Power to dispose of Crowns.

'Tis People's Ignorance of the Villanies of Popery, and the lamentable State of those who are under their antichristian and inhumane Cruelties, makes them value our great Mercies so little, and have so little true Sympathy with our persecuted Brethren.

Of the State and Sufferings of Presbyterians, in the Year 1686.

THIS Year, and the following Two, do not afford such Instances of general Persecution, as the former and some preceeding Years. Some particular Examples of Inhumanities, as Occasions offered, and a few more Murders in the Fields, of which I have been able only to recover some short Hints, with the continued Procedure of the Justiciary, in more Forfeitures, upon the score of the Attempt of the Earl of Argyle, will make up the Bulk of what I am to lay before the Reader, upon the Sufferings of this Church, this Year.

Subject Matter of this Chapter.

But it would be unfit to overlook the grand Attempt made in Parliament, for overturning the Protestant Religion, by letting in Papists to Places of Trust. Some other Things will offer themselves, which, tho' they don't so nearly relate to the present Sufferings, yet they will lead us into the State of Presbyterians and Sufferers, during this Period, where I shall only hint at some few Matters of Fact, which I suppose are but little known.

The Reasons of the slackning of the Persecution this Year, as to some Branches of it, are many. After the Endeavours of the Prelates and their Adherents, so vigorously supported, as we have heard, for Twenty six Years, one needs not be surprized to find they had little Work to do.

Reasons of the slackning of the Persecution this Year.

Most Part of Presbyterian Ministers were banished, or had withdrawn; and very few were left. The Gentlemen and Heritors who favoured Presbytery, were either worn out by Death, forfeited, banished, or put under such Burdens as were equal to a Forfeiture; and little more could be done this way. The common People who had suffered so much during the former Years, were many of them cut off, transported to the Plantations, or mewed up in Prisons; and the rest so born down by the Soldiers, and Time-serving Persons, and wanted Ministers to preach to them, that they lived as privately as might be, essaying to pass this melancholy Time as much unobserved as they could; and a good many complied in some Things, and now and then heard some of the better Sort of the established Clergy, especially such who shewed themselves hearty Protestants, by opposing Popery now coming in so fast.

In short, except as to Church-irregularities, there was not much Ground for the Persecutors to work upon; yet still we are to consider the Sufferings of Presbyterians as continuing, by the lengthning out of many of the Evils formerly lying upon them, and the Persecution as remaining in every Thing wherein any serious Persons could be reached by the then Laws, and even beyond them.

Indeed the Society People, this and the succeeding Years, were hunted and harassed in the South and West, as far as they could be discovered. Their Hardships were indeed inexpressible, and their Preservations and Deliverances remarkable.

Mr. James Renwick was preaching here and there, as he best could, in retired Places; but his falling in with the Tenets, Declarations, and Heights, which the Generality of Presbyterians could not approve of, his being necessarily led by his Followers, to some Things he would not otherwise have gone into, instead of leading them, and their setting up against all the remaining Presbyterian Ministers, indulged and not indulged, kept the most Part of Presbyterians from joyning with him; yet, by the Papers I have seen, and the Accounts I have, I am well assured, Mr. Renwick and some with him, laboured hard to bring his Followers from several Heights they had run to; and it is plain, he smoothed many Things in their publick Papers, and moderated some Things in their publick Actings, especially after Mr. Shiels joyned him.

In short, though the Violence against Presbyterian Ministers and their Followers, for Conscience sake, was nothing, strictly speaking, abated, yet the Project for introducing of Popery, by removing the penal Statutes, and granting a Toleration to Papists, when that did not succeed, made it convenient, that there should be some little superseding of the more overt, open, and common Acts of Violence, Rapin, and Bloodshed, so frequent for some Years, the more to cover their specious Pretext of easing tender Consciences, though every one who was not blind might see, that all the Relaxation this way, was only designed for the Advantage of the King's Religion.

All the Respite then at this Time, was either from mere Necessity, and Want of Objects to work upon, through their preceeding Barbarity, or designed to cozen and cheat all who had any warm Side to the Protestant Religion, to go into, or, at least, not oppose the Jesuitical Measures the King was entring upon, for the total Ruin of the Reformation.

My Narrative then of this Year, shall come under the Heads of the Persecution continuing through the Country, the remarkable Procedure of the Parliament; and I shall bring in the State of the Society People, and some other Things relative to this Year, in a Section by themselves.

S E C T. I.

Of the Procedure of the Justiciary, Murders in the Fields, and other Branches of the Persecution, this Year 1686.

The lamentable Circumstances of the Sufferers in this Period.

IT is the publick and barbarous Violences, Tortures, publick Executions, and Murders in cold Blood, that will leave the frightful Impressions of the Blackness of this Time I have been describing, most sensibly upon the Spirit of the Readers; but a little Thought and Reflection upon the Circumstances of Multitudes of other Presbyterians, who escaped those, will discover them to be most lamentable.

Their silent Sabbaths, the Struggle they had before they could partake of, and the sensible Uselessness attending the Dispensation of Ordinances by the Episcopal Clergy, the daily Distress and Terror that was upon their Minds, together with the lamentable Prospect they had of their Posterity's being brought up in Ignorance and Profanity, and under the Want of the Gospel purely dispensed, were not easy to them; yea, in some Measure, more bitter than bodily Torture and Death. They had, in short, the daily Views of an Introduction of the Blackness of Darknes of Popery, to which Prelacy and such horrid Persecution had paved the Way.

Contents of this Section.

Besides all this, common to all-Presbyterians this and the Two following Years, the Justiciary went on in their Forfeitures, mostly upon Argyle's Attempt. The Findings for Nonconformity in some Places, were very exorbitant: And we shall meet with some other Particulars of the continuing Persecution, Murders in the Fields, and other Instances of Severity; and in this Section I shall give the Reader some View of these.

Indictment against the Duke of Monmouth, Saltoun, and the Lord Stair.

I begin with a short Hint of what is remarkable in the criminal Books, just according to their Dates, as they offer. December 21. last Year, the Advocate intents a Process against the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth, Fletcher of Saltoun, and the Lord Stair, and a very long Indictment is given in against them, and read. We may easily guess what was to be charged upon the First, and we have had the Sum of the Libels against the other Two formerly.

Process against the Duke of Monmouth deceased.

To begin with the Duke of Buccleugh, he is delayed till January 4. and then to February 15. when the Duke of Buccleugh and Monmouth deceased, is forfeited for Converse with Sir John Cochran and his Son, Westshiels and Cultness, forfeited Rebels, for joyning in out-rigging Three Ships with the late Earl of Argyle, and landing in England upon the last of June 1685. at Lyn, and taking on him the Title of King, and resisting his Majesty's Forces; for all which he was executed the Day of July last.

Fletcher of Saltoun.

January 4. the Lord Stair's Process is delayed till April next, and the Lords enter upon Saltoun's Process. The Advocate restricts his Libel, to his invading England with the late Duke of Monmouth and Buccleugh, and it is remitted to an Affize. Two Witnesses are adduced: The First depones, he knew the Laird of Saltoun, and saw him come to England and invade it; the other, that he saw and knew one so called, come to England in a Ship with the Duke of Monmouth, and saw him with Arms. Another Declaration is adduced, emitted in Newgate, which was offered to be attested upon Oath. The Affize bring him in guilty. The Lords sentence him to be executed to Death, and demeaned as a Traitor, and undergo the Pains of Treason, when apprehended.

Sir James Dalrymple of Stair.

Sir James Dalrymple of Stair is delayed from April to July, when, July 12. the Lords delay him till November, no further Probation being discovered against him. In November, he is continued till January next Year. In February his Son is made King's Advocate, and it had not been decent for the Son, to manage a criminal Process against so good a Man, and Father; and therefore, that Day when he is admitted, the Father's Process is delayed till March 28. When

When a Remission is produced, read and recorded, to Sir James Dalrymple of Stair, for his refecting, harbouring, and receiving Mail and Duty from Rebels and Traitors, upon his Ground, in the Years 1679, 80, 81, 82, 83. John Dick in Banban, Quintin Dick in Dalmeilington, and many others; and for refecting and harbouring Mr. Alexander Lennox, Mr. Alexander Rost, Mr. Alexander Pedin, and Mr. Alexander Hamilton, vagrant Preachers, and suffering them to preach, and baptize Children in his House, and for his drawing a Petition for, and advising some of the Rebels.

January 4. the Advocate produceth an Indictment, upon the score of Rebellion, against Campbels and others. There are a vast many Persons put together in this Indictment, upward, I think, of Fourscore; most Part are Gentlemen of the Name of Campbell. I name but some of them of most Note. Sir Duncan Campbell of Auchinbreck, Campbell of Barbreck, Mr. Archibald Campbell Son to Lord Neil Campbell, whom we had forfeited before, and how he comes in again here I know not; Campbell younger of Melfort, Campbell of Knap, Mr. Alexander Campbell Advocate, Campbell of Kilberry younger, Alexander Macmilan of Drummoir, David Macneil of Crier, Duncan Campbell of Carridel, Alexander Campbell of Otter, Major Henryson, Captain John Fullartoun, Mr. George Wishcart ( I fancy it ought to be Barclay ) Preacher, Mr. Alexander Hastie Preacher, Robert Elphinstoun of Lapness, Captain John Henry, Patrick Campbell, commonly called black Patrick, Patrick Mackater of Inchrennie, Archibald Maclevernock of Oab, Iver Maciver, alias Campbell, of Aishnish, Campbell of Eavnathan, Campbell of Kildalvan, Ker of Kerstrand younger, John Campbell of Dargachie, Robert Campbell his Brother, Dugal Macavish of Dunardrie, Alexander Mackarter Captain to the late Argyle.

There is nothing of Probation against those Persons in the Registers, but they are remitted to an Affize, who bring them in as guilty of being in the Rebellion, with the late Earl of Argyle; and the Lords sentence them to be executed and demeaned as Traitors, when apprehended, in common Form.

That same Day, the criminal Action against Mr. Thomas Forrester Minister, John Guthrie, Alexander Campbell of Sonnachan, John Nisbet, Dugal Maclevernock of Ardnasick, tor alledged Accession to the late Rebellion, is continued, and I meet with no more about them. And Hugh Campbell, Brother to John Campbell of Dargachie, deserted simpliciter, as being eminently serviceable to the King, being employed as a Spy by Montrose's Chamberlain.

January 18. Duncan Campbell of Allangreg younger, confesseth his Accession to the late Earl of Argyle's Rebellion, casts himself on the King's Mercy. He, with his Father Colin Campbell of Allangreg, are sentenced to be executed July 9. at the Crois of Edinburgh; but Remissions were got by that Time. And December 7. Campbell of Balnavie, Campbell of Dana, Campbell of Balgaltro, Maclachlan of Barnagad, Maclachan of Dunnad, and Colin Campbell of Blairn-tibbert, are sentenced to be executed and demeaned, &c. in common Form. This is all I meet with as to the Gentlemen concerned with Argyle this Year. We shall meet with some more next Year. It was their Estates now they were seeking more than their Blood.

I find this Year Two other Processes before the Justiciary, for alledged Accession to Bothwell, and other Heads. March 1. David Robertson Writer in Cowpar, is indicted for being in the Rebellion 1679. and his framing and affixing upon the Kirk-door of Darsie, a Paper disclaiming the King, and calling the late King Charles a Tyrant. Not compearing he is declared Fugitive, and put to the Horn.

And upon July 14. Gavin Weir in Waterside, in the Parish of Lesmahago, in Prison for the Rebellion 1679. and no Probation appearing, the Lords liberate him; and William Macmillan in Barbreck, upon Promise judicially never to rise in Arms against the King, upon the Pretext of the Covenant, or any other Pretext whatsoever, and that he should orderly keep his Parish-church, and upon his owning Bothwell-bridge to be Rebellion, is liberate.

Many were the Fines and exorbitant Exactions made this Year and the following, upon the poor Country, for not coming up the full Length the Episcopal Ministers would have them. I have not laid out my self so much to recover the Accounts might be had of those Fines, all the Particulars would be endless and wearisom.

There is before me a well vouched Account from the Parish of Calder, of Fines uplifted by William Stirling, Bailie-depute of the Regality of Glasgow, this Year, and some of them perhaps in the Two following Years.

Those, and many other Sums were uplifted by the said Bailie-depute of the Regality, who obtained the Gift of the Fines for Church-irregularities in that Parish, from all who were not Heritors, and exacted upwards of a Thousand Pounds Scots from the poorer Sort of People, without any legal Citation, Trial or Sentence, only sending for whom he pleased by his Officer, and when they came, threatned them with present Imprisonment, to ly there till they rotted, unless they promised, and of many he took a Note, to bring him in such a Sum of Money against such a Day; and they behoved to come home, glad to escape present Imprisonment, and sell their Cow or Horse, or Produce of their Acre of Land, to get Money to pay him. The most Part of those Persons had lived regularly for some Years; and it was for alledged Irregularities, a good many Years ago, for which those Fines were imposed; and it was only the poorer Part of the Parish he attacked; the Tenants of the Laird of Keir, and other Gentlemen who could protect their Tenants, he did not meddle with, though many of them were equally involved with the former, in what was now termed Guilt.

These Sums indeed are but comparatively small; but when we consider that they were imposed upon poor Country Tradesmen, Cottars, &c. and that but in a few Country Towns in that Parish, the Reader may easily reckon what prodigious Sums were lifted generally through the Country, where such Fines were exacted with the same Rigour.

Plundrings and Oppressions of that kind were very common this Year; I shall scarce enter upon them. In the Parish of Dalry in Galloway, Three good Men had gone into a retired Place of a Wood, to spend some Time in Prayer together. One of them under remarkable Enlargement, had extended his Voice so that at some Distance he was heard; and a Party of Soldiers coming by, noticed the Voice, and came to it as softly as they could. When they drew near, they observed Three Men upon their Knees, and straightway, without giving them any Warning, or endeavouring to seize them, they discharged their Pieces upon them. It pleased the Lord none of the Three were touched, but got off, and the Soldiers soon lost them in the Wood. However, such was the Soldiers Activity in Persecution, that they went to the next House, and enquired to whom the Wood belonged, and the Grounds about, and plundred the Houses as resetting those Men, and brought the Heritors to much Trouble.

January this Year, a Party of the Soldiers searching the Country, for which they never wanted Pretexes, came to the Parish of Stonehouse in Lanerk Shire, and carried away Eight Men and Two Women Prisoners, for alledged hearing an outed Minister. The Two Women had each of them sucking Infants on their Breast, and so savage were these People, that when the Mothers were carried away, by no Means would they suffer them to take with them their Infants, but behoved to leave them to the Care of Providence, and charitable Neighbours.

About the same Time Halyards fearfully oppressed the neighbouring Parish of Glasford, particularly Janet Scot a Widow Woman, Mother, as I am told, to John Semple formerly mentioned: Her House was plundred, and Plenishing spoiled, merely because it was alledged her Son had been at Bothwell.

Towards the Beginning of this Year, great Numbers of worthy Gentlemen, who had ventured over with Argyle, or favoured his Design, were forced to hide or wander up and down under great Hardships, and some of them to live in Caves and Dens of the Earth, and retired Places; others were put to vast Charges, to get Access to any small Part of their own Estates in the Hands of the Managers.

And

Three Men attacked when at Prayer, in the Parish of
Dalry.

Mothers made Prisoners, and parted from their sucking Infants.

And the rest of the Presbyterian Gentlemen, who had no Access to favour the Earl when he made his Attempt, whom we left in Prison at Edinburgh, and others paid this Year prodigious Sums, as Compositions of their Fines, really Forfeitures and Impositions equal to them. However, there was some preaching of the Gospel here and there, by Presbyterian Ministers, but very privately, which was a sweet Balance to the sore Distresses now so common. I find it observed, that last Year and this, Mr. George Barclay, Mr. Robert Langlands, Mr. George Guthrie, Mr. John Black, and Mr. Duncan Campbell, preached sometimes in retired Places in Galloway. 1686.

This Summer the Soldiers were sent to several Places through the West Country, to quarter, upon no pretended Fears or Faults, but merely to oppress and bear down such Places of the Country, as hitherto had not been brought up to a full Conformity. Great Losses by quartering of Soldiers this Summer.

Major Douglas came and formed a Camp in the Parish of Dalmeintoun, where a far greater was last Year. Some Soldiers were sent some time before the rest, to guard the Meadow Grounds, that the Possessors might not cut or eat them. The Major had with him Six Troops of Horse, and Four of them for Three Weeks were upon free Quarter, without any Reason for it; one of them in Monnivey, another in Overlaight, another in Netherlaight and Dunaskies, and the Fourth in Laffin-hill. I need not enter upon the Damages done to the Inhabitants, several of whom were sorely spoiled the very last Year, as we heard.

A Bond of Regularity was violently urged by many Noblemen and Gentlemen this Year, much in the Terms of the Act already noticed in Queensberry's Parliament; and a good many fell about renewing their Tacks, as ordered by that Parliament. By this Bond insert in their Tacks, the Country People were obliged to subject to Ordinances dispensed in their own Parish-church, pay Cess, and subject to every Imposition that came about. This was a new Occasion of Sufferings to great Numbers in the West and South, and very many refused such Tacks. Bond of Regularity pressed.

In December this Year, David Steil in the Parish of Lismahago, was surpris'd in the Fields by Lieutenant Creighton, and after his Surrender of himself on Quarters, he was in a very little Time most barbarously shot, and lies buried in the Church-yard there. This is all I shall notice upon the Persecution this Year. I come now to the Procedure of the Parliament. David Steil in Lismahago, shot in the Fields, December this Year.

S E C T. II.

Of the Proceedings of the Parliament, which met April 29. this Year, with the Disappointment of the Project for rescinding the penal Statutes.

MY Accounts of the Parliaments since the Restoration, have, no doubt, been melancholy and unpleasant to the Readers. In all their Acts relative to Church-affairs, they were Tools to the Prelates; and after the Council had assumed a parliamentary Power, and made Experiments how the rigid and extraordinary Methods would do, the Parliament, as we have seen, then used to meet and turn the Actings of the Prelates and Council into standing Laws, and continual Burdens upon the Lieges. Remark on the Procedure of our Parliaments since the Restoration.

This Course of Things had given Ground to expect, that this Session of Parliament would pay the same Deference to the King's declared Will, which the preceeding Parliament had shewn to that of the Council and Prelates; but they have the Honour to make the first gallant Stand to the Court Measures, at least in Point of our holy Religion, and Reformation that hath been made since the Return of King Charles II. therefore I shall give as full a Deduction of their Procedure, especially as to the penal Statutes, as my Materials offer me, earnestly wishing to see a larger and better Account of this, by some better Hand.

In March it came to be known, that the Parliament was to meet next Month, and the Design of it, to repeal the penal Statutes, was made no Secret of. No Stone was left unturned, to prevail with the Members to fall in with the King's Design. I cannot give so distinct Accounts of the Carriage of the Episcopal Clergy at this Time, as I could wish: But this I am well informed of, that several of the inferior Clergy in a good many Places of the Country, some time after this, when the King, by his Letter, ordered an Indulgence to Presbyterian Ministers, did begin to preach upon the Popish Controversies, and warn their People of the Hazard the Protestant Religion was in. But too many of them took this Occasion to vent their groundless Spleen against the Presbyterian Ministers, who, with the greatest Freedom, did guard their Hearers against Popery; and some of them we shall hear were criminally pro- The Design of this Parliament. The Carriage of the Episcopal Clergy at this Juncture.

1686. proceſſed for ſo doing. But what they did before, and during the ſitting of the Parliament, I have little Information. However, I ſhall carefully inſert what I have.

Many of the moſt noted of the eſtabliſhed Clergy in the moſt eminent Charges, were brought over to the Court Meaſures, or at leaſt to be ſilent at this Juncture. Too many of them had gone intirely off the Doctrine formerly taught in Scotland, not only in Times of Preſbytery, but even by themſelves, and in former Times of Epiſcopacy, and were deeply tinctured with Arminianism, and other Errors; and ſeverals, either through Ignorance or ſomewhat worſe, were running headlong into a great many Popiſh Tenets; and the Bulk of the inferior Clergy through the Country, were groſſly ignorant, ſupinely negligent, and too many of them ſcandalous and profane, as appeared undeniably at and after the Revolution. From thoſe, no Stand could be expected againſt Popery in its blackeſt Shapes.

Address of the Synod of Aberdeen to their Bishop, April
this Year.

The Lords of the Clergy were a mixed Company, and ſome few of them made a Stand in Parliament, as we ſhall ſee; but, excepting that Branch of Appearance of ſome of the Biſhops, the only Teſtimony given from the Clergy I have met with, againſt this opening the Door to Popery, was from the Synod of Aberdeen. They met in April, and after ſome Struggle, with a Party who were for boating with every Wind and Tide, they agreed on the following Addreſs, which I inſert here, as their commendable Teſtimony againſt the Attempt to be made in Parliament.

To the right Reverend Father in God, George Lord Biſhop of Aberdeen,

The humble Addreſs of the Dioceſe of Aberdeen.

May it pleaſe your Lordſhip,

WE look upon it as a favourable Providence, that we have this Opportunity of meeting with your Lordſhip, before your going to Parliament. The Conſtancy of our Loyalty, both as to our Principles and Practices, is known to all, and, God willing, we ſhall continue in it. We need not tell your Lordſhip, what Apprehenſions there are of the Hazard of the true Proteſtant Religion in this Church, ſeeing there is ſo great Fear of loſing the legal Securities of it, by taking off or weakening the Force of the penal Statutes againſt the Papiſts, which we look upon as one of the Hedges thereof.

We cannot perſwade our ſelves, that your Lordſhip, or any other of the Governors of the Church, will conſent thereunto, were it no more, but when we conſider the great Obligations that ly upon all Perſons in publick Capacity, by the late ſolemn Oath and Teſt, wherein they and we have liſted up our Hands to the eternal God, and ſworn not only to adhere to the Proteſtant Religion all the Days of our Life, but never to conſent to the Alteration thereof, or any Thing contrary thereunto; as alſo to the utmoſt of our Power, to maintain the Privileges of his Majeſty, and his lawful Succeſſors, which cannot but be highly prejudged, if the Nation ſhould be leavened with Popiſh Principles.

But whatever any may do, we judge our ſelves humbly obliged in Conſcience, to intreat and obteſt your Lordſhip, that as you tender the Honour of Jeſus Chriſt, the Interests of our holy Religion, your Duty to the King and his lawful Succeſſors, the Obligation of your Office and Truſt, and the Reputation of your Order, not to give Conſent to any ſuch Alteration.

The Eye of God is upon you, and the Eyes of the World alſo, at this Juncture of Time, and we have juſt Ground to preſume, that your ſtanding vigorously for the Preſervation of the eſtabliſhed Laws, may be of great Conſequence for the End foreſaid; but whatever may be the Iſſue, we ſhall have Peace in this, we have diſcharged our own Conſciences, leaving this humbly to your Lordſhip's Conſideration; and it is and ſhall be our earneſt Prayer to almighty God, to direct your Lordſhip, and all concerned in this weighty Affair.

I am much a Stranger to the Biſhop's Character, but there is no Hazard in putting the beſt of Men in mind of their Duty, and having it preſſed upon them; but one would think ſome Terms in this Addreſs import, that their Dioceſan needed this honeſt and free Advice given him.

Parliament
meet April 29.

Upon the 29 of April, the Parliament convened at Edinburgh, and there was a numerous Meeting of all the Three Eſtates. I have already noticed, that the King's Deſign, and conſequently the Commiſſioner and Courtiers Work was to reſcind the penal Statutes and Laws made againſt Papiſts ſince the Reformation, and ſo often ratified, even laſt Seſſion of Parliament, if I may call ſuch an Act a Ratification, that ſo the Popiſh King might be the more at Liberty, to fill all the civil Poſts and Places of Truſt with Papiſts.

Obſerves on the Laws
againſt Papiſts,
as they ſtood
at this Time.

Thoſe Laws indeed had been very little executed for 26 Years. The Zeal of the Prelate and Government had ſpent it ſelf againſt Preſbyterians, yet ſtill they were Laws, and is ſtanding standing Force, and a considerable Bar in the Way of a Popish Prince, and such who were willing to serve him in all his Designs. 1686.

The most vigorous and cutting Laws against Papists and Popery, ever made in Scotland, those, 'twixt the 1639 and 1650. were long since rescinded; and our National Covenant, as well as the Solemn League, our great Bulwarks against Popery, had been treated with all the Spite and Ignominy Men could contrive.

Our fundamental Constitution was broke in upon, and our Laws already invaded by a Papist's mounting the Throne, and the Tide of the Times had been running most impetuously against Presbytery, and Presbyterians the most hearty Opposers of Popery; so that on the whole it might have been naturally enough expected, especially from such a Parliament, that some further Acts of Favour would have been shewn to the King's Friends, and Fellow-idolaters. But the Lord would have it otherwise.

To facilitate the King's Project, his Letter to the Parliament was read. I have annexed, App. No. 115. a Copy of his Majesty's Letter, with the Earl of Murray's Speech as Commissioner, and the Parliament's Answer to the King's Letter. How it comes that the Earl of Perth, now Chancellor, had not a Speech, or if he had, that it is not printed, I cannot say. Now, I suppose, he had declared himself Papist, and it was not altogether decent, that a profest Papist should have a Speech in behalf of his own Party. The Letter is printed by the King's express Command, which is not so very ordinary; but it might be now necessary that all should know what his Majesty expected for his beloved Roman Catholics.

King's Letter
and Commissioner's Speech,
App. No. 115.

I shall make some Remarks upon it. The King compliments them upon last Year's Supply, sets them up as Patterns of Loyalty to England and Ireland, both now, and in his former Difficulties; when indeed, Scotland screened him from the Defenders of Liberty and Religion, in England. As a Return to their Services, the King tells them, he was, with all imaginable Application, essaying to open a free Trade with England. It would seem now projected upon some other Foot, than an Union, so often projected in vain.

Remarks upon the King's Letter.

He adds, that he had sent down to be passed in their Presence, A full and ample Indemnity, for all Crimes committed against his Royal Person and Authority. No such Indemnity is to be found in the printed Acts of this Session. A Pardon for the Commons in the Shire of Argyle, we shall meet with in September; but the Parliament are either to be blamed for marring this Act of Grace, or, which I rather believe, found it really suspended on such Conditions, and clogged with such Weights, that the Subjects were as well without it. Thus, for any Thing I can learn, it dwindled away into the Pardon to the common Highlanders, from whom they had taken all they had to lose. I imagine this Indemnity was like the Pope's Indulgences, which take no Effect, unless People come up to their Price, as appears from what follows in the Letter.

His Majesty's Inclinations to Mercy seem to have been suspended upon the Favours to be shewn to the Papists: Thus he adds, And while we shew those Acts of Mercy to the Enemies of our Person, Crown, and Dignity, we cannot be unmindful of others our innocent Subjects of the Roman Catholick Religion. This was what might be expected, and one good Reason why all good Protestants could not but be against his Accession to the Crown and Dignity; but how far he had reason to term them his innocent Subjects, ought to be considered. Innocent they were, no doubt, as to any Opposition to his Accession, or Practices against what they reckoned, and really was their greatest Interests as Papists; but sure they were not innocent in other Respects. Their avowed Principles lead them to the greatest Villanies and Wickedness Men can perpetrate, and their Practices never disagreed when they had Opportunity. Since the Reformation they had been in a continued Plot for overturning our Religion and Liberty, and bringing Scotland under a foreign Yoke. They had been the Springs and Authors of many Evils, for many Years, and most bitter Instruments in all the Massacres, Blood, and Persecution of those Times, as they had Access; and it was their constant Practice to divide and disjoyn Families and Societies, and to sheath every Man his Sword in his Brother's Breast; to say nothing of the personal Vices and Profanities, which, alas! were equalled by too many who called themselves Protestants.

The King, or some pretended Protestant, who for him penned the Letter, adds, The Roman Catholics had, with the Hazard of their Lives and Fortunes, been always assistant to the Crown, in the worst of Rebellions and Usurpations, tho' they lay under Discouragements hardly to be named. I could name very good Catholics, who joyned with the Country against the Crown, when encroaching upon the Laws of the Kingdom, and Liberty of the Subject. We had a good Number of Papists joyning against Queen Mary, the Mother and the Daughter, and some few since that Time, who have preferred the Interest of the Country to the Designs of a Court; though, I must own, their Religion, which leads to downright Slavery, was not the Reason of it. Upon the other Hand, we find them so far from assisting the Crown, that they have been in a continual Plot against it, generally speaking. Every Body knows what Plots they were engaged in while King James VI. was in Scotland; and that the monstrous Gun-powder Plot was projected, and very near executed by them. And whether the present King knew of their blowing the Coal of the civil War, and their Share even in his Father's Death, I shall not say; but sure he was not ignorant of their Designs once and again against his Brother's Life, and he himself best knew how far they helped him to his Grave. But this being for holy Mother Church, and in order to his own Accession to the Crown, it may be, some reckoned it an assisting him, as indeed it was in the worst of Rebel-lions and Usurpations. It is certainly Matter of Fact, that in some Sense, during his Father and Brother's Reigns, a good many Roman Catholicks were very assitant to the Crown, and stuck by them in levying War against some of the best of their Subjects; but then it was their unhappy falling in with Popish Measures, which broke them and their good Subjects, and it could not but be expected, the Papiits would assist in their own Quarrel. This much I'll venture to say, that when King and Court were heartily against Popery and Papiits, they never had any Disturbance but what came from the Roman Catholicks. As to what is added, Although they ly under Discouragements can hardly be named, it is undoubtedly true, if it be understood of the Smalness of them. Their Discouragements since the Restoration, especially since this Popish King's Accession, were indeed inconsiderable; they had some Laws against them unrepealed, but these were far from being executed, and many Papiits were in the highest Places of Trust and Power.

Those the King heartily recommends to the Parliament's Care, to the end, that as they have given Experience of their true Loyalty, so by the Parliament's Assistance, they may have the Protection of the Laws, and Security under the Government, which other Subjects have, and not be suffered to ly under Obligations which their Religion cannot admit of. It is but reasonable to expect such a Request from a Popish Prince; but methinks, it runs pretty high, that they should not only have the Protection of the Law, which they already had in civil Things and Rights, 'twixt Man and Man, but the same Security, and to be put on the same Foot with other Subjects, tho' they be of the King's Religion, when by their Religion and Principles they were obliged to destroy, and keep no Faith with them. I do not know what Obligations they were under, which their Religion could not admit of; for if they lived peaceably and blamelessly, there were no Obligations required of them. But, aut Cesar aut nihil, there was a Test in the way of their possessing all the profitable Offices and Trusts, and this Bar they would have out of their Way.

All this is expected as a Demonstration of the Parliament's Duty to the King, where that lies is hard to perceive; but I cannot doubt of what follows, and their Affection for him, and acceptable Service to him. This Love the King expects they will shew unto their Brethren, as they see he is an indulgent Father to them all. They are mightily obliged to their Father's Indulgence, for bringing in his butchering Children their bastard Brethren, and making them Heirs and Portioners with the Bairns of the House.

The Letter ends with Commendations of the Earl of Murray, present Secretary and Commissioner to this Parliament, and a Promise, That the particular Concerns of every Member of Parliament, should be especially regarded, and Expressions of Royal Favour bestowed upon them, only, it seems, upon their falling in with the King's Inclinations; for he thus concludes, So not only expecting your Compliance with us, no doubt in repealing the penal Statutes, but that by the Manner of it, you will shew the World your Readiness to meet our Inclinations; we bid you most heartily Farewel. That is to say, he expects implicate Obedience, and that they will make no Difficulties, nor presume to trouble him and his Commissioner with Reasonings upon this Head, so much at his Heart.

Upon the Commissioner's Speech.

This peremptory Letter from the King, was followed with a very smooth Speech from the Earl of Murray, which is added in the last named Number of the Appendix. It consists mostly in a Resumption of the Heads of the King's Letter. To curry Favour with them, he signifies, that the King's Envoy in France, was instructed to have the Fifty Souz per Tun, upon Scots Goods there, discharged, and the Privileges of Scots Merchants there, restored. And had the French King been ever guilty of Gratitude, it might have been expected, somewhat might have been done this way, to gratify the Subjects of a King who was his obedient Servant, and closely pursuing his Design of rooting out the Northern Heresy. He adds, that his Instructions bear him to consent unto the Redress of the Merchants Grievances, as to their Staple-trade with the Netherlands, the Abuses in importing Irish Cattle and Victual, the Want of an open Mint, and all the Oppressions of Com-military Courts. He acquaints them, his Master is to demand no more Supplies at this Time, and no wonder, since last Year they had prevented him this Trouble; and that he is willing to regulate the Soldiers, in their local and transient Quarterings upon the Country; where a certain Truth is owned from the Throne, that there had been great Irregularities and Oppressions committed this way. What he adds seems no great Compliment to his Master, That which will surprize you, is, That the King is willing to pardon and forgive the Crimes of such as have behaved undutifully; and then harangues upon the Indemnity he was instructed to pass, and comes to the great Thing in View, the Ease and Security the King designs for Papiits, by their Advice, of which enough hath been said.

And the Parliament's Answer to the King's Letter.

This Session of Parliament was not so forward and quick in answering his Majesty's Letter, as last Year. The Inclinations of a great many in the House, as to the grand Point, Point, were not altogether so passive and submissive as was expected; and the Reader will remark in their Return to the King's Letter, added likewise in the last Number of the Appendix, that they were not willing to prelimit themselves by any Compliment in their Return to his Majesty. So after some Struggle with the Courtiers, upon the 6 of May, they came in to this safe Clause. 'As to that Part of your Majesty's Letter, relating to your Subjects of the Roman Catholick Religion, we shall, in obedience to your Majesty's Commands, and with Tenderness to their Persons, take the same into our serious and most dutiful Consideration, and go as great lengths therein as our Consciences will allow, not doubting that your Majesty will be careful to secure the Protestant Religion.' This is the first Time since the Restoration, I remember, that the Parliament speak of their Conscience; and instead of passing an Act in favour of Religion, as was ordinary in every Parliament, they become humble Suiters, that a Popish King may preserve it, and carefully secure it.

Such Beginnings were no good Omen to the Commissioner, who met with considerable Rubs in the Way of his main Errand. Indeed he was not idle during the first Month, in closetting Members, and using both Threats and Promises to bring them in to his Master's Measures; and yet could not prevail with the most part of the Nobility and Gentry, to suffer the Hedge about the Reformation to be taken down. I have Accounts from a worthy Nobleman yet alive, of the daily Messages sent to him, and various Offers, and most advantageous Proposals made, as well as severe Threatnings used, if he did not come up to what the King had so much at Heart, and had interested himself so openly in. But his Lordship, with many worthy Patriots, made a gallant Stand, and lost several considerable Posts in the State and Army, for their stedfast Adherence to our legal Securities against Popery.

The repealing the penal Statutes proposed by many of the Nobility and Gentry.

It was but Two or Three at most of the Bishops, who had the Courage to oppose the Court in this important Affair. Some of them ashamed to appear in so black a Cause, chose to be silent, or withdraw. The rest, contrary to their Oath, Office, and plain Interest, fell in with the King's darling Design, and my Informations bear, the chief of them were active for the Removal of the penal Statutes, which heightened the Aversion the Nation had for them. I hear Bishop Atkin of Galloway, an old Man, made a noble Stand, and died shortly after; otherwise probably he had been turned out. And Bishop Bruce of Dunkeld, had a remarkable Sermon at this Time, much commended, opposed the penal Statutes, and was put from his Office.

Carriage of the Bishops.

How the Bishop of Aberdeen carried after he had been so honestly dealt with by his Clergy, I know not; but I find Bishop Ramsay of Ross, used great Freedom with the Commissioner, and came to no small Trouble therefore. That Prelate who was heartily against Papists, being admitted to Places of Trust, happened to be with the Earl of Murray in his Closet, and after much home Reasoning against taking off of the penal Statutes, came at length to use an Argument ad hominem, and took the Liberty to tell his Grace, that he was surprized to find him so keen in pushing that Affair; and with some Peremptoriness assured him, a Project was already laid to turn his Lordship out of his Post as Secretary, as soon as the Parliament was up, and to bring in a Papist to it. The Earl essayed to pump him upon that Subject, and the Bishop opened himself, and let him know all he had heard upon that Head, scarce expecting his Grace would have propaled what he had said to him alone, and as a Friend.

The Bishop of Ross uses Freedom with the Commissioner.

Upon what Reasons the Earl best knew, he was pleased very soon to give a full Account of the Bishop's Conversation with him, to Chancellor Perth, who meditated Revenge, and would not be satisfied till the Bishop was brought under a Censure for what passed in private and friendly Conversation; and so far did the Chancellor push the Matter, that he gave in a Representation to the Primate, which the Reader will be pleased to have here.

Whereupon the Chancellor gives in a representation against him to the Primate.

Representation from the Lord High Chancellor of Scotland, to his Grace the Archbishop of St. Andrews Lord-Primate.

THE Bishop of Ross, having upon the Day of May 1686. attended upon his Grace the Earl of Murray his Majesty's high Commissioner, and (after some Discourse betwixt them) asked his Grace, why he was so earnest in Matters proposed by the King to the Parliament, seeing that the Lord Chancellor, and Lord Melford designed to have his Grace turned out of his Office of Secretary, when the Parliament was over; and his Majesty's high Commissioner having desired to know what Ground he had for such an Information, the Bishop said, it was a Thing he was assured of, and his Assurance was founded upon his Knowledge of the Lord Chancellor and Melford's Tempers and Humours, or Words to this or the like Purpose.

And

1686.

‘ And this being prejudicial to his Majesty’s Service, and the Honour and Interest of the Persons concerned, it is therefore desired that his Grace, with Advice of such of the Clergy as he thinks fit, may take notice of it, and do therein as by the Rules and Customs of the Church is usual in such Cases, or such a Crime deserves.’

PERTH

What was done by the Primate, and the Lords of the Clergy upon this extraordinary Step, I have not learned. It may be well supposed this Course was fallen into mostly ad terrorem, and for any Thing I can hear, this Prelate continued firm in his Opposition to the Project now on foot.

The Parliament do nothing as to the penal Statutes for some Time.

During the Month of May, I find very little publick Business gone through by the printed Acts; and suppose most of the Time was spent in forming a Party for the Liberty designed to be given to Papists, and Essays among the Members to bring them up to the King’s Lure.

That Matter was now the Subject of every Body’s Conversation; and great Care was taken of the printing Presses, that nothing might be published against the King’s favourite Design, or in Defence of the present standing Laws: And on the other Hand, Papers, and Pamphlets, making a Nose of Wax of the established Laws, were printed, carefully spread and handed about; while severals were brought to Trouble for handing about privately, Papers in Defence of the Laws and Religion of the Land. And the Lampoons upon the penal Statutes were encouraged, and Smoothings of the grossest Popish Tenets greedily received, and many Popish Books and Papers carefully spread for corrupting the Nation.

Great Efforts were made to chuse the Lords of Articles, so as the King’s Inclinations might meet with no Opposition there: Yet some Struggle and Opposition was made. I cannot pretend to give so distinct Accounts how this Act for repealing the penal Laws was treated there, and in the House, as I would; and I may be under some Mistakes, as to the Circumstances of Time, in my Conjectures from the Papers come to my Hand; but, in as far as I can guess at this Distance, the Matter stood thus.

Draught of an Act as to the Penal Statutes transmitted from the Lords of the Articles May 27.

Upon the 27 of May, the following Draught of an Act in favours of Papists, with some Difficulty was transmitted from the Lords of Articles, which, as being the utmost Length our Managers for Popery and a Popish King could be brought unto, I shall insert here.

‘ The Estates of Parliament, taking into their serious Consideration his Majesty’s Desire exprest in his gracious Letter directed to them, for some Ease to his Subjects of the Popish Pension; and that although there are several Laws and Acts of Parliament containing sanguinary and other Punishments against Papists, yet such hath been the Force of Christian Charity, and the Meekness and Gentleness of the Protestant Religion, that those Laws have seldom or never been put in Execution, since the Reformation, by their religious Predecessors, and (A.) now being firmly resolved to adhere to the established Protestant Religion, and, so far as their Religion and Conscience will allow, to yield an humble and dutiful Compliance with his Majesty’s Desires; therefore his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, statutes and ordains, that those of his Majesty’s Subjects, who are of the Romish Communion, shall be under the Protection of his Majesty’s Government and Laws, and shall not for the Exercise of their Religion in private (all publick Worship being hereby expressly excluded) be under the Danger of sanguinary, and other Punishments contained in any Laws or Acts of Parliament made against the same. It is always hereby declared, that this Immunity or Forbearance granted to the Papists for the Exercise of their Religion, in private Houses allenarly, shall no ways import Allowance or Approbation of that Religion, or any ways evacuate or prejudice the Laws or Acts of Parliament made against Popery, or in favours of the Protestant Religion, (B.) which are hereby declared to abide in their full Force and Effect as to all Ends and Intents for which they were made; except as to the Forbearance and Immunity hereby granted in the Terms, and to the Effect above mentioned, and no otherwise.

Presented to the Parliament.

When this Draught was proposed to the Parliament, I cannot say; but I have Ground to think it was not read for some Days, till the Pulse of the Members was tried upon this Draught, which hath abundance of Cunning in it. At length it came to be tabled in the House, where the Reasonings were bold and warm against it; and I shall enter no further upon them, but to acquaint the Reader that he will find the Substance of the Reasonings against this Draught, in the Papers I am just now to place in the Appendix.

Changes in this Draught.

A.

The Courtiers were glad to get off this Field, and to have the Draught remitted again to the Lords of the Articles to ripen it. There, instead of bettering it in the Eyes of the Courtiers, some new Clauses were added to it, yet more shocking to them. After all their Debates and Reasonings, this Act fell into the Shape which the Reader hath App. No. 116. In it the Reader will observe, among other Changes, Two very considerable Alterations. The first is at the Letter (A.) in the first Draught, and the Paragraph runs. ‘ And as the Estates of Parliament are firmly resolved to adhere to the true Protestant Religion, as by Law

Mr. Archdeacon Eachard's Account of the Procedure of this Parliament on the penal Statutes.

Thus the Reader hath some View of the Procedure of Parliament, about this important Affair. Tho' this Protestant Parliament thus stuck at the Repeal of the Statutes against Popery, yet the King did not stop his Design for overturning our Religion, but pushed it boldly by his own dispensing Power, as we shall hear upon the next Section.

Mr. Archdeacon Eachard gives a very just Account of the King's Designs, in pushing the Repeal of the penal Statutes, in this Parliament. He observes, ' That the King, to feel the Pulse of his Subjects in England, resolved to raise a Superstructure of arbitrary Power in Scotland, in which he had laid the Foundation by his Popularity, and publick Dissembling his religious Designs when he was Lord Commissioner for his Brother. Before that Parliament broke up last Summer, besides other Acts formerly mentioned, one passed containing a Tender of Duty, and Offer of the Excise to his Majesty; in the Preamble of which they declare, " That they ow all their Blessings to the sacred Race of their glorious Kings, and to the solid absolute Authority, wherewith they were invested by the first and fundamental Laws of their Monarchy." And therefore they again declare to the World, " That they abhor and detest, not only the Authors and Actors of all preceeding Rebellions against their Sovereign, but also all Principles and Positions which are contrary or derogatory to the King's sacred, supreme, sovereign, absolute Power and Authority, which none, whether particular Persons, or collective Bodies, can participate of any manner of way, or upon any Pretext, but in Dependence on him, and by Commission from him, &c." And, as it were intentionally to introduce a despotick Power, they passed another Act, " To confirm and approve whatever had been done by his Majesty's Privy Council, Justice-court, and those commissioned by them, in banishing, imprisoning, and fining such as refused to take and swear the Oath of Allegiance, and to assert the Royal Prerogative in the utmost Extent of them."

And after giving Account of the King's Letter, and Commissioner's Speech, which the Reader hath already in the Appendix, he adds, ' When this Speech came to be considered, the Creatures of the Court shewed a present Inclination for passing an Act in favour of the Papists, without looking further than his Majesty's Desire; but the more considerate Party moved and prevailed to have a Committee appointed, to inspect the Statutes provided against the Roman Catholics. After a full Examination of those Laws, the Committee drew up a Bill, whereby " Papists were to be allowed the Exercise of their Religion in private, without repealing those former Acts, which made them liable to Penalties for publicly assembling together." The King seemed to be contented with this Step at present, hoping to have gained more in a proper Season: But however, this Bill being presented to the Parliament for their Approbation, they divided upon it, and many warm Speeches were made against it. The King being informed of their Debates, and apprehending the Miscarriage of his Designs, he dispatched an Express to the Earl of Murray his Commissioner, with Orders to dissolve, or at least prorogue that Parliament, that had done so much in favour of his Prerogative. And about Ten Months after, he did that by his sole Power and Authority, which he could not effect with the Consent of the Nation, as will be remembered in its proper Place.

I should now come to take some View of the other Acts of this Parliament, in as far as they concern the Subject of this History. The Court's main Design in their Meeting being broken, there is not much more remarkable in the printed Acts.

Notwithstanding of the mighty Solemnity used in the last Session of Parliament, when they annexed the Lands of the Noblemen and Gentlemen, forfeited for their conscientious Endeavours in behalf of the Protestant Interest, to the Crown, they are now parcelled out among Papists and Favourites.

Lands belonging to Cesnock and Douchal, disjoyned from the Crown, in favour of the Viscount of Melford. Torwoodlee's Lands to the Vount of Lieutenant general Drummond.

By the first Act an Excambion is made between some Lands belonging to the Viscount of Melford, and the Lands of Cesnock and Douchal, now annexed to the Crown; and we may easily suppose who had the better in this Excambion. The Viscount's Activity in the Persecution at the Circuit Courts, and otherwise, is given as the Reason, without any Ceremony, or disjoyning these Gentlemens Estates from the Crown, for the Viscount's Use. By their 7 Act, the Lands of that worthy Gentleman Mr. Pringle of Torwoodlee, are dissolved from the Crown, and given to the forementioned Lieutenant-general Drummond; and to find Reasons for this, the Parliament go as far back as the Year 1648. when that Gentleman joyned in the Duke's Engagement, and the 1649. when he joyned the Duke of Ormond against the Protestants in Ireland. To be sure, his Services at Pentland, and against the Earl of Argyle, were not forgotten. It seems his Service at Bothwell did not deserve so much Notice, tho' Melford hath his there noticed.

Ferviswood's to the Duke of Gordon. Disjunction of the Lands of Earlston, Craichlaw, Kaitloch, Kennedy of Grange.

Their 13 Act makes over the Lands and Estate of Mr. Baily of Ferviswood, to the Duke of Gordon, as a Token, no doubt, of Royal Favour to that Popish Family, for their Services and Sufferings for the Crown and Royal Family. By the 26 Act, the Lands of Earlston, James Gordon of Craichlaw, and Mr. William Fergusson of Kaitloch, are given to Sir Theophilus Oglethorpe, Lieutenant-colonel Main, and Captain Henry Cornwall, and dissolved from the Crown. By the 27 Act, the Lands of Thomas Kennedy of Grange, are dissolved from the Crown.

Crown, and given to Sir Thomas Kennedy Provost of Edinburgh, for his Services at Bothwell, and his Father's at Worcester Engagement. 1686.

And by the 28 Act, James Earl of Arran hath the Lands of Sir Thomas Stuart of Cultnesh, and his Son, the Baronies of Cultnesh, North-berwick, and Good-trees, granted him for his good Services against the Earl of Argyle. And by the 29 Act of the same Session, the Lands of Walter Earl of Tarras, are again given back to him, and dissolved from the Crown, as the Narrative bears, for his free Confession of the Conspiracy he was engaged in. And this Confession is declared by the Parliament, to be the great Mean of preventing its fatal Effects.

Thus Part of the forfeited Estates was dissolved, and given off by the Parliament, and others of them were disposed with, without any parliamentary Solemnity, to such as had best served a Popish Prince in the State and the Army, as a Reward for their Share in the Persecution, during the former Years.

Little further offers this Session of Parliament. By the Second Act, new Burdens are put upon the Lieges in their paying the Cess, instead of the Ease promised by the Commissioner in his Speech. By the 25 Act, they rescind a Clause in their Address against the Earl of Argyle, last Year, begging, That no Intercession might be heard for Mercy to the Earl, or any that joyned with him. Of this, it seems, upon Reflection, they were ashamed, and so they might; and this rescissory Act stands as a lasting Blot laid by themselves, upon their former unchristian and virulent Procedure. And in the unprinted Acts, the Reader will find an Act dissolving the Lands of Sir John Cochran of Ochiltree from the Crown, and granting them to his eldest Son, which is a substantial Proof, Sir John had made his Peace with the Court. Thus I have done with the Parliaments in this Period.

Clause in the Address last Year relating to the Earl of Argyle, rescinded.

Sir John Cochran's Lands disjoyned in favour of his Son.

S E C T. III.

Of the King's remarkable Letter after the Rising of Parliament, the State of Mr. Renwick and his Followers, some Proclamations and other Things this Year, which came not in so naturally upon the former Sections.

Being in this last Section to gather up some Facts this Year, that may tend to enlighten the History of it, I shall begin with what further offers as to the Design of weakening the Protestant Interest, and Introduction of Popery, because it hangs best with the Subject of the former Section, and the Reader will have the whole of it thus in his Eye at once, and then I shall go through other incidental Things, just as they fall in by the Order of Time.

Contents of this Section.

When the King's Project was broken in our Parliament, he took himself to other Methods for introducing Persons of the Popish Profession, to Places of Profit and Trust, and fell about it in the shortest Way, both in Scotland and England.

Other Methods taken on to bring in Papists to Places of Trust.

Upon the 20 of July, a Declaration is impetrate from the English Judges, which was much more useful for the inbringing of Popery and arbitrary Power, than our Scots Act of Parliament would have been, though it had got through. I refer the Reader to the English Historians for the full Accounts of this, and few or none of them pass it.

Declaration of the English Judges, July 20.

In short, the Matter stood thus. At the Term, the Case of Sir Edward Hales, a Papist, prosecuted for being in a Post contrary to the English Law, was tabled before the Judges, with a Design to have their favourable Judgment here, as in a leading Case. A vast Plurality of them give it as their Opinion,

In the Case of Sir Edward Hales.

- ‘ That the King is a sovereign Prince.
- ‘ That the Laws are the King's Laws.
- ‘ That the King may dispense with the penal Laws in case of Necessity.
- ‘ That the King is Judge of that Necessity.
- ‘ That the King hath not his Power by any Grant from the People, but it remains in him, and never was, and never can be taken from him.’

About this same Time, and to make further Way for Papists, and to purge out such who should make any Stand for ecclesiastical or civil Liberty, the famous ecclesiastical Commission was set up in England, and a Grant was passed, empowering the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of Durham and Rochester, with the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer, and the Earl of Sunderland, whereof the Chancellor was still to be one, to put in force the ecclesiastical Laws against all Offenders, whether by Suspension, Deprivation, or other ecclesiastical Censures, and to enquire into the Orders of the Clergy, Foundation of Churches, &c.

And

Ecclesiastical Commission set up in England.

1686. And to complete the Design, Papists were brought in to be Members of the English Privy Council, in great Numbers, such as the Lord Powis, Lord Belassis, Lord Arundel, and several others.

And Papists made Privy Counsellors.

Change in our
Scots Council.

When Matters are thus going on very fast towards Rome, in England, some wider Steps are taken in Scotland. Since the Union of the Two Crowns, our Scots Affairs were very much under English Influence, and in so extraordinary a Juncture as this, we may expect a double Share. Accordingly, a thorough Purge is made of our Scots Council. The best Protestants, and such who had the Courage to appear in Parliament against the King's Project, are turned out, and upright violent Papists are brought in their Room. I cannot give all the Changes made at this Time, but I find the Earls of Mar, Lothian, Dumfries, and Kintore, with the Lord Ross, are turned off; and the Duke of Gordon, Earl of Traquair, Earl of Seaforth, and some other Papists, were brought in.

King's Letter
to the Council
August 21. repealing the penal Statutes.

Our Scots Council being thus prepared to receive such a Message, a Letter comes down from the King, dated August 21. which is so very singular, tho' indeed it was what might be reasonably expected from a zealous Papist, that I insert it here.

JAMES R.

Right trusty, &c. It was not any Doubt We had of Our Power, in the putting a Stop to the unreasonable Severities of the Acts of Parliament, against those of the Roman Catholick Religion, that made Us bring in Our Designs to Our Parliament, but to give Our loyal Subjects a new Opportunity of shewing their Duty to Us, their Justice towards the innocent, and their Charity towards their Neighbours; in which We promised Our selves their hearty and dutiful Concurrence, as what was founded on that solid Justice We are resolved to distribute to all, and consequently to Our Catholick Subjects, against whom those Laws were made, upon Supposition that Loyalty was inconsistent with their Religion, and that, upon the Authority of an external Power, they were freed from all Allegiance to their Sovereigns; and if those Things had been so then, there had been most just Grounds for the utmost Severity against them.

But now in a long Tract of Time, these Things have not only been found false, but the contrary true; for when unnatural Rebellions have been raised against Our Royal Father, Brother, and Us, by Protestant Defenders of those Laws, Supporters of that Persecution, the Roman Catholicks have still adhered to the Royal Interest; and at the Expence of their Lives, Fortunes, and all that was dear to them in the World, supported the Crown, died for the Peace of their Persecutors, and thought nothing too dear to buy the generous Character of religious towards God, and loyal toward their Sovereigns.

When all this had appeared in a long Series of Years, notwithstanding of bitter and frequent Persecutions, We could do no less than secure the innocent Catholicks from these Pains, intended and designed for the restless, rebellious, and impious Idolaters; especially considering, by Our own Experience, that they are not capable of those Evils they are scandalized with; and We are sure, that none of sober and rational Principles will blame Us, or envy the Ease We intend to give them.

Nor had Our Parliament, or any Member thereof, scrupled their Consent, if the perverse Intentions of Our Enemies had not suggested unreasonable Scruples, into the Heads of some well-meaning Men, as if, by the Test they had been bound up from giving their Consent to what they thought so reasonable, that they wished Us to do it by Our own Authority, being fully resolved to support Us in it.

In the first Place, that none may have so unreasonable a Scruple, We do hereby declare, That it was never Our Meaning by the Test, to preclude any Man from the Freedom of voting in Parliament or Council, in any Case brought in by Us, for the Well of the Government, and Peace or Ease of Our good Subjects, and that no Man could take the Test in any other Sense, seeing it is the Giver, and not the Taker of an Oath, that is to give the Meaning to it. Like as We have already explained to Our Clergy before, upon some Doubts that did arise concerning it; so We now declare, that it is not the Meaning of the Test, to preclude any from consenting to any Change or Alteration, not contrary to the express Tenets of the Protestant Religion, as oft as We shall think fit to desire their Consent in Parliament, or otherwise, to any such Thing.

We have also thought fit to let you know, that as We have performed Our Part in supporting those of the Protestant Religion, the Professors whereof are perfectly under Our Royal Protection, so We resolve to protect Our Catholick Subjects against all the Insults of their Enemies, and Severity of the Laws made against them heretofore; notwithstanding of all which, We hereby allow to them the free private Exercise of their Religion in Houses, in which We authorize and require you to support and maintain them, as under Our Royal Protection, in all Things, as well their Persons as Estates; and We hereby do discharge any Sentences to be given against any of them, for the Things above allowed of Us.

Willing

Willing and requiring you, to make Intimation hereof to all Our Judges, civil and criminal, as well as to Ecclesiasticks; and declaring that the Allegiance of this shall be a sufficient Defence against any Pursuit, civil or criminal, for the Exercise of the Roman Catholick Religion, Profession thereof, or using any of the Rites and Ceremonies of that Church, or doing what by any Law or Act of Parliament is called trafficking, in all Time coming. And We further require Our Judges to do herein according to Our undoubted Right and Prerogative, as they will answer the contrary.

And to the end the Catholick Worship may with the more Decency and Security be exercised at Edinburgh, We have thought fit to establish Our Chapel within Our Palace of Holy-rood-house, and to appoint a Number of Chaplains and others, whom We authorize and require you to have in your most special Protection and Care, as Persons whom We are resolved to maintain in their just Rights and Privileges, and to secure under Our Royal Protection.

You are likewise to take Care, that there be no Preachers or others, suffered to insinuate to the People any Fears and Jealousies, as if we intended to make any violent Alteration; and if any shall be so bold, you are to punish them according to Law, for it is far from Our Thoughts to use any Violence in Matters of Conscience, consistent with Our Authority, and the Peace of Our ancient Kingdom.

We are also resolved to maintain Our Bishops, and the inferior Clergy, in their just Rights and Privileges, and the Professors of the Protestant Religion, in the free Exercise of it in their Churches, and to hinder all fanatical Encroachments upon them.

We are resolved likewise to maintain Our Subjects of all Qualities, in their Rights and Privileges, and to have Justice impartially administrate by Our Judicatories. And We are resolved to restrain the Insolencies (if any be) in the Army, and to cause them punctually to pay the Country: All which We recommend to you, as what We are most extremely concerned in.

And seeing We are thus resolved in relation to Our People, We do expect from them all the Returns of Duty and Loyalty, as well as Compliance and Concurrence in those Things, so just in Us, and reasonable in all Our good Subjects, from whom We do also expect that mutual Love and Charity, one to another, that becomes Compatriots, Subjects, and Christians. The Execution of all which We remit to you, authorizing and requiring your punctual Performance in all Points. In full Confidence whereof, We bid you heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Windsor, the 21 Day of August, 1686. and of Our Reign the Second Year.

By his Majesty's Command,

MELFORD.

This brisk Letter speaks out so plainly, that I need make very few Remarks upon it. The Remarks on it Popish King begins with a Satyr upon our Scots Laws against Papists, as containing unreasonable Severities. How far this may be reckoned Tyranny, without any Ceremony to set himself above the Laws, I shall not say; but it cannot be reckoned Perjury, since our Managers were so complaisant, as not to urge him to take our Coronation Oath. But if the English Laws contain as severe Penalties as ours do against Papists, which I do not pretend to know, what, shall we think it a Branch of Wickedness I want a Name for, to swear to maintain and rule them by Laws as severe, and yet thus to brand ours?

However, he gives the Council to know, it was not from any Doubts of his own Power to dispense with standing Laws, he desired the Parliament to rescind them, but to give his Subjects, even the Parliament, an Opportunity of testifying their Duty. The King is very open here and speaks out. By his paramount Power to the Laws, he could take them away, but he would have the Legislature to be a Tool, and truckle to his Power, and not to rescind them upon any solid and just Foundations; for well did he know, none could be advanced, but merely to be an Evidence how much they were his humble Servants. Thus as, in Fact, he had no more Parliaments, so there was really no Use for them. How far their implicate Obedience would have been either Justice to the innocent, or Charity to the merciless Papists, we have heard. The Reasons adduced to prove the Equity of such an Act have all been considered.

But what follows, is an intolerable Jest upon our holy and established Religion and Reformation, When unnatural Rebellions have been raised by the Protestant Defenders of those Laws, and Supporters of that Persecution. This biting Turn upon Protestants in general, and the Patriots in Parliament, is very agreeable to the Jesuitical Influence that poor Prince was under. What follows, of the Roman Catholicks adhering to the Royal Family, hath been just now considered.

The King next speaks of bitter and frequent Persecution of Papists, through a long Series of Years, of which I can learn nothing from our Histories; and to be sure, for a good Number of Years, since the Duke of Tork got the Ascendant over his Brother, they were 1686. were so far from being persecuted, that they were overlooked, yea, imployed in several very considerable Offices. Upon this false Narrative the King is made to ground his Resolutions, to secure Papists from the Pains due to these Evils he alledges they were not capable of. The Parliament is next lampooned for believing unreasonable Scruples suggested into the Heads of some well-meaning Men. What follows I do not so well understand, and, as I take it up, can scarce believe it, that the Members of Parliament thinking themselves bound by the Test from giving their Consent to the penal Statutes being removed, wished the King might do it by his own Authority. To me it does not appear that the Parliament wished the Statutes should be at all removed. To answer this Difficulty, the King comes to explain the Test, and declares he never meant thereby to bind up Members of Parliament, from consenting to any Thing he should propose for the Well of the Government, and Ease of the Subjects. It is certain, that the Ease of Popish Subjects was not for the Well of any Government, which ought to have been over Protestants. And what ever might have been the Intention of the King in imposing that Oath during his Reign, unless upon the foot of Jesuitical Equivocation, and mental Reservation, it can never free the Swearer from the plain Meaning and Sense of the Words sworn. As to the Evasion which follows, that the Test bound not up from any Change not contrary to the express Tenets of the Protestant Religion, it is plain, the Change sought was so, and flatly opposite to the old Confession sworn to in that Oath.

After this perverting of the Test, which, every Body knows, was carried in Parliament over the Belly of the King, and a very faint Compliment to the Protestant Establishment, That it was perfectly under his Protection, which, to be sure, was no more than what the Roman Catholick Perswasion was; he tells the Council, sic volo, sic jubeo. We resolve to protect our Catholick Subjects, and that not only in the private Exercise of their Worship, but against all their Enemies, and the Laws made against them; and requires the Council to support them; and all this is done according to his undoubted Right and Prerogative. Here is a good Commentary upon the Prerogative so much scrupled at by Sufferers in this Period.

And to be an Experiment how the publick Introduction of Popery, which was next designed, would take, he orders the publick Exercise of the Catholick Religion in his Chapel at Holy-wood-house, and orders the Council to support this. And next the secular Arm is hounded out against all, who, in so sad a Time, should signify their Fears of any violent Alteration. I shall not say what is meant by this; perhaps the King wanted not Hopes, gradually and not violently to get the Reformation overturned.

To please the Clergy, Assurances are given of maintaining Prelacy, and hindring all fanatical Enchroachments upon them. This undoubtedly he saw a better Form for the interim, and much nearer Popery than Presbytery, and wanted not Hopes of good Numbers of Friends among the Clergy. And I doubt not the King was sincere in his Resolution for some Time, till Matters were a little ripened: Prelacy might be continued, and such as were called Fanaticks born down, even though the King's Religion were established.

Promises are added of some good Things to the Lieges; and the Concurrence of all with this plain Scheme for introducing of Popery, is peremptorily expected; and as too much of this was given, so had not Providence happily interposed by the never to be forgotten Revolution, no question the Project had succeeded. Thus the Reader hath what offers to me upon this Design of rescinding the penal Statutes. Next Year we shall find various Shapes of a Toleration and Indulgence offered by the King, mostly, no doubt, with an Eye to further Liberty for those of his own Religion. I come now to run through some other Things I have omitted in the former Sections.

Essays of some Ministers to bring Mr. Renwick and his followers from their Heights, to an Harmony with other Presbyterians.

Last Year and this, some Essays were made for an Union 'twixt some of the Presbyterian Ministers who were wandering up and down the Country, and the Society People now headed by Mr. Renwick, if possible, to bring the last from some of the Heights they had run to; and though this does not belong directly to the Sufferings, yet being a considerable Part of the Misery of Presbyterians, to have such Divisions among them, and the Essays to heal them frustrate, and this being a Part of our History very little known, I shall here give some short Deduction of it, during the last Year and this.

I have before me most Part of the principal Papers relative to this, all of them Originals, and mostly under Mr. Renwick's own Hand, from which I could fill many Sheets; but I shall only give a very short Hint of the Contentings some of the suffering Ministers had with those who erred on the right Hand, when they had so much to grapple with from Prelates and Papists on the left.

Mrs. Langlands and Barclay meet with the Society People July last Year.

July 29. last Year, those Two excellent Persons, Mr. Robert Langlands and Mr. George Barclay, whose Characters have been given, being acquainted of the Meeting, and desired to come, came to one of the general Meetings of the Societies at the Kypes in the Shire of Air, to see what might be done to bring those People who held Communion with no Minister but Mr. Renwick, to hear and joyn with others of the suffering Ministers. A good

A good many of the Meeting were very much for this, and so their Conference <sup>1686.</sup> began.

These Two Ministers upon one Side, and Mr. Renwick, George hill, with some others on the other. The Ministers proposed the laying aside all Debates about former Differences and Practices, and an Union in those things wherein they were agreed, and moved, that what they could not agree in, should be referred to be determined by a competent Judiciary. This was refused by the other Side, who insisted, that an Enumeration of public Desertions should be drawn up; which the Ministers did not come into, as what would rather widen than heal their present Breaches. Thus the Conference ended after they had been together some Days.

However, this Conference had good Effects upon several of the People who were present; and upon the back of it there appeared an Inclination in many of the particular Societies, who sent their Representatives to the general Meeting, to joyn in Ordinances with others than Mr. Renwick, and to hear the suffering Presbyterian Ministers, especially in Kyle, Carrick, and several Places of Galloway.

Some other Things concurred about this Time, to take off good Numbers of the Members of the Societies from the Heights which others of them ran to. Mr. Brackel, a Dutch Minister, who corresponded with the Societies, when better informed concerning them, sent over a Paper to them, vindicating himself from Mr. Hamilton's Aspersions, containing his Sentiments on defensive Arms, regretting their Divisions, and advising them to joyn with other suffering Ministers. This had no small Weight with some. And in the End of the Year 1685. Letters passed 'twixt Mr. Langlands and Mr. Renwick and his Followers, which, I doubt not, were useful to several of the Society People. The Originals and some Copies of these are before me, too large to be inserted.

By a Letter from the Societies to Robert Hamilton, dated October 21. I find they had Information about him, which was ready to be proven, 'That he had countenanced the Hamilton Declaration which he and his Party since had cried out so much against; that he had signed a Petition to Monmouth in name of the Army; that he had received large Sums of Money from good People in Holland, for printing the Testimonies of the Sufferers, and yet greater for the Support of the suffering Party in Scotland, of which he had given no Accounts.' By their Letter they call him to vindicate himself from all these Charges. The breaking out of those Things, as to Mr. Hamilton, together with his not giving the Societies full Satisfaction in his Return, did not a little dash the Party among them who run highest, and had been headed and supported by Mr. Hamilton in their greatest Extremities: Yea, after the Revolution, it was he who hindered their intire Union with this Church, when Matters were brought very near it.

In the Entry of this Year 1686. Robert Cathcart, a very pious and knowing Christian in Carrick, who had formerly joyned with the Societies, but now was very much for Union and quitting their Heights, drew up an Information relating to Mr. Renwick and his Party. This Paper made no little Noise among suffering Presbyterians at this Time. He had no Thoughts of its going abroad, but when he had communicated it to a Friend, it took Air. The Reader, no doubt, will be desirous to see it, and I give it from the original Records of the Societies, App. No. 121.

We shall just now find, that the last Clause was added to this Paper of Robert Cathcart, by the Meeting, who adopted it as their own; the Occasion whereof was this. January 28. this Year, the general Meeting of the Societies was held at Frierminion, to which Alexander Gordon, John Dick, and some others came, as they used to do from the Societies in Kyle, Carrick, and Galloway, most Part of whom were for uniting with, and hearing other suffering Ministers, as well as Mr. Renwick.

The Meeting came to enquire into their Commissions, and the Reports they heard of the Inclination of several of their Societies to unite with other Ministers besides Mr. Renwick, and that some of their Members had written the above Information. The Issue was a long Conference with the abovenamed Men, upon many Points too long here to be insert, from the original Account of it now before me.

In short, after they had owned their hearing Mr. Barclay, when he had satisfied them in Conversation about some Scruples they had; and because they would not absolutely disown Argyle's Declaration, and promise to do nothing in Time to come, without the Allowance of the Meeting, they debarred them in Time to come from their Meeting, and would keep no more Fellowship with them.

When those Persons returned to their Constituents, there was a large Meeting of such who were for Union with other suffering Ministers, to whom an Account was given of the Conference at Frierminion. There Robert Cathcart's Paper was read, and in the Form above was sent to several Presbyterian Ministers, with a Letter containing an Abstract of the Conference above, and a Desire to have Ministers Judgment in those Points in Difference between them and Mr. Renwick's Party. They beg likewise the Ministers may acquaint them, if they had any Share sent them of some Money that was gathered for the Support of

What passed there.

After this Conference many shew their Inclinations to joyn with other suffering Ministers.

Mr. Brackel's Paper sent to the Societies.

1686. suffering Ministers, or any in their Name, and desire Direction from them as to their Duty in this dark Day.

I have not seen any of the Answers sent by the Ministers to this Letter; but I know they went up and down, preaching as as they could have Access to such as would hear them, till the Liberty came next Year. Particularly Mr. Robert Langlands, Mr. George Barclay, Mr. John Moncrief, Mr. Adam Alcorn and others.

This Step taken in the general Meeting at Frierminion, in breaking Fellowship with such as were for hearing other honest Ministers, and essaying to make up the Breaches among Sufferers, did them much Harm in the Eyes of sober Onlookers, and some of themselves found Cause afterwards to repent it.

Notwithstanding of the Essays of Mr. Renwick and his Friends.

In March this Year, I find Mr. Renwick, with James Clerk, John Clerk, James Wilson, Alexander Ramsay, and some others, came to Carrick, if possible, to regain the People who had been cast off by them; and they had a Conference with them. March 20. Robert Cathcart, Quintin Dick, and some others managed it. Robert owns he had drawn up the Information, and did not design to publish it; that he had not communicated it but to one Friend, and did not reckon himself obliged to such who had propaled it. But now that it is spread, he owns, and is ready to defend every Point of it. This issued in a long Conversation, where no Ground was gained on either Hand.

Who draw up their informatory Vindication.

This Rupture, together with some other Occurrences this Year, put Mr. Renwick and his Party to draw up their informatory Vindication, which was penned by Mr. Renwick, and revised by their general Meeting at great Length, and approved. But this took some Months after this; and we shall again meet with the informatory Vindication, where the Reader will see that Party's Answers to what is laid to their Charge, in this Information by Robert Cathcart; and indeed 'tis as much as such a Subject will bear.

Thus I have given some View of this considerable Change, in the Circumstances of the Society People this Year. The Heights run into by some, and the misgiving of all Essays for Union among Sufferers, did not a little distress the Spirits of the more sober Party at this Time.

Protestation of some Societies against Mr. Renwick.

Towards the Close of the Year, when Mr. Renwick was preaching in the South to such who would hear him, several Societies who countenanced and heard other Presbyterian Ministers, left him and his Followers very much. And some of the Societies in Galloway hearing of his coming, drew up a Kind of Testimony, and gave in to him by some of their Number, upon Sabbath November 22. before he began Sermon, near to the Places where they lived. That the Reader may know the Grounds upon which they went, I have insert here the Paper given in to Mr. Renwick, by William M<sup>r</sup> Hutchison, who had suffered not a little those Years past, from the Original in my Hand.

We Undersubscribers, according to the laudable Example of others, taking to our Consideration the great Scandal, and woful Effects of Division among the Professors of the Church of Scotland, and especially among our selves; and finding the Causes of this Division partly to proceed from some amongst us their paying Cests, hearing Curates, and taking the late Abjuration, and partly from others their condemning of those Things, and adhering to the late Declaration on Church-doors and other Places, and receiving of, and adhering unto Mr. James Renwick, without the Consent and Approbation of the Remnant of faithful and godly Ministers of the Church of Scotland, and contrary to the laudable Practices of this Church, and Acts of general Assemblies, from the Reformation to this Day: And finding those Things to be above our Capacity, to decide and determine among our selves, and that by them rather jangling Strife and Division is increased; we do hereby refer and submit our selves, in all those aforesaid Things, to an Assembly of faithful Ministers and Elders, which is the only Church Judicatory approved in the Word of God, and competent Judges of such debatable Principles and Practices; at least to such a competent Number of Ministers and other grave Persons, as the afflicted State of this Church will allow at such a Time; and promise upon the one Hand to give Satisfaction, as we shall be found guilty and convicted by the Word of God, for any Thing done by us to the Scandal and Offence of our dear Brethren: And upon the other Hand, we will forbear to call or joyn with Mr. James Renwick, till such Time as his Ordination and Entry into the Church of Scotland be seen and approved of some competent Number of the faithful Ministers of the Church of Scotland, according to the Word of God, laudable Practice, and Acts of general Assemblies of this Church, since the Reformation till his coming into this Church. And are willing, upon his Submission to his Brethren, according to the Word of God, to receive him into our Bosoms, and to submit to his Ministry, as to one of our faithful Pastors. But if he, at the Desire of Strangers, or of any of our Brethren dividing from us, intrude himself on our Labours, without our Call and Consent, till such Time as we have the Mind of our faithful Ministers anent the foresaid Things, we will protest against all such Dealing, as horrid and abominable Usurpation and Intrusion upon us and our Labours, contrary to the Word of God, and Acts of our general Assemblies, and Practice of this Church, since the Reformation till this Day, and that we will look on such Practice as not only divisive, but destructive to the the poor suffering Remnant of this Church, and will resent it before God. Witness my Hand, subscribed in the Name of this Place of the Stewartry betwixt the Water of Cree and Dee. In the Name of the whole, signed 1686.

William M'Hutchison.

How this Paper was received I have no Information, but Mr. Renwick and his Followers went still on, in a separate Course from the rest of the Sufferers and Ministers of that Time.

In December this Year, Mr. David Houston Minister, come over from Ireland, was taken in with Mr. Renwick; we shall hear more of him ere this History end. He preached up and down among Mr. Renwick's Followers, but not under that Regard that was paid to Mr. Renwick. I have a large Account under the Hand of the Clerk of the Societies, of the Manner of his Reception, the Engagements he came under, and the Acknowledgments he made, before me, but it is not worth while to insert, or abridge it.

Mr. David Houston taken in with Mr. Renwick, Ireland, in 1686, December.

At the same Time, that excellent Person Mr. Alexander Shiels, formerly mentioned, was received by the Societies. He had found Means to escape out of his Confinement, and made an Acknowledgment to the general Meeting, of what he thought he had done wrong before the Justiciary. He was extremely welcome to Mr. Renwick, and the more judicious People among them: He was mighty useful to them, and much against some of the Lengths they ran to; and came in heartily at the Revolution, as I doubt not Mr. Renwick would have done, had he been alive. Thus I have given all I have as to the Society People, this Year, together. I come now to hint at some other Things, just in the Order of Time they fell out.

And Mr. Alexander Shiels.

Upon the 26 of January this Year, that singularly pious Minister, Mr. Alexander Pedin, of whom in the former Part of this Work. died in the Dikes, in the Parish of the Sorn, in Air Shire; and though he was not executed publicly, because not reached by the Enemies, yet the Hardships he was brought to, hastened him to the Joy of his Lord.

Jan. 26 Mr. Alexander Pedin died.

Many remarkable Things are related concerning this good Man, in the Days of his Youth, when he was under many sore Depths, and much Soul Exercise, and had wonderful Out-gates and Deliverances, and some very singular Attainments through his After-life; Accounts of which would come more natively in upon an History of Providences, than here.

Some Account of him.

He was Minister of Glenluce before the Restoration, and when removed from his People by Force, I am told, he was very positive that no Curate should ever be fixed in that Parish, which, they say, held true. We have met with him in the former Part of this History, under very heavy Sufferings in the Bass, and otherwise. Last Year I find him upon his Hiding in Air Shire and Galloway. The forenamed Captain Campbel of Welwood, at this Time very young, getting Notice of him, went to him, and stayed many Days with him, in a Den they made for themselves in the Earth, in a very retired Place, which no Body knew of, but one Person who brought them Meat. At length their Hiding-place was smelled out by the Soldiers, and they were put again to their Shifts.

This Gentleman tells me, that all this Time, for some Months, Mr. Pedin had a great Presence upon his Spirit, and was unwearied in Prayer and wrestling, and used to pass many Nights in Sighs and Groans. Mr. Pedin most of the Summer 1685. wandered through the South the best way he could, being much under his Hiding with Mr. Langlands, Mr. Barclay, Lieutenant-colonel Fullarton, and Cleland, and the last named Gentleman; when they were followed with a Train of very remarkable Providences, Preservations, Supplies, and Deliverances from Dangers. He died in full Assurance of Faith as to himself, and great Hope of a comfortable Delivery to this Church, just at the Door.

He was privately interred in Mr. David Boswell of Auchinleck his Isle, in the Church of Auchinleck; and after he had been buried Six or Eight Weeks, the Soldiers getting Notice where he had been laid, came and took out his Corps, and carried them to the Gallows Foot in Cumnock, and there buried him as a Malefactor. This raising him after he was buried, Mr. Pedin before his Death, did very positively foretel, before several Witnesses, some of whom are yet alive who were present, from whom I have it, else I should not have noticed this here.

Indeed this singularly religious Person hath been very much abused since his Death, by handing about some propheticall Expressions, said to have been uttered by him in the Year 1684, or 1685. and the printing of a Prophecy, said to have been emitted by him in Ireland, 1684.

Remarks on the Prophecy published in his Name.

That the Secret of the Lord was with this Fearer of him, I do not doubt; and the attested Hint I have given of his foretelling the disturbing of his dead Body, before he died, may fully satisfy as to this; and I am apt to think this Prediction, with some others I have pretty well vouched, together with the Additions that are generally made by too many to such Accounts, when they are in Conversation, indistinctly told and handed about, may have given an Handle to some designing Persons, for their own Ends, to shape and frame Prophecies under Mr. Pedin's Name.

As to those propheticall Expressions of his, which are handed about in Writ only, I say nothing 1686. nothing of them, since they are but in the Hands of a few, and by the Tartness and Bitterness of the Stile, they evidently discover themselves to be far from his Spirit.

Of the Prophecy that is printed under Mr. Pedin's Name, I have seen Two different Copies, and a Third in Manuscript differing from them both. In some of them it is said, that King William was to have War with Spain, which is false: In others of them it is said, the Jews shall bring their Genealogies with them when converted, which is morally impossible, and really useless. I shall make no Reflections upon the many unintelligible Phrases and Sentences in this pretended Prophecy. The Year 1715. is now expired, without any Prospect of those great Things palmed upon this good Man, their being accomplished. And by all the Rules of Charity, I reckon my self obliged to take this Prophecy to have been most injuriously fathered upon Mr. Pedin.

Besides, I have seen several of his original Letters when in the Bass, to some indulged Ministers and others, which breathe a quite other Spirit than those Papers handed about make him to be of. And I cannot but remark, both from the Company he haunted, after he got out of his Confinement, and some Passages in the original Records of the Societies, that this excellent Person was far from the Heights at this Time run to; which, mean while, appear some way to be designed to be justified by the Papers handed about under his Name. This much I thought necessary to observe, for the Vindication of the Memory of this worthy Minister, so much injured by fixing those Papers upon him after his Death.

Affronts put on the Chancellor upon his turning Papist.

But to go on to Things of a more publick Nature; towards the End of January, and the Beginning of February, there were some Gatherings and Tumults in the City of Edinburgh, and some Affront was put upon Chancellor Perth, who was now either violently suspected, or certainly known to be a Papist. I know little more of this Tumult than is contained in the King's Letter, dated February 9. a Copy whereof follows.

JAMES R.

King's Letter
upon this.

Right trusty, &c. We greet you well. Having been exceedingly troubled to hear of the Insolency committed by a tumultuous Rabble, in Our City of Edinburgh, whilst you and your other Coadjutors were in the Place, and that their Insolence should have gone the Length of affronting Our chief Minister, and yet that so much Lenity is shewn, in punishing a Crime so immediately touching Our Royal Person and Authority: We have now thought fit to let you know, that We have not only the Character, but likewise the Person of Our Chancellor, so much in Our particular Care, as that We will support him in despite of all the Attempts and Insolencies of his Enemies; and therefore do require you to take that Care of his Person, and have that Respect for his Character, as may convince Us of your Affection to Us, and Obedience to Our Commands.

In the next Place, We hereby require you, to go about the Punishment of the guilty, with the utmost Rigour of Our Law; nor can We imagine, that any has been, or will be remiss in this, except those who have been Favourers of that rebellious Design. But above all, it is Our express Pleasure, that you try into the Bottom of this Matter, to find out those that have either by Money, Insinuation, or otherwise, set on this Rabble to that villainous Attempt, or encouraged them in it; and therefore, that for the finding of this out, you spare no legal Trial by Torture, or otherwise; this being of so great Importance, that nothing more displeasing to Us, or more dangerous to Our Government, could possibly have been contrived, and We shall spare no Expences to know the Rise of it.

We command you again to be diligent in finding out the whole Matter, and punishing the guilty; as likewise to use your utmost Endeavours for preventing the like Villainies for the future. So after We shall hear what the next Post shall bring, ye shall know Our further Pleasure herein. In the mean Time, We bid you very heartily Farewel. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 9 Day of February, 1686. and of Our Reign the Second Year.

By his Majesty's Command,

MURRAY.

I never loved Tumults and Rabbles, and shall say nothing in Defence of this. I know very little of its Circumstances, those are generally magnified in publick Papers at this Time, in other Cases. But we need not much wonder, that under the Reports of a Design framing against our Constitution, by the overturning the penal Statutes against Papists, the common People's Resentment discovered it self in some Disorders and Abuses, especially when a Papist was publickly acting in the highest Station in the Kingdom.

Bond which the Students at the College of Edinburgh were obliged to sign.

Great Care was taken at this Time to corrupt the Youth, and dispose them for giving way to all the Encroachments made, and to be made upon our holy Reformation and civil Liberties. I own Students at an University ought to ply their Books, and should not intermeddle with other Things, and the Masters ought to take all Care to fix them at their proper Work; and and if this was the only View in obliging them to sign the underwritten Bond, 'tis good: But considering the Current of the Times, and the Character of the People, who at this Time pushed the Subscription, there is not wanting reasonable Ground to suspect this was one of the Branches of the passive Obedience, whereby the Youth was to be corrupted. The Tenor of the Bond they were made to sign, follows.

We Undersubscribers, Students in the College of Edinburgh, considering, That we are abused and calumniate by the Rabble, as active and forward in raising and continuing the Tumults and Disorders, by Gatherings which have lately happened in this City, and Suburbs thereof; and conceiving, that in Point of Honour and Duty, we are obliged to vindicate our Innocence, and manifest our Abhorrence at such Practices, as may disturb the Peace of the Place, wherein we ought by our Education to be exemplary in all Peaceableness and regular Behaviour: Therefore, as we do hereby disclaim and disown all tumultuary and disorderly Practices, and particularly those of late, to which we had no Accession; so we purpose for the future to abstain from any such, and in case of Failure, we declare our selves liable not only to the Discipline of our Masters, but also to the Censure of our honourable Patrons, the Lord Provost and Council of Edinburgh. In Witness whereof, we have subscribed those Presents.

How far the Students were prevailed upon to go in to this Bond, I do not know; but it being exculpatory as to former Practices, as well as obligatory in Time to come, it may be doubted if it was proper to be signed by most Part of the Boys, who probably were not altogether Strangers to some Share in the former Gatherings.

All the Three Kingdoms were at this Time, upon good Grounds, apprehensive of Invasions upon their Religion, under the Government of a Popish Prince, managed by the fiery Jesuits; and the poor Protestants in Ireland, were most open to the Storm from Multitudes of bloody Papists, ready to react their former bloody Work and Massacres. Some Ministers there in their Sermons, and others in their Conversation, had the Justice and Courage to warn the Protestants of their Hazard, which, it seems, was extremely displeasing to the Earl Tyrconnel, Lord Deputy.

Thereupon a Proclamation is issued out, February 21. to lull Protestants asleep, and fright such who were not willing to sleep, till their Throats were cut. I should scarce have noticed it, had I not found it reprinted at Edinburgh, no doubt for somewhat else than a little Money to the Printer, especially when our Chancellor was Papist, as well as the Earl of Tyrconnel. That the Reader may perceive, that the same Fears possessed all who had any Regard for our holy Religion, and the same angry, and yet cozening Methods were used, in all the Three Kingdoms, I have added the Irish Proclamation App. N<sup>o</sup>. 122. It is not my Province to enter upon the Affairs of Ireland, but the Reader, upon considering it, will perceive it much of a Strain with several of our Scots Proclamations. Ministers are made Firebrands for warning their People, they are reckoned out of their Road, and threatned; and all the Security of Religion, Liberty, and Property, is now resolved not into Law, but the Assurances of a Prince, who by his Principles was obliged not to keep Faith with his Subjects of a differing Religion.

Proclamation
by the Earl of Tyrconnel, Dublin
Feb. 21.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 122.

Probably it was much with the same View, that at London, March 5. the King directs a Letter to the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, and with it he causes reprint the Directions given by King Charles, in the Year 1662. to Preachers, which I have annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 123. No Remarks are needful. It had not been decent for a Popish King, to have formed in his Council, where there were so many Papists, new Directions to Protestant Clergymen. It was sufficient to reprint the former, and threaten, and give ill Names in the Proclamation, to such as should speak of any present Hazard from Popery. And the high Commission Court within a little, took Care to rivet the Threatnings in the Proclamation; which, with the Directions, are likewise reprinted at Edinburgh, to be a Warning to our Scots conformable Clergy.

Letters and Directions
as to Preachers in England, March 5.

June 2. I find a Letter comes down from the King, and is recorded in the Justiciary-books, removing that worthy Gentleman my Lord Pitmedden, from being a Lord of Justiciary. His Carriage in Ceshnock's Case stuck with the Managers, and now he would not go into the Measures laying down for bringing in Popery, and therefore he is turned out of his Posts. His Ability in Law, especially the criminal Law, is publicly discovered in his Edition of Sir George Mackenzie's Criminals; and his Love to all Branches of Learning, appears in his curious and vast Library. This worthy Person being yet alive, his Modesty forbids me to say any more of him.

The Lord Pitmedden turned out of the Justiciary,
June 2.

Why it was so long delayed I know not, since we have met with a Parallel to this some Months ago in Ireland and England; but June 16. the Council issue out a Proclamation against Slanderers and Leasing-makers, which is annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 124. No Remarks are needful. It is just the Revival of an old Act of Parliament, James VI. Parl. 8. Cap. 134. and the Reason of the Proclamation is, because divers Ministers take upon them to alarm the People. This is new Stile to the Episcopal Clergy, and much for their Honour.

King's Pardon to the Commons in the Shire of Argyle.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 125.
Remarks on it.

And to end this Year, in Spetember the Council emit another Proclamation, containing the King's Pardon and Indemnity to the Commoners in the Shires of Argyle and Tarbet, which I have likewise added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 125. This Pardon is a new Slur cast upon the unchristian and merciless Address of the Parliament last Year, already noticed. It is confined to the Subjects in those Two Shires, while there is no Reason why it should not have extended to all the Commons which joyned with the Earl, unless it be, that all could be expected, was got already of these Two Shires. The King's Pardon likewise is much curtailed, by its being only extended to the Lives of the Persons indemnified. The Moveables, and every Thing else valuable, lies open to every one who shall please to attack them. Yea, besides this, a Commissioner is sent thither to mark out whom he pleases for Ruin, and all whom he pitches on are expressly excepted out of the Indemnity. Such Half-favours may Protestant Subjects expect from a Popish Prince.

Of the State and Circumstances of Presbyterians, during the Year 1687.

Matter of this Chapter

Remarkable
Letter from a Jesuit at Liege, to his Brother
at Friburg, concerning the State of Popery
in Britain, 1687.

HIS History having already run to so large a Bulk, and not many Particulars offering that are necessary to be insert, after so many Instances of Severity, I shall very quickly run through this Year.

The Papists by this Time were come to have very big Expectations of the Restoration of their Religion in Britain and Ireland, from the bigotted Prince now on the Throne. It is from them we may expect to understand best the State of this Matter; and therefore I shall, in the Entry of this Year, insert from Mr. Archdeacon Eachard, the Copy of a Letter from a Jesuit at Liege, to a Brother of his at Friburg, which contains a very full Account of the Expectations and Designs of Papists, at this Juncture. The World owes its first Publication to that industrious Author, very lately, and I doubt not but it will be acceptable to the curious Reader. Its Date is February 2. 1687. and it runs thus.

It is wonderful to see King James's great Affection to our Society: He wished Prosperity to this whole College, by the Reverend Father the Provincial, and earnestly recommended himself to our Prayers. Upon Father John Keyner's Return into England, he gave him a most gracious Reception, (while Earls and Dukes were commanded for some Hours to wait for Admittance) with whom, in the Queen's Presence, he discoursed with all Familiarity. He asked him, How many Candidates for Orders he had, and how many Students. And upon the Provincial's Answer to his Majesty, who was very urgent with him, That of the former, and of the latter, he had above Fifty. He replied, There would be Occasion for double or treble that Number, to effect what he designed for that Society's Performance; and ordered, that they should be all exercised in the Art of Preaching; for now, says he, England has Need of such.

I do not doubt but you have heard, that the King writing to Father de la Chaise, the French King's Confessor, concerning the Affairs of the House among the Walloons, declared, That whatever was done to the English Fathers of that House, he would look upon as done to himself. Father Clare, Rector of the same House, being arrived at London, to treat of that Matter, got an easy Access to the King, and as easily gained his Point. The King himself forbid him to kneel, and kiss his Hand, according to Custom, saying, Reverend Father, you have indeed once kissed my hand; but if I had known then, as I do now, that you were a Priest, I would rather my self, Father, have kneeled down and kissed your Hand. After he had finished his Business in a familiar Conversation, his Majesty told this Father, That he would either convert England, or die a Martyr, and he had rather die the next Day and convert it, than reign Twenty Years piously and happily, and not effect it. Finally, he called himself a Son of the Society, of whose good Success, he said, he was as glad as of his own. And it can scarcely be express, how much Gratitude he shewed, when it was told him, That he was made Partaker, by the most Reverend our Provincial, of all the Merits of the Society, out of which he is to nominate one for his Confessor; but hitherto it is not known who it will be. Some report, that it will be the Reverend Father the Provincial, but still there is no Certainty of that. Many are of Opinion, that Father Edward R. Petre, who is chiefly in Favour with the King, will obtain an Archbishoprick, but more believe it will be a Cardinal's Cap. To him has been granted, within this Month or Two, all that Part of the Palace, in which the King used to reside, when he was Duke of York, where there is not a Day but you may see, I know not how many Courtiers waiting to speak to his Eminence, for so, they say, he is called. For the King advises with him, and with many Catholick Lords, who have the chief Places in the Kingdom, to find a Method to propagate the Faith without Violence. Not long since, some of these Lords objected to the King, That they thought he made too much Haste to establish the Faith. To whom he answered, I am growing old, and must take large Steps, else, if I should happen to die, I might perhaps leave you in a worse Condition than I found you. When they asked him, Why then he was so little concerned about the Conversion of his Daughters, who were the Heirs of the Kingdom. He answered, God will take Care of that, leave the Conversion of my Daughters to me. Do you, by your Example, convert your Tenants and others to the Faith.

He has Catholick Lord-lieutenants in most Counties, and we shall shortly have Catholick Justices of the Peace, in almost all Places. We hope also, that our Affairs will have good Success at Oxford. In the publick Chapel of the Vice-chancellor, who is a Catholick, there is always one of our Divines, who has converted some of the Students to the Faith. The Bishop of Oxford himself, seems to be a great Favourer of the Catholick Faith. He proposed to the Council, Whether it did not seem to be expedient, that at least one College should be granted to the Catholicks at Oxford, that they might not be forced to study beyond Sea at such great Expences: But it is not yet known what Answer he had. The same Bishop having invited Two of our Brethren, together with some of the Nobility, drank the King's Health to a certain Heretick Lord who was in Company, wishing his Majesty good Success in all his Undertakings; adding also, That the Religion of the Protestants in England, did not seem to him in a better Condition, than Buda was before it was taken, and that they were next to Atheists that defended that Faith. Many embrace the true Religion, and Four of the most considerable Earls have lately made publick Profession of it. Father Alexander Keynes, the Provincial's Nephew, to whom is committed the Care of the Chapel belonging to the Elector of Palatine's Envoy, is continually taken up in solving and answering the Questions of Hereticks, who doubt of their Faith, of whom you may see Two or Three together, walking by the Chapel Door, continually disputing about some Point of Religion. As to Prince George, it is yet uncertain what Religion he professes. We gradually begin to get Footing in England, we teach human Learning at Lincoln, Norwich, and York, and at Worcester we have a publick Chapel, protected by a Guard of the King's Soldiers; and we are to buy some Houses in the Town of Wiggan, in Lancashire. The Catholick Interest grows very strong, and at some Churches granted to the Catholicks, upon holy Days, there are often counted Fifteen hundred present at the Sermon. At London also, our Business is carried on with the same good Success; Sermons are preached upon every holy Day, and there are so many that frequent the Chapels, that they are not big enough to hold them. Two of our Society, Dormer and Bertue, preach continually before the King and the Queen, Father Edward Neville, before the Queen Dowager, Father Alexander Keynes, in the Chapel aforesaid, others in other Chapels. There are many Houses bought in the Savoy, near Somerset House, which is the Queen Dowager's Palace, towards the erecting the first College in London, for about Eighteen thousand Florins; and they are hard at Work to bring them to the Form of a College, that a School may be opened before Easter.

A Catholick Lord-lieutenant is shortly to go over to Ireland, because the King cannot be satisfied with any other, to establish the Catholick Interest in that Kingdom. The Parliament will certainly sit in this Month of February, of whom his Majesty is to ask Three Things. First, That by a general Act, all the Catholick Peers may be admitted to sit in the Upper-house. Secondly, That the Test may be abolished: And Thirdly, which is the chief Point, That all penal Laws against Catholicks should be abrogated. And that he may the better obtain these Things, he designs to let them all know, That he is resolved to turn out all those who will not heartily act for the obtaining of them, and likewise dissolve the Parliament. At which Resolution some Hereticks being terrified, came to a certain Earl to advise with him what might be done; to whom he answered, The King's Mind is sufficiently known; what he has once said, he will certainly perform, if you love your selves, submit to the King's Pleasure. There is to be a great Preparation of War at London, and a Fleet of above an Hundred Men of War is to be fitted out against the Spring, but against whom it is uncertain. The Dutch are under great Apprehensions, but for what Reason, although they are said to make an Armament, Time will best discover.

In Scotland the former Hardships continued upon good Numbers of Presbyterians. Heavy Oppression remained upon many Places in the West and South, during this Year. Several were fined for Nonconformity, and good Numbers were banished to the Plantations, in the Entry of this Year. The Justiciary went on in forfeiting of some, and processing others; and we shall meet with Part of the old Spirit working in the Privy Council, against Conventicles.

But the great Thing for which this Year was remarkable, is the Liberty granted by the King, first to the Papists, and with them, under Restrictions, to the Presbyterians, who still refused it, till after several Shapes in July, it came unclogged with any Thing gravaminous to their Consciences; and this put an End to the Sufferings of the greatest Part of them.

The Accounts of those Things I shall comprise in Two Sections, and hasten to the End of this Work.

Of the Procedure of the Justiciary and Council, with the general State of the Persecution through the Country, this Year 1687.

Contents of this Section.

I Have already given the Reasons of the Abatement of the Persecution against Presbyterians, and I shall give but a few Instances of its Continuance, if once I had run through the Procedure of the Justiciary and Council, from any Thing I have met with of their Actings.

Sir John Dalrymple made Advocate, in room of Sir George Mackenzie.

To begin with the criminal Records; upon the first of February, by a Letter from the King, Sir John Dalrymple, Son to the late President, is received King's Advocate in Sir George Mackenzie's room. The Springs of this Change I shall leave to the civil Historians of this Period.

James Slofs and many Country People dismissed by the Justiciary.

That same Day, James Slofs, a worthy Merchant in Glasgow, since the Revolution one of the Bailies of that City, and mentioned before in this History, produced before the Lords Relaxation from the Horn, for alledged being at Bothwel-bridge, and no further Probation being offered against him, he is dismissed; and that same Day great Numbers of Country People from the Parish of Kilbride, and other neighbouring Parishes in Lanarkshire, cited before the Lords for Refet and Converse with Rebels, and Accession to Bothwel, are liberate, no Proof appearing against them.

More Persons forfeited for joynung with the late Earl of Argyle.

March 4. some more Persons are before the Lords, for their joynung with the late Earl of Argyle. And Campbel of Oab, Campbel of Drumfunish, Campbel of Dalton, Campbel of Ulva, are found guilty, and the Lords decern them to be executed to Death, &c. as in common Form, when apprehended. And upon the 8 of March, Lawmont of Meandrynan, Campbel of Aitarich, M'Fun of Invernydan, M'Collum of Reanlochtean, M'Fun of Dryp, and Campbel of Sonachan, are found guilty, and sentenced as above. These are all I meet with prosecuted upon the Earl's Attempt.

Indictment May 4. against several Country People, for their Accession to Bothwel.

May 4. commences a very long Process in the criminal Books, of many Sheets of Paper, against several Country People, for their Accession to Bothwel-bridge, now Seven Years after the alledged Guilt. The Advocate presents an Indictment of Treason and Rebellion, for Accession to Bothwel, against the following Persons, John Love younger in Little-govan, John King elder and younger there, Alexander Clark, William Caldwell there, Humphrey Barber in Risk, John Caldwell, William Orr there, John Patison elder in Lochside, James Wilson in Mosshead, John Caldwell in Beltrees, John Orr, Thomas Caldwell, William Caldwell, Andrew Robertson, Robert Orr, David Smith, Robert King, Robert Orr in Beltrees, and James Robertson.

Interlocutor.

The Lords give their Interlocutor, that the Pannels rendezvousing in Arms at Middleton-bill, the Week before Bothwel-bridge, is relevant to infer Treason, and remit the Probation to an Assize. May 5. there are long and learned Debates about Witneses, too large here to be abbreviated. May 6. is spent in Examination of Witneses, who prove very little; and May 7. the Assize alloillie the Pannels.

Pannels assailed.

Others indicted for hearing Mr. Renwick, May 4.

Upon the Day last named, the Lords have another Process before them, John Vallange, James Carskill, John M'aulay, and Hugh Smith, are indicted for corresponding with Mr. James Renwick, for traitorous Principles, and frequenting Conventicles. The Advocate restricts the Libel to their owning traitorous Principles, being present at Field-conventicles, refusing to own the King's Authority, and to assert his Prerogative. The Lords give their Interlocutor, that the Libel inters an arbitrary Punishment, which is not the Method of former Years, and the Diet is continued; and I find no more about them.

June

June 30. Semples in Nethershiels, Paterfon, Scot, Fleming, Laurie, Chapelton, are indicted for Accession to Bothwell, and the Diet is deserted.

1687.

In July, the criminal Court have before them a Process against the forenamed Doctor Gilbert Burnet, sometime Professor of Divinity at Glasgow. and since the Revolution Bishop of Sarum. This great Ornament of his Country is so well known to the World, that it were to light a Candle to the Sun, for me to offer any Account of him. His vigorous Appearances against Popery exasperated the King and the Jesuits about him, so far as to shew their Spite by this mean Process against him in Absence, and when out of the Nations by the King's own Permission. And all the Hurt they could do him, was to bring him in among the rest of the excellent and worthy Patriots and Protestants, who felt, in as far as they could be reached, the Fury of this Period.

Diet deserted
against the withinwritten Persons, for being at Bath,
and,
Process against
Dr. Burnet.

When, in common Course, he behoved to be cited at the Pier and Shore of Leith, Accounts were sent him by his Friends of this impotent Malice the King and Managers here were shewing against him. Whereupon the Doctor wrote a Letter to the Earl of Middleton, Secretary, if possible, to divert this Process; a Copy of which being before me, I have insert it here.

May it please your Lordship,

Hague, May 3. 1687.

THE Affairs of this Province belonging to your Lordship's Share in the Ministry, this leads me to make this humble Address to your Lordship, and by you to his Majesty. I have received Advertisement from Scotland, that the King has writ to the Privy Council, ordering me to be proceeded against for high Treason against his Person and Government, and that, pursuant to this, the King's Advocate has cited me to appear there. If any Thing in the World can surprize and disorder me, this must needs do it; for as few Men have written more, and preached oftner against all Sorts of treasonable Doctrines and Practices than my self, so all the Discoveries that have been made of late Years, have been so far from aspersing me, that though there has been Disposition enough to find Fault with me, yet there has not Matter been given so much as for Examination.

His Letter to the Secretary
May 3. relative to this.

It is Thirteen Years since I came out of Scotland; for these last Five Years, I have not so much as mentioned the commonest News in any Letter that I have written to any in that Kingdom. I do not mention Acts of Indemnity, because I know that I need not the Benefit of them. I went out of England by his Majesty's Approbation, and I have stayed out of it, because his Majesty expressed his Dislike of my returning to it.

I am now upon the Point of marrying in this Country, and I am naturalized by the States of Holland; but tho' by this, during my Stay here, my Allegiance is transferred from his Majesty to the Sovereignty of those Provinces, yet I will never depart from the profoundest Respect to his sacred Person, and Duty to his Government.

Since my coming to these Parts, I have not seen any Person, either of England or Scotland, that is outlawed for Treason; and when the King took Exceptions to my Access to the Process and Prince of Orange, there was not a Thing of this Kind objected to me: So I protest to your Lordship, I do not so much as imagine upon what it is that these Informations, that, it seems, are brought to his Majesty, are founded.

My Lord, as I am not ashamed of any thing I have done, so I am not afraid of any Thing my Enemies can do to me: I can very easily part with a small Estate, and a Life of which I have been long weary; and if my Engagement in this Country could dispense with it, I would not avoid the coming to stand my Trial: But as this cannot be expected in the Estate in which I am, so I humbly throw my self at his Majesty's Feet, and beg that he may not condemn me, not so much as in his Thoughts, till I know what is the Crime that is objected to me, so as I may offer a most humble Justification of my self to him.

I shall be infinitely sorry, if any Judgment that shall pass upon me in Scotland, shall oblige me to appear in Print for my own Defence: For I cannot betray my own Innocence so far as to suffer any Thing of this Nature to pass upon me, without printing an Apology for my self; in which I will be forced to make a Recital of that Share I have had in Affairs those Twenty Years bypast, and in which I must mention a vast Number of Particulars that I am afraid must be displeasing to his Majesty; and as I will look upon this, as one of the greatest Misfortunes that can possibly befall me, so with all the Duty and Humility in the World, I beg that I may not be driven to it.

I will not presume to add one Word to your Lordship, nor to claim any sort of Favour or Protection from you, for I address only my self to you as the King's Minister for those Provinces.
I am, my Lord, &c.

His second Letter to the Secretary.

Witnesses are added. To those he drew up an Answer, which, evincing clearly his Innocence, I have annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 126. B.
Those his Answers the Doctor sent inclosed in another Letter to the Earl of Middleton, which deserves a Room here, and it follows.

May it please your Lordship,

THE Copy of the Citation against me, has been sent me out of Scotland since I took the Liberty to write last to your Lordship; this puts me on a second Address to you for conveying the inclosed Answer, which I most humbly lay down at his Majesty's Feet. I am confident, that the Falseness of the Matters objected to me, will appear so evident to his Majesty, as well as to all the World besides, that he will not only order the Proceedings to be quite discharged, but that he will also order some Reparation to be made to me, for so publick a Blemish, as even a Citation for so high a Crime amounts to. I confess, the many hard Things that have been of late cast on me, and in particular to young and old, and Foreigners as well as Englishmen, that have been coming into those Parts, make me see that my Enemies have possessed his Majesty with Thoughts of me, that I must crave Liberty, with all Humility, to say, that they are as undeserved as hard. What have I done or said, to draw on me so heavy and so long a continued Displeasure? But my Comfort lies in the Witness that I have within me, of my own Innocence, so that I dare appeal to God, as I do now with all Duty to his Vicegerent.

Since this Matter is now become so publick, and that now my Name is so generally known, I must not be wanting to my own Innocence, especially, when not only my Life and Reputation are struck at, but the Religion I profess is wounded through my Sides: Therefore till I have put in order my Memoirs for a larger Work, I find it in some sort necessary to print the Citation, together with this Answer. But I had much rather have all this prevented by an Effect of his Majesty's Justice, in ordering an End to be put to this Accusation; and that by some Act that may be as publick as the Citation it self was, which may bear his Majesty's being satisfied with my Innocence as to these Matters; but if I have still as melancholy an Answer to this, as I have had to all the former Applications I have made, I must maintain my Innocence the best way I can, in which I will never forget that vast Duty I owe his Majesty, whatsoever I may meet with in my own Particular.

If there is any Thing, either in the inclosed Paper, or in this Letter, that seems a little too vehement, I hope the Provocation that I have met with will be likewise considered; for while my Life and Reputation are struck at, and while some here are threatening so high, a Man must be forgiven to shew that he is not quite insensible: Tho' my Duty to the King is Proof against all that can ever be done to provoke me, yet I must be suffered to treat the Instruments and Procurers of my Disgrace, who are contriving my Destruction, with the Plainness that such Practices draw from me. I will delay printing any Thing for a Fortnight, till I see whether your Lordship is like to receive any Order from his Majesty relating to him, who is

May it please your Lordship,

Your Lordship's, &c.

When the Doctor's Letters were altogether neglected, before the publishing his Apology in Print, he sent a third Letter to the Secretary, which likewise follows.

May it please your Lordship,

His third
Letter, June 6.

I Venture once more to renew my Addresses to your Lordship, before I print the Paper that I sent you by my last, of the 17 of May, together with the Two Letters that I wrote you; for I find it necessary to add this, and that it go with the rest to the Press.

I am told, that great Advantages have been taken upon an Expression in my first Letter, in which I wrote, that by my Naturalization, during my Stay here, my Allegiance was translated from his Majesty to the Sovereignty of this Province, as if this alone was Crime enough: And I hear that some who have been of the Profession of the Law are of this Mind. I indeed thought that none who ever pretend to study Law, or the general Notions of the Inter-course among Nations, could mistake in so clear a Point. I cautioned my Words so, as to shew that I considered this Translation of my Allegiance only as a temporary Thing, during my Stay here. And can any Man be so ignorant as to doubt of this? Allegiance and Protection are Things by their Natures reciprocal: Since then Naturalization gives a legal Protection, there must be a Return of Allegiance due upon it. I do not deny but the Root of natural Allegiance remains, but it is certainly under a Suspension, while the naturalized Person enjoys the Protection of the Prince or State that has so received him. I know what a Crime it had been if I had become naturalized to any State in War with the King; but when it was to a State that is in Alliance with him, and when it was upon so just a Ground as my being to be married and settled in this State, as it could be no Crime in me to desire it, so I having obtained it, am not a little amazed, to hear any are so little conversant in the Law of Nations, as to take Exceptions at my Words. Our Saviour has said, that a Man cannot serve Two Masters: And the Nature of Things says, that a Man cannot be at the same Time under Two Allegiances. His Majesty, by naturalizing the Earl of Feversham and many others of the French Nation, knows well what a Right this gives him to their Allegiance, which, no doubt, he as well as many others have sworn, and this is a Translating their Allegiance with a Witness. That Lord was to have commanded the Troops that were sent into Flanders in 1678. against his natural Prince: And yet tho' the Laws of France are high upon the Points of Sovereignty, it was never so much as pretended that this was a Crime. And it is so much the Interest of all Princes, to assure themselves of those whom they receive into their Protection, by naturalizing them, (since without that they should give Protection to so many Spies and Agents for another Prince) that if I had not very good Ground to assure me that some have pretended to make a Crime out of Words, I could not easily believe it.

My Lord, this is the last Trouble that I will give your Lordship upon this Subject: For it being now a Month since I made my first Address to you, I must conclude, that it is resolved to carry this Matter to all Extremities; and Mr. D'Abeville's Instances against me, and the Threatnings of some of his Countrymen, make me conclude, that all my most humble Addresses to his Majesty, are like to have no other Effect but this, that I have done my Duty in them, so that, it seems, I am to be judged in Scotland. I am sorry for it, because this must engage me in a Defence of my self, I mean, a Justification of my own Innocence, which I go to much against my Heart; but God and Man see that I am forced to it: And no Threatnings of any here will frighten me, for I will do that which I think fit for me to do, to Day, tho' I were sure to be assassinated for 't to Morrow. But to the last Moment of my Life, I will pay all Duty and Fidelity to his Majesty.

My Lord,

At the Hague, the 6 of June
Old stile, 1687.

I am, with all possible Respects,

Mean while the Doctor gets a new Citation, dated June 10. mostly upon his first Letter to the Secretary, which I have likewise inserted App. N<sup>o</sup>. 126. C. Thus every Thing was improved against the Doctor and other worthy Persons in this Period, and turned to Treason and the worst of Crimes. In this Citation there is no special Law cited; and in Law such a Citation could scarce operate against him.

Mean while this good and great Man, when thus prosecuted by his own Countrymen in Absence, had this Satisfaction, that so early as this or some Time before, he foresaw, and made some Proposals agreeable to the taking Place of the Protestant Succession, in the then illustrious, and now royal Family of Brunswick and Hannover; and under all the Discouragements he had at home, his Head was plodding abroad, upon what Providence might do for the Security of the holy Reformation and Protestant Interest, so much at his Heart now when Popery was mounted the Throne. And since his Majesty King George his happy Accession to the Throne, in his old Age he had a congratulatory Letter from the Hannoverian Minister, acknowledging he had the Honour to be the first Person who suggested the distant Prospect of that comfortable Turn of Affairs to him, and by him to his Matter the Elector.

The Doctor's Proposal this Year or formerly as to the Protestant Succession in the Family of Hannover.

A Person thus giving up himself to act for the Protestant Interest, could scarce escape the Fury of this melancholy Time in Scotland. Accordingly July 7. an Indictment of high Treason is tabled against Doctor Burnet before the Lords of Justiciary, for conversing and corresponding with James Stuart, Mr. Robert Fergusson, Thomas Stuart late of Cullinstown, and William Denholm of Wishaiels, forfeited Rebels; and being cited at the Pier and Shore of Leith, and not compearing, the Lords denounce him, and order him to be put to the Horn.

He is denounced.

I have observed no more about him in the Registers. When his large History of his own Time, which the World impatiently waits for, is published, we will, I hope, have this Matter of the Doctor's Trouble at this Time, set in a fuller Light.

July 25. I find another Process in the Records. John Anderson younger of Westertoun is indicted, that upon Thuesday, March 8. 1687. he said in a Company at Edinburgh. 'That it was lawful for Subjects to rise in Arms for their own Defence, and that otherwise no Man's 'Life or Property was secure.' And being desired to speak low, and the Company threatening to abandon the Room, he still uttered the same. The Pannel confelleth he said so, comes in the King's Mercy, and disowns it as his Principle. Next Day the Assize bring him in guilty: And the Lords decern him to be executed to Death, demeaned as a Traitor, and leave the Time and Place to the King. I meet with no more about him. This is a sad Instance of the slavish Spirit of this Time. It was now high Time for the People to awake out of their Lethargy, when People were condemned to die for asserting the plainest and most certain Principles.

James Boyd indicted and condemned for being at Bothwell and hearing Mr. Renwick.

November 7. James Boyd Prisoner, indicted for being at Bothwell, that he disowned the King's Authority, by adding treasonable Limitations, asserting he was not King till he took the Covenant, that he conversed with Mr. James Renwick, and heard him preach in the Fields. The Pannel confelleth Bothwell-bridge to have been Rebellion, owns the King to be lawful King without taking the Covenant; confelleth he heard Mr. Renwick, and that it was a Transgression. The Assize bring him in guilty. The Lords sentence him to be executed at the Grass-market, December 7. and forfeit all his Goods to the King. He was not executed for any Thing I find.

James Cunningham and John Buchanan banished.

This is what I meet with remarkable in the criminal Records this Year. I come now forward to the Procedure of the Council, as far as any Hints of it have come to my Hand. Toward the Beginning of January, there had been a Sermon somewhere in the Shire of Renfrew in the Night Time, at which, among others, James Cunningham Merchant in Glasgow, and John Buchanan Cooper there, were present. When they were returning to their Houses, they were seized and challenged where they had been, and being unwilling to give an Account, were imprisoned; and there confessing they had been at a Sermon, they were sent into Edinburgh, and banished to Barbadoes.

The one and twenty Persons underwritten banished to America.

April this Year, I find Sixteen Men, and Five Women, were banished to America, and gifted to Captain Fairn, who carried them away in Captain Croft's Ship then lying at Leith. Their Testimony they joyntly signed lies before me, and therein they signify the Reason of their Sentence was, because they would not acknowledge the present Authority to be according to the Word of God, nor disown Sanquhar Declaration, nor engage not to hear Mr. James Renwick, and conclude with leaving their Testimony against the Evils of the Times, and sign thus.

Liberation of John Spreul from the Bast, May 18.

The Reader has had already the Case of John Spreul, with the Debates upon his Torture, at great length. In May this Year an Order is granted to liberate him. Favours were now shewn to the Prisoners; and after near Seven Years Imprisonment, Mr. Spreul sent a Petition to the Council, which follows from the Original.

Where 'tis not unknown to your Lordships, how that your Lordships Petitioner, after his first Imprisonment, was put to the Extremity of the Torture Two several Times, the which having sustained, was thereby allolied by the Laws of this and all other Nations. Thereafter when he was indicted, he was also cleared by the Verdict of the whole Assize, and thereupon allolied by the Lords of the Justiciary; and at last being libelled before your Lordships by his Majesty's Advocate, who could prove nothing against him, yet your Lordships being pleased to fine him, and continue his Imprisonment so long, because he had not Freedom to depone upon the Libel, the Reasons wherefore he could not, being not only from Grounds in Law, but especially from Conscience, and his Obligation and Respect to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, which are at more length expressed in his Information, together with a Touch at a few of the great Losses he hath sustained both before and since his Imprisonment (what by Sea, the great Fire at Glasgow, House and Shop taken from his Wife in his Absence, also by bad Debtors, and through his Imprisonment all is prescribed by Law (that's due him) after three Years past, the Goods taken from him by Major Johnston, and the Death of his Wife, and other great Expences since his Imprisonment, being these Six Years and Five Months) all which he humbly offereth to your Lordships Consideration and Pity. May it therefore please your Lordships, to grant your Lordships Petitioner Liberty to follow his lawful Calling in his native Country, at least in any other Banishment (and so to be sold as a Slave, the which he would not be ashamed of, for the Gospel's sake, if he be called of the Lord to it) but the Liberty of a free-born Subject is that he humbly begs, at least Liberty a competent Time to see if by Law he can obtain any Thing of his Debtors to maintain himself in Prison, seeing nothing hath been hitherto allowed him out of the Goods taken from him by Major Johnston, neither out of the Treasury.

May 13. The Council grant the following Act of Liberation. ' The Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council having considered an Address made in behalf of John Spreul Apothecary in Glasgow, now Prisoner in the Isle of the Bass, supplicating for Liberty, in regard of his Majesty's late gracious Proclamation, do hereby give Order and Warrant to Charles Maitland Lieutenant Governor of the Isle of the Bass, to set the said John Spreul at Liberty, he having found Caution acted in the Books of Council, to appear before the Council once in June next, under the Penalty of one Thousand Pounds Scots Money, in case of Failie. Colin Mackenzie Cl. Secr. Concilii.

When this Order comes to the Bass, Mr. Spreul was unwilling to take his Liberty upon any Terms that to him appeared inconsistent with the Truths he was suffering for; and he apprehended this Order involved him in an Approbation of the Proclamation specified, which he was far from approving. So much he signified to the Governor of the Bass, and continued some Time in Prison, till a Letter came over requiring the Governor to set open Doors to him, and tell him he was at Liberty to go, or stay, as he pleased. Whereupon, after so long Imprisonment, he chose to come out under a Protestation against what he took to be wrong in the Orders and Proclamation, and went over to Edinburgh, and waited on the Counsellors, thanked them for allowing him Liberty, and verbally renewed his Protest against the Proclamation and Orders. Thus ended the long Tract of Sufferings this good Man was under.

The Council was much taken up in the former Part of this Year, in framing the different Shapes of the Liberty and Indulgence; but these will come in upon the next Section. In October they emit a Proclamation anent Field-conventicles and House-meetings, of the Date October 5. which is added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 127.

Proclamation about Field-conventicles &amp;c.

App. No. 127.

I find, the Occasion of this Proclamation was a great Clamour made by the Archbishop of St. Andrews, of great Meetings of People without Doors in his Diocese, and the Representation of the Bishop of Glasgow, of Mr. Renwick's frequent Field-conventicles in the West Country. There is nothing in the Proclamation needs Remarks after so much hath been said this way already.

The general State of the remaining Persecution through the Country needs not, after what hath been said upon the former Years, take up much Room here. The Soldiers continued to make their Ravages in the Beginning of the Year; but some Regiments were called up to England. The Sheriffs and inferior Magistrates were frequently imposing Fines for Non-conformity; and when the Liberty put some Stop to this, they went back and squeezed for alledged Guilt in former Years.

State of the Persecution through the Country.

This Year the Family of Mayfield in the Parish of Twinam, who, we heard before, had their Share in the former Sufferings, had their Oppressions continued. The Lands of Mayfield had been waste Two Years, and no Tenants in them; and the Collector of the Shire gave them up as deficient in paying the Cess. Whereupon Soldiers were ordered out to poynd the Ground; but there being nothing upon it, the Party called in the neighbouring Inhabitants, and would have them pay the Cess. This they positively refusing, the Soldiers seized the People's Cattle, alledging they had fed upon the Grounds of Mayfield, and their Owners had them to buy back at Rates double to the Cess. The same Course was taken for uplifting the King's Feus in those Lands.

This Year Alexander Keir, late Bailie of Stranraer, was imprisoned for alledged irregular Baptism, as likewise William M<sup>r</sup> Tyre, and Nathanael Johnston, for being present at the said Baptism. After some time's Imprisonment, it was reckoned a Favour to them when they were let out upon a Bond given by each of them to compear when called, under the Penalty of an Hundred Pounds Sterling. And, generally speaking, the liquidate Sum in the Bonds during this Period, was what was designed to be exacted of the Person.

Alexander Keir pursued for irregular Baptism.

During a good Part of this Year, the Ministers and Preachers, who had been either banished, or necessitated to flee to Holland, continued there, and towards Harvest and Winter, generally came home. The old Ministers banished thither at first, Mrs. M<sup>r</sup> Waird, Living Stone, Brown, and others, had all ere this Time got safe to the Joy of their Lord, and were beyond all Persecution; but considerable Numbers forced over since, continued there.

Ministers in Holland returned homeward the End of this Year.

I can do little more then record their Names; several of them have been pointed at formerly: All I now name, were carried safe through their Troubles, and brought back again to their Mother Church, to be singularly useful. Mr. James Veitch, Brother to Mr. John and Mr. William, formerly spoken of, an excellent Philosopher, and very much seen in Scholastick Divinity; Mr. George Campbell who so well filled the Chair of Divinity, Professor at Edinburgh after the Revolution; he was of vast and universal Learning, prodigious Application and Diligence, of extraordinary Piety, and singular Humility; Mr. Patrick Warner, of whom before; Mr. Alexander Pitcairn, whose singular Abilities in Controversy are known to the Learned in his Tractate de justificatione, his Skill in Philosophy by his examen Cartesiani, and his Knowledge in practical and casuistical Divinity, from his large and comprehensive Treatise on Prayer.

List of them.

Mr.

Q q q q q q q

1687.

Mr. James Kirkcoun, a Minister of great Zeal, Knowledge and Learning, a most curious Searcher into the natural, civil and ecclesiastical History of Scotland: When he returned, he was for a good many Years Minister at Edinburgh, and a most successful and sententious Preacher of the Gospel; Mr. Alexander Hastie a worthy and useful Minister of the Gospel at Glasgow, since the Revolution; Mr. Thomas Hog Minister at Kiltairn, of whom before; Mr. John Harroway, Mr. Andrew Cameron yet Minister at Kircudbright, Mr. William Moncrieff present Minister at Largo; and Mr. Patrick Cowpar Minister yet at Pittenweem in Fife, at this Time, I think, Preachers. I doubt not but there were some others who have escaped me, besides Mr. Langlands and Mr. Barclay, who continued in the Country since they came over upon Argyle's Attempt.

Persecution continues even after the Liberty.

Towards the End of the Year, and after the Liberty was granted, the Persecution continued severe enough, upon such as the Soldiers and others alledged were at Field-conventicles, and Mr. Renwick's Followers; and though some warm Papers about this Time, landed it at the Door of such who fell in with the Liberty, yet there is no Reason at all to affirm this, for their accepting the Permission given them, hath no Kind of Connection with the Persecution of those who did not use this.

King's Birth-day October 14. observed, and a Search at Glasgow.

Upon the 14 of October this Year, being the King's Birth-day, great Rejoycings were made at Glasgow, by ringing of Bells, and Bonfires; and at this Time, when nothing such was looked for, the Troopers lying there surrounded the Town, and the Foot made a very narrow Search from Sunset, till about Ten of the Clock at Night. Several were taken, and brought to no small Trouble.

Some Persons in Cambuslang imprisoned for their alledged Presence at a Field-conventicle.

In October this Year, John Summer elder in Hole, Robert Summer his Brother, and William Speir in Easter-cotes, in the Parish of Cambuslang, near Glasgow, were by a Party of Soldiers taken out of their Beds, and imprisoned in Glasgow Tolbooth, merely upon Suspicion they had heard a Sermon in the Fields thereabout, and not the least Probation was offered against them. There they lay Ten Days, and were carried into Edinburgh, where they were in close Prison about a Month. They paid Two Shillings Sterling to the Clerk of the Tolbooth, for inserting their Names in his Book, Two Merks to the Under-good-man of the Tolbooth. Each of them paid Two Dollars to an Agent, to appear for them at the Court, who yet did not plead for them; and each of them paid Eight Dollars to the Clerk of the Court, (whether Council or Justiciary my Information does not bear) before whom they were examined: Besides, Four Shillings Scots per Day, each of them for every Day they continued in Prison. All which amounts to near an Hundred Pounds Scots each; all this over and above their maintaining themselves in Provision while in Prison, their Loss of Time, and the rifling of their Houses by other Parties of Soldiers, while they were in Prison. I have taken Notice of those minute Charges, that the Reader may have a better View of the prodigious Expences many honest and religious People were put to at this Time, and the former Years, of more heavy and general Persecution.

Quarterings in the South this Winter.

In the Winter 1687. and the Beginning of the former Year, some Soldiers were sent into the South, particularly a Troop of Dragoons, under the Command of Lieutenant Crichtoun, who quartered by Turns in Kirkcudbright, Dumfries, and New Galloway, and did abundance of Hurt to the Country.

Societies infor-matory Vindication agreed to March this Year.

Last Year I took Notice of the Occasion of the Society People, their forming their infor-matory Vindication. Towards September, the general Meeting ordered Mr. Renwick to draw it up, and after several Meetings and long Reasonings, it was at last agreed unto in March this Year. The original Copy under Mr. Renwick's own Hand, delivered in to the Societies, is before me.

It is in Print, and there the Reader hath all that can be said in favour of the Heights some of them ran to. And Mr. Renwick evidently smoothes the former Actings of that Party, and in some Things he recedes from them, and puts the best Face he can upon their past and present Conduct. This Book was printed in Holland this Year, and hath been reprinted since, about the Year 1708. by the Remains of the same People under Mr. Macmillan, with some Addition of Papers published by them since; and it is to this Account of their own I have so frequently referred my Reader.

Their approved Vindication was sent over to Holland, and printed, and the Copies came home to them about the End of this Year. Care was taken to spread them through the Country. They further recommend it to Mr. Renwick, to take up the Names of all the Members of the particular Societies through the Country, and get Information in each, who were reckoned fittest in each Society to be Elders; and as he found Cause, after Trial and Examination, that he ordain or admit them. This he did in some Places this Summer, and towards the End of the Year, with a Design to form Judicatories, and take Trial of Scandals. But Mr. Renwick was soon after this called to better Work, and finished his Course, as we shall hear, next Year.

S E C T. II.

Of the various Acts of Indulgence granted this Year, and particularly that Liberty in July, which Presbyterian Ministers fell into, with some Remarks.

What made the most Noise, and was most remarkable this Year, was the Liberty granted to Presbyterians in July. Indeed, after so long and sore a Persecution, this breathing Time could not but be welcome to them, tho' many Things in the Circumstances of it were gravaminous.

So tender and cautious were the few Presbyterian Ministers now remaining, after Twenty seven Years Severities, of doing any Thing that might be justly offensive, that they refused several Offers of a Liberty once and again, under such Clogs and Restrictions as they took to be unlawful, and would not fall in with it, till it came to them in such a Mould and Shape, as they thought was consistent with their Principles, and the Cause they had so long suffered for; and what they had in July, was the utmost they could look for in the present Circumstances of Things.

I shall essay to give some Account of all the Shapes in which this Indulgence, Toleration, and Liberty, was offered, and by the Way, take some Notice of what was granted of this Kind in England, and make some Remarks upon the whole; and the best View I can give the Reader of this Matter, will be from the principal Papers themselves relative to this Affair, and I shall put all I have about it in this Section.

Contents of this Section.

When the King's Project last Year, to have the penal Statutes rescinded, misgave, he still prosecuted his fixed Purpose, to bring in the Exercise of the Popish Religion to Scotland, and Papists into Places of Profit, Trust, and Power. Last Year Shoals of seminary Priests and Jesuits came over from abroad, and too many of our Nobility and Gentry professed themselves Papists, and, like all Apostates, proved violent and active Promoters of Popery; and some of them had the best Poits in the Kingdom conferred on them. It deserves a Remark, that such in the Army, and through the Country, as had been most active in the Persecution the former Years, either turned Roman Catholicks, or fell in heartily with the King's Measures, and those of his Popish Servants, so necessary a Connection is there 'twixt Popery and Persecution. We have already noticed the King's Letter last Year, establishing a Popish Chapel, and allowing Papists the Exercise of their idolatrous Worship.

After the Disappointment of the Project, for rescinding the penal Statutes, the King continued in his Design, to make such Papists, and those who had been violent Persecutors join to admit Papists.

Matters being thus ready, February 12. the King writes a Letter to the Privy Council, and incloses in it the Copy of a Proclamation, which at one Stroke cuts off all the penal Statutes against Papists, and gives them a very large Liberty. I have annexed it in the App. N<sup>o</sup>. 128. I need make very few Reflections upon it, having already considered several Papers of this Nature, particularly the King's Letter August last Year.

King's Letter to the Council Feb. 12.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 128.

I have not seen the Council's Letter here spoken of, but by the Character here given of it as dutiful, one may guess that it was a material Consent to the King's Design. Accordingly now he publishes his Royal Intentions for a Liberty to Papists, among other Things, to evidence his particular Care of the regular Clergy. It would from this appear, the King had good Hopes of many of his Bishops and their Clergy, as favourable to his Design for bringing in Popery, otherwise I cannot so well take up how this Liberty was an Evidence of his Care of them. Any small Compliments he gives them further in the Proclamation, surely could never otherwise balance the inbringing of Popery upon them; yet he was happily disappointed as to several of them, who heartily appeared against Popery at this Time.

Remarks upon it.

He further recommends it to the Council, to root out Field-conventicles, which all their Power could not do. The rest of the Letter is a Specimen of that absolute Power he exerts in the Proclamation. And as he will maintain his own Splendor and Greatness, so he tells them he will be obeyed, and requires Accounts of any who shew Dislike, and adds, He resolves to shew that he is in earnest in this Matter, which I nothing doubt of.

The Proclamation it self inclosed in this Letter, I would have insert here, as deserving the Reader's special Notice, but it is so long, that I have annexed it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 129. Many Things might be noticed in it. It appears to be formed very agreeably to the Maxims and Politicks of France and Rome, and, mutatis mutandis, the Phraseology pretty much chimes in with the Revocation of the Edict of Nantz. It is the utmost Stretch of absolute Power, and Obedience, without Reserve, is required and expected.

Proclamation containing an ample Liberty to Papists. App. N<sup>o</sup>. 129.

Remarks on it

The Toleration to Presbyterians to meet in private Houses, is only to moderate Presbyterians, and to such as are willing to accept of the Indulgence, discharging them to meet in Barns or Meeting-houses, with a Renewal of all the Severities against preaching in the fields; and 1687. and Quakers are very amply tolerated, since not a few of the leading Men among them were in close Friendship with the Jesuits.

But any Body who reads the Proclamation, will see the Favour in this Indulgence is designed chiefly to Papists, which Name, it seems, the King does not like, and will have them called Roman Catholicks. All the penal Laws against them are rescinded, and a Liberty granted them to have Chapels, and a civil Liberty, if I may call it so, to come into the best Places of the Kingdom. The Test is abrogated, and a new Oath enacted to be offered by the Privy Council, to such as they indulge, and a full Indemnity granted to Papists, who had formerly acted contrary to Law, and a gracious Assurance given by his Majesty, that he will not meddle with the Church-lands, as long as People carry themselves right; but when the King finds it convenient to think otherwise, caveat emptor; and all this is ordered to pass the Privy Seal per saltum.

Reflections on the King's Proclamation.

App. No. 130.

I have waved making Remarks upon this singular Proclamation at any Length, that there might be Room to refer the Reader to a Paper printed at this Time, written by an able Pen, which does fully expose it; and it is added App. No. 130.

The King's Letter and Proclamation came to Edinburgh February 17. and it was unanimously ordered in Council, that to Morrow, February 18. the Proclamation should be published at the Cross. The Counsellors, who were heartily Protestant, did not concur in this Matter, and absented. Accordingly, this was done with great Solemnity, and Demonstrations of Joy; and no wonder the Papists were elevated, since they had no such Footing given them since the Reformation.

Council's Return to the King's Letter
Feb. 24.

App. No. 131.

Upon the 24 of February, the Council make a Return to the King, acquainting him of their Obedience, and Resolutions to prosecute the Ends of his Royal Proclamation. They give their Opinion for the incoming of Papists to Places of Trust, and thank the King for his Royal Word, to maintain their Church and Religion established by Law, believing that to be the best Security they can have. This submissive Answer, with the Names of the Members signing it, deserves a Room in the Appendix No. 131. And in this black List, who do themselves the Honour to prefer the Word of a Papist, for the Security of our holy Reformation, to the best Laws almost ever Protestants enjoyed, the Reader will observe our Two Archbishops in the Front.

Duke Hamilton and others re-
sue to join.

The Duke of Hamilton, and Earls of Pannure and Dundonald, among the Counsellors, did themselves the real Honour to refuse to sign this Letter. The Duke gave his Reasons to the King, and was a Person of too great Consequence in the Country to disoblige altogether, and therefore he is continued cum nota: But the other Two Noblemen are turned out from the Council, as the Reader will perceive from the King's Answer to this Letter, which, being but short, and never printed that I know of, I insert here.

King's Answer
to the Council's last Letter
March 1. thanking them, and laying aside the Earls of Pannure and Dundonald.

- Right trusty, &c. We greet you well. The last Expressions of your Duty to Us in your Letter of the 24 of February, were very acceptable; in Return whereof, We give Our hearty and Royal Thanks to all of you, that concurred therein, to whom, upon all Occasions, We will be ready to shew Our Royal Favours.
- And though We have thought fit, upon Consideration of Duke Hamilton his Promise for the future, and for other Reasons known to Us, to suspend Our present Resentments for his Carriage; yet We will not have you to believe that We are satisfied therewith: Neither will We delay to testify Our Displeasure against others in Circumstances somewhat less favourable; and therefore We do hereby lay aside, from that Our Council, the Earls of Pannure and Dundonald, whereof you are hereby authorized and required to make Intimation to them respectively.
- We do approve your Resolution, to keep a Copy of your Letter, to be signed by all Our Privy Council there; and We have ordered the Principal to be offered to all here, who have most dutifully signed the same.
- We do recommend to you to take care that there be no Disorder, nor that any of the Presbyterians be suffered to preach, except such only as shall have your Allowance for the same, and that they at the receiving of the said Indulgence, shall take the Oath contained in Our Proclamation, dated February 12. last.
- So soon as you shall have a Return from all Our Counsellors, of their signing or refusing to sign your Letter, you are forthwith to give Us an Account of those who shall refuse, to the end that We may signify Our further Pleasure concerning them. For which this shall be your Warrant. Given at Whitehall, the first of March 1687.

By this Letter we have a further Discovery, that no Benefit was designed by this Proclamation for Presbyterians, and this puts the Matter, which was formerly debatable, out of question, and requires them to take the foresaid Oath, which the King and Managers were fully apprised no Presbyterian Minister would take. And thus the Papists, and Quakers, if they could come in to any Oaths, stand alone enjoying the Benefit of the King's Moderation and good Intentions.

Whe-

Whether it was to gratify the Quakers, or to quiet the Clamour, and still the Fears of a great many upon this barefac'd coming in of Popery, or to gratify Duke Hamilton a little, and such as he had Influence upon, or for what Reason, I know not: But the King by his Letter to the Council of the 31 of March, gives this Matter a new Turn, makes some more Concessions, and smooths Things a little. I have added it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 132.

Therein the King signifies, That in his Letter March 1. when he spake of Presbyterian Preachers being obliged to take the Oath, he meant, Such of them as did not take the Test, or any other Oath; which is a silly Stretch and Offcome, for never one of them had taken the Test, neither was it once supposed they would. And now he allows the Council, if they think fit, to indulge them without taking the said Oath. All this was transacted without the least Share of any Presbyterian, or Application from Ministers of that Perswasion. And the King and his Servants were intirely left to cut and carve as they saw good, the suffering Ministers resolving not to move till Providence should clear their Way. And in this Shape not one of them fell in with this Indulgence.

Thus stood Matters in Scotland for some Months: The Papists had all the Liberty they could expect, and the Presbyterians were not a whit bettered in their Circumstances; when the King, to carry on his Projects in England, and prepare Matters for what he had in View, gives a full and ample Liberty to all his Subjects to exercise their Religion, and serve God in their own Way, publicly or privately. Accordingly April 4. his Declaration for Liberty of Conscience, is published, which, that the Reader may have a View of what was done in England in the Matter I am upon, I have likewise annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 133.

Abundance was written in England, pro and con upon this Subject. I shall only further notice, that Nine of the Presbyterian Ministers at London, Mrs. Hurst, Chester, Slater, Cox, Rosewel, Turner, Franklin, Deal and Reynolds waited upon the King with an Address of Thanks, which hath been many Times printed, with the King's Answer thereto; wherein with what Sincerity, his Practice afterward will best discover. He declares, 'It hath been his Judgment of a long Time, that none has, or ought to have any Power over the Conscience, but God, and solemnly protests before God, he had no other Design in his Declaration, but the easing and pleasing his Subjects, and restoring to God the Power over Conscience.'

I doubt not but this Declaration in England, very much paved the Way for the third and more ample Indulgence in Scotland. Matters were going on here as before, except that Presbyterian Ministers here and there, as they had Occasion, without accepting the Indulgence, ventured, where invited, to preach in private Families. The dissenting Ministers in England having fallen in with their unclogged Liberty, and the Clamour being raised in Scotland, that all the King's Favours were shewed to Papists, and Presbyterian Ministers refusing to accept of a Liberty with the former Clogs, the King, for Reasons known to himself, and without any Application from the Presbyterian Ministers or their Friends, saw good to cast the Liberty in more general Terms, and not to connect it with that to Papists, nor restrict them to private Houses, or clog his Favour with Oaths.

Thus a Proclamation comes out, dated at London June 28. and at Edinburgh July 5. which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 134. This Paper will best speak for it self, and I shall make but very few Remarks upon it.

Instead of the choking Clauses in that of February 12. it is declared, all Restrictions there are taken off. And the King begins with a Promise to maintain the free Exercise of the Protestant Religion. Next, 'by his sovereign Authority, and Prerogative Royal, and absolute Power, he suspends, stops and disables all penal and sanguinary Laws, for Nonconformity to the Religion established by Law.'

Where I shall take the Liberty to observe, that this dispensing Power in the King, tho' it must be abominate by all who value Liberty, Property, and real Religion, and although in the Design of its Exercise, no doubt, it was aimed at the Ruin of our Reformation, for the introducing of Popery, and for no real Favour to Presbyterians, tho' it had that Effect, yet the King and his Brother owed this Power in Scotland to the Prelates, and the Introduction of that Corruption into this Church, and were by the Parliament vested with this arbitrary and exorbitant Power, to order all Things relative to external Government and Policy of the Church, and consequently had another Claim, such as it was, under the colour of the then Law, to grant such a Liberty to Presbyterians, and rescind the penal Laws against them, yea, even to have restored Presbyterian Government, without Concurrence of Parliament, than for what I know the Laws of England allowed in that Kingdom. And although the Parliament last Year had refused to concur with the King in the full Extent of his Design, for removing the penal Laws against Papists, no Bar was laid in his Way as to Protestants. Those Things I only take Notice of as an Historian, leaving to others the Dispute as to the Lawfulness of accepting this Favour, and how far it could be reckoned an Approbation of the King's unlawful dispensing Power as to Papists.

Further, in the Proclamation, the King grants Liberty to all his Subjects, to serve God after their own Way and Manner, in private Houses, Chapels, or Houses purposely built or hired hired for the purpose, and requires that nothing be preached, or taught, that may alienate the Hearts of People from him or his Government; and that the Meetings be peaceably, openly, and publickly held, and all Persons freely admitted to them; and the Names of the Places and Preachers are to be given in to the next Magistrate. All Disturbance to such Meetings is discharged, and Field-meetings are most severely prohibited, and ordered to be prosecuted with the utmost Rigour.

This Liberty accepted by Presbyterian Ministers.

This Liberty was fallen in with by almost all the Presbyterian Ministers in the Kingdom, and brought a great and general Relief to Multitudes who were yet in Prisons, and under other Hardships for Conscience sake. And most part of the Presbyterian Ministers, who had retired to other Countries, or were banished, in a little Time returned to Scotland. I know of no Presbyterians declined the Benefit of this Liberty, save Mr. Renwick and his Followers.

the Deed of this Church.

The Presbyterian Ministers from the different Parts of the Country, met at Edinburgh about the Twentieth of July, and agreed to accept the Benefit of this Toleration; and after some Reasoning, and different Sentiments about addressing the King, which some were adverse unto, a considerable Number of them went into the following Address, July 21. which was signed by some at the Desire of the rest. This I have added App. No. 135. And about the same Time the Inhabitants of the Presbyterian Perswasion in Edinburgh and the Canongate, drew up and signed another Address to the King, thanking him for this Liberty so surprizingly granted them, which I have likewise added App. No. 136.

The Address of the Ministers is very cautiously worded, and that from the Inhabitants a little more florid. At that Time some Exceptions were made against it in Conversation, as containing a little too much from Presbyterians to a Popish Prince, and some Reflexions have been since made upon it, which I shall presently consider.

In my Opinion, neither of the Addresses are to be reckoned the Deed of the Body of Presbyterians in Scotland; but whatever in them is Praise or Blame worthy, is the proper Fact of the Signers of them. This is plain as to the Address from the Inhabitants; and the Meeting of Ministers was not by Delegation from the rest in Scotland, neither any Judicatory, but an occasional Meeting, wherein every one acted as he saw good, and withdrew when not satisfied: So that it is not worth while to dip into the Dust raised against those Addresses by Mr. Renwick and his Party, or others. Good Numbers of excellent and worthy Persons, joyned in them as what they thought lawful and necessary at this Juncture; and supposing the Hypothesis upon which they acted, the Lawfulness of owning a Popish Prince, in the peaceable Exercise of the Government, though he had not taken the Coronation Oath, yet peaceably, and generally subjected to by the Nation; it may be asked, What could they say less than they do, upon Supposition they made any Return at all?

of the Inhabitants

Canongate, published

Toleration to Scots Prelatists promotes the Interests of Jacobitism and Popery.

The Toleration Party join the Pretender
in the Rebellion.

I should have said no more upon this Head, were it not that some Years ago, when a Toleration was desired to Scots Prelatists, one of the Jacobite Party saw good to reprint the Address of the Inhabitants of Edinburgh and the Canongate, with some Remarks stuffed with pitiful Reasonings, and some gross Lies, which deserve here a little to be exposed.

The Remarker pretty openly professeth himself a Jacobite, and by his plain Dealing that way, discovered what every Body now may see verified in Fact, That a Toleration to Scots Prelatists was only necessary to promote the Interests of Jacobitism and Popery, and to strengthen a Party who plainly owned a foreign Jurisdiction.

This was at Bottom of the Toleration fought 1703. when the Remarks I am considering were made, and the Project broken by the vigorous Efforts made by the Commission of the General Assembly, and the Wisdom and steady Conduct of the late Duke of Argyle and others, in Parliament. The same Game was playing more openly upon the Change of the Queen's excellent Ministry in the 1711. when the Toleration was granted to the Prelatical Party; and it must be acknowledged by all at this Juncture, (1715.) tho' some Years after some People may have the Impudence to deny it, that the tolerated Meeting-house Party, have openly joyned the Pretender in the present unnatural Rebellion.

That the Reader may have the fuller View of this, I'll take the Liberty to insert here the Copy of a Letter taken off the Original, written by one of our exauorate Bishops, or their Clergy, to a Scots Gentleman highly Episcopal in his Profession, who had qualified in order to serve in Parliament 1703. which very providentially came at that Time into the Hands of a reverend Minister of this Church, who did me the Favour to communicate it. And being, for what I know, in the Hands of very few, I shall add it here as what gives a plain View of the Spirit of the Prelatical Party, and how deeply they were in the Pretender's Interest, and wherein the Scheme of the Toleration then (1703) desired, is pretty much opened out. Though this be a Digression, yet I doubt not but it will be agreeable to several of my Readers, and the rather that I have some Ground to think, this might be the Concert of that Party, and a Model according to which Letters were written to their staunch Friends, the new Converts and Oath-takers in that Parliament.

Sir,

1687.

Sir,

AS we count it a good Omen, that one of your Principles and Temper comes to be Member of Parliament; so the Expectation we have of your acting your Part in that Capacity, gives us a Reviving to our almost fainting Hopes.

Your laying aside, and refusing Allegiance during the late Reign, was sufficient Proof of your Loyalty to our rightful King, and Affection to our ancient apostolical Government of Episcopacy: We are therefore obliged to believe that your present Compliance doth not proceed from any Change of Principle, but from a good Intention of serving the Interest of the Royal Family, by restoring our banished Prince to his due Right, and our distressed Clergy to their former Power and Splendor.

We hope you are fully satisfied that those are inseparable Interests. The same Blow waited the Ministry and the Crown. The King could not be dethroned, but by turning out our Reverend Fathers, and abolishing our Episcopal Order.

We have now suffered Fourteen Years Affliction for our Loyalty and Religion under a prevailing Presbyterian Faction, which is a Weed never thrives but in Time of Rebellion and Disorder. The Belgick Tiger is now happily removed, and now Halcyon Days begin to dawn. You have now an Opportunity put in your Hand of giving a Turn to the Affairs of a distempered Church and Nation, that they may again run in the right Chancel; nor will Friends be wanting in both Nations to give Encouragement to so great a Work: But there is Prudence and Discretion to be used in our Management of it at such a Juncture.

The House of Lords in England, have put a sad Remora in our Way, by carrying on the Hannoverian Succession, and it will take some Time to retrieve that unhappy Step; and I judge it will not be expedient to touch in the first Place the Point of Succession, or to declare openly for our righteous Heir; but our Parliament of Scotland will readily follow that of England.

For though our Queen may favour her Brother more than a Stranger, and, if cherished with fair Promises during her Life, may thereby be the more inclinable to do Justice to an injured Prince; yet it will be inconvenient directly to impugn her pretended Right: But if our loyal Government of Episcopacy were first by Law established, it would be a promising Step to the right Settlement of the Throne.

And this you may the more easily appear for, and effectuate, seeing our Queen's Inclinations in this Matter are sufficiently known. Yet this is also to be managed with much Caution; for an Abolishing of Presbytery, and Restoring of Episcopacy in Spite of the Claim of Right, would be a bold Attempt. For though that traitorous Claim of Right might be fairly rescinded if our righteous King were upon the Throne, as being only erected in a Time of Rebellion and Confusion, yet it cannot well be done by a Parliament called in our Queen's Name, without a direct Impreaching of her Authority, or subverting her pretended Right to the Crown, which is wholly founded upon that contentious Claim; but the Members must be first sounded, and a just Computation of our Strength taken, and some previous Steps made.

Such as restoring of Patronages, and granting us an Indulgence, with Liberty to possess Churches and Benefices, and this will undoubtedly make Way for an intire Re-establishment of our ancient Apostolick Government of Bishops: For our Queen having Right as Patron in a great many Churches, she will still prefer those of our Persuasion unto others; and the rest of the laick Patrons, partly through Inclination, and partly through Interest, to please her Majesty, will follow her Example.

Or if ye attempt the demolishing of Presbytery, and Restitution of Episcopacy, you would not presently impeach the whole Claim of Right, but only that Clause that declares Episcopacy an insupportable Grievance.

But I will not take upon me to prescribe Methods. We have good Friends at Court, who will wisely lay down the surest Way for advancing our Interest. I shall only intreat, you may follow your Measures. We are obliged to you for the Contrivance of the Queen's Letter to the Council, which hath animated all our Party, and hath not a little encouraged our Meeting-houses. We build much upon the L. Answer to our Address, and the good Reception our Commissioners met with. We take it as a Testimony of my Lord Chancellor's Affection, that he interrupted, and suddenly dissolved the late Assembly.

Our Affairs will succeed apace, if our Friends act their Part in the ensuing Parliament. And the Truth is, unless our Parliament do more for us, what has been hitherto done will avail but little; for tho' we are at indefatigable Pains in establishing Meeting-houses, wherever we can have Access, yet we will not be able to hold out long, if we get not Possession of the Churches. The People whom we engage, with all our Power, to continue in our Meetings, will soon forsake us, if a Burden of our Subsistence be laid upon them.

of the 'Toleration to Prela-

1687. ' them. Expecting your Zeal and Stedfastness for a good old Cause, and Relief of the oppressed Clergy, I remain, in all Duty,

Your most humble Servant.

From this Letter we have a fair View of the Projects of that Party, who cried so much for a Toleration, and published the Remarks to which I return again. The Author of them, by a pitiful Pun, will have the Addressers to be the greatest Jacobites, and taking this for certain, challenges them why they fell in with the Revolution in less than Two Years. We see he enjoys the Comfort of their being Fellow-slaves with him only for a short Time.

Next he asks, with Assurance enough, ' Since no Difference of Religion could dissolve their Loyalty and Duty all the Days of their Life, how came it to be dissolved in less than Two Years? ' It is not my Business to defend the Expression in the Address, perhaps one as good might have been used : But the Remarkers Question may be very soon answered. According to the Principles of the Addressers, the precise Difference in Religion, and the King's being a Papist, was not the Reason of their falling off from him in so short a Space. Had the King kept by his Engagement in this very Proclamation they are just now thanking him for, to preserve and maintain the free Exercise of the Protestant Religion, they would sincerely have continued in their Loyalty to him, notwithstanding his Difference in Religion : But when, instead of this, he was violently running into the utter Extirpation of our Reformation, when palming upon them a pretended Child of his, and openly overturning civil Liberty, and when he had taken the Guilt of all upon him by running away, the Case altered mightily.

What he next alledges, That they thanked the King for going over the Belly of Law, and declaring, (he should have said, exercising) his absolute Power, is what, I suppose, the Addressers would flatly deny. And besides what hath been just now suggested upon this Head, they were of Opinion the penal Laws against them were iniquitous in their Nature, and injurious in their Execution, and did not reckon the Suspension of such Laws, by one in the peaceable Possession of the Government, any Exercise of absolute Power homologated by them, more than Robbery is homologate, by a Man's receiving back his own Money from the Robber, who had violently taken it from him.

But what follows chiefly led me to make those Observations. The Author after he had taken Notice, that the Addressers gratefully acknowledge their being delivered from many sad and grievous Burdens, adds, I know no Burden they groined under upon the account of Religion; for the Doctrine, Worship, and Censures, (he will not call it Discipline, for indeed the Prelatists had little of this) were very much the same under Prelacy as Presbytery, and only differed a little as to the Government, which does not so much concern the Laicks; was it not a sad Burden to them, to live quietly and peaceably under Episcopal Protestantism?

I cannot persuade myself, but the Author knew some Burdens Presbyterians were under for Religion, else he hath been a great Stranger in Scotland; but none know so little as these who will not see. Now the World knows Part of them from the preceeding Work, and I hope we shall have no more such Assertions in Print. I shall not dip into many Differences might be assigned, even as to Doctrine, Worship, and Discipline, under Presbytery and Prelacy. Giving, and not granting, the Differences had been smaller than indeed they were, the Addressers reckoned it no small Burden, to have their scriptural, lawful, and beloved Pastors torn from them and persecuted, and themselves forced in to receive Word and Sacraments, from Men of the Characters and Qualities most of the present Clergy were of, and to submit to a Government, antisciptural, and paving the Way to Popery.

The Remarker adds, ' Indeed a great many who called themselves Presbyterians were fined, imprisoned, banished, and executed, but for what? never one of them was punished for being Presbyterian, but for disobeying the Laws of God and Man, Nature and Nations, and particularly the Laws and Acts of Parliament in this Kingdom. Were they not punished for the Crimes of Treason, Rebellion, Plotting, Sedition, Murder, Assassination, Robbery, Insurrection, refusing Cesar his Due, &c.? ' It was this, and such scandalous Lies, and impudent Impositions upon the common Sense and Knowledge of Thousands yet alive, in the Episcopal Writers, since the Revolution, which in part engaged me in the Toil of writing this History. And what is narrated in the former Part of it, and fully vouched, will abundantly confute this vile Calumny cast upon the Sufferers of this Period. I could go through every Branch of this Heap of Slander he throws in Bulk upon the Sufferers since the Restoration, but it would only be a Repetition of what is set in a clear Light in the former Part of this Work; so that those worthy Persons stand in no need of this Slanderer's Apology. Tempora mutantur, &c.

But leaving those Remarks, it may be more worth the Reader's while, to have some Account of the Improvement Presbyterian Ministers made of this Liberty thus granted them. The Meeting of Ministers at Edinburgh, agreed upon several very good Rules for their own Practice, in their present Circumstances, which discover much of the Solidity and Prudence those worthy Men were blessed with now, after they had come out of a long and fiery

Overtures for making the Liberty practicable.

1. That all Ministers who can conveniently meet together, associate themselves in the Bounds of the Presbyteries, where formerly they had their Congregations; and if there be not a Number alive, that can make up a competent Meeting, that they of the adjacent Presbyteries, or, if Need and Convenience be, all of the whole Synod joyn together; and that they take in amongst their Number, such Ministers of their Perswasion, as Providence hath cast to live in their Bounds, until the Lord make way for their Access, either to their own or other Congregations, and also those whose Charges have formerly been out of the Nation.
2. That those Meetings convene monthly, or more frequently, as the Conveniency of the Bounds, and Necessity of their Affairs requires.
3. That every Minister in those Bounds submit himself to his Brethren, and that none set up a Congregation by himself, without the Advice of his Brethren, and the Desire of the People.
4. That no Expectants without the Bounds of the Province, preach without acquainting some of the Ministers of that Bounds; and that no People invite any Preachers, without acquainting some of the Ministers of the Meeting. If they be Strangers or Expectants, they are to shew their Testimonials.
5. That all who have not been ordained to particular Flocks, come to the respective Meetings of their Residence, and instruct their Ordination; and that henceforth none be ordained indefinitely.
6. That there be a List given in of all the Presbyterian Ministers alive, and of all Probationers, who are to instruct their Licences.
7. That until Ministers can have Access to their own Congregations, and be accommodated with Meeting-houses and Dwelling-places, they do, in Places of their present Residence, with the Advice of their Brethren, and Invitation of the People, exercise their Ministry, or continue to do as formerly in their Families.
8. That the respective Meetings be careful to recommend to People, the hearing and calling of fit and qualified Persons, and that special Regard be had to such suffering Ministers, as cannot have Access to their own Congregations.
9. That it be recommended to the respective Meetings, to take narrow Inspection of the whole Bounds, and employ their Brethren or Expectants, for supplying the People with preaching, and call for Help where Need is, from Ministers and Expectants, from other Provinces, and that they encourage young Men in their Studies, keep the Rules of the Assemblies in their Trials, and ordain them upon Calls from Congregations.
10. That the respective Meetings give their Advice, and concur with the People for setting up of Meeting-houses in the most convenient Places, especially considering, that one House may be useful for the People of divers adjacent Congregations; and it cannot be expected, that there can be as many Meeting-houses as Parishes, especially in the Country.
11. That associate Meetings take a prudent Way to get the Concurrence and Countenance of Persons of Quality, for the Furtherance of the Gospel, have with them ruling Elders, set up Elderships where they are not, chuse Moderators and Clerks, keep Registers of their Proceedings, behaving themselves humbly and gainingly toward all those of other Perswasions.
12. That Ministers in their respective Meeting-houses lecture as formerly, preach, if able, twice every Lord's Day, and Week Days; and, if they can conveniently, exercise Discipline, and endeavour to have Knowledge of all who are subject unto them, be frequent in catechizing as the great Mean of Edification, and obviating Error, prepare the People for the Sacrament, and administer the same so soon as they can conveniently, seeing it hath been so long in Desuetude, cause to set up Family-worship, and exhort to seeking of God in secret, keep Session-books, and Registers of Baptisms, and Marriage, and Collections for the Poor.
13. That Ministers in their respective Bounds, chuse Two Delegates or more, one of Five, and if fewer, but one, and if but one, that that one come to attend the publick Meetings, as they shall be called pro re nata, bring with them a ruling Elder; and that every Meeting correspond as formerly with the adjacent Provinces.
14. That where there is not a constitute Eldership among those of a Meeting-house, who design to call a Minister, the respective Ministers of the Bounds, send some of their Number to constitute an Eldership, with the Advice of the Heads of Families belonging thereunto, that the calling and settling of the Minister there may be the more orderly.

- ‘ 15. That in supplying of Meeting-houses, and planting of Ministers, special Regard be had to the Noblemens Residences, and considerable Congregations.
- ‘ 16. That special Care be taken that Edinburgh, which is the chief City of the Nation, where Courts and Judicatories, and Persons of greatest Quality reside, and which hath been most useful to suffering Persons in these sad Times, be specially regarded and provided with able, experienced, and godly Men; and in the mean Time, while Ministers can be got to them in an orderly Way, by Transportation or otherwise, the respective Ministers of the Bounds, carefully provide them with the most able of those whom Providence hath trusted to reside in the Bounds.
- ‘ 17. That where a Parish is in a Capacity to give Encouragement to a Presbyterian Minister, where their old Minister is alive, who was their called Minister at the Time of the Change, that he be obliged to return to them, and they to adhere to him.
- ‘ 18. That Care be taken, in Meekness and Love, to reclaim all Persons, Preachers, or others, who have stepped aside in the Hour of Temptation, and Day of Darkness, especially those who are given to wild Courses.
- ‘ 19. That Ministers who shall be settled in Meeting-houses, carry abstractly, inoffensively, and unconcernedly, as to their own Maintenance, that the World may see that it is not our own Things, but the Concerns of Christ Jesus we have before our Eyes.
- ‘ 20. That Preachers forget not to pray for our dread Sovereign, his Consort, and the Royal Family, and Persons in Authority.
- ‘ 21. That Unity, Harmony, and Love be entertained among our selves, and former taken Offences be covered with the Mantle of Charity, and not noticed, except where there is Matter of just and unquestionable Offence to be removed, which is to be done by the respective Meetings in the most prudent Way.
- ‘ 22. That the respective Meetings set apart Days for Prayer and Humiliation among themselves.
- ‘ 23. That the respective Meetings chuse their Delegates the First Day of their Meeting, to be in Readiness to come to Edinburgh the First Wednesday of October next, or sooner, if advertised by the Brethren of the Province of Edinburgh.
- ‘ 24. That Doubles of the Letters condescended on by this Meeting, to be sent to Congregations and Ministers abroad in foreign Parts, be transmitted to the respective Meetings, to be made Use of by them as the Import requires.

The last of those Overtures brings me to the Letter this same Meeting agreed upon to be sent through the different Congregations, where there was any Room for it; and it favours so much of a Gospel and healing Spirit, that it deserves a Room here, and I give it from one of the original Letters in my Hand, signed by Mr. Andrew Mortoun, Moderator of the Meeting.

Dearlly beloved Friends in Christ,

the particular Congregations.

‘ THe Ministers of the Gospel, who have been here occasionally together, to consider of the Improvement we are called to make of the signal and unexpected Mercy God hath been pleased to bestow on this poor afflicted Church, by putting it into the Heart of the King, to grant unto us the free and peaceable Exercise of our Ministry, so long denied to us, and the Benefit thereof to you, having Compassion upon the unsettled Condition of the People, and considering what sad Inconveniencies they have been under, the many and great Snares they have been exposed unto, through the Want of the fixed Inspection of their faithful Pastors and Guides; and not doubting but a great many are longing and thirsting after the same, have thought it their Duty, unanimously to concur in stirring up and encouraging those holy Desires in you, that you may lay hold on the present Opportunity for obtaining the sincere Milk of the Word, and somewhat of these Benefits you have been so long deprived of; beseeching you in the Bowels of our Lord Jesus Christ, that laying aside all Heats and Animosities, mutual Jealousies and Suspicions, you may be perfectly joyned together in one Mind and one Heart, to promote this necessary Work of your own and others Edification and Salvation; and therefore that such of you as want Pastors, do seek in the most orderly Way to be furnished with them, and such as have them yet alive in the Kingdom, do call and encourage them home to their proper Work, subjecting your selves to their Ministry; and those whose Pastors are without the Kingdom, do also use all Diligence to call them home to you, endeavouring to have all Obstructions removed out of the Way of their Return. And to enforce the same the more, it is desired that this Letter of ours be transmitted to them by you, with your Invitation to your respective Pastors, as a Testimony of our unanimous and hearty Concurrence with you therein, and the joyning of our earnest Desires with yours for their speedy Return. Which, with your fervent Prayers at the Throne of Grace, for the Lord's being pacified, his gracious Return, turn, and making his Face to shine both upon you and us, that the good Pleasure of the Lord may prosper among our Hands, is all at present recommended to you by 1687.

Your affectionate Friend in Christ,

Subscribing at the Desire of the Ministers met at Edinburgh,
July 21. 1687.

And. Mortoun.

From this Letter and those Overtures, the Reader will have the best View of the Improvement Presbyterian Ministers made of the Liberty granted them, and the Notion they had of it.

For my Share, I do not question but this Liberty was designed for Evil, but the Lord turned it about for Good, and great Good; not only to the Souls of many particular Persons, but the Interests of the Church, and the Advantage of the Nation as to our civil Rights. The Toleration was undoubtedly at first designed for Papists; and we have heard how, by a very open Act of dispensing and absolute Power, they got as much as they desired, and the Presbyterians had not the least Share.

This Liberty thus managed turned to great Advantage to the Nation.

So open a Step in favours of Popery, did alarm great Numbers; not only these Noblemen last Year, turned out for their vigorous Appearance in Parliament, the Earl of Dumfries, the Lord Ross, and others named before, but Duke Hamilton, the Earls of Pannure and Dundonald, and others who had a great Interest in the Nation, began to have their Eyes opened, and to take up the Danger their All was in.

Matters were as ill as they could be as to Papists, and that passed Peoples Power to help, for some Time yet; and where can the Blame ly, that the Remains of Presbyterians should essay to recover what had been most unjustly torn out of their Hands? Mean while, I cannot observe any active Hand they had in seeking this Liberty; yea, their Expressions, the sudden and surprising Nature of this Favour, they use in all their Papers when they speak of it, seem to import it was unexpected and unasked; and probably it was given by the Court to calm Peoples Spirits, and lull them asleep, till some more favourable Opportunity offered to ruine the Reformation intirely.

It is plain, that the Presbyterian Ministers fall in with the Favour done them, with the Wisdom of the Serpent joyned to the Harmlesness of the Dove, and so as to prevent the Mischief designed thereby.

As long as it was connected with a Liberty to Papists in its Promulgation, and until all the former Restrictions were taken off, they unanimously rejected it; and when those were removed, they improved it, not only as a mere Toleration to preach and worship God in their scriptural Way, but as the taking off the Cords they had been so long fettered with, and the opening of their Prison Doors; and they come out and fall to their Master's Work in all the Parts of it, like People at Liberty, without any Regard to the Narrowness of the Passage by which they escaped, and set up not only Worship, but Government and Discipline, and make Provision for planting the Church, by encouraging young Students, licensing and ordaining them to Congregations. Their Judicatories meet, Ministers are ordered back to their old Charges, and every Thing is done, as far as Circumstances would allow, according to the Plat-form of this Church, and its Privileges since the Reformation, from the Enjoyment of which they had been forcibly and very unjustly removed.

Accordingly the Synod of Glasgow and Air, met in a House at Glasgow, upon the 30 Day of August this Year, a good many of the Members of it at the Restoration being alive, and some few being added to their Number, by Ordination, to particular Congregations upon the Call of the People, even in the suffering Times, as hath been observed. Mr. William Violant was chosen Moderator, and, among other Things, took under their Consideration the Necessity of training up a good many hopeful Youths, who had not the Opportunity of publick Teaching, since they came from their philosophical Studies in the University, in their theological Studies, and by their Act recommended the Care of them to the late reverend and learned Mr. James Wodrow. My Relation is too near to that excellent Person, to offer any Character of him, and I may, without being mistaken, say, it is so savoury and recent in this Church, that there is no Need of it. For upwards of Four Years he had the Care of a very numerous Society of Students of Divinity, joyned with the pastoral Charge of a Congregation in the City of Glasgow, and attended them in his own Chamber five Days in the Week, explaining a Sytem of Divinity, presiding in theological Disputes, and receiving preparatory Exercises and Discourses from them during that Time, till he was called to the Divinity Chair, as Professor of Theology in the University of Glasgow, February 22. 1692. His Scholars were very numerous during this Interval, and the Eighteen Years he was Divinity Professor. At his much lamented Death, September 1708. I had the Curiosity to look over the yearly Rolls of his Students, and it gave me no small Satisfaction to find, that there were near Five hundred reverend Ministers of this Church, who had actually attended his Divinity Lessons, and been for some Time under his Care and Inspection. A good many, since his Death, might be added to that Number, to say nothing of several English, and a great Number of Irish Students, who attended his Lessons, and are useful for the Redeemer's Kingdom in our Sister Churches.

In short, under this Liberty a large Seed was sown, and the Foundations laid for the speedy, happy, and comfortable Settlement of this Church, at and since the Revolution.

This Liberty further prepared Matters for the Revolution.

Besides, the good Providence of God ordered this breathing Time to Presbyterians, sensibly to prepare Matters in Scotland, for the great Turn at the never to be forgotten Revolution, and the Nation's Delivery from Slavery, as well as Popery and Prelacy. The hearty Friends of Liberty as well as Religion, had Occasions of being together, and strengthening one another's Hands, and preparing Matters eventually for what followed, though this was not, and could not be in their Eye at the Time, and far less was in the View of the Court; but this was every way the Lord's Doing, and the more of his Hand, and the less of Man's was in it, the more wonderful it ought to be in our Eyes.

Sentiments of the Prince of Orange upon this Liberty.

Those Remarks bring to my Thoughts a Passage which I cannot omit in this History, and think it not improper to record in this Place, as containing the Sense and Opinion of so great a Judge of Men and Things, as the late King William of ever glorious Memory, concerning this Liberty I have been giving some Account of. And I have it from the first Hand, the Person to whom the then Prince of Orange did the Honour to express his Sentiments upon this Head; and I give it from a written Account under his Hand, where some Time after, as far as his Memory served him, he set down the Expressions which passed; and he is very confident what follows were the Prince's Words to him, for they left no small Impression on his Spirit at the Time, and since.

In a Conversation 'twixt his Highness and Mr. Patrick Warner, November or December this Year.

The Reverend Mr. Patrick Warner, of whom above, had a Call this Year from the Magistrates and Inhabitants of the Town and Parish of Irvine, with an Invitation from the Ministers of that Presbytery, to the pastoral Charge of that Congregation, sent over to Holland, where we left him since his last Sufferings; and he finding Clearness to return and exercise his Ministry in Scotland, a Lady of Quality, the excellent Countess of Sutherland, but lately deceased, being to wait on the Princess of Orange, and knowing of Mr. Warner's designed Return, asked his Allowance to acquaint the Princess, and to enquire if her Highness had any Commands to Scotland, which he could not but give.

The Return that most excellent Princess was pleased to give to the Lady, was to this effect, 'That the best Service he and those of his Character could do her, was to be earnest in their Prayers to God in her behalf, that she might be kept firm and faithful to the true reformed Religion; that she knew his Principles were not in all Things agreeable to what she had been educated and brought up in; but she assured him, she had a sincere Love and Kindness to all true Protestants, and heartily wished, that a Way might be fallen upon to take up their Differences, and reconcile them among themselves. And she added, 'Notwithstanding our Differences in some Things, yet I have a tender Sympathy with them, and am grieved for the Severities that have been used toward that poor persecuted People in Scotland, for their adhering to their Principles, which they thought themselves in Conscience obliged to do, by virtue of their Covenant; and were it in my Power to remedy it, I would, and could never consent to any Persecution upon that Head.' Withal she signified, that it would not be amiss Mr. Warner should wait upon the Prince at the Hague before he went off.

This he was not very forward to, but upon such an Invitation, and all his Friends urging him to it, he went to the Hague with one of them, who had Acquaintances there, and was brought to Myn Heer Bentinck, who took his Name, and that of the House where he lodged, and promised to send one to him, when it was most convenient to wait upon the Prince.

Accordingly, about Two or Three Days after, a Servant came to Mr. Warner's Lodgings about Eight in the Morning, and brought him to Monsieur Bentinck, and in a very little Time he had Access to the Prince, in the large Gallery at the Hague, all alone, in the End of November or Beginning of December this Year, when Mr. Warner had not the least Knowledge of a Design (if it was yet formed) in his Highness to go to England; but, as every Body did, looked upon the Princess and him as nearest to the Crown of Britain, upon King James's Demise without Heirs, neither was there any Thing yet known of the pretended Heir the King afterwards provided.

After Mr. Warner had kissed the Prince's Hand, he acquainted his Highness, that he had a Call to return to Scotland, to exercise his Ministry there, and reckoned it his Duty to wait upon his Highness, to know if there was any Service he was capable of doing him in that Country. The Prince answered, 'He understood he was called home upon the Liberty lately granted there; but, said he, I can assure you that Liberty is not granted from any Favour or Kindness to you, or your Party, but from Favour to Papists, and to divide you among your selves; yet, I think, you may be so wise as to take the Good of it, and prevent the Evil designed, and instead of dividing, come to a better Harmony among your selves, when you have Liberty to see one another, and meet freely together. 1687.

Mr. Warner answered, he heartily wished it might be so, and for his Part, he should not be wanting in his Endeavours that it should be so. And took the Liberty to add, ' That the Presbyterians in Scotland are looked upon, and represented as a very despicable and insignificant Party; and those who do so, take their Measures from the Appearances made at Pentland and Bothwell, or the like Attempts, reckoning that the whole Power and Numbers of Presbyterians were there drawn forth and united; but he could assure his Highness, that the People who thus reckoned were mistaken, for a great many in the Nation, who were firm Presbyterians, were not fully satisfied as to the Grounds and Manner of those Rifings, and did not joyn, and others were born down with sore Persecution; but he was of Opinion, that if Scotland were left to their free Choice, of Three Parts Two would be found Presbyterians.

We are, continued he, indeed a poor persecuted Party, and for many Years under heavy Sufferings, and have none under God to look to, for our Help and Relief, but your Royal Highness, upon the account of that Relation you and the Princess have to the Crown. Your Ancestors formerly espoused the Protestant Interest when it was low, and had but few Friends, and as they honoured God in appearing for him, so God honoured them; your Family increased both in Dignity and Power: And I nothing doubt (Mr. Warner here remembers he spoke this with more than ordinary Seriousness) that if the Lord now incline your Highness's Heart to espouse his Interest in Scotland, and befriend that poor persecuted People there, you shall never be a Loser thereby, but therein as you honour God, so God will honour your Highness.

To this the Prince was pleased to answer, ' I have been educated in that Perswasion, and hope to continue in it; and I assure you, if ever it be in my Power, I shall make the Presbyterian Church-government, the established Church-government of that Nation; and of this you may likewise assure your Friends, as in Prudence you shall find convenient; and because my Wife has not been so bred, you may possibly be jealous of her, yet I can give you the same Assurances for her, as for my self.

This Account from the Fountain the Reader may intirely depend upon, and I thought it deserved a Room here, as containing the Sense of so great a Person upon this Liberty, and his free and undisguised Opinion of Things in this Time; and it is a noble Instance of that real Kindness, and Heart Respect this excellent Pair, to whom those last Ages have no Parallel, entertained toward the suffering Presbyterians in Scotland, and their warm Side to our Reformation Rights.

The Liberty thus granted, was greedily embraced by Multitudes on the South Side of Tay. Large and spacious Meeting-houses were soon built in many of the Towns through the West, South, and East of Scotland, and even through the Country Parishes; and all over those Parts, and even in several Places in the North, Presbyterian Ministers preached, and were settled upon the Call of the People; and the Auditories of the Episcopal Clergy turned very thin, yea, in many Places in the South and West, they had no Body to hear them save their own Families.

Likewise, the Nobility and Gentry, some of them of the highest Rank in the Kingdom, left the Churches, and frequented the Meeting-houses, this Year and the following, as in Paisly, Lesly, Weems, Ormistoun, Struthers, and other Places; and which was more than all this, the Ministers in the Meeting-houses were evidently countenanced from Heaven, and very remarkable Success attended their Sermons under this Liberty, and Multitudes were converted, and many confirmed and edified.

Presbyterian Ministers very much countenanced by Persons of all Rank, upon the Liberty.

C H A P. XII.

Of the State of Matters in the Year 1688. when the Sufferings of Presbyterians ended, by the happy and glorious Revolution.

Matter of this
Chapter.

NOW the Reader is brought to the last of these Twenty and eight Years, of black and heavy Persecution I have undertaken the Narrative of in this History; and therein we find a Stop put to the Tide of Blood in this Period, with the publick Execution of that good Man Mr. Renwick. There were likewise not a few other lesser Severities exercised through the Kingdom. No small Encroachments were made upon the Toleration and Liberty granted last Year unto Presbyterian Ministers, who were disturbed in exercising their Function, and some of them processsed criminally, for their Freedom in preaching against Popery. Far greater Hardships were projected, and the Ruin of the whole Reformation was hastening on, had not these been happily prevented, by the wonderful Turn Affairs took in the End of this Year.

I shall very briefly then take a View of what hath come to my Hand remarkable this Year, and run through the Procedure of the Justiciary, and the publick Acts and Proclamations of Council, give a pretty full Account of Mr. Renwick's Sufferings, and the lesser Hardships many other good People underwent, and take Notice of some other Remarkables this Year, which will lead in more immediately to the happy Revolution in November.

Of the Procedure of the Justiciary, and Acts and Proclamations of Council this Year 1688.

Contents of this Section.

SInce hitherto I have ordinarily begun my Accounts of the different Years, with the more publick Procedure of the Managers, I shall follow the same Order here. It is but little that offers from the Criminal Court; from the Council we shall meet with not a few Proclamations, which I shall run through as they come in Order of Time, leaving some of their Actings toward the End of the Year, which are connected more directly with the Revolution, to the last Section.

Process against
Philip Standfield,
Feb. 6.

To begin with the Criminal Books; upon the 6 of February, Philip Standfield, Son to Sir James Standfield of Newmills, was tried and condemned for the Murder of his Father. The Process is printed, and I should not have mentioned it here, had it not been to take Notice of one Circumstance, which I have from several Hands, and one of them present when this Passage fell out. This profligate Youth being at the University of St. Andrews, a good many Years before he committed this barbarous Murder, came to a Sermon in Kinkel-clofs, about a Mile from St. Andrews, where Mr. John Welsh was preaching, and in his Spite and Mockery in Time of Sermon, threw somewhat or other at the Minister, which hit him. The Minister stopp'd, and said, he did not know who had put that publick Affront on a Servant of Christ; but he who he would, he was perswaded, there would be more present at his Death than were hearing him preach that Day, and the Multitude was not small. This was accomplished, and Mr. Standfield acknowledged this in Prison after he was condemned, and that God was about to accomplish what he had been warned of.

Upon February 8. Mr. James Renwick's Process came on before the Justiciary; but I am to leave it to a Section by it self, where I shall give a larger Account of it than yet, for what I know, hath been published.

Mr. John Hardy
processsed for preaching against Popery.

February 13. the Reverend Mr. John Hardy, Minister at Gordon, was tried for Treason before the Justiciary. The true Ground of his Process, was the Freedom this worthy Peron took to preach against Popery, and the Hazard thereof he represented those Nations to 1688.

 in : And it was designed for the Terror of other Presbyterian Ministers, who spared not to warn their Hearers of their Hazard this Way, and some of the Episcopal Ministers who shewed themselves really concerned at this Juncture, with our common Danger of Popery.

Mr. Hardy is indicted for Treason, and seditious Speeches, ' That he inveighed against Indictments that universal Ease which his Majesty hath given to his Subjects, in Matters relating to their Conscience, and that he endeavoured to create Jealousies and Misapprehensions of the King, telling his Hearers, they ought to be sorry, that others besides themselves enjoyed that Freedom, and that no true Presbyterian could consent that any others should have Liberty of Conscience, but those of their own Perswasion ; and so is guilty of Sedition and Treason, and ought to be punished with Death and Confiscation of Goods.'

The Lawiers in Defence of the Pannel, have very large Reasonings upon the Relevancy Pleadings of the Libel, and the Extent of the Words spoken by Ministers in Sermons, and their Import in Law. In the Records those take up several Sheets of Paper. In short, still denying the Libel, they plead the known Peaceableness and Loyalty of Mr. Hardy, that under the Usurpation he was very useful for levying Men for the King's Service, under the Earl of Glencairn, Lord Kenmuir and Middleton ; that he had since kept the Church ; that the Expressions in the Libel must be proven copulative ; that Hearers are not Judges of the Connection of what Ministers preach, many Times ; that the Scope of his Sermon at the Time libelled, did not run that way ; that he blessed the Lord for the Indulgence granted ; that pickt Expressions in a Minister's Sermon can never be admitted as relevant, otherwise Ministers could be libelled for Blasphemy, by one that only hears a Part of Scripture cited, as for Instance Psal. 14. 1. The Lords, by their Interlocutor, find, that the Speeches libelled do not infer the Pains in the Indictment ; and so the Process is dropped.

Upon the 17 of February, I find Sir George Mackenzie his Commission as King's Advocate, Sir George Mackenzie made King's Advor-cate, and the Lord Harcass turned out of the Justiciary. is read, and Sir John Dalrymple is turned off. The Reasons of this Change I leave to the civil Historians. And March 1. the Lord Harcass is turned out of the criminal Court ; his Case I think is in Print. No more, needful in this History, offers from the criminal Registers.

The Accounts of the Procedure of the Council will take me some longer Time, and I can only give it from their printed Proclamations, and other Papers relative to the Subjects of those come to my Hand.

When in the Beginning of January, the Accqunts were sent down from London of the Act for a publick Thankf-giving for the Queen's being with Child.
 Queen's being with Child, so fond were our Scots Council, not only of a Popish Prince, but of entailing Popery and Slavery upon those Lands, that upon the 17 Day of January, they appoint a Day of publick Thanksgiving upon this account, and order it to be kept with Prayers and Thanksgivings in the Diocese of Edinburgh, January 29. and through the rest of the Kingdom, February 19. The Act it self I have insert App. No. 137.

Whether this Day was solemnized with Preaching, as well as Prayer and Thanksgiving,
 I have not learned. This was the way Days of this Nature used to be kept. But the Proclamation takes no notice of this Branch of the Work of the Day. The tolerated Presbyterian Ministers did not keep it, and it was well it was not imposed upon them, as far as I can observe in the Act, at least they are not particularly specified. No doubt, the Popish Meetings kept it with a peculiar Pleasure. The Suspicions of Fraud in this Matter were by this Time not small.

Upon the 27 of April, the King publishes another Declaration, for Liberty of Conscience Another Declaration pub-in England. The King signifies, ' His Conduct hath been such in all Times, as ought to ' persuade all he was firm to his Resolutions ; yet that easy People may not be abused by

 ' the Malice of crafty Men, he declares his Intentions are not changed, since he issued his ' Proclamation, April 4. last Year.' Which is insert, as we had it above, App. No. 133. And after the former Declaration, he adds, ' Ever since we granted this Indulgence, it hath been ' our principal Care to see it preserved without Distinction, as we are encouraged to ' do daily, by Multitudes of Addreses from our Subjects of all Perswasions, the Effects of ' which, we doubt not, our next Parliament will shew ; and that it is not in vain we have ' endeavoured to establish Liberty of Conscience, on such Foundation as will render it un' alterable, and secure to all People the free Exercise of their Religion for ever. It is such ' a Security we desire, without the Burden and Constraint of Oaths and Tests, which have ' been unhappily made by some Governments, but never could support any ; nor ought ' Men to be advanced by such Means, to Offices and Employments which should be the Re' ward of Fidelity, Service and Merit.' He expects this will be much for the Advantage of ' Trade, and plainly intimates he had turned out of Places of Trust, all who were not ' for this Liberty ; and desires his People to consider their Happiness under his Govern' ment, and that now during Three Years, he has not appeared to be what his Enemies re-gun for the next Parliament, which he designs to hold in November next. But he had other Work put in his Hand by that Time.

That Things might correspond in Scotland, a new Proclamation is published there, called the Fourth Indulgence, May 15. which I have insert App. No. 138. It speaks for it self. He alleges Law for what he had done, particularly the second Act of his first Parliament. He narrates his Proclamation, February 12. last Year; but how truly 'tis said, that therein all are freed from Oaths, &c. when a most choking one to Presbyterians was in the Bosom of it, I must leave to others. He repeats his Proclamation, June 28. and signifies he has dissolved all Juridicatories, and the Magistracy of Royal Burghs, that they might receive new Commissions in the Terms of his Royal Pleasure. He declares he will maintain his former Proclamations, and threatens such as act contrary any way to those Points.

Act June 14.
for a Thanksgiving on the Birth of the Prince of Wales.
App. No. 139.

The next Act of Council I meet with, is June 14. Act for a Thanksgiving for the Birth of the most serene, &c. Prince of Wales, born June 10. 1688. I have insert it App. No. 139. I need make no Remarks. The plain Defects in Law, purposely and of design to cover this Matter, as every Body now knows, must be supplied with Days of Thanksgiving. I wonder how the Council stumbled upon that Expression, that this Birth is fitted to unite all our Hearts, and prevent all Jealousies, when such a suspicious Birth gave the greatest Strength to Surmises and Jealousies, and, I hope, united the Hearts of all true Protestants, to joyntly in the grand Turn of Affairs in the End of the Year. The Day appointed is the 21. of June for the Diocese of Edinburgh, and the 28 for all the rest of the Kingdom. It was well the tolerated Presbyterians were not called to keep this Day either.

Rescue of Mr.
David Houstoun,
June 20.

About the 20 of June, the Society People rescued Mr. David Houstoun, from a Party of Soldiers carrying him in Prisoner to Edinburgh, which produced another Proclamation, and no small Trouble to the Shires of Lanerk, Renfrew, Air and Nithsdale, of which I shall give some Account from some Papers in my Hands, and it is the last Scuffle of this Nature we shall meet with.

Account of it from the Records of the Societies.

We heard last Year, that Mr. Houstoun was adopted by the Societies, and joyned with Mr. Renwick in preaching to them; and from their Records I give the following Account of this Scuffle. Upon the 7 of June, it was represented to their general Meeting at Lochars, that Mr. David Houstoun who preached to them last Year with Mr. Renwick, and had gone over to Ireland January this Year, was apprehended there, and now sent over, or a coming to Scotland under a Guard, to be tried by the sanguinary Laws against Field-preachers yet in their Force, though those against Papists were taken off. They fearing he might meet with the same Measure as Mr. Renwick did, resolved to rescue him by Force.

Accordingly, about the 20 of June, a good Number of them gathered together well armed, and attacked the Soldiers at Carbelly-path. I find other Papers call it Crichton and Bellow-path, in the Shire of Air. Mr. Houstoun was rescued, and several of the Soldiers killed, and some wounded. Among the Country People John Mgechan in Auchingibbor in Cumnock Parish, a singularly pious Man, was killed, and some others wounded.

It is afterwards remarked in their Records, that Mr. Houstoun having discovered his Weakness, if not worse, and several Representations being given in against him, and some Things laid to his Charge, being found by the general Meeting not to be without Ground, that Party cast him off, and would have no more to do with him.

Proclamation
upon this, July 22.
App. No. 140.

As soon as the Accounts of this Rescue came into Edinburgh, the Council issued out the Proclamation, June 22. which I have annexed App. No. 140. The Proclamation terms him a declared Rebel, though I doubt if ever he formally was declared to be so. And the Nobility and Gentry of Air, Lanerk, Renfrew, and Nithsdale Shires, are ordered to meet June 29. and July 6. to make all the Discoveries they can anent this Attempt.

The Country
brought to no small Trouble by this Rescue.

The Country was brought to no small Trouble by these Meetings, to find out the Authors and Actors in that Attempt, about which a great Noise was made, and it was aggravated beyond Truth: And after all the Diligence used, as far as I can find, few or none who were Actors in that Business, were discovered, though in some Places the Inquisition was very strict.

Particularly in the Shire of Renfrew.

From original Papers before me, I shall give some Account of what was done in the Shire of Renfrew upon this Proclamation, that the Reader may see how ready the Managers were to run into the Courses of the former Years, when any Opportunity offered. With the Proclamation there came a Letter from the Council, to the Conveener of the Shire, requiring him to acquaint the Heritors in Terms of the Proclamation. Accordingly they met at Renfrew June 29. and appointed a Committee, whereof the Nobility were supernumerary Members, to meet and receive Reports, July 12. and agreed to the following Interrogatories, which were ordered to be put by every Heritor to the Inhabitants in his Ground; and if any of the Heritors desire the Advice and Concurrence of the Minister of the Place, he is allowed to take it; and a Report of the respective Answers is to be made to the Committee, with Certification, that all Absents from the respective Examinations, and all Heritors who shall neglect to examine, shall be delated to the Privy Council.

The Queries propounded are as follow ; and the Reader will observe, that these who form them, go beyond the Occasion of their Meeting, and the Proclamation, and make Enquiry into Field-conventicles, &c. I shall not doubt, but their Instructions from the Council led them to this.

Queries to be propounded by Heritors to their Tenants.

Q U E R I E S.

Every Heritor shall enquire of all Persons under his Charge, whether they know any Person or Persons that were Actors in, or assistant to the late Murder of his Majesty's Soldiers at Crichtoun-path; or of any Persons, Refettters, Hounders out, or Suppliers of the said Murderers: And if any know any Thing of those, that they give their Advice how they shall be apprehended, and brought to Justice.

Item. They are to return to the Sheriff and the Committee, an exact Account of those Persons in their Lands, if they own and acknowledge his Majesty's Authority and Government, and declare themselves willing to live peaceably under it, and if they be willing, according to Law, to forbear Field-conventicles.

Item. That the most judicious Inhabitants of each Burgh, or Tenement, or Town-land, be examined upon the Deportment and Practice of every individual Person in the Bounds, in reference to Field-conventicles, and bearing Arms at such Conventicles, or going and returning therewith, and how each of them are inclined, as to the keeping of the publick Peace.

Upon the 12 of July, the Committee met again at Renfrew, and the Heritors gave in their Reports from their respective Districts; and all the Inhabitants of the Shire, were found free and regular as to the above Particulars, except the Absents which had been sent to the Clerk, who had formed them into a Roll. Another Roll of Absents was formed by the Committee of such as were at Sea, sick, and otherwise imployed, of whom no Suspicion was entertained, which they agreed not to transmit to the Council.

The Presbyterian Ministers in the Shire having been ordered to be present, appeared, and one of them, in Name of the rest, did declare to the Committee ' the Loyalty of their Principles, their Abhorrence of all murdering Principles and Practices, and that since they had Access to the publick Exercise of their Ministry, they had not been wanting in publick and private to bear down such Principles and Practices, and resolve to do the same in Time coming: But as to their sitting and consulting in Matters Civil, or what relates to Blood, they humbly desire to be excused, it being without the Line of their Station or Vocation; and finally, that they knew none who submitted to their Ministry, tainted with such Principles or Practices.

Declaration of the Presbyterian Ministers in that Shire.

The Committee further transmitted the Rolls of Absents who were suspected Persons, with a Declaration of their Willingness to fall in with what further the Council shall think fit to require from the Shire, in order to the Preservation of the Peace of the Country.

This Shire of Renfrew lay at some Distance from the Place of the Attempt. I have not seen any Accounts of the Procedure in this Matter from any of the rest of the Shires, Lanerk and Air Shire, which ly near the Place of the Scuffle: But probably it was much the same with what is above, and the Inquisition was very narrow; yet I do not find any Persons accessory were discovered.

Upon the 15 of August, another Proclamation was published by the Council, prohibiting the Books named in it, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 141. The Occasion of it was the seizing of some Copies of the Hind let loose, when coming home from Holland. We have had several Proclamations of this Sort before, and so I shall not spend Time in Observes upon this; and indeed it is softer than one would have expected, after their seizing of such a Book as the last named, wherein the King's Right and Title is impugned and argued against.

It is not without a particular Emphasis, that the Proclamation declares the Books prohibited to have been printed in Holland, now when the Noise of the Prince of Orange's Expedition began to be talked of. The Books and Pamphlets discharged, are, ' All Translations of Buchanan de Jure Regni, Lex Rex, Jus Populi, Nephthali, the Cup of cold Water, the Scots Mist, the apologetical Declaration, Mene Tekel, the Hind let loose, the treasonable Proclamations issued out at Sanquhar, and those issued out by the late Duke of Monmouth, and the late Earl of Argyle. The Terms upon which they are to be brought in, and other Things, the Reader hath in the Proclamation it self.

I am well informed that this Proclamation was put in Execution in Edinburgh, by People who in the Councils Name went through the Book-sellers Shops, and seized not only these where they found them, but likewise any Books written against Popery, alledging the Selling of these tended to alienate Peoples Minds from his Majesty. And I have the following pleasant Incident from a very good Hand at this Time in Edinburgh.

Extended in the Execution to Books against Popery.

Some of the Counsellors gave themselves the Trouble to visit some of the Book-sellers Shops, and the Advocate used to relax himself this way. Either he, or another of the Coun-

U u u u u u

sellors

1688. sellers came in to a Shop, where the Master was a firm Whigg, and asked him if he had any prohibited Books. The other desired him to search and look for them. After he had looked through and caught nothing, he asked if he had any Books against Popery. The other answered he had, and a good Number of them. The former called for a Sight of them; for, said he, that is the Religion of his Majesty, and his Subjects ought not to be alienated from him upon that Score. Upon this the Counsellor was directed to the Place in the Shop where the Bibles lay, and the Door being cast open he took one of them, and a second, and said to the Bookseller, These are Bibles. They are so, said the other, and from one End to the other against Popery. This was reckoned an high Crime; and in the Afternoon the Matter of the Shop was cited to appear before the Council, and there was brought to some Trouble.

Country designed to be disarmed.

I am likewise told, that a Design was formed, and secret Orders were given to the Soldiers, to disarm the Country, especially the West and South, which was in part done, and good Numbers of Arms were seized. Some other Branches of the Procedure of the Council, immediately before the Revolution, will come in upon the last Section.

S E C T. II.

Of the taking, Trial, and publick Execution of Mr. James Renwick in February this Year 1688.

Mr. Renwick seized at Edinburgh February this Year.

Some Account of him, from a manuscript Copy of his Life.

IN the Beginning of February this Year, Mr. Renwick was seized in a private House in Edinburgh, and executed upon the 17. He was the last who suffered publicly, and he wanted not Impressions, his Blood would stem the Current of Blood we have seen running those Twenty and eight Years.

This pious Person having been Minister to the Society People, who endured no small Hardships for many Years, and separated from the rest of our Presbyterian Sufferers for Conscience sake since the Year 1680. and very little of him being known, and the first rude Draught of his Life writ by the Reverend Mr. Alexander Shiels, having come to my Hand; I shall from it, and some other original Papers under Mr. Renwick's own Hand, before me, give the Reader a few of the most remarkable Passages of his Life, and a larger Account of his Sufferings and Trial, from the Registers and other Papers, than I have yet seen.

In the Entry I take the Liberty to observe, as in part I have already hinted, that, had not this good Man been overdriven by several of the People he was embarked with, he would not have run the Lengths he went in some Things, and had he outlived the Revolution, I make no question but he would have come in with Mrs. Shiels, Linning, and Boyd, to joyn with the Establishment of this Church, and might have been a very useful Instrument in it.

Mr. James Renwick was born February 15. 1662. of mean but pious Parents, in the Parish of Glencairn. His religious Disposition appeared very early, and his Parents had the Hopes of his being publicly useful. His Father, who died about the 1676. declared to some of his Friends upon his Death-bed, that he was under the Thoughts his Son would have but a short Time in this World, and die publicly in his Youth.

During his Child-hood he wanted not Temptations and Vexations about the Foundations of Religion, out of which he got with Advantage, and came to great Establishment, and a settled Faith of God's Being, Attributes, Providence, and a future State. He was educated at the College of Edinburgh, and there fell under some Repröaches and Aspersions, from which the Writer of his Life fully vindicates him. When he came to receive the Degree of Master of Arts, he refused the Oath of Allegiance, and publicly objected against the nauseous Titles and Compliments given to the then Duke of York, in the Dedication of The Jes emitted by the Class he was in; for this Reason he was excluded from a Share in the publick Laureation, but received his Degrees privately.

When prosecuting his Studies at Edinburgh, he fell in with the People who at that Time raised Objections against the Indulgence, and came that Length in his Scruples upon that Head, that he gave over in a little Time hearing the indulged Ministers. Frequently afterwards he used to signify that he was extremely affected at Mr. Cargil's Death July 21. 1681. And upon the back of this intirely joyned himself with that Party who cast off the King's Authority, and set up on a Lay distinct from the Principles and Practice of other Presbyteri-and since the Reformation. He kept their general and particular Meetings, and was not a little useful to that People by his Letters, and quick Apprehension of Things. 1688.

Mr. Renwick, when thus embarked with the Society People, was a most violent Opposer of Gib and his Followers, tho' he wanted not Aspersions cast upon him as if he had been dipt with them. And when that vile Blasphemer had seduced about Thirty Persons, most part silly Women, and was apprehended and extremely favoured by the Duke of York, at that Time in Scotland, upon all Occasions he opposed Gib, and was very useful to recover not a few from his Delusions.

In the Year 1682. tho' Mr. Renwick joyned in proclaiming the Lanark Declaration, yet he always acknowledged several Expressions in it to be unadvised. A little after this, the Societies sent Mr. Renwick abroad to the University of Groningen to prosecute his Studies; and there, after about Half a Year's Study, he was, April 1683. ordained indefinitely to the Ministry with Imposition of Hands, and at his Ordination had the Favour done him, that, instead of the Belgick Forms, he was allowed to sign the Westminster Confession of Faith and Catechisms.

September 1683. he came home to Scotland through a great many Hazards and Difficulties, and the Society People chose him as their Minister, and subjected only to him. He was very frequent in Preaching and Baptizing during the following Years, till he was taken; and met with many surprising and singular Deliverances from his Pursuers, several Instances of which ly before me, too long here to be inserted.

Towards the End of the 1684 when the forenamed Declaration, against Informers and Intelligencers, was first proposed to him, he was very much against it, declaring his Fears of the sad Effects it might have; yet at length was brought into it. It was he who penned the Sanguar Declaration, and proclaimed it May 28. 1685. with about Two hundred of his Followers, wherein they deny King James's Authority, and renounce all Subjection to him.

About that same Time he refused to joyn the Earl of Argyle and his Party, till they would so state their Quarrel, that he and his Followers could joyn in it. In the Years 1686 and 1687. he continued preaching and catechizing such as would subject to him up and down the West and South. He appeared with no small Keeness against the Liberty at this Time granted to Presbyterians, and inveighed against their accepting it from a Popish Prince.

Against this he drew up a Paper, and came in to Edinburgh January this Year, and gave a Double of it to one of the Presbyterian Ministers in that City, to be communicated to his Brethren. It hath been printed under the Title of The Testimony of some persecuted Presbyterian Ministers against Toleration, &c. It being common, I need not insert it.

From Edinburgh he went over to Fife, where he continued preaching till the last of January, which Day he came back and lodged in a Friend's House in the Castle-hill, who dealt in English Goods; and the Custom-house Officers were frequently searching it for prohibited Goods. Thomas Justice, one of the People who used to look after such Things, by some of his Spies got Notice that a Stranger was come to that House that Night, and the Master of the Family being a known Follower of Mr. Renwick's, it was suspected it might be he: Yea, that very Night the said Justice, in a Company where the Discourse happened to fall upon Mr. David Houstoun, and a Rumour a going that he was seized in England, said, he hoped he should have another of them ere long, and taking up a Glass, drank Mr. Renwick's Health, swearing he hoped to grip him ere Seven next Morning.

He is seized at
bruary 1.

Accordingly, February 1. early in the Morning, the Waiters attacked the House, pretending they were searching for run Goods. Mr. Renwick coming out of his Room upon some Noise, Justice standing at the Door, said, 'My Life for it this is Mr. Renwick; all in this House must go to the Guard to see what Trade they are of.' Mr. Renwick, with Two of his Friends, retired to another Door, and opening it, found it guarded by some of Justice's Company. One of them essayed to force his Way, and was resisted by the Waiters; whereupon Mr. Renwick drew a Pistol, and discharging it without hurting any of them, obliged them to give Way, and got out, but when going by them, one of them struck him on the Breast with somewhat or other, and bruised him very fore, which marred him in his Flight, and the Pain of it was the Occasion of his Fall more than once when running.

By this Time Justice had raised the Cry for Assistance to take the Dog Renwick: However Mr. Renwick got down the Castle-wynd, and even to the Head of the Cowgate; but having fallen several times, and lost his Hat, he came to be noticed, and being hotly pursued, at last was taken by a profligate Fellow. The Two others escaped.

Mr. Renwick was straight carried to the Court of Guard, where, for a while, he was very much insulted. Graham the Captain of the Guard, delivered him up to a Committee of the Council, who ordered him to be put in the Irons. When there alone, he afterward signified to some of his Friends, being the first Opportunity he had of stated Supplication, he betook himself to God in Prayer, humbly begging, that the Lord might carry him through his 1688.

Sufferings, cheerfully resigning his Life to the Lord, earnestly begging, that Enemies might be permitted to do no more but take his Life, and not to torture and mangle him. He observed to them, that the Lord was pleased to answer him remarkably enough, several Projects this way being disappointed.

His Examination before some Counselers.

Before he received his Indictment, he was carried to the Viscount of Tarbet's Chamber, and there examined very particularly. Two little Note-books of his were found upon him when taken, where, in his own Hand, were the Notes of Two Sermons he had lately preached at Broad-craigs, wherein he had disclaimed and disproved the King's Authority, and had reasoned against the paying of Cess, with some other Things, and proven, that bearing Arms, for the Defence of the Gospel at Field-meetings, was lawful. This I find Mr. Renwick giving an Account of, in an original Letter of his before me, to a Friend, dated February 6.

Upon those Points he was examined, and very frankly acknowledged the Doctrine he had taught, and with much Composure and Boldness he defended it. In the same Letter, he gives an Account of his Examination upon some other Things contained in a Pocket-book found upon him, which were only Forms of Address to some Professors abroad, and Robert Hamilton. Those being plain and set down, he owned he corresponded with them; and being asked the Subject of their Correspondence, he answered, he used to give Account of his and his Hearers Sufferings, and beg their Sympathy.

There were moreover some capital Letters in the same Book, such as A. S. M. S. J. W. A. W. P. R. P. A. M. M. at G. where a Hat was left. The Committee were extremely importunate to discover their Names. Mr. Renwick knowing they were as obnoxious already, as any Thing he could say would make them, ingenuously declared they were the Names of Persons he was to have writ to, Mr. Alexander Shiels, Michael Shiels, James and Archibald Wilsons, Peter Rayning, and Peter Aird, all of whom were upon their Hiding, and out of their Reach. He made some Difficulty upon the last, till the Advocate promised to save her from any Trouble upon his account; and then, to escape the Torture they threatened him with, he told them it was one Mrs. Miller at Glasgow. This Ingenuity in him did much soften the Rage of his Enemies.

His Indictment February 3.

After this Examination he received his Indictment, February 3. and the annexed List of Witnesses. The Indictment being but short, and the last we are to meet with, I insert it here, and the rather, because it lets us in to several Particulars omitted in the former Account of him.

‘ Mr. James Renwick Prisoner, you are indicted and accused, that whereas notwithstanding by the fundamental Laws of this Kingdom, and constant Practick thereof, and by the Acts of Parliament after mentioned, viz. the 129 Act, Parl. 8. Jam. VI. the 151 Act of his 15 Parl. by the 1 Act of his 18 Parl. and by Act 2. Sess. 2. Parl. 1. Char. II. and the 2 Act of his 3 Parl. the Kings of Scotland, their Heirs and Royal Successors, are acknowledged to be sovereign Monarchs, absolute Princes, Judges and Governors of this Realm; and that none shall decline the King or his Authority, under the Pain of Treason; and that the Kings of this Realm hold their Crown and Authority from God Almighty only; and therefore the entering into Leagues and Covenants, rising in Arms against the King, or suspending him from the Exercise of his Government, or putting Limitations upon the Allegiance and Obedience of the Subjects, are declared Treason: And that upon the Death of any King, the royal and sovereign Authority is immediately, and ipso facto, devolved upon the next lawful Successor; and that no Objection or Pretext whatsoever, can impede or obstruct the same; and the Design to obstruct or divert the Succession, is declared high Treason.

‘ Nevertheless it is of Verity, that you the said Mr. James Renwick, having shaken off all Fear of God, and Respect and Regard to his Majesty's Authority and Laws; and having entered your self into the Society of some Rebels of most damnable and pernicious Principles, and disloyal Practices, you took upon you to be a Preacher to those Traitors, and became so desperate a Villain, that you did openly and frequently preach in the Fields, denying claiming against the Authority and Government of our sovereign Lord the King, denying that our most gracious Sovereign King James VII. is lawful King of those Realms, asserting that he was an Usurper, and that it was not lawful to pay Cess or Taxes to his Majesty; but that it was lawful, and the Duty of Subjects, to rise in Arms, and make War against his Majesty, and those commissioned by him.

‘ For which Crimes, you the said Mr. James Renwick was declared Fugitive, and denounced Rebel by open Proclamation, published at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and printed, bearing the Date of the Day of Year, and the Lieges were certiorate thereanent, and required to apprehend you, and there was a Fine of an Hundred Pounds Sterling, as a Reward and Encouragement, promised to such as should apprehend you.

‘ And yet ye did still continue in your former desperate Obstinacy, keeping Conventicles in the Fields, and requiring your Hearers to provide Arms, and come armed to those Rendezvous of Rebellion, and particularly upon one or other of the Days of September last, you kept a Field-conventicle upon the Muir, near Paisly, where were many Persons sons in Arms; and upon one or other of the Days of November last, and likewise upon the 18 of January last bypast, you did keep Two Conventicles at Braidscraigs, within Two Miles of the capital City of this Kingdom, where you not only renewed your former treasonable Doctrines and Positions, but likewise with your Hand you wrote down in a Book found upon you when you was taken, the Heads of those treasonable Sermons, with the Dates and Places where you had preached the same.

And being apprehended within the City of Edinburgh, you did desperately fire upon the Officers that did come to take you. And being brought before the Lord Chancellor and other Counsellors, upon the First of February, 1688 Years instant, like a desperate irreconcilable Traitor, you did openly deny and decline our sovereign Lord's Authority, and assert that our most gracious King was an Ufurper, and not lawful King, and owned you had preached the same.

Likeas, ye the said Mr. James Renwick, being brought to the Viscount of Tarbat's Lodging, did there, in the Presence of the Lord Chancellor, and several other Counsellors, upon the 3 of February instant, avowedly and traiterously declare, that you could not in your Conscience acknowledge the King to be your lawful Sovereign, and that the lineal Succession did not give a Right to govern; and that you thought it was not lawful to pay Cess to the King, because it was imposed for maintaining of Forces to bear down the Gospel, and that all Persons who made Payment of any Cess, were involved in that Guilt; and adhered to your preaching Book, and declared the same to be your own Hand-write, and owned you had preached to the People to come in Arms to your Meetings for Defence, in case they met with Opposition, and that it was lawful to do so.

Wherethrough ye the said Mr. James Renwick has committed, and is guilty of the Crimes of high Treason above specified, or one or other of them, and is Actor, Art or Part in the same; which being found by an Assize, you ought to be punished with Forfeiture of Life, Land, and Goods, to the Terror and Example of others to commit the same hereafter.

You are to answer to this Indictment upon the 8 Day of February, 1688 Years.

James Guthrie Purfevant.

With this Libel a List of Forty five was given him as his Assize, to judge upon the Probation, out of which Fifteen were to be chosen. I have formerly observed, that it was customary in this Period to vex Presbyterians, who could not actively joyn in the Bloodshed of this Time, by putting them upon the Assizes of the Sufferers, and that both to expose them if they consented, and to bring them into Trouble if they refused.

Thus I find some worthy Persons, some of them very considerable Sufferers themselves, put upon Mr. Renwick's Assize, as Sir John Maxwell of Nether-pollock, Sir Robert Stuart of Allanbank, Mr. Robert, since Sir Robert Blackwood Merchant in Edinburgh, Mr. George, after Sir George Hume, Samuel, since Sir Samuel McClellan, Merchants there, George Mosman, John Armour Merchant in Glasgow, and many others. None of these would be concerned in the Condemnation of this good Man. The Fifteen who were pitched upon out of the Forty five, were as follows:

James Hume of Kimmergame,
John Hume of Nine-wells,
John Martin Clerk to the Manufactory,
Alexander Martin of Kesslaw,
Robert Haliburton Merchant,
Thomas Lawrie Merchant,
Archibald Johnston Merchant,
Thomas Wylie Merchant,

James Hamilton Vintner,
William Cockburn Merchant,
James Hamilton younger, Stationer,
Robert Currie Stationer,
John Cunningham Merchant in Glasgow,
William Somerwel Chamberlain of Douglas,
Ninian Banantyne of Kaims, Chancellor to the Assize.

Together with this Indictment and those Assizers, Mr. Renwick received the following List of Witnesses signed by the Purfevant.

John Archbishop of Glasgow,
George Viscount of Tarbat,
Lord Livingstone,
Colin Earl of Balcarras,
Earl of Traquair,
General Major Graham,
Sir William Paterson,
Mr. Colin Mackenzie Clerk to the Council,

Sir Thomas Moncreif of that Ilk,
Mr. William More Clerk to the Session,
Master of Balmerino,
George Row,
David Gourel, } Merchants in Edinburgh.
Hugh Ross, }
James Boyd Prisoner in the Canongate.

Signed,

James Guthrie Purfevant.

When

X x x x x x x

1688

When Mr. Renwick had gotten this Indictment, by the Favour of the Keepers, his Mother Elizabeth Carson, a singularly religious Person, was permitted now and then to see him. With her he conversed in much Composure and Affection, and frequently declared his great Grief to leave his People who had been under his Ministry; but added, were it in his Choice, he could not think upon it without Terror, to continue much longer in his Con- flicts with a Body of Sin and Death he carried about with him; that he adhered to all he had preached. This was upon the Sabbath, February 5.

In his Letter, February 6, before referred to, after he hath given an Account of God's great Goodness to his Soul, and desired the Persons whose Names he decyphered, might be acquainted with what he had done, to save himself from Torture, he concludes, 'I desire none may be troubled on my behalf, but rather rejoyce with him, who with Hope and Joy is waiting for his Marriage and Coronation Hour.'

At another Time his Mother asking him how he was; he answered, Well, but since my last Examination I cannot get praying. His Mother looking on him with much Surprize and Concern, he added, I can hardly get praying, being so much taken up in praising, and ravished with the Joy of the Lord.

When his Mother, who was extremely affectionate, expressed to him her Fears of fainting, and running to Extremities, saying, How shall I look to that Head and these Hands set up upon the Ports of Edinburgh? I have so much self, that I will never be able to endure it. He smiling said, She would never see them there, adding, I have willingly parted with my Life, and humbly sought of the Lord to bind them up from going any further; and I am much persuaded, they shall be permitted to go no further. When at Liberty, he used to be much troubled with Fears about Torture, and mangling his Body, but now they were intirely removed.

Some Time after, others of his Friends found Means to get in to him; them he pressed to mind Salvation Work, and to get their Peace made with God, and to be stedfast in the way of Truth. When they regreted his being taken away from them, he said, They should rather rejoyce that he was to be taken away from the Reproaches and Calumnies he had lien under, which he hoped his Death would wipe away. He further told them at his first Appearance, he was once thinking to wave the Counsellors Interrogatories, and put them upon Probation; but he found his Soul filled with Darknes upon those Thoughts, and resolved to be plain and full in his Confession, as he had been in his Sermons, and in so doing he had Peace.

Feb. 8. he is before the Justici-ary.

Upon Wednesday, February 8. Mr. Renwick was brought before the Justiciary. After his Indictment was read, the Advocate restricted it to his denying the King's Authority, his preaching the Unlawfulness of paying Cess, and that he had called his Followers to come with Arms to the Field-meetings. All I find in the Registers for Probation, is his own signed Confession, which I give from them. It is as follows.

His Confession.

'Mr. James Renwick being interrogated, if he owned King James VII. who now reigneth, to be his lawful King; declares, he cannot deny his being de facto in the Throne, but de- nies that de jure he ought to reign, or that he is lawful Sovereign; and that he cannot in Conscience obey him as his lawful King. Declares, he thinks it unlawful for Subjects to pay Cess to the King. Declares, he taught his People that came to his Field-meetings, that they should come in Arms, and oppose the King's Forces, and fight with them in case they came against them

James Renwick.

Thus his Case stands in the criminal Books. I shall now give a larger Account of it from the abovesaid Account of his Life, and other Papers before me.

What passed
there.

When before the Justiciary, he adhered to his former Confessions with great Composure and Sedateness, and the Lenity of the Court was beyond what had been their Use and Manner formerly: He did not seek Lawiers to plead for him, but the Lords permitted him to speak what he had to say, without Threatnings and Interruptions, even though he gave none of them their Titles save the Nobility.

After the Indictment was read, the Justice-clerk asked him, if he adhered to all his former Confessions, and acknowledged all that was in the Libel. He replied, 'All except where it is said, I have cast off all Fear of God, for it is because I fear to offend God and violate his Law, I stand ready to be condemned here.' Then he was interrogated, Whether he owned Authority, and if he owned King James VII. to be his lawful Sovereign. He answered, 'I own all Authority which hath its Prescriptions and Limitations from the Word of God, but cannot own this Usurper as lawful King, seeing both by the Word of God such an one is incapable to bear Rule, and also by the ancient Laws of the Kingdom, which admit none to the Crown of Scotland until he swear to defend the Protestant Religion, which a Man of his Profession cannot do.'

He was urged by the Lords, How could he deny him to be King? was he not the late King's Brother? had the late King any Children lawfully begotten? was he not declared Successor by Act of Parliament? The Pannel answered, 'he was, no question, King de facto, but not de jure, sure, that he was Brother to the other he knew nothing to the contrary. What Children the other had he did not know; but from the Word of God, which ought to be the Rule of all Laws, or from the ancient Laws of the Kingdom, it could not be shewn that he had, or ever could have any Right.

The next Question propounded to him was, If he owned or had thought it to be unlawful to pay Taxes or Cess to his Majesty. He answered, 'As to the present Cess, exacted to the present Usurper, I hold it unlawful to pay it, both in regard it is oppressive to the Subjects for the Maintenance of Tyranny, and because it is imposed for the Suppression of the Gospel. Would it have been thought lawful for the Jews in the Days of Nebuchadnezzar to have brought every one a Coal to augment the Flame of the Furnace, to devour the Three Children, if they had been required of the Tyrant? And how can it be lawful, either to oppress People for not bowing to the Idols the King sets up, or for their Brethren to contribute what may help forward their Oppression on that account?

Next he was interrogated, if he owned that he taught his Hearers to come armed to their Meetings, and in case of Opposition, to resist. He answered, 'It were inconsistent with Reason and Religion to teach otherwise; you yourselves in the like Circumstances would do it. I own I taught them to carry Arms to defend themselves, and to resist your Violences.

Further being asked if he owned the Note-books taken upon him, with the Sermons written therein, and that he had preached them; he answered, 'if you have added nothing, the Books being in your Custody, I will own them, and am ready to seal all the Truths contained there with my Blood.

All his Confessions being read over, and he required to sign them, he said, he could not do it, since he took this to be a partial owning of their Authority. Some Reasonings passed upon this Subject; at length he said, I will sign the Paper as my Testimony, but I declare it is not in obedience unto you.

The Assize were next called upon by Fives, and sworn. Mr. Renwick was asked, if he had any Thing to object against them. He objected nothing against any of them, but protested, that none might sit on his Assize who professed Protestant or Presbyterian Principles, or an Adherence to the covenanted Work of Reformation. The Assize unanimously brought him in guilty; and Sentence was given, that he should be executed at the Grass market on the Friday following. The Earl of Linlithgow Justice-general, asked him if he desired a longer Time. He said, it was all one to him; if it was protracted, it was welcome, if shortened, it was welcome, his Master's Time was the best Time. However, without his Knowledge, and after he had openly refused, when the Advocate urged him to desire it, he was delayed till the 17 of February.

During this Interval Mr. Renwick was visited by Bishop Paterfon, Doctor Monro, and others of that Kidney. Mean while, which was not usual after Sentence of Death, not one of his Friends for some Time were permitted to see him. The Bishop vexed him with his Solicitations to save his Life, and his Queries he proposed to him, 'Thought he none could be saved but those of his Principles? would he kill himself with his own Hand, since he might have his Life upon such easy Terms?' and others of that Nature. Mr. Renwick answered, 'He never said or thought none could be saved but such as were of his Principles; but he was of Opinion those were Truths upon which he was suffering, which he had not rashly concluded upon, but deliberately, and of a long Time had been confirmed in, as what were sufficient Grounds to suffer upon.' The Bishop said, he was sorry to see him so tenacious, and throwing away his Life, but wished him well, and took his Leave of him. Afterwards he commended him as a Youth of Parts, and in the Council pressed for another Reprieve for him, which would have been easily granted if he would have petitioned for it. Yea, such was the Bishop's professed Kindness and Concern in him, that he sent one to him the Night before he was executed, desiring to know, if there was any Thing lying in his Power to do for him, and he would do it. Mr. Renwick returned him his Thanks for his Civility, and desired the Messenger to acquaint the Bishop, that he knew nothing he could do for him, or that he himself could desire of him.

At another Time he was visited by one Mr. Macknaught, a Curate, in his Gown and monical Habit. At his coming in, Mr. Renwick told him he did not like his Coat, it was a bad Badge. The other said, he was not come to debate, but wished him well, and discussed a little upon the Toleration, enquiring at the Close, what he thought of it, and of Men who accepted of it. Mr. Renwick answered, 'He was against the Thing as not consistent to the Rule, but as for the Men who embraced it, he judged them godly Men.' The Curate, after parting with him, commended him for Gravity and Ingenuity.

The Advocate also made him a Visit, and very earnestly pressed Mr. Renwick to supplicate and to own the King's Authority, and heard him patiently as to his Reasons why he could not fall in with his Desire. The Advocate told him he was very sorry for his Death, and that it fell out in the short Time he had been in his Office, and gave, as the Reason of it, the Reports that had been industriously spread, that he was a Jesuit; and said, the Papists were enragenraged, that any, said to be of their Principles, should deny the King's Authority, and pushed his Execution ; and told him it was not in his Power to stop it, unless he would own the King's Authority.

Several Popish Priests came frequently to him while in Prison, and at their coming away were overheard saying, He was a most obstinate Heretick. The Keepers of the Prison used to tell how vexing they were to him, and that he frequently desired them to leave him, so that it became a Proverb among them at that Time, Be gone, as Mr. Renwick uses to say to the Priests.

All the Time he was in Prison after his Sentence, he was kept so close, that he could get nothing written. He began to write a Testimony, but Pen and Ink were taken from him. Yet he found means that Night before he suffered, to send out a short Paper, which I take to be that printed in the Cloud of Witnesses.

February 14. he was again brought before the Council, and they signified to him how much Kindness they had shewn him in giving him a Reprieve unsought, and plainly enough insinuated there was yet Room of lengthning it out ; but he was fully determined not to table any Petition to them.

At his Return he was very cheerful, and a Friend asking him how he was, he answered, Very well, but he hoped to be much better in Three Days. He told his Mother, who was sometimes admitted to him, that the last Execution he was Witness to, was that of Robert Gray above spoken of ; and it was then born in on his Spirit, that he would see no more of that kind, till he were executed himself.

Frequently he owned the Necessity of his suffering at that Juncture, and that he had firm Hopes, that his Death would not be without Fruit. Very often he praised God for his Goodness to him, in making his Death and the manner of it so very easy to him. When he was asked, what the Lord would do with the Remnant left behind him ; he answered, It would be well with them, for God had said, he would not leave his Inheritance.

That Morning before his Death, February 17. the Good-man (Jaylor) of the Tolbooth came to him in his Chamber, and told him he might have his Life, if he would sign the Petition he offered to him. Mr. Renwick answered him, That Sufferers for the Truth might indeed require that their Persecutors should not take their Life, and remonstrate against them ; but he did not think it lawful to petition in his Circumstances, since it would be a receding from the Truth, and declining a Testimony for Christ. Then the Keeper desired him not to mention the Cause of his Death at the Place of Execution, and to forbear Reflexions and irritating Expressions. He answered, What God giveth me, I will speak, and nothing else, and nothing left ; and begged the Favour of him, that his Mother and Sister might be permitted to come in to him, and stay a little with him. The Keeper objected, he would perhaps give them Papers to carry out. Mr. Renwick answered, He might search them, and see, when they left him.

They were suffered to come in to him, and he took some Meat with them very cheerfully. In his giving Thanks they minded these Expressions very distinctly. ' Lord, now thou hast brought me within Two Hours of Eternity, and this is no Matter of Terror to me, more than I were going to ly down in a Bed of Roses, through thy Grace. To thy Praise I can say, I never had the Fear of Death since I came within this Prison. O ! how can I contain under the Thoughts of this, to be within Two Hours of the Crown of Glory ! ' He exhorted them much to prepare for Death ; for, said he, in itself it is the King of Terrors, tho' not to me now, as sometimes it was in my Hidings. But now let us rejoyce and be glad, for the Marriage of the Lamb is come, and his Wife hath made her self ready : Would ever I have thought that the Fear of suffering would ever have been so taken away from me ! But what shall I say ? it is the Doing of the Lord, and is marvellous in our Eyes. I have many Times counted the Cost of suffering for Christ, but never expected it would have been so easy ; who knows the Honour and Happiness of that ? He that confesseth me before Men, him will I confess before my heavenly Father.

Perceiving his Mother weeping, he exhorted her to remember, ' that whoever loved any thing better than Christ, was not worthy of him. If you love me, added he, rejoyce that I am going to my Father, to obtain the Enjoyment of what Eye hath not seen, nor Ear heard, neither hath it entred into the Heart of Man to conceive.

Then he prayed with them, and therein he run out much in Praises, ' That now he was getting above all Conflicts with Sin and Sorrow, and where there should be no Quarrels, or Distance from God. He pleaded much in behalf of the suffering Remnant, and that the Lord would not leave Scotland, asserting with great Confidence of Hope, that he was strengthened in the Faith of it, that the Lord would be gracious to Scotland.

In a little Time he heard the Drum beating for the Guards to take him out to his Execution, and rejoyced exceedingly, saying, ' Yonder the welcome Warning to my Marriage ; the Bridegroom is coming, and I am ready, I am ready. ' Then he took his Leave of his Mother and Sister, intreating them not to be discouraged, for ere all were done, they would see Matter of Praise in that Day's Dispensation.

After

After the usual Manner he was taken to the laigh Council-house, where, after reading 1688. his Sentence, he was desired to say any Thing he had to say, there. He answered, I have nothing to say to you, but that which is written Jer. xxvi. 14, 15. As for me, behold, I am in your Hand, &c. Then he was told, he would not get Leave to be heard on the Scaffold, for ruffling of Drums, and was desired to pray there. This he refused, asking if the Drums would be ruffled, unless when they thought he spoke bitterly, and made Reflections. They answered, they would be ruffled all the Time, and urged him to pray, and put a Friend, whom they allowed to wait upon him to the Scaffold, to request him; but he still refused. Then they warned him to forbear Reflections. He told them, he would not be limited; he had premeditated nothing, but what the Lord gave him, that he would speak. They offered him any Minister he pleased to be with him; but he only desired the Friend they had already granted him.

Mr. Renwick went very cheerfully to the Place of Execution, where there was a vast Number of Spectators. Executions had not been frequent for some Time, and his Circumstances were singular. Very little of what he said was heard, for the Drums beat without Intermission, till he was put over the Ladder. Any Thing gleaned up here, is from the Person who waited upon him, with the Help of a few others, who had placed themselves near the Scaffold.

There was a Curate standing at the Side of the Scaffold, who addressed himself to Mr. Renwick when he came up, and said, Pray for the King, and we will all pray heartily for you. Mr. Renwick answered, he did not expect his Prayers, and was come hither to bear his Testimony against him, and such as he was. The other replied, Pray for the King, whatever you say against us. Mr. Renwick answered, I will discourse no more with you, I am shortly to appear before the King of Kings, and Lord of Lords, who will shortly pour Contempt on all the Kings of the Earth, who have not ruled for him.

He sang the 103 Psalm from the Beginning, and read Revelation 19 Chapter, and then prayed, commending his Soul to the Lord through the Redeemer, and his Cause to be vindicated by him in his own Time. He declared this was the most joyful Day he ever saw, and what he longed for, and blessed the Lord for the Honour of the Crown of Martyrdom, an Honour, added he, the Angels are not capable of. He regreted, he was disturbed in worshipping God, and said, But by and by, I shall be above those Clouds, and enjoy, and worship, and glorify thee without Interruption or Intermission for ever. This is all that is remembred.

Prayer being ended, he spake to the People, and what was remembred was to this effect.

' Spectators, or if there be any of you Auditors, I must tell you I am come here this Day, to lay down my Life for adhering to the Truths of Christ, for which I am neither afraid nor ashamed to suffer: Nay, I bless the Lord that ever counted me worthy, and enabled me to suffer any Thing for him; and I desire to praise his Grace, that he hath not only kept me free from the gross Pollutions of the Time, but also from many ordinary Pollutions of Children; and for such as I have been stained with, he hath washed and cleansed me from them in his own Blood.

' I am this Day to lay down my Life for these three Things. 1. For disowning the Usurpation and Tyranny of James Duke of York. 2dly. For preaching that it was unlawful to pay Cess. 3dly. For teaching that it was lawful for People to carry Arms, for defending themselves in their Meetings for receiving persecuted Gospel Ordinances. I think a Testimony for these is worth many Lives; and if I had Ten thousand, I think all little enough to lay down for the same.

' Dear Friends, Spectators, and if any of you be Auditors, I must tell you, I die a Presbyterian Protestant. I own the Word of God as the only Rule of Faith and Manners; I own the Confession of Faith, Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Sum of saving Knowledge, Directory for Family Worship, Covenants, National and Solemn League, the Acts of the General Assemblies, and all the faithful Contendings that have been for the covenanted Reformation.

' I leave my Testimony approving preaching in the Fields, and the defending the same by Arms. I adjoyn my Testimony to all those Truths, which have been sealed by Blood, in Scaffolds, Fields, and Seas, for the Cause of Christ.

' I leave my Testimony against Popery, Prelacy, Erastianism, against all Profanity, and every Thing contrary to sound Doctrine, particularly against all Usurpations and Encroachments made upon Christ's Rights, the Prince of the Kings of the Earth, who alone must bear the Glory of ruling his own Kingdom, the Church; and particularly against the absolute Power assumed by this Usurper, that belongs to no Mortal, but is the incommunicable Prerogative of Jehovah, and against this Toleration flowing from this absolute Power.

Here he was ordered to dispatch; and answered, I have near done.

Then added, ' Ye that are the People of God, do not weary in maintaining the Testimony of the Day, in your Stations and Places; and whatever you do, make sure an Interest in Christ, for there is a Storm coming, which will try your Foundations: Scotland must be 1688. rid of Scotland, before the Delivery come. And you that are Strangers to God, break off your Sins by Repentance, else I will be a sad Witness against you in the Day of the Lord.' Here they caused him stop, and ordered him to go up the Ladder. There he prayed again, and this Expression was distinctly heard. 'Lord, I die in the Faith that thou wilt not leave Scotland, but that thou wilt make the Blood of thy Witnesses, to be the Seed of thy Church, and return again and be glorious in this Land. Now, Lord, I am ready, the Bride, the Lamb's Wife hath made her self ready.' When the Napkin was tying about his Head and Face, he said to his Friend who was permitted to be with him, 'Farewel, be diligent in Duty, make your Peace with God through Christ. There is a great Trial coming as to the Remnant-I leave. I have committed them to God; tell them from me, not to weary, nor be discouraged in maintaining the Testimony. Let them not quit or forgo one of those despised Truths. Keep your Ground, and the Lord will provide you Teachers and Ministers, and when he comes he will make all those despised Truths glorious upon the Earth.' When he was turned over the Ladder, he had those Words in his Mouth. 'Lord, into thy Hands I commit my Spirit, for thou hast redeemed me, O God of Truth.' He died in the 26 Year of his Age.

Thus I have given a pretty large Account of this zealous, serious, and pious Youth, especially of his Sufferings. The Writer of his Life adds a large Vindication of the Heads upon which he suffered, in which I observed nothing, but what the Reader will meet with in the Hind let loose, upon those Subjects. I have observed some Things intermixed in the History of Mr. Renwick's Life, wherein I am sure the worthy Writer hath been misinformed, and some other Passages that breathe a little of that Keeness one needs not be surprized at in this Time of bitter Persecution, and when probably the Author wrote, just when the Loss of Mr. Renwick was fresh upon his Spirit. Those and other Particulars I have omitted, and given as short and distinct an Abstract of Matter of Fact as I could.

Case of Mr.
Auchmoutie

Mr. Alexander
Orrock

I Come now forward to some few Instances of particular Persons Sufferings, during the former Part of this Year, with an Account of another Murder in the Fields, and a very singular Prosecution of the Reverend Mr. Gordon Minister at Campvere, which is one of the last Branches of Persecution I have met with.

Though a Liberty was granted to Presbyterians, yet in many Places all Methods were taken to hinder the Benefit of it. I have some Instances of this in the Town of Dundee, last Year and this, where Claverhouse was either Provost, or assumed to himself the chief Management of that Town; and I shall cast them all together, though they fell out at different Times.

In the End of the last Year, or Beginning of this, Claverhouse forcibly stopped Mr. Alexander Auchmoutie, and kept him from preaching Two different Sabbaths, upon pretext that his Name was not given up to the Magistrates, which nevertheless had been done by William Watt, James Mutchel, and Robert Philip. Next Lord's Day, when Mr. Auchmoutie was preaching, Claverhouse forced Five of the Townsmen, presently to give Bond, under the Penalty of Five thousand Merks, to produce Mr. Auchmoutie before the Privy Council; which they did, and were at no small Charges by Attendance there and otherwise. And after all, he was decerned to preach no more at Dundee, without any Reason given, and directly contrary to the Proclamation for Liberty.

This same Year 1688. Mr. Alexander Orrock having preached Two Days at Dundee, Claverhouse resolving to be rid of him, prevailed with Two Persons, Robert Robertson Dyler, and Robert Hamilton Book-binder, who, upon Oath before the Magistrate, declared, that Mr. Orrock had said the King was an Idolater. When the Depositions were laid before the Privy Council, by their Act he was discharged to preach any more at Dundee. Whereas, if his Auditory had been called, they would have with one Mouth declared, that Mr. Orrock's Words were misrepresented, and that his Expression was one Day in Prayer, he begged, That the Lord would purge the King from Heart Idols. And we may be assured, had it been otherwise, Mr. Orrock would have been discharged to preach any where, and processed too.

The

The reverend and pious Mr. Thomas Cobham, a Presbyterian Minister, born in Dundee, 1688. came thither in May this Year to see his Friends, and lodged at a Cousin's House in that Town. As was his Duty, he went about Family Worship in the Family: Upon this the Noise went through the Town, there had been a Conventicle in that House; whereupon Mr. Cobham and his Friend were brought before one of the Bailies, James Alein, about Eleven of the Clock at Night, and he was challenged for preaching. He acquainted the Bailie, he had, as still he used to do where he was permitted, gone about Family Worship, and this was all that had been in the Matter. Mr. Cobham was presently bailed, otherwise he must have gone straight to Prison.

Next Day, May 24. the Four Bailies met, and found the Information false, and his Bond was given up. And Mr. Cobham gave up his Name to the Magistrates, and preached next Sabbath. And being to preach on the Lord's Day following, on the Saturday's Night before, about Ten of the Clock, he was called before Alexander Arbutnot, John and James Graham's Bailies, and ordered to find Bail. Mr. Cobham asked them for what. They answered, before he preached any more. He answered, he had given up his Name in Terms of Law, and asked what they had to charge him with, and required Witnesses as to any Crime they had to stage him for, and he was willing to answer for it: But nothing would satisfy the Bailies; they resolved to hinder his preaching to morrow, and to Prison he must go.

His Friend Mr. Smith having come with him to the Magistrates, could not contain himself under this illegal Procedure; but took the Liberty to tell the Magistrates, 'That Mr. Cobham was already judged by them, and nothing could be found against him; and it was his Opinion, if a Minister had been among the Turks, he would not have been more severely dealt with.' For which Words John Smith, Mr. Cobham's Cousin, was sent to bear his Friend Company in Prison. Upon Sabbath they were so closely kept, that no Body almost was allowed to see them.

The Design of hindring Mr. Cobham to preach, however illegally, was thus gained, and Mr. Smith in a few Days was let out, but the Minister was kept in Prison some Time. June 19. Bail was offered for him under the Penalty of Six thousand Merks, but the Magistrates would not receive it, though they had nothing to charge him with. Upon the 2 of July, the Town Treasurer and Town Officers were sent with him to Fife, where Claverhouse had ordered Six Troopers to receive him, and they guarded him in to Edinburgh. There, after some Days Imprisonment, he was brought before the Council, and when nothing appeared against him, he was liberated. This excellent Person came and preached some Time in the West at the Revolution, and was afterwards settled in Ireland, and continued a good while an useful Minister of the Gospel there.

Many other Accounts might be given, from Dundee and other Places, of such who were averse from Presbyterian Ministers their Efforts against preaching and setting up of Meeting-houses; and the Pretenders to passive Obedience, and illimited Subjection to the King, when the Proclamation for Liberty displeased them, did not stick to act openly against the then Law.

When People hired their Barns or other Houses for Places of Worship, they were vexed or harassed upon some Pretext or other; and those who would not come to Church, were brought to no small Trouble. All possible Quarrels were picked with Presbyterians, and such who favoured the Liberty; and Freedom in Burghs, and other Favours were bestowed upon such who promised not to frequent the Meeting-houses. So we may easily conclude, and not the happy Revolution followed, this Liberty had been soon rendered useless to Presbyterians.

In short, all Occasions were sought against Presbyterians, both Ministers and others, if in the least they were alledged to fail as to the Limitations put upon the Liberty by the Council. Snares were laid for Ministers and Preachers, and some of them harassed without the least Reason, and their good Friends the Bishops made their Judges. 'Instances (says the Account written this Year, whence I take this) of the hard Usage of many for countenancing Presbyterians would fill some Volumes.'

Towards the Beginning of this Year, Mr. David Williamson, having returned to his old Charge of the West kirk Parish in Edinburgh, and having a numerous Congregation there, was apprehended by a verbal Warrant from the Chancellor, and kept a Fortnight in Edinburgh Tolbooth, without ever having a Cause given why he was imprisoned. A great Sum was offered to bail him, but Perth would hear of no Bail, still saying, he had Informations against him, which might amount to high Treason; and yet never any Thing in the least censurable was tabled against him. He was tossed up and down for Eight Days more, and vexed with their Interrogatories, and at length permitted to return to his Work.

To give this excellent Person's Trouble all together this Year; in July a malicious Person, Mr. John Musket Reader in the West Kirk, one of a lax Conversation, as was notourly known, accused Mr. Williamson before the Council, of Things he brought no Proof for, particularly offensive Doctrine, in a Sermon alledged to have been levelled against the pretended Prince of Wales, and for his not praying for the said supposed Prince; but nothing could be made of this.

1688.

At the same Time Mr. Musbet gave in an Information against Sir Patrick Nisbet of Dean, who countenanced Mr. Williamson's Ministry, alledging Sir Patrick should have said, he did not value some Acts of Parliament, and that the Presbyterians had as many Johnstouns as the Prelates had Jardins. This Musbet impudently gave in to the Council; and tho' Informer, yet contrary to Law and the ordinary Course of Justice, he was sustained a Witness, and the Episcopal Minister of the West Kirk, who indeed was another Party, if not Principal in the whole, was taken as the other Witness; and the Gentleman was fined in 300 Pounds Sterling payable in a few Weeks, and failing the precise Time of Payment, in 500 Pounds Sterling.

In March this Year, I find some Country People brought in Prisoners, and examined by Sir George Mackenzie Advocate, upon their owning the King's Authority. They do not own it, but with their Limitations; and Sir George is much more soft upon them than in former Years. June 2. I find one Thomas Mackenzie examined by the Council, and owns, that he thought himself obliged in Conscience to hear the Gospel purely preached in Houses, or in the Fields. The Chancellor threatned him with Hanging, but I do not find he was tried for his Life.

George Wood murdered in the Fields.

This same Month of June, I find that John Reid a Trooper, once of Craigie's Troop, meeting George Wood a Youth of Sixteen Years of Age, who was upon his hiding in the Fields under Cloud of Night, unloaded his Piece on him, and killed him outright, without asking one Question at him. Reid, when challenged for, answered, He knew him to be one of the Whigs, and they ought to be shot wherever they were found.

Mr. Charles Gordon's Sufferings for not owning the Legitimacy of the Prince of Wales.

Having run through those Instances, I shall shut up this Section with some Narrative of the Trouble the late Reverend Mr. Charles Gordon, Minister at this Time of Campvere, and since the Revolution Minister, first at Dalmenie, then at Ash-kirk, fell under, for his not owning the Legitimacy of the pretended Prince of Wales. It is a pretty singular Case, and I give it from the original Narrative, written, November this Year, by Mr. Gordon, communicated to me by his Relations, which consists of some Sheets of Paper; but I shall reduce it within as narrow a Compass as I can with any Measure of Distinctness and Clearness.

The Reverend Mr. Gordon's Character is so savoury yet in this Church, that none will question what he hath left under his Hand. Many yet alive know how remarkable and eminent he was for Piety and Learning; And the General Assembly of the Church was so much apprised of this, that he was very harmoniously voted to be Professor of Divinity at Aberdeen; but such was his own Extremity of Modesty, and Affection for his People, that he could never actively comply, and died some Years ago Minister of Ash-kirk, his Removal being indeed a general Stroke to this Church. His great Literature, Solidity, and Gravity made him universally regretted.

Mr. Gordon, Minister of the Scots Congregation at Campvere, had come over to see his Friends in the North, August this Year, and coming to Edinburgh upon some Business, in his Return to Campvere in September, the Noise of the Prince of Orange broke up, and the Council toward the Beginning of October emitted a Proclamation, discharging all Subjects, on the highest Peril, to leave the Kingdom, without a Licence from the Council, or one of their Number. It was necessary that Mr. Gordon should go back to his Charge as soon as possible, and therefore knowing nothing could be laid to his Charge, and being not in the least obnoxious to Suspicion, he applied by a Friend to the Lord Register, as a Counsellor, for a Pass; who said, the Pass being for Holland, it was necessary he should speak to the Chancellor anent it, and the other frankly consented he should do so. When the Chancellor was spoke to, he made an Objection against Mr. Gordon's Brother, a worthy Factor in Holland, some Years ago dead, who, he alledged, was none of the King's Friends, and desired the Register to take a Care how he gave Mr. Gordon a Pass. The Register was hearty and kind in the Matter, and acquainting Mr. Gordon of what passed, promised, within Three or Four Days, again to deal with my Lord Perth.

Incident 'twixt Mr. Gordon and the Archbishop of Glasgow.

Accordingly, October 12. being put in mind of his Promise, he undertook to speak to the Chancellor in the Forenoon at the Council, and ordered Mr. Gordon to wait on in the Parliament Closs, which he did; and when attending there met with an odd Incident, which deserves a Room here, as what may serve to give a Vidimus of the Temper of one of the present prime Managers. At the Rising of the Council, the Archbishop of Glasgow comes out in his Robes, whom Mr. Gordon had never seen before, and knew him not, save that he was a Bishop by his Garb. It seems, the Bishop noticed very narrowly all who did not give him a Cap. Mr. Gordon was walking at some considerable Distance, and took a Turn a little further off the Way the Bishop seemed to be going. It seems, the Bishop observed him at Distance, and saw good, after he was gone by Mr. Gordon almost at the Breadth of the Closs, to return and come straight to him, and accost him in a very odd Manner.

When

When he came up, he asked Mr. Gordon rudely, What are you, Sir? Mr. Gordon answered, Why do you enquire? Says the Bishop, Why do you look with so thrawn a Countenance? 1688. The other replied, My Countenance is not thrawn, I look as I ordinarily use to do. The Bishop said, If your Countenance be ordinarily so, it is a very thrawn Countenance. Says Mr. Gordon, Sir, I wonder why you imagine so, for I have the same Countenance that God hath given me. Adds the Bishop, You should not look uncivilly upon Gentlemen. The other replied, You are mistaken; for I use not, as I think, to look uncivilly or unpleasantly upon any Man. Upon this the Bishop went off as indiscreetly as he came up, to the great Surprize of Mr. Gordon and the Spectators. The Rencontre was odd, and I set it down at full length, as I find it in the abovementioned Narrative. When Mr. Gordon enquired, who it was that had thus accosted him, and had got his Character, he began to think it was rather his covered Head, than his thrawn Countenance brought about this strange Attack.

But to return, when the Register came out, he told he had quite forgot his Business; but should undoubtedly mind it at Three of the Clock, when he met with the Chancellor in the Treasury. Mr. Gordon began to fear there might be more Difficulty, than he apprehended, in his Business, and so went up to the Castle at Two, and got Access to the Duke of Gordon, who knew his Relations in the North, and laid his Case before him. The Duke was very civil, and promised to speak with the Chancellor at Three, in the Exchequer, and ordered him to put him in mind by a Macer. He waited on punctually at the Hour, and the Duke and the Register promised to speak presently to the Chancellor. In a little the Duke was pleased to come to the Door, and acquaint Mr. Gordon that he had spoken, and the Register seconded him, and the Chancellor was desirous to speak with him before he granted a Pass, and that it was fit he should name an Hour, asking him in a friendly Way, whether he were content with this. Mr. Gordon thanked his Grace for his Kindness, and said, he was satisfied to wait on the Chancellor when he pleased, and doubted not to satisfy his Lordship in any Thing he could reasonably demand. The Duke went in, and Mr. Gordon waited on to hear the Chancellor's Time for a private Communing, never once dreaming of a publick Examination. But very suddenly he was called in before the Lords of the Treasury, by one of the Macers. And the Chancellor interrogated him as follows; which, with his Answers, I set down as I find them in Mr. Gordon's Narrative.

Chancellor. Mr. Gordon, I am informed you are an ill Man, and a Person of bad Principles, and disaffected to the Government. Gordon. My Lord, if your Lordship has been so informed, I must beg Liberty to say, that the Information is wrong and unjust. Chancellor. I am informed, your Business and Design in coming to Scotland, is quite another Thing than you pretend and give out. Gordon. My Business is nothing else than that I pretend and profess; but if your Lordship suspect any Thing, I am willing to give all the Satisfaction I can. Chanc. Do you own the King's Authority? Gordon. Yes, my Lord. Chanc. Have you preached since you came to the Country? Gordon. Yes. Chanc. Did you pray for the King? Gordon. Yes, my Lord. Chanc. Do you pray for the Royal Family? Gordon. Yes. Chanc. Do you pray for the Prince of Wales? Gordon. No. Chanc. Why not for the Prince of Wales? Gordon. There is no particular Order for our praying for him, and I have not used to pray for all the particular Branches of the Royal Family by Form. Chanc. It is no Limiting of the Spirit, to pray for all the Branches of the Royal Family by Form. Gordon. My Lord, I have not been used to pray by Forms. Chanc. Whom do you mean when you pray for the Royal Family? Gordon. All the Princes and Princesses of the Family. Chanc. Do you not include and intend the Prince of Wales? Gordon. My Lord, I do not exclude him. Chanc. But do you not include him? Mr. Gordon said nothing, and the Chancellor went on: There is the Matter; Sir, I perceive I have not been mistaken nor misinformed concerning you, what for a Man you are. Gordon. I am sorry if your Lordship apprehend ill concerning me. Chanc. Do you not think that the King hath a Son, or that the Prince of Wales is Heir to the Crown? Mr. Gordon was silent. Chanc. Why do you not answer? do you doubt of such a Thing? Gordon. My Lord, I do not meddle in these Matters, nor am I a competent Judge of them. Chanc. Sir, if you were your Father's eldest Son, and he had Ten Chalders of Victual by Year to bestow upon you, and another should come and take you by the Throat, and say, Sir, you are a Rogue, you are not such a Man's Son, and you shall not enjoy his Estate, what would you say to that? Gordon. I hope your Lordship will not make Application of that Comparison to any Thing I have said. Chanc. Sir, you are the first that ever called the Thing in question, and you have said enough to hang an Hundred Men. But remove you, you shall have the Mind and Judgment of the rest of the Lords. And a Macer was called to take Mr. Gordon away, and keep him till further Order. In about a Quarter of an Hour he was called in again.

Then the Chancellor said, Mr. Gordon, here is a Paper you must subscribe. The Tenor of it was, 'I Mr. Charles Gordon, Minister of the Gospel at Campvere, do own and acknowledge the King's Son, Prince of Scotland and Wales, as apparent Heir of the Crown, and do promise to pray for him as such.'

Mr. Gordon's Examination by the Chancellor
OF. 12.

Paper about the Prince of Wales, required to be signed by Mr. Gordon.

1688. When this Paper was read, Mr. Gordon answered, My Lord, I must beg Liberty to be excused, I cannot sign this Paper in the Terms in which it stands, I am willing to declare and subscribe that I do not deny, nor disown the Prince of Wales. Chanc. Why do you not then own and acknowledge him? You must subscribe it as it stands. Gordon. That I cannot do, my Lord. Then the Master was called to remove him. When going away, the Clerk spake to him aside, and desired him to consider, there was nothing in the Paper but a Declaration that the Prince was apparent Heir, and that imported no more than, for what we know and appears to us; and when the King, and Queen, and Court own him as such, then it appears to us. This staggered Mr. Gordon a little, till he took up the Paper and read it, and considered, that the Grammatical Sense of the Word was not meant, but the forensick and Law Sense was chiefly to be considered in this Case. Then he laid it down again on the Table, saying, he could not in Conscience sign it.

What? says the Chancellor, pretend you Conscience in refusing to own the King's Son as apparent Heir? Gordon. I cannot help my Weakness; Conscience cannot be constrained. Chanc. Whether or not, failing the Prince of Wales, would you acknowledge the Prince of Orange as apparent Heir to the Crown? Gordon. Yes, my Lord. Chanc. And why not the Prince of Wales now? Mr. Gordon said nothing. Chanc. There he is taken; for there is the Matter. Sir, doubt you, or how dare you question the one more than the other? Would you not own my eldest Son as my Heir? Gordon. Yes, my Lord, I know nothing to the contrary. Chanc. Why not then the King's Son? Would you not own the Duke of Gordon as Heir to Lewis Marquis of Huntly? Gordon. Yes.

Then the Duke said, Mr. Charles, why do you doubt the Prince of Wales to be Heir apparent more than the Princess of Orange? you were not Witness to the Birth of the one more than the other. Gordon. Truly, my Lord, for what I know I never saw her Highness. The Chancellor vehemently urged Mr. Gordon to give his Reasons of Doubt, and mixed many Threats. Mr. Gordon still declined, adding he did not dip into those Matters, that he was a plain, ignorant, simple Man, and begged his Lordship would not take Advantage against him, and took all the Lords Witness he did not deny or disown the Prince of Wales. The Chancellor said, Why then do you not own him? this is such a mortal Sin, a Crime, that it is enough to damn you. Gordon. I hope there is more Mercy with God than to damn me for Ignorance and Weakness. Chanc. It is enough to damn you and a Thousand with you, for by your calling this in question, you are guilty of their Sin and Damnation who follow your Example. Gordon. I hope the Lord will preserve me from being guilty of any Person's Damnation, for, according to my Measure, I have endeavoured to keep a Conscience void of Offence, either to God or Man. Chanc. Sir, you are a Person neither of good Principles nor Practice, and you deserve, &c. Gordon. My Lord, I am sorry that your Lordship hath received ill Impressions of me.

Sent Prisoner
to the Castle.

Then he was removed, and in a little Time sent up under a Guard to the Castle. The Warrant was directed to the Duke of Gordon, or his Depute, and none of them being within, he was kept in the Guard, and a private Chamber of one of his Name, some Hours. While there, he had many peaceful and comfortable Reflexions upon the Course and Progress of this surprising Scene of suffering, which he sets down with much Solidity, and at such length, as I cannot give an Abstract of them. He regrets that he was called to suffer upon a Point that was so much of a civil Nature, and would have chosen rather to have his Sufferings stated upon a Matter of Faith, but is fully satisfied what was carved out to him, was a Matter of great Importance, even to Religion. He had some Fears of the Consequences of this Incident to his Brethren, Presbyterian Ministers: And one of the Counsellors said, if some People had gotten their Will of Mr. Gordon, in a few Days not a Presbyterian Minister durst have been seen in Scotland. But the Chancellor's Rashness in starting such Questions, was displeasing to all the wiser Set of Counsellors, who thought such Questions most unseasonable and impolitick at this Juncture.

When Mr. Gordon is in the Castle some Hours, a Friend came up to him from the Duke of Gordon and Register, desiring him to send down a Petition for Liberation to the Chancellor, and they would use their Interest to get him liberate. When Mr. Gordon is in a Strait what to do, another Friend comes up from the Advocate upon the same Errand, with a Warrant to discourse Mr. Gordon in private. The Advocate by him signified he was entirely a Stranger to Mr. Gordon, but was much concerned at what had passed, and had used Freedom with the Chancellor for his Imprudence in insisting upon such Heads with Mr. Gordon, and had Ground to assure him, that if he petitioned he should be liberate. In short, the Gentleman assured him, that several of the Lords had reasoned the Matter so plainly with the Chancellor, as he was now repenting what he had done. Mr. Gordon returned his Thanks for this great Kindness, but told, he did not know how to petition, since he could not confess Guilt, whereof he was not conscious. He was told, that was not expected, and he needed not touch at any Thing that passed, but only seek his Liberty, and if any Thing had passed that had offended the Chancellor, declare he was sorry for it.

This

This appearing safe to Mr. Gordon, he wrote the following Letter: Edinburgh Castle, 1688.
October 12. My Lord Chancellor, I am here Prisoner by your Lordship's Order, where (saving God's good Pleasure) I am loth to stay, detained from my Charge; therefore I humbly beg your Lordship will set me at Liberty, and give me a Pass to return to Campvere.
 If in any Thing I be mistaken by, or have offended your Lordship, I am sorry for it; for I desire to give no Offence to Jew nor Gentile, nor to the Church of God. I am,

My Lord,

Your Lordship's most humble Servant,

Charles Gordon.

This was sent down to the Advocate, who said he liked it well enough, but was afraid the Sting in the Tail of it might offend. But being told, by one present, it was a Scripture Expression, and ought not to offend, it was sent forward; and the Chancellor sent up a Warrant for Mr. Gordon's Liberation; which, as far as he can remember, was to this purpose. That whereas it is for his Majesty's Service that Mr. Charles Gordon, Prisoner in the Castle, be set at Liberty for Reasons whereof I shall satisfy the Council at their first Meeting, therefore, &c. in common Form. Mr. Gordon remarks that if it was for his Majesty's Interest to liberate him, it had been more for his Interest, according to those Reasons which, he was of Opinion, swayed most with the Chancellor, that he had not been imprisoned.

Liberate that same Night.

When the Duke of Gordon came home about Twelve at Night, the Orders and Liberation were presented to him. He called Mr. Gordon, and spake to him his alone, and signified his Sorrow for his Trouble, and blamed him for signifying his Contentment to speak with the Chancellor. Mr. Gordon answered, he was conscious of his Innocency, and never dreamed the Chancellor would have publickly examined him, or fallen upon such a Subject; and he imagined he was the first that had been examined upon such a Subject. The Duke said, but your fault was that ye owned the Princess of Orange; if you had not owned the one more than the other, you had done well. Mr. Gordon begged Liberty to say, that was strange, and he could not but think it unjust, and also imprudent and unwise in the Chancellor to set up an Inquisition to torture and rack Mens Minds and Hearts for what is only secret and latent there. The Duke said, Well, Mr. Charles, it is true, &c. And after Expressions of Regard to his Friends, told him he was at Liberty. And they parted in good Terms.

In a Day or Two, Mr. Gordon went to the Register, to see if now he might have a Pass. His Lordship told him, he could not now have it, without tabling the Matter before the Council, which his Friends could not advise him to. And so he got off the best way he could, and came safe to his Charge. This original Account I thought worth the Reader's while, and from it we may guess what our Circumstances would have been, had not the glorious Revolution intervened; which brings me to end this Work with

S E C T. IV.

Of some other Things which pass this Year, with the Council's Procedure, and other Remarkables more immediately preceeding the glorious and never to be forgotten Revolution, November 1688.

I Am here to conclude this Work, by noticing a few more Particulars which escaped me in the former Sections, and yet some way relate to this History; and I shall conclude it with some Account of the State of Things, and the Procedure of the Managers, before the Arrival of the Prince of Orange, from the publick Papers come to my Hand, which will conclude the Scene of their Management since the Restauration.

Last Year and this, Popish Schools were very carefully set up at the Abbey of Holy-rood-house, and this I cannot but reckon a great Hardship upon all good Protestants in Scotland, and an evident Part of the Plot for reintroducing Popery. The Erection of those was not only an Infractioun upon the Privileges of Universities, and Protestant Schools authorized by Law, but flatly contrary to any Acts of Parliament, not penal and sanguinary in their Nature, in favours of our holy Religion. Their setting up in the Metropolis of the Kingdom, in where there was a College and other Schools, where the greatest Confluence of Nobility and Gentry, and the supreme Courts of Judicatory were, and the Youth of the greatest Consequence to the Nation frequented, was certainly an open Insult upon the Reformation. The Rules for them.

App. No. 142.

The Nature and Design of those Schools, will best appear from the Rules printed and published this Year, which I have insert App. No. 142. They are very cunningly formed. The Reader will perceive from them, that no less a Title is given to this Popish Seminary, than the Royal College. And according to the Methods of the Papists, who spare no Charges to gain Profelytes, all are to be taught gratis. And, in the Jesuitical Manner, Assurances are given, that no Difference in Religion shall be noticed, nor any Danger follow, if Protestants send their Children to those Places of Temptation. In short, the Teachers in them were the most cunning and subtil Jesuits and Papists; and nothing is spared to decoy the Youth into them. Every Thing that was taking was taught, and great Pains taken to corrupt the Youth.

Mr. Shiels preaches in the Fields.

After Mr. Renwick's Death, Mr. Alexander Shiels preached now and then in the Fields this Year. In April he had a very numerous Field-meeting upon Distinkcorn-hill, in the Parish of Galsfoun, in the Shire of Air. What Mr. Shiels delivered there, is printed. After this, pretty severe Searches were made by the Soldiers up and down the Country, for People who had been present at it; and severals were brought to Trouble, but nothing so great as in the preceeding Years.

Seven Bishops of England tried June 29.

Upon the 29 and 30 of June, the famous Trial of the Seven Bishops, put in the Tower of London for a free and honest Petition they presented to the King, commenced at Westminster-hall. The Pannels were the Archbishop of Canterbury, the Bishops of St. Asaph, Chichester, Ely, Bath and Wells, Peterborough, and Bristol. It was a throng Court, and the Eyes of all the Protestants in England were upon it. The Council for the Bishops were mightily superior in their Reasonings to the other Side; and the Jury brought them in not guilty, to the vast Satisfaction of the best Part of the Kingdom. I must refer the Reader to the English Historians for full Accounts of it.

In June or July, there was a most violent Search in the Town of Edinburgh, chiefly managed by Claverhouse and Colonel Douglas. Every private Sentinel had Liberty granted them, to examine upon Oath all the suspected, in their Search. And all who would not renounce the Covenants, were forced to Prison. I don't hear of many seized at this Time.

Collection made by the Society for the Relief of some of their Friends sold for Slaves in the Plantations.

August this Year, I find by their Records, that the Society People made a large Collection of Money for the Relief of several of their Number, who in the former Years had been transported and sold for Slaves. James Baxter and another came home to sollicite the Ransom of the rest; and, after their Application to a former Meeting, the Matter was taken to the Consideration of the general Meeting, August 1. this Year. And the Account of what they came to, was given to the Two Commissioners in a Letter, which will best speak for it self, and I give it from the Original.

It is thought necessary to acquaint you, that your Friends have done their Endeavour for your Redemption from your present Bondage, and for that end have given in Four thousand three hundred Merks Scots, which, in Barbadoes, is to be answered by a Man of Credit and Reputation. According as every one can be agreed for with his Master, so you are desired to do your utmost in this Affair, and for the better and speedier doing, it is thought fit you keep it close, and desire the rest to do it, from the Masters, till the Bargain be made; lest upon their hearing of the Money's being come, they heighten the Price. This is all we can advance, and some have stretched themselves very far. We expect the Person who advances the Money, will give you his Advice and Assistance, what and how to do in this Affair.

The Persons to be relieved are, you Two, James Douglas, Thomas Brown, John Buchanan, Alexander Baily, George Paton, John White, Gilbert McCulloch, Robert Mitchel, John White, George White, and Agnès Keir. As for John Atkin, and William Hanna, their Relations have taken another Course for their Relief. If the Money does any more than purchase your Relief, you and the rest may dispose upon it, for the relieving your Necessity while there, and in coming Home; but you are desired to keep an Account how you spend it. By another Paper before me, I find that the Sum of Two hundred and forty Pounds Sterling, was remitted to Barbadoes, and the abovenamed Persons actually liberate.

I shall not take upon me to say any Thing almost of that adorable and never to be forgotten Step of divine Providence, the glorious Revolution brought about November this Year, which gave an effectual Check to such slavish Principles and Practices, and absolute and arbitrary Government, and brought an End to the Hardships and Persecutions of Presbyterians, whereof I have attempted the History. The printed Accounts of this Year and the next, give pretty large Views of it; yet I cannot help wishing to see a better Account of this comfortable and great Turn of Affairs in Scotland, than I have yet met with.

Here only I shall give some Hints of the last Steps of our Managers in Scotland, immediately preceeding this singular Turn of Affairs, from the publick Papers come to my Hand, and add a few Papers, with which it may not be improper to conclude this History.

Proclamation
of the Meeting of the Heritors, 13.
App. No. 143.

When the Alarm of the Prince of Orange's Design began to turn warm, the Council emit a Proclamation September 18. for rendezvousing of the Militia in several Shires, calling out the Heritors, and setting up Beacons. It is added App. No. 143. and specifies the Times and and Places where the Militia Regiments in Berwick, Merse, Lothian, Stirling, Perth, and Angus Shires, should meet, and Beacons to be set up, as soon as any considerable Number of Ships appear upon the Coast, upon North-berwick-law, Arthurs-seat, the Bass, Saint-abbs-head, and other Places; and upon setting up of those, requiring all fencible Men to rendezvous. And this to be intimated from all Pulpits by the Clergy.

Mean while in England, September 21. the King publishes a Declaration, that it is his Pleasure a Parliament shall meet in November, where an universal Liberty of Conscience is to be established, a Confirmation of the several Acts of Uniformity given, bating some Clauses inflicting Penalties; and that for the strengthening the Protestant Religion, he is willing Roman Catholicks remain incapable of being Members of the House of Commons, with several other fair Promises; but now Matters were too far ripened for the Revolution, to be altered upon Paper Declarations.

King's Declaration for the Meeting of a Parliament in England.

At that same Time the King's general Pardon is published, indemnifying all Offences and Malversations, with the ordinary Exceptions of Rapes, Counterfeiting the Coin, &c. and all Treasons done beyond Seas. Several English Gentlemen and others are excepted from this Indemnity, and particularly Colonel Rumsey, Titus Oates, Andrew Fletcher, Robert Fergusson, Gilbert Burnet, and Sir Robert Pyton. This Indemnity relating to England I do not insert in the Appendix.

An Indemnity published.

September 28. the King emits a Proclamation upon the designed Invasion, which I need not either insert. He says, he hath undoubted Advice of a great and sudden Invasion from Holland, alledges it is for the Conquest of those Lands; that he had declined foreign Succours, and had made good Provision against the Attempt, and was firmly resolved to live and die in Defence of the Nation against its Enemies; recalls the Writs for a new Parliament, calls all to defend themselves, and discharges all Aid, or Correspondence with the Invaders, on Pain of Treason.

Proclamation Sept 28. upon the Invasion from Holland.

Upon the 3 of October, a good many of the English Bishops made a Representation to the King, which hath been many Times published: If he had fallen in with it, it would no doubt have gone far to have settled his tottering Crown. But, quos Jupiter, &c. He was indeed hardened to his Ruin. The Heads of it were these; that the King should restore all Things to the State in which he found them at his Accession, by committing all Places of Trust to Protestants, and redress such Grievances as were generally complained of; that the Ecclesiastical Commission should be dissolved, and his royal Promise given never to erect such Courts for the future; that not only an effectual Stop be made to all Dispensations, but that he would call in, and cancel all obtained already from him; that he would restore the Universities to their legal State, Statutes and Customs, particularly the Master of Magdalene College in Cambridge and the President and Fellows in Magdalene College in Oxford, and permit none to enjoy Preferments in either University, but such as are qualified by the Statutes of the Universities, particular Foundations and Laws of the Land; that he would suppress the Schools of the Jesuits, opened in the City and elsewhere, and grant no more Licences, for such Schools are against Law and his own Interest; that he would send Inhibitions against the Four Romish Bishops, who, under the Title of Apostolick Vicars, do exercise within this Kingdom such Jurisdictions, as by Law are invested in the Bishops of the Church of England; that no more quo warrantos be issued out against Corporations, but that he would restore such as have been disturbed in their Charters, Privileges, Grants, and Immunities, and condemn all the late illegal Regulations; that he would fill up the vacant Bishopricks in England and Ireland, with Persons qualified by Law, especially the See of York; that he act no more by a dispensing Power, nor insist upon it, but permit that Affair at the first Session of Parliament, to be fairly stated, debated and settled by Act of Parliament; that upon Restoration of Boroughs and Corporations to their Rights, Writs be issued out for a new Parliament, and that he may suffer it to redress Grievances, settle Matters in Church and State, and establish a due Liberty of Conscience. Lastly, and above all, that his Majesty would permit some of his Bishops to lay such Motives and Arguments before him, as, through the Blessing of God, may bring back his Majesty unto the Communion of our holy Church of England, into whose Catholick Faith he was baptized, in which he was educated, and to which it was their daily and earnest Prayers to almighty God that his Majesty might be reunited.

Representation of the English Bishops to the King, Octob 3.

The Treatment this friendly and seasonable Representation met with we may easily guess, and the English Hutorians are full of it. Had not the Revolution intervened, it might perhaps have been the Subject of an Impeachment, and the last Clause was enough to choke this bigotted Prince, which was indeed most honest and seasonable now, but it had been Duty and Kindness to have proposed it at his Accession to the Throne.

Our Scott Council, October 3. send up an Offer of their Lives and Fortunes to the King, and seek Directions as to their Management at this Juncture. The King's Answer, October 6. was printed by their Order, and it is insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 144. In short, he thanks them for their Offer, allows them to secure suspect Persons, to levy what Forces they see good, and give Commissions to the Militia Regiments.

That same Day the Council emit a Proclamation, calling out all Heritors, to convene with their best Horses and Men, at the Places and Days mentioned in the Proclamation, which is added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 145. The Reader will find there some Commanders not very agreeable to the Court Measures, such as the Duke of Hamilton, Earl of Cassils, Earl of Dundonald, and others. Upon the 9 of October an Act of Council is published anent the Militia Runaways, and providing of Horses, which follows App. N<sup>o</sup>. 145. They regulate several Circumstances about the Militia Arms, threatening Runaways and Deserters, establish the quota of Horses to be furnished, and discharge the seizing of them without a Warrant from a Counsellor.

About the Middle of October, the Heads of the Prince of Orange's Declaration and Manifesto began to be spread. That excellent Paper is now in every Body's Hand, and the Substance of it is in short: William Prince of Orange, Protector of the Protestant Religion, and Defender of the Liberties of England, declares, 'That he and the Princess lay no Claim to the Crown at present; that the Design of this Expedition is, that the late King's Murderers be brought to Trial in Parliament, that the Impostor be sent back to his natural Parents, that the Succession to the Crown be secured by the Administration of Six Peers under the King, whereof the Lord Halifax is to be one, that the dispensing Power be left to the Judgement of the Parliament, that the Ecclesiastical Commission be examined and tried in free Parliament, that the Church of England, as by Law established, be confirmed, and restored to her Freedom, that all Offenders be brought to their Trial, and punished, that Liberty of Conscience be given to all Dissenters but Papists, that there be a free Parliament, that Papists be excluded from all publick Trust, Offices, and Employments. And the Prince requires that the Charge of the present Expedition be paid by the King.'

When every Body began to be taken with those Proposals so worthy of the Prince to make, the King, October 17. to allay, if possible, the Clamours against his Administration, issues a Declaration restoring Corporations to their ancient Charters, Liberties, Rights, and Franchises, which hath been more than once printed, and I shall only say it was a Justice done the Nation too late, and every Body saw it was what Fear brought the King to, and not his own Inclinations.

Address of Scots
Bishops, Nov. 3.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 147.

Upon the 3 of November, all our Scots Bishops, except Two, the Bishops of Argyle and Cathness, drew and sent up a most flattering Letter to the King, which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 147. The reading of it is enough to expose it to all true Protestants; how much does it differ from the seasonable Representation given to the King by the English Bishops, October 3! The Reason is plain, the last were, generally speaking, heartily against Popery, and most Part of the former were Time-servers, Court-flatterers, and ready, for any Thing I can observe in their Actings, to fall in with Popery it self, to please the King, and keep their Benefices. This Letter indeed breathes forth the true Spirit and Temper of our Scots Prelates since the Reformation, save only they want Occasion to discover their persecuting Spirit, and here run into the other Evil of vile Flattery and Adulation, and in some Things border upon Blasphemy.

What less can one think of their Expressions, that the King was miraculously prospered with Glory and Victory, that the King, a bigotted Papist, was the Darling of Heaven, that the Line of his Ancestors is the greatest Glory of this his ancient Kingdom. I shall not spend Time on the Pedantry of some of the Expressions, their Satisfaction with his Protection to their Church, their Thanks for his pretended Son, their Virulence at the Revolution, and Hopes of its being effectually crushed.

This same violent Attachment to King James while alive, and a Popish Pretender since his Death, the Spirit of Enmity against the Protestant Succession, and Virulence against the Revolution, and all who are upon that Bottom, does to this Day make up the Character of the Scots Episcopal Meeting-house Party, and in a special Manner their Clergy.

King's Answer.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 148.

November 15. the King makes his Bishops a Return to their Letter, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 148. The English Bishops had no such complaisant Treatment after their Representation, tho' they discover a quite other Taste of Liberty and Property, and Concern for the Reformation than the Scots Prelates do. I cannot but a little question those repeated Assurances the King tells our Prelates he had from all the Bishops of England, of their not inviting over the Prince of Orange. The Prince says otherwise, and I believe their Invitation is yet to be seen.

Prince of Orange
in England, Nov.
4.

That glorious Deliverer of those Lands from Popery and Slavery, and qualified Instrument in the Hand of Providence in the great Work now on the Wheel for those Three Kingdoms, and all the Protestant Interest, arrived safe in England November 4. Had our Scots Bishops known what was to be to Morrow, perhaps less would have served them in their Letter to the King. Bishop Burnet, in his Preface printed before his Essay for a new Book of Homilies, gives the best Account of the Share which Providence, special Providence had in this Voyage, and that ought to affect us most. He observes, that if the Wind had not changed Five or Six different Times, and at the very Nick of Time it did alter, this Expedition had well-nigh been ruined. It was indeed every way the Doing of the Lord.

Proclamation
against spreading false News.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 149.

Upon this the King writes a Letter to our Scots Council, November 5. who publish a Proclamation November 10. against spreading of false News, &c. which I have insert App. N<sup>o</sup>. 149. The Design of it was to stop the spreading of the Prince's and States Declarations; but little Notice was taken of it, and People were but the more fond to see those excellent Papers.

I should much wrong the Reader, if I did not upon this Occasion give the Prince of Orange's Declaration for Scotland, which as it is a good Voucher for many Things in this History, so it contains a Summary of the Hardships and most illegal Procedure in the former Years, and so I insert it here. 1688.

Of the Reasons inducing him to appear in Arms for preserving of the Protestant Religion, and for restoring the Laws and the Liberties of the ancient Kingdom of Scotland.

IT is both certain and evident to all Men, that the publick Peace and Happiness of any State or Kingdom cannot be preserved, where the Laws, Liberties, and Customs established by the lawful Authority in it, are openly transgressed and annulled, more especially where the Alteration of Religion is endeavoured, and that a Religion which is contrary to Law is endeavoured to be introduced; upon which those who are most immediately concerned in it, are indispensably bound to endeavour to preserve and maintain the established Laws, Liberties, and Customs, and above all, the Religion and Worship of God, that is established among them; and to take such an effectual Care, that the Inhabitants of the said State or Kingdom, may neither be deprived of their Religion, nor of their civil Rights; which is so much the more necessary, because the Greatness and Security, both of Kings royal Families, and of all such as are in Authority, as well as the Happiness of their Subjects and People, depend in a most special Manner upon the exact Observation and Maintenance of those their Laws, Liberties, and Customs.

Upon these Grounds it is, that we cannot any longer forbear to declare, that to our great Regret we see, that those Counsellors, who have now the chief Credit with the King, have overturned the Religion, Laws, and Liberties of those Realms, and subjected them in all Things relating to their Consciences, Liberties, and Properties, to arbitrary Government, and that not only by secret and indirect Ways, but in an open and undisguised Manner.

And indeed the lamentable Effects of an arbitrary Power, and of evil Counsels, are so manifest in the deplorable State of the Kingdom of Scotland, that both our Reason and Conscience do prompt us to an Abhorrence of them: For when we consider the sad Condition that Nation, though always affectionate to the Royal Family, and governed for many Ages by Laws made by the Authority of their Kings, and of the Estates of Parliament, and by common Customs is reduced to, by Endeavours that have been used to change the Constitution of the Monarchy regulated by Laws, into a despotick or arbitrary Power, which doth evidently appear, not only by the Actings of evil Counsellors in Power, but by the deliberate and express publick Declarations, bearing that the King is an absolute Monarch, to whom Obedience ought to be given in all Things without Reserve, thereby to make Way to introduce what Religion they please, without so much as the Necessity of the Consent of the Nation by their Estates in Parliament. Whilst we consider and ponder these Things, as we cannot but be touched with a tender Sense of those Miseries, so the giving such a Remedy to them as may be proper, and may answer the Expectation of all good Men and true Protestants, is the great Thing we propose to our selves in this Undertaking; the Equity whereof will be justified to the World, if what hath been acted at the Intigation of those evil Counsellors be further impartially weighed.

It is well known, that the Laws, Privileges, and Rights of the Kingdom, have been overturned to the great Prejudice of King and People, whilst thus all Foundation of Trust and Confidence is removed: And it is no less known what have been the arbitrary Procedures of an encroaching Privy Council; for altho' by the Laws enacted by the Authority of King and Parliament, it is expressly prohibited, that the Popish Religion should be professed, or seminary Priests suffered within the Kingdom, or that the Children of any Noblemen or Gentlemen should be sent abroad to be educated in Popish Colleges; yet have these evil Counsellors ordered, or suffered young Noblemen to be taken from their Relations, and to be sent abroad to be instructed in Jesuits Colleges, and have likewise caused Schools to be erected under the Conduct of Popish Priests, and that in the capital City of the Kingdom.

In an open Contempt also of the known Laws of the Kingdom, Papists are put into Places of highest Trust, both Civil and Military, and entrusted with all the Forts and Magazines. The Rights and Privileges of the Royal Burrows, the Third Estate of Parliament, having as many Deputies in it as all the Shires of the Kingdom, are taken away, and they hindered in the free Election of their Magistrates and Town Councils, to the manifest Violation of their their Charters established by Law and immemorial Possession. And all this is done by mere arbitrary Power, without any Citation, Trial, or Sentence.

And whereas no Nation whatsoever can subsist without the Administration of good and impartial Justice, upon which Mens Lives and Liberties, their Honours and Estate depend, yet those evil Counsellors have subjected these to an arbitrary and despotick Power, having turned out Judges, who by Law ought to continue during their Life or their good Behaviour, because they would not conform themselves to their Intentions, and put others in their Places, who, they believe, would be more compliant, and that without any Regard to their Abilities: By which it evidently appears, that those evil Counsellors design to render themselves the absolute Masters of the Lives, Honours, and Estates of the Subjects, without being restrained by any Rule or Law.

By the Influence of the same evil Counsellors, hath a most exorbitant Power been exercised, in imposing Bonds and Oaths on whole Shires, without any Law or Act of Parliament, in permitting free Quarters to the Soldiers, altho' they had a sufficient Establishment for their Pay, whereby the Kingdom was doubly burdened without any Redress, in imprisoning Gentle-men without any, so much as alledged Reason, forcing many to accuse and witness against themselves, imposing arbitrary Fines, frightening and harassing many Parts of the Country with intercommoning and Justice-airs, making some incur Forfeiture of Life and Fortune, for the most general and harmless Converse, even with their nearest Relations outlawed: And thus bringing a Consternation upon a great Part of the Kingdom, which, when Out-lawries and Intercommunings went out against Multitudes, upon the slenderest Pretences, was involved so universally in that Danger, that those Counsellors themselves were so obnoxious, as to find it necessary to have Pardons and Indemnities, whilst the poor People were left to Mercy; empowering Officers and Soldiers to act, upon the Subjects living in quiet and full Peace, the greatest Barbarities, in destroying them by hanging, shooting, and drowning them without any Form of Law, or Respect to Age or Sex, not giving some of them Time to pray to God for Mercy; and this for no other Reason, but because they would not answer, or satisfy them in such Questions as they proposed to them, without any Warrant of Law, and against the common Interest of Mankind, which frees all Men from being obliged to discover their secret Thoughts; besides a great many other Violences and Oppressions, to which that poor Nation hath been exposed without any Hope of having an End put to them, or to have Relief from them.

And that the arbitrary and illegal Proceedings of those evil Counsellors might be justified and supported, such a Declaration hath been procured by them, as strikes at the Root of the Government, and overturns the most sacred Rights of it, in making all Parliaments unnecessary, and taking away all Defences of Religion, Liberty, and Property, by an assumed and asserted absolute Power, to which Obedience is required without Reserve; which every good Christian is perswaded to be due to God Almighty alone, all whose Commandments are always just and good.

These evil Counsellors have used their utmost Endeavours to abolish penal Laws, excluding all who are not Protestants from publick Trust, which give too great a Check to their Designs. For the accomplishing of this, a Liberty hath been granted to Dissenters, but such a one, as that the Continuance thereof is plainly insinuated to depend upon their hearty Concurrence for abolishing the above mentioned penal Laws, the only legal Defence of their Religion; altho' the Dissenters have just Cause of Distrust, when they call to Mind how some Hundreds of their Ministers were driven out of their Churches, without either Accusation or Citation: The filling of many of whose Places with ignorant and scandalous Persons, hath been one great Occasion of all those Miseries which that Country for a long Time hath groined under. And Dissenters have but small Ground to rest on any present Ease, founded upon a Proclamation which may be recalled every Hour, and which in the first and second Editions of it gave no Relief to them, especially considering that not many Months before, the greatest of the forementioned Severities and Barbarities had been exercised upon them.

But to crown all, there are great and violent Presumptions inducing us to believe, that those evil Counsellors, in order to the carrying on of their ill Designs, and to the gaining to themselves the more Time for the effecting of them, for the encouraging of their Accomplices, and for the discouraging of all good Subjects, have published that the Queen hath brought forth a Son; tho' there have appeared, both during the Queen's pretended Bigness, and in the Manner in which the Birth was managed, so many just and visible Grounds of Suspicion, that not only we our selves, but all the good Subjects of those Kingdoms, do vehemently suspect, that the pretended Prince of Wales was not born by the Queen. And it is notoriously known to all the World, that many both doubted of the Queen's Bigness, and of the Birth of the Child, and yet there was not one Thing done to satisfy them, or put an End to their Doubts.

And since our dearest and most intirely beloved Consort, the Princess, and likewise we our selves have so great an Interest in this Matter, and such a Right, as all the World knows, to the Succession of these Kingdoms, which those Men have attempted to violate, for preventing of all Redress of Miseries, by the lawful Successors of the Crown, educated, by the good Providence of God, in the true Profession of the Protestant Religion, we cannot excuse our selves from espousing the true Interest of these Nations in Matters of such high Consequence, and from contributing all that lies in us, for the Defence of the Laws and Liberties thereof, the maintaining of the Protestant Religion in them, and the securing of the People in the Enjoyment of all their just Rights.

But that our Intentions may be so manifest, that no Person may doubt or pretend to doubt thereof, to excuse themselves from concurring with us in this just Design, for the universal Good of the Nation, we do declare, that the freeing of that Kingdom from all Hazard of Popery and arbitrary Power for the future, and the delivering it from what at the present doth expose it to both, the settling of it by Parliament, upon such a solid Basis as to its religious and civil Concerns, as may most effectually redress all the abovementioned Grievances, are the true Reasons of our present Undertakings as to that Nation.

And therefore we persuade our selves, that our Endeavours to give the best Assistance we can, for the Relief of so distressed a Kingdom, shall not only not be misconstrued, but shall also be accompanied with a cheerful and universal Concurrence of the whole Nation, that even those who have been Instruments for the enslaving of it, will now shew their Dislike of what they have done, by their timeous and reasonable Diligence for its Rescue; and that if any shall not give us that Assistance which their Conscience to God, and their Respect to their Country oblige them to, they shall be justly charged with all the Evils that may be the Effects of such a Want of their Duty.

And as we our selves desire to trust to the almighty God alone for the Success of our Arms, so we expect of all good Men, that they will apply themselves most earnestly to him for his Blessing upon our Endeavours, that so they may tend to the Glory of his great Name, to the Establishment of the reformed Churches, and to the Peace and Happiness of that Kingdom.

Given under our Hand and Seal, at our Court in the Hague, the 10 of October, in the Year of our Lord 1688.

WILLIAM HENRY Prince of Orange.

By his Highness's special Command,

C. Huygens.

This Declaration had a very great Influence on the most Part of the Nobility, Gentry, and Commons in Scotland, who very soon discovered themselves heartily for the Prince, and joyfully accepted of the Freedom he offered them from their horrid Oppressions in their civil and religious Interests.

After this, very little offers as to the Procedure of our Scots Managers: Their Correspondence with the Court was much stopped, whence they had all their Courage; the Body of the Nation hated them, and their Consciences, awakned by this surprizing Providence of the Prince's Arrival, smote them, and they began to consider how to provide best for their own Safety; and the hearty Protestants through the Kingdom began to take Heart.

In several Places the Prince of Orange's Declaration was publicly proclaimed, as at Glasgow, Irwin, Air, and most other Burghs. Upon the last Day of November, the Earl of Lowdon, and several young Gentlemen, at that Time Students in the University of Glasgow, burnt the Pope's Effigies, and the Archbishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow, without any Opposition; and the (since) famous Mr. Tolland, at this Time a Student there, assisted at that Solemnity.

But upon the 10 of December there was an Appearance against Popery, which met with some Opposition, and made much Noise at Edinburgh, and that was the Attempt made upon the Abbey of Holy-rood-house, where the Popish Chapel was, and the Jesuits Schools were kept. And I shall give as distinct an Account of it as I can, from a Narrative sent me by a reverend Minister since the Revolution, then a Student at Edinburgh, who was engaged in the Attack and wounded very sore, and some Letters writ at this Time.

The Attack upon the Abbey of Holy-rood-house, December 10.

Some time before this there had been some Tumults in Edinburgh, particularly one at the dismissing of a Popish Meeting in the Canongate upon the Lord's Day, where some Apprentices and others put some Affronts upon them. Information being given, upon Munday some Soldiers were ordered to apprehend those informed against; and Two Servants of the Baxters, with a Woman, were taken up, who were mercilessly scourged from the Tolbooth to the Abbey, being guarded with near Three hundred Men, and then returned to Prison, and banished.

At this Scuffle fell in an Incident which drew deeper, and is a flagrant Instance of what the Managers would have done, had they not soon been prevented. When the Soldiers were apprehending the last named, there was a Struggle made by the rest of the Apprentices: At the Noise, one Alexander Keith a fencing Master, and no way concerned in the Mob, came out of a House where he was at his Morning-drink, and seeing the Soldiers raging with their Swords and Bayonets among the unarmed Lads, cried out, Lads, have ye no Swords. This passed at the Time, and he went off. But the following Night he was apprehended while in Bed; and those, or Words to that purpose, being proven on him, in Eight or Ten Days he was hanged at the Cross.

This Step and other Things sowed Peoples Spirits, and Guards were kept in Twenty or Thirty Places of the Town, to prevent Risings. But when the regular Forces were called up to England, and none left but an independent Company under Captain Wallace, at the Abbey, the Reports of Massacres and the like were spread, and People extremely alarmed, and Letters were talked of to some People in Town, to remove with their Families; otherwise they would have Cause to repent it.

Many Circumstances concurred to inflame Peoples Minds formerly enraged. Upon Sabbath, December 9. some idle People walking in the Park and St. Anthony's Yards, seeking to come through the Abbey as their nearest Road, found all the Gates shut, and Cannons placed at every Gate, and were discharged by the Sentinels to come near. This, with the Addition that the Court was full of armed Men, when reported in the Town, heightened the Jealousies of the Populace, and the Fears of more thinking Persons, that Evil was designed. And in the Evening a few young Lads accidentally got together, after some Conversation upon the present Danger, began to huzza, and there was soon a vast Gathering of Students at the College, and Apprentices. The Magistrates caused shut all the Ports, and the Keys were brought to the Provost, Magnus Prince, his House at the Foot of Liberton's Wynd, and the rest of the Magistrates absconded. The Youths gathered about his Lodgings which were inaccessible, calling for the Keys, and upon his Refusal, threatened to burn his House, but did no Hurt. From thence they came to the Cross, and having forced up the Door with Fore-hammers, they proclaimed an Offer of Four hundred Pounds Sterling to any who should bring Perth or Melford dead or alive. No more happened this Night.

Next Day in the Forenoon, the Town Council met, and emitted a Proclamation discharging Tumults, and ordering Parents and Masters to keep their Servants and Children within Doors. This Proclamation was torn as soon as it was read, and the Officers and Drummer stopped when going through the Town. This Day the Chancellor and his Family saw good to retire from the Abbey, and go out of Town. Matters continued quiet till Twilight, and then a Multitude began to gather at the Head of the Cowgate, and after they had provided themselves in Staves and Torches, they came up the Bow, where they knew of Two Drums, and seized them; one of them soon broke, and with the other, their Numbers still increasing, they went down the Town to the Nether-bow. In the Canongate they stopped a little, seeing the Guard drawing out, and upon sending to enquire what the Matter was, they found the Captain friendly, and that he only drew out his Men to put Respect upon them. They desired he should call them in; which was presently done, and they went forward.

At the Canongate Cross they took down the Earl of Perth's Picture, and carried it with them to the Abbey. There Captain Wallace was advanced with some Soldiers beyond the Strand. Whereupon they stopped, and sent to demand Access to the Court; which he refusing, they beat their Drum, and with a Cry run in upon him. He ordered his Men to fire, which did abundance of Hurt; severals were killed upon the Spot, and many wounded, to the Number of 36 or 38. whereof not a few died afterward. After the Fire, the Apprentices and Youths fell in upon the Captain with great Fury, forced him and his Men off the Street, and killed Two of them outright before they could enter the Abbey Gates; that being presently shut, they could get no further in the Pursuit.

Upon this they retired a little, and ordered some of their Number to carry off the Dead, and to help up the Wounded to the Town, and require Assistance; and then lodged themselves in Houses and Closets the best way they could. Mean while Captain Wallace and his Men continued, from this Time about Nine at Night till Eleven, firing up the Street.

Those who went up to the Town, carried up with them some of the Arms and Hands of the dead and maimed, and hearing of a Number of Gentlemen and others in a Vintner's, went to them, and shewed how they had been treated. The Gentlemen applied to the Town Council, then sitting, for Assistance; which they refused, and the Commissioners from the Apprentices and others threatened to burn the Town. The Gentlemen went and got a Quorum of the Privy Council, who ordered the Magistrates to raise the trained Bands, and sent down Two Heralds with them in their Coats displayed, before them, to require Captain Wallace to surrender; and the trained Bands were ordered to force him, if he did not.

When the Heralds came down, they summoned Captain Wallace to surrender the Abbey in the Council's Name; this he refused. Then the Town-guards, and trained Bands, commanded by Captains M'gill and Graham, came up, and some Firing was on both Sides, without any great Hurt, but some slight Wounds. The Captain would have defended the Abbey against them all, having a vast Advantage of the Ground: But Captain Graham with a Part of his Men broke in by a back Entry not so well guarded, which the Party in the Abbey observing, fled, and about Thirty six were taken Prisoners, but Wallace and a good many escaped.

The Youths observing this, broke into the Court, and killed all the Soldiers they met with. It was said, about Fourteen Soldiers were killed. Whether they got Liberty, as some of my Accounts say, from the Town Captains, I know not, but they fell presently to rife the Chapel and Schools, and brought the Timber Work, and Library, with every Thing that came in their Way, to the Clofs, and burnt them. It was some Time before they could fall upon the Images, to destroy which was their End in making the Attack. At length they found them in an Oven, with an

an old Press set before it to cover its Mouth. Those they took out, and carried them up to the Town in Proceſſion through the Streets, and back again to the Abbey Cloſs, and there burnt them. They entered the Church, rased the new Work there, and turned up the marble Pavement, and rifled the Chancellor's Lodgings, and some others in the Abbey; but none of the Youths and Apprentices laid their Hand on any Thing to carry it off, but all was burnt. 1688.

Next Day they gathered again, there being no Power to restrain them, and went through the Houses of all Papists they could hear of in the Canongate and Town, and required their Books, Beads, Crosses, and Images, which they burnt solemnly in the Street. Where the People were civil, they took what they gave upon their Word, and if rude, they effectually searched their House. Some took Occasion to mix in for Pillage, but the Youths took all to the Flames. James Clerk's Lodging in the Wrights-houses, and the Laird of Niddry's House, and Blair Drummond's House, with many others, were attacked. No Persons were touched, but some Papists in a Fright leaping out of Windows, were hurt.

Upon the Day following, a Rabble of common Thieves got up, and pillaged several Houses merely for Plunder; but that was soon over, and all Things turned easy and quiet. December 14. the Council met, and published their Act anent Papists, which is added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 150. The Reader will observe a vast Change now. King James had withdrawn about this Time, and the Administration was just a putting in King William's Hands, and now the Stile of the Council alters. They order Papists Houses to be searched regularly for Arms and Ammunition, and recommend it to all Magistrates to protect the Houses and Persons of Papists from Tumults and Insults; which was highly just and reasonable.

anent Papists.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 150.

The last Act of this Council I have met with, is December 24. wherein they require all Protestant Subjects to put themselves in Defence, for securing their Religion, Lives, Liberties and Properties, for their own Security, against the Attempts of Papists; and Heritors are called to meet, well provided, at the head Burgh of the Shire, under the Command of the Persons nominate in the Proclamation, which is annexed App. N<sup>o</sup>. 151. Thus our Scots Council come in at length to what they had been harassing and persecuting the Country for these Twenty eight Years, and call them to Self-defence, and appearing against Popery, and for Liberty, Property, and the Protestant Religion.

How Matters went at London in this Juncture, is not my Province to enter upon. Full and large Accounts of them are to be had in Print already. December 11. the King retired the first Time, and his persecuting Chancellor, the bloody Jeffreys, stepped aside, but was soon seized and put in the Tower. And the Prince of Orange was applied to by a Number of the Nobility, to procure them a free Parliament. And December 25. he is addressed to take the Administration, civil and military, in his Hand; which he did. January 8. King James retired for good and all. And the Parliament met, and February 13. 1688. they offered the Crown to the Prince and Princess of Orange, and they were that Day proclaimed King and Queen.

As to our Scots Affairs at this Juncture, I wish we had a more distinct Account of them; I shall not much enter upon them. Upon the 7 of January, the Prince called all the Scots Noblemen and Gentlemen at London, to meet him at St. James's, and asked their Advice what was proper to be done for securing the Protestant Interest in Scotland. They met upon the 8. and concluded upon their Advice to his Highness, and agreed upon an Address to him, that he would take upon him the civil and military Administration, and call a Meeting of Estates at Edinburgh, March 14. next. This Address, signed by about Thirty Noblemen, and Eighty Gentlemen, January 10. was presented, and on the 14 the Prince called them again, and told them, he would fall in with it.

Accordingly, the Estates of the Kingdom met, and their Acts and Constitutions are in Print, and I shall not enter upon them. Upon the 11 of April, they make their Declaration containing the Claim of Right, and they offer the Crown to King William and Queen Mary, which they send up with Commissioners to London, and the King accepts of it, and at their own Desire turns them to a Parliament. And they, June 5. meet, and begin, after they had recognized their Majesty's royal Authority, with abolishing Prelacy, and rescinding the Earl of Argyle's Forfeiture. And the Posture of publick Affairs not permitting, they did not meet till April 1690. when they went on in pulling down what had been built during those Years I have been describing, and set up our scriptural, and Reformation Presbyterian Church Government.

I know not how to conclude this History better, than with a kind of Abstract of what they did, in the Appendix, and with pointing the Reader there to the chief Things done after the glorious Revolution, for setting Matters right after those Two Reigns of Blood and Oppression.

The Sum and Compend of this large Work the Reader hath in a Representation of Grievances, and Petition of many Thousands of Presbyterians to the Prince of Orange; which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 152. The Copy I have is the first Draught of it, with marginal Corrections. Whether this Address was ever written out, signed and sent to the Prince, I cannot say, but 'tis a distinct and particular Account of the Grievances of Presbyterians during this Period I have been describing, drawn up by Ministers and Gentlemen who had suffered, when the Sense of them was fresh, and every Body knew them, and Thousands were ready to sign it; and it is a good Voucher for many Things narrated above.

Presbyterian
Ministers Ad-

Prince of Orange.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 153.

I am of Opinion, that this Paper was not got finished before the Prince's Arrival in England, and so was not sent. But as soon as possible, the general Meeting of Presbyterian Ministers convened at Edinburgh, and in January, I think, agreed to, and transmitted an Address to his Highness the Prince of Orange, which I have added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 153. from a Copy under the Clerk to that Meeting his Hand; and the rather, that a maimed and false Copy hath been published of it in some Prelatick Pamphlets, with Reflections, which the preceeding Part of this History will sufficiently refute.

From what hath been already observed, we may be fully perswaded of King William's good Inclinations for the Church of Scotland, and how fully he would have gone in to all that Presbyterians could have sought: But it was our Unhappiness, he had a Prelatick Church likewise to manage, and our Prelatists, tho' hearty Jacobites, wanted not Friends in our neighbour Kingdoms; and yet under this Weight, he did a great deal, and restored our Reformation Rights, and did publick Justice to a great many of the Sufferers; and would have done more, had it not been for the Influence of some in England, and our own State Divisions among our selves.

I am only to point the Reader in the Appendix, to some of the principal Things done upon the Revolution, to help what had been put wrong under the Two Brothers Reigns, as we have heard. The Claim of Right was the Foundation of what followed, and as a great Voucher to some of the Facts set down above, and a great Advancement after such a Turn, I insert it Claim of Right.

Act abolishing Prelacy.
App. N<sup>o</sup>. 155.

App. N<sup>o</sup>. 154. As soon as the Convention were turned to a Parliament, by their 3 Act, July 22. 1689. they abolish Prelacy, as the Reader will see App. N<sup>o</sup>. 155. and by their 4 Act do Justice to the noble Family of Argyle, and declare what was done to the Earl, to have been a Scandal and Reproach to the Nation, and rescind his Forfeiture. At this Session they had but very little Time, and did not fully understand one another, otherwise more might have been done in the Time they had. It was a Pity in the Eyes of many, that an Act was not passed, which was read June 26. a first Time, and thereafter, I think, July 2. a second Time, and, as some Accounts before me bear, agreed to in Parliament, concerning the Exclusion of People who had a Share in the Oppression I have been describing, and the evil Counsels given, from Places of publick Trust and Power. I have however annexed the Draught of it App. N<sup>o</sup>. 156.

When they had more Time next Session, they fell more closely to Work, and by their first Act rescind Act 1. Parl. 2. Char. II. Act asserting his Majesty's Supremacy, &c. as inconsistent with Presbyterian Government, and what ought to be abrogated; and by the 2 Act April 25. added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 157. restore Presbyterian Ministers thrust from their Charges since 1661. and by their 5 Act June 7. they ratify the Confession of Faith, and settle Presbyterian Government, which is added App. N<sup>o</sup>. 158. In this second Session they do Justice to several Persons wronged in the former Years, in Acts which need not be inserted; to Caldwel, Kersland, and Mr. Veitch by their 31 Act, to the Laird of Salton by their 16 Act. By their 19 Act they dissolve the Lands annexed to the Crown in the former Reigns. By their 23 Act they abolish Patronages; and by their 27. rescind the Laws for Conformity; and by their 28. rescind several other iniquitous Acts of Parliament in the former Period since the Restoration.

Forfeitures.

And to do all the Justice that might now be, to the worthy Persons concerned, they rescind all the Forfeitures and Fines since the 1665. in a long Act containing a very large List of Persons forfeited and fined; and appoint a Court to hear the Claims they had to give in for Repetition, but I don't find that any of them almost reached any Thing valuable from their Persecutors. The Reasons for passing this Act were printed at this Time, and deserve a Room in the Appendix N<sup>o</sup>. 159. And the Act rescissory of Fines and Forfeitures shall shut up the Appendix, N<sup>o</sup>. 160.

Conclusion.

Thus I have laid before the World a true and impartial, but very imperfect Account of the heavy Persecution of the Church of Scotland, from the Restoration to the Revolution, with a short Sketch of the Justice done this Church upon the back of that great Turn of Affairs.

I wish it may be useful to fill the present and rising Generations with a just Detestation of the antichristian Spirit of Persecution, so contrary to our holy Christian Religion; may it tend to revive the decayed Sense of the Greatness of the Mercy of the Revolution, and help to confirm and perpetuate our present Feeling of the vast Mercy of our second, and some way greater Revolution, by our only lawful Sovereign King George, his seasonable and peaceable Accession to the Throne of Britain and Ireland, and tend to quicken and stir up all good Protestants in those Kingdoms, to a faithful and prudent Contending for the Faith handed down to us through so much Blood and Suffering, and fix us in the deepest Abhorrence of all wicked Attempts in favour of Popery, and all Attacks upon our holy Reformation, and valuable civil Liberties.

PROCLAMATION, offering a Reward for apprehending Mr. John Welsh Traitor, and others. February 6, 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. I.

HARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To Our Lovits

Macers of Our Council, Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. Forasmuch as, by Sentence of Our Justice-court, Mr. John Welsh, Mr. Gabriel Semple, and Mr. Samuel Arnot are declared Traitors, for being in open Rebellion against Us, in the Year 1666. And they having, for divers Years past, made it their Work to pervert and abuse Our People from their Duty and Allegiance, at their Field-meetings, these Rendezvouzes of Rebellion; and by their Example and Impunity, several others intercommuned and vagrant Preachers having also followed that same Method and Way, whereby Our People, by not frequenting the publick Ordinances, and being exposed to hear Jesuits or any other irregular Persons, who dare take upon them the sacred Office of the Ministry, are debauched to Atheism and Popery: We therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, have thought fit, for the Encouragement of Our good Subjects, in apprehending and discovering these Persons, hereby to declare and give Assurance to any Person or Persons, who shall apprehend and secure Mr. John Welsh (or so discover him, as he may be apprehended) shall have instantly paid to him or them, upon Delivery of his Person, to any of Our Privy Council, or Commitment of him to Prison, Nine Thousand Merks Scots Money, out of the first and readiest of Our Cash, as a Reward; and to any Person who shall apprehend and secure the said Mr. Gabriel Semple, and Mr. Samuel Arnot, also declared Traitors, or to discover them, as they may be apprehended, Three Thousand Merks for each of them; and to any Person or Persons, who shall apprehend and secure any of these Field Preachers, who are declared Fugitives, or are intercommuned, for each of them, Two Thousand Merks; and for each one of these vagrant Preachers in the Fields, that shall be apprehended, the Sum of Nine Hundred Merks. And which Rewards, We declare shall be instantly paid to the Person or Persons, who shall perform the said Service, without any Manner of Delay or Defalcation. And further, We declare, That if in Pursuit of the said Persons, they or any of their Complices shall make Resistance, and that thereupon they or any of them shall be hurt, mutilate, or slain, the said Persons Apprehenders of them or any assisting them, shall never be called in question for the same, criminally nor civilly in all Time coming, but shall be reputed and esteemed Persons, who have done Us and their Country good and acceptable Service. OUR WILL is heretofore, and We charge you strictly, and command, that, incontinent these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Mercat-cross of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and thereat, in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises, that all Our good Subjects may have notice thereof; and ordain these Presents to be printed. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the sixth Day of February, 1679. and of Our Reign the one and Thirtieth Year.

Tho. Hay Cl. Secr. Concilii.

GOD save the KING.

Council's Act, Feb. 13, 1679. about the Forces. N<sup>o</sup>. II.

THE Lords of his Majesty's Privy Council do ordain his Majesty's standing Forces; Horse, Foot, and Dragoons, to be distributed and quartered in Manner following, viz. Three Companies of Foot in Canongate and Leith, one Company at Calder, one Company at Stirling, one Company at Culrofs and Clackmannan, one Company at Cowpar and Falkland, four Companies at Glasgow, two Companies in the Shire of Air, one Company in the Shire of Renfrew, one Company in Lanerk, one Company in Galloway, and one Company at Kelso, and leaves the Eighteenth Company to the Major General's Disposal; one Squadron of his Majesty's Troop of Guards at Edinburgh, another Squadre of them at Stirling, another in Fife, and the Fourth in Borrowstounness, one Troop at Glasgow, one Troop in Merse and Teviotdale, and one Troop in Galloway, one Company of Dragoons in Galloway, one Company at Air, Twenty five at Calder, Twenty five at Culrofs, and Fifty at Lanerk, and refers to the Major General, in what Place in ilk Shire, he shall appoint their respective Quarters. It is always hereby ordered, that those mentioned for Calder and Borrowstounness shall oversee all the Bounds betwixt Cramond-bridge and Stirling-bridge; that these at Culrofs and Stirling oversee betwixt Stirling-bridge, Kinrofs and Burntisland; that these appointed for Fife oversee what lies betwixt Kinrofs and Fifehead; that these in Glasgow, Lanerk and Renfrew, oversee Clydsdale and Renfrew; these in Air that Sheriffdom, and these in Galloway the Sheriffdom of Wigtoun, and Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and Jurisdictions within the Bounds of the said Shires, to the effect they may assist the Execution of the Laws in all these respective Bounds, or any other Shires of the Kingdom, according to the Orders that shall be given them by the Major General. And further, the Council do ordain the Commissioners, nominate in the several Shires, to take care, that the Troops and Companies of Dragoons be furnished and provided with Hay and Straw by the Towns and Villages where they are quartered; and in case they cannot be conveniently provided by these Towns and Villages, that the Commissioners cause the Hay and Straw to be furnished and carried to them by the Inhabitants in the Country not exceeding Six Miles from their Quarters, at the Prices already appointed by the Council, in respect those Prices were appointed at first, with so great Consideration to the Carriage.

Speech, Sir Francis Winnington to the House of Commons. N<sup>o</sup>. III.

THE King cannot pardon Treason against the Government, for then the Government cannot be safe from evil Ministers: Could Kings have done it, would not Bell, Hemp, Worfillon, and the Spencers have been pardoned? Kings should be the Sanctuary of the People from the Oppression of evil Ministers, but not the Refuge of the Enemies of the Government, of such arch Transgressors as Danby. If Danby may be pardoned, then the Papist Lords in the Tower may be so too, and all the Jesuits now in Newgate may be pardoned. Is this the Way to secure the Laws and Protestant Religion? The King is limited in Power, or it cannot be a legal Power as ours is; the Limitation is to the Good and Behoof of the People; but in cherishing of an open and notorious Traitor, the Minister of common Mischief, and common Center in which all the Lines of Confusion and Mischief meet, is this for the Good and Behoof of the People? A Prerogative is to abate the Rigour of Justice, and not to elude and destroy Justice. If Ministers may be pardoned, at the Prince's Pleasure, for all the Wrongs they do to the People, whilst the Prince is sworn to protect the People from these Wrongs, and is therefore both intrusted and paid, there is no Security, and our pretended free and legal Government is a mere Cheat, and we are all arrant Cheats. Besides this is Treason impeached in Parliament, and therefore not pardonable out of Parliament? This is a national and catholic Treason, the Life and Root of the Government is invaded, and a Pardon here is so unreasonable a Thing, that it ought to be placed to his Account, who dares plead it, and ranked amongst the rest of such evil Counsels. The Bill preparing in the House of Lords is not his Punishment, but his Pardon a Salvation by Act of Parliament. Who will be deterred from Treason? who can make such a Precedent as this, to escape with Impunity, to carry away Honours and Wealth as the Reward of Treason, and the poor People's Spoils, and that at such a Time as this, and be tardie to himself? If this must be, it must be good and meritorious to invade Property, betray the Kingdom, sell the People, encourage Popery, suborn Witnesses, strangle and smother the Discovery of the Plot. Remember how ye use him, you make him an Example for the rest; if he must live, let him not survive his Glory, at least degrade himself, sequester him, that is, to reduce him of as Sir Thomas Osburn, and as poor and indigent, and leave him Nothing he has got by his monstrous Acts. He hath got what the Kingdom, I am bold to say, these Lords that agree not with this, speak one Word for him, and two for themselves; they will do the same Thing to end with the same Security. It is a Licence to cheat the King and Kingdom for five Years. If this must be, I pray let there be a Clause in the Bill, to pardon all Villanies and Treasons whatsoever, against the Government, as well for the poor as rich. Let not the great Rogues escape and go rewarded: Was Pein, Berry, and Hill hanged for murdering Godfrey? Must he escape that so bitterly discouraged and menaced him? Or what Reason was there that Groves and Ireland should die for being on the Plot, whilst he is rewarded that did conceal it, and would have turned it upon others? To conclude, if after this Discovery made by GOD, and progressed by us as Instruments, this Point be delivered up, they shall not escape unpunished, and GOD shall bring Deliverance some other Way.

Speech of the Earl of Shaftsbury to the House of Lords, March 24, 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. IV.My Lords,

YOU are appointing the Consideration of the State of England, to be taken up in a Committee of the whole House, some Day the next Week. I do not know how well what I have to say may be received, for I never study either to make my Court well, or to be popular. I always speak what I am commanded by the Dictates of the Spirit within me. There are some other Considerations which concern England so nearly, that without them, you will come far short of the Safety or Quiet at home. We have a little Sister, and she hath no Breasts, what shall we do for our Sister in the Day when she shall be spoken for? If she be a Wall, we must build upon her a Palace of Silver, and if she be a Door, we will inclose her with Boards of Cedar. We have several little Sisters without Breasts, the French Protestant Churches, the Two Kingdoms of Scotland and Ireland. The foreign Protestants are a Wall of Defence to England, upon which she may build a Palace of Silver, a glorious Palace. The Protection of the Protestants abroad, is the Check to the growing Greatness of France. Scotland and Ireland are Two Doors that let in Good or Mischiefs upon us. They are much weakened by the Artifices of our cunning Enemies, and we ought to inclose them with Boards of Cedar. Popery and Slavery, like Two Sisters, go Hand in Hand. In England, Popery was to bring in Slavery, in Scotland, Slavery was to go before, and Popery was to follow. I do not think that your Lordships, or the Parliament have Jurisdiction there. It is a noble and ancient Kingdom; they have an illustrious Nobility, a gallant Gentry, a learned Clergy, and an understanding worthy People. But yet we cannot think on England, as we ought, without reflecting on the Condition they are in; they are under the same Prince, and the Influence of the same Favourite and Counsels, and they are hardly dealt with. Can we that are the richer expect better Usage? for it is certain, that in all absolute Governments, the poorest Countries are most favourably dealt withal, when the ancient Nobility and Gentry cannot enjoy their Royalties, Freedoms and Stewartries, which they and their Ancestors have possessed for several hundred Years; but they are now enjoyed by the Lords of the Council, to make Deputations of their Authorities to such as are their known Enemies. Can we expect to enjoy our magaa charta long, under the same Persons and Administration of Affairs? If the Council-table there can imprison any Nobleman or Gentleman for several Years, without bringing him to a Trial, or giving the least Reason for what they do; can we expect the same will ever preserve the Liberties of the Subjects here? I will acknowledge I am not versed in the particular Laws of Scotland; but this I know that all northern Countries, have, by their Laws, an undoubted inviolable Right to their Liberties and Properties; yet Scotland hath outdone all the eastern and southern Countries, in having their Lives, Liberties and Estates subjected to the arbitrary Will and Pleasure of those that govern. They have lately plundered and harassed the richest and best Countries of that Kingdom, by having brought down the barbarous Highlanders to devour them, and all this without any colourable Pretence, nor can there be found out a Reason of State for what they have done, but that these wicked Ministers designed to procure a Rebellion at any Rate, which, as they managed it, was only prevented by the miraculous Hand of GOD: For otherwise, all the Papists in England would have been armed, and the fairest Opportunity given in that Time, for the Execution of that bloody and wicked Design the Papists had, as it is not possible for any Man that duly considers it, to think otherwise, but those Ministers who acted it, were as guilty of the Plot as any of the Lords that are in question for it. My Lords, I am forced to speak this the plainer, because, till the Pressure be fully and clearly taken off from Scotland, it is not possible for me, or any thinking Man, to believe that Good is meant us here. We must still be on our Guards, apprehending the Principle is not changed at Court, and that these Men who are still in Place and Authority, have that Influence on the Mind of our excellent Prince, that he is not, nor cannot be to us, what his own Nature and Goodness would incline him to. I know your Lordships can order Nothing in this, but there are that hear me who can put a present Cure to it, and till that be done, the Scots Wierd is, mors in olla, Death in the Pot. But there is something that most immediately concerns us, the Act for 22000 Men to invade us on all Occasions; this I hear the Lords of the Council have treated (as they do all other Laws) and expounded it to a standing Army of 6000 Men. I am sure we have Reason and Right to beseech the King, that that Act be better considered in the next Parliament there. I shall say no more of that Kingdom at this Time, for I am afraid your Lordships may think I have said too much, having no Concerns there; but if a French Nobleman come to dwell in my House, and my Family, I should think it concerned me to ask what he did in France, for if he were there a Villain, a Rogue, or a Plunderer, I should desire him to live elsewhere, and I hope your Lordships will think fit to do the same Thing for this Nation, if ye find the same Cause. My Lords, give me leave to speak Two or Three Words concerning our other Sister Ireland; thither, I hear, is sent Douglas his Regiment to secure us against the French, besides, I am credibly informed, the Papists have their Arms restored, and the Protestants are not many of them recovered from being the suspected Party. The Sea Towns, as well as the inland, are full of Papists; that Kingdom cannot long continue in English Hands, if some better Care be not taken of it; this is in your Power, and there is Nothing there but what is under your Laws. And therefore, I beg at least, that this Kingdom may be taken into Consideration together with the State of England, for I am sure there can be no Safety here, if these Doors be not shut up and made safe.

IT is conceived, and that very candidly, without Prejudice to others Judgments, or troubling our selves with that so often baffled a Cause, called Popery, that a Papist, or one Popishly affected ought not to inherit, or succeed in the Management of the Crown.

Reason I. In Strictness of Law, because one so qualified hath wilfully disabled or rendred himself incapable of that Benefit, which the common Law (after the usual Course of Descent) doth positively require; for it is presumable, that he who succeeds in the Office of the Crown, should be legally adopted to execute so great a Trust; and therefore, if minus idoneus, be not sufficiently ballasted with the Notion and Intrigues of State, others are to govern in Aid of him, as in case of Idiocy, Lunacy, or the like, and the Parliament is bound (as intrusted to redress Grievances, and secure the Nation) to place it where Religion and Property shall be adjudged most safe.

There are several Precedents of this Nature.

1<sup>mo</sup>. Edgar Atheling (as Stories agree) was the undoubted Heir, yet William the Norman, commonly called the Conqueror, was called in to oppose Harold, and invested with the Crown, and Atheling for ever an Exile, and disinherited.

2<sup>do</sup>. After him succeeded his Second Son William Rufus, and not Robert the eldest.

3<sup>tio</sup>. King John not only laid aside after, Plantagenet his eldest Brother's Son, but likewise put him to Death.

4<sup>to</sup>. In Sicily, there was lately a great Contest between the Two Sons of Charles II. Mortelus and Robert, and I find the Crown awarded to Robert the younger, as magis dignus ad regnandum.

5<sup>to</sup>. Alexander was demanded, to whom he would bequeath his Sceptre; he said, the worthiest, and to him whose Sword had the sharpest Point, meaning, whose Virtue was most luculent, and of the brightest Integrity, after the Disposition of Jacob passing by Manasses, and conferring the Blessing upon Ephraim the younger, as more deserving and acceptable to GOD.

6<sup>to</sup>. The State of France rejected the King of Navarr, and appointed another to reign over them, because of his Religion, and when afterward the said King of Navarr came to be Henry IV. of France, it was by his forsaking GOD, and complying with the Church of Rome, by means of which he thought to settle the Crown upon his Head; but was so much mistaken therein, that he thereby left both Crown and Life together.

Reason II. Can it be thought, but he that succeeds in the Crown, should not succeed concurrentibus his qui in jure requirunt, as the civil Law expresses it, that is, in all the Concernments thereof, which are the Laws, principally those that relate to Religion, and not for one Man, led away with a blind Perverseness, renouncing the Religion, he knows not why (and so wilfully attainting himself) to intrude the Nation in Superstition and Tyranny, for regularly, in all Parts where Popish Lords are in the Church, there Tyranny (of course) rages in the State.

Reason III. It is a Maxim amongst Lawiers, that lex facit regem, and Maxims must not be denied. If so then, to speak out after the true Intendment of Law, he that comes not to the Crown satiatus, as the Laws notify and prescribe, 'tis no lawful Succession, but downright Usurpation; and, without Scruple, it is the Endeavour of every good Christian, to withstand an Usurper, it being undoubtedly more pleasing to God, to put one Man by, who thus wilfully disables himself, and withal most shamefully usurps, than expose Millions of Souls to Damnation, and the Streets to flow with Blood, by suffering that Religion to creep in, whose Reformation (at the mildest Rate) will certainly prove Fire and Faggot. For this very Cause Maackab was removed from being Queen by her Son King Asa, for making an Idol in a Grove, incited thereunto by the Prophet Azariah.

Reason IV. The Succession of the Crown, and a common Descent much differ; for if an Heir that is a Subject, prove loose and debauched, it little damnifies the Publick; more deserving Persons may happily perchance step into his House, and be more serviceable to the Publick, the Damage is still but private to his own Family; but in case of the Crown, there is none so senseless but must needs conceive the Damage most fatal, because universal. The whole Nation must inevitably suffer, Religion be subverted, and Property destroyed, and the whole People in Danger of their Lives. 'Tis well known in a private Case, the Heir is usually thrown off and disinherited; if an Entail, it may be destroyed: And if Law justifies it, the like in the Publick; and therefore the grand Inquisitor of State, and Conservator of the Liberties of England, the Parliament, may, for weighty Causes, refuse the Heir presumptive, and, for the Safety of the Nation, settle it, where they in Honour and Prudence shall conceive most proper.

Reason V. We read in Scripture (which is the golden Rule that we must walk by) That Libnah revolted from Jehoram, because he had forsaken the God of his Fathers; so we had better forsake Man and adhere to GOD, in keeping our Religion, than trust to Man and lose GOD, to be unavoidably destroyed here and hereafter, irrecoverably damned in serving Baal, and parting with the Divinity now established.

Reason VI. When Rebeboam had prepared a great Army to reduce the Israelites, he was forbidden by the Prophet. Thus saith the L. O. E. D., shall not go up, nor fight against your Brethren, for this Thing is from me. Mark, he calls them Brethren, not Rebels.

Passive Obedience therefore is simple, and fit for such that know no better. Now God has discovered the Snare and the Pit of Ruin, that the Pope and the Devil has prepared for us; if we do not timely countermin it by cautionary Laws, to suppress those that digged it, we may in a short Space be thrown into it headlong, and none pity us.

But the right Line, with some shallow-pated Talkers, is a noli me tangere, so sacred (forsooth) that we must rather venture Body and Soul, in subjecting our selves to all the Curses imaginable, that Hell it self can inflict upon us, than in the least alter or controul it; a vain frivolous Caveat, and not to be heeded by us; for human Examples (as I shewed before) have been noted against it, and the Scripture warrants it. Samuel foretold in the Case of Sau', that he would be rejected for his Disobedience, tho' not his Person degraded or deposed, yet that the Kingdom should be removed both from his Line and Tribe, which was done accordingly, and transferred on David. This proves very fully, that the Heirs or next in Succession are are not so immoveably placed, but that they may lawfully, and on just Causes, be displaced, if not legally qualified, and others put up for God's Glory in their Rooms. God raised Jehu, to purge Idolatry, against the House of Ahab. All the Sons of Ahab were beheaded, and in a Manner his whole Line cut off. For his good Service he had a Promise of a special Blessing for his Issue, to continue the Throne to the Fourth Generation. Several other Instances I could give, but this may suffice. In brief, there is no reformed Church from the first Waldenses of Lyons and Languedoc, to this very Day, but have held it lawtul.

Reason VII. It is conceived by half-witted Statesmen, that restrictive Laws may prevent all Mischiefs, and secure the Protestants, a very vain Opinion, and most fallacious; for Laws will never bind, but more enrage: Shackle him as you will, and load him with never so many Laws, when King, he and his Party will be restless till they have set themselves at Liberty, to have the Protestants under; for when King, he is not impeachable, and the potestas regni will be at his Disposal. When the Wolf is Shepherd the Flock is very safe indeed, and like to be well lookt after, all may devour that will; for if his Party commit such Outrages, that no Age can parallel, what will they do then? Now no Man is safe in his Bed, then none safe at all, they will adventure to murder People in their very Houses, for they hold it no more Sin than to kill a Dog.

Reason VIII. In fine, be sure he and his Party (which will increase daily, and the Protestants decline) will soon get an Opportunity either by Stratagem, or open Force, to avoid all Laws, tho' they are never so strong and wary, and therefore it will be impossible to be safe without a Protestant Successor.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Iveland, Defender of the Faith: To our Lovits, Macers, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. Forasmuch as, notwithstanding of Our Tenderness and Clemency to all Our Subjects, which hath extended even to those who have not cared to conform themselves to Our Laws; yet severals pretending to be of the Protestant Profession, have not only disgraced, and endeavoured to ruine the true reformed Religion, established in this Our Kingdom, and overturned the Principles of all Society and Government by a bloody and distracted false Zeal, which hath prompted them to open Rebellion, to the printing of Jesuitical murdering Tenets, and the deforcing and invading such as are clothed with Our Authority; but also have proceeded to such extravagant and inhumane Practices, as tend to the Destruction of Mankind it self. Amongst many Instances whereof, some villanous Murderers did lately lay a Design to kill and assassinate the Town-major of Edinburgh, for whom they having sent, upon Pretext to dissipate a Conventicle, they did discharge many Shots at him and other Soldiers who assisted him, and thereafter wounded him and them mortally in several Places of their Bodies, threatening to kill him if he would not swear never to put Our Laws in Execution. Which Affront being done publicly to Our Authority, in the capital City of Our Kingdom, the very Day of the Meeting of Our Council, and being a Practice laid down to terrify all such as serve Us, and to involve all in a Confusion, which they most earnestly wish: Therefore We, with Advice of Our Privy Council, do hereby invite all such as can make any Discovery of that designed horrid Villany and Assassination, and assure all such as can make any Discovery, even such as have had Accession thereto, of Our full Indemnity, and of the Sum of one Thousand Merks, to him who shall be the Discoverer of any in Accession thereto, so as they may be apprehended, but especially of Mr. John Kae, Son to the deceased Mr. Adam Kae, late Minister at Borg, (who is proved to have been the Ringleader of these Miscreants, and who was formerly apprehended in the like fanatick Tumult, and outrageously cried to stab the Town-major) as also Turnbul, Tenant to Broomhall, and Turnbul, his Two Sons, Michael Cameron Son to Alan Cameron, and Crawford Sitter to Captain James Crawford, who lodged these Assassimates, and is fled with them.

OUR WILL is herefore, and We charge you straitly, that, incontinent thir Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Mercat-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and thereat, in Our Name and Authority, make Publication of the Premises: And ordain these Presents to be printed. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Twelfth Day of March, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirtieth one Year.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith : To all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects whom it esteirs, Greeting. Forasmuch as, We, with Advice of Our Privy Council, have, in Prosecution of Our Laws and Acts of Parliament made against Field-conventicles, these Rendevouzes of Rebellion, issued forth several Acts and Orders to Our Sheriffs, and other Magistrates, and the Officers of Our standing Forces, and particularly for dissipating any Numbers of People convened at these Field-conventicles ; and in case of Resistance, to pursue them by Force of Arms. And whereas, upon the Thirtieth Day of March last, some of Our Forces quartered in the Shire of Lanerk, being informed of a numerous Field-conventicle kept at Cumberhead in the Parish of Lesmahago, and a Party of them having gone to the Place, and required them in Our Name to dissipate that unlawful Meeting, the said Persons being formed in Companies and Troops, and armed in a warlike Manner, did not only most villanously and traiterously refuse to dissolve, and expresse themselves most treasonably against Us and Our Authority ; but invaded and assaulted the said Party, fired upon them, and wounded and took several of them Prisoners, which they kept and detained during their Pleasure ; and We being fully resolved, that the Persons guilty of such a treasonable Attempt and Rebellion, shall be proceeded against with all Severity according to Our Laws, as also, with all those that have been aiding, abetting, or assisting to that treasonable Attempt, and that a Search shall be made after, and Trial taken thereanent, in the best and expedite Manner and Method ; and considering, that the same may be done most conveniently upon the Places, and that the Extraordinariness of the Exigent, and Our most special Concern therein does require that the same be gone about with all the Respect and Observation necessary : We therefore, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do hereby nominate and appoint Our right trully and welbeloved Cousins and Counsellors, Charles Earl of Mar, Earl of Glencairn, George Earl of Linlithgow Our Major-general and Commander in chief of Our Forces, George Lord Ross, Charles Maitland of Halkoun Our Treasurer-depute, Sir George Mackenzie of Rosehaugh Our Advocate, and Richard Maitland of Duddop, to be Our Commissioners to the Effect underwritten, with Power to them, or any Three of them, to meet at the Burgh of Lanerk, the Twenty third Day of April instant, for the first Diet, and thereafter to appoint their own Diets, and Places of meeting, with Power to choose all Members of Court needful, issue forth Letters or Precepts, for citing of Parties or Witnesses before them ; and particularly to call before them the Sheriff-deputes of the Shire of Lanerk ( whom Our Council has formerly instructed to examine all Persons dwelling or residing within the Parishes of new and old Monklands, Town and Parish of Lesmahago, Town and Parish of Lanerk, the Parishes of Carmichael, Pittinane, Carluke, Dalserf and Douglas, and adjacent Parishes, anent their Guilt of, or Accession to a late treasonable Attempt and Combination, and upon the other Points contained in their Instructions ) to give an Account to them of their Diligence, and the Depositions of the Persons compearing, and the Lists of the Absents, with Power to Our said Commissioners, thereupon to cite before them any Heritors or Commons they shall think fit, either for their own Guilt, or Heritors to exhibit their Tenants living upon their Ground, who appear not, and to be answerable for them, and to proceed against them both, or either of them, either by fining, confining or Imprisonment, conform to the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom, and particularly the 6 Act, Parl. 3. K. James V. and 144 Act, Parl. 12. James VI. As also, with full Power to them to call before them the Sheriffs principal, other Magistrates, or their Deputes within the said Shire, or other Shires adjacent, who are to receive and obey such Orders as Our said Commissioners shall think fit to direct : And likewise, to call to their Assistance, such of the standing Forces or Militia, as they shall think fit, and to give such Orders to Our Major-general, as they shall judge necessary for Our Service, and to do every other Thing requisite for prosecuting of this Our Commission, as if Our Council, or a Quorum of them, were present, and might do themselves ; promitten. to hold firm and stable, &c. And since We are resolved to punish this Attempt in a most exemplary Manner, We have thought fit, with Advice foresaid, hereby to make and constitute the said Earls of Mar, Glencairn, Linlithgow, the Lord Ross, Treasurer-depute, and Richard Maitland, Our Commissioners of Justiciary, to the Effect following, with Power to them, or any Three of them, to meet at Lanerk, or any other Place they shall think fit, and to affix and hold Justice-courts, issue forth Precepts for citing Assizes and Witnesses, and to call and convene before them any Persons guilty of, or accessory to the said treasonable Attempt and Combination, guilty of rising in Arms, or contributing of Money to maintain Men as Soldiers in Opposition to Our Authority, and to put them to the Trial and Knowledge of an Assize, and, according as they shall be found innocent or guilty, that they cause Justice be done upon them conform to the Laws of Our Kingdom; with Power to them to create Clerks, and other Members of Court needful, and to do every other Thing in the Premises, as if a Quorum of Our Commissioners of the Justiciary, who ordinarily meet at Edinburgh, were personally present; and ordain Our said Commissioners to report an Account of their Diligence and Procedure in the Premises, to Our Council, betwixt and the first Day of June next, or sooner, if they find Cause, for their Approbation.

Given under Our Signet, at Edinburgh the Fourth Day of April, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirtieth and first Year.

THE Report underwritten, of the Commissioners of Council met at Lanerk, by virtue of the Commission dated the Fourth Day of April instant, being read in Council, was approved, and appointed to be recorded, whereof the Tenor follows.

Lanerk, 25 April, 1679.

Y Our Lordships of the Council, having, for facilitating that Business, appointed Mr. William Cochran, and Mr. William Nimmo, Two Sheriff-deputes of the Sheriffdom of Lanerk, to cause cite the haill Tenants in the said Parish of Lesmahago before them, as also in these adjacent Parishes, viz. the old and new Monklands, Town and Parish of Lanerk, Parishes of Carmichael, Pittinane, Carluke, Dallers and Douglas, and to examine them upon their Guilt and Accession to the said Violence, and to have their Report in Readiness, to be considered by us at our first Meeting.

Several Days before our Meeting, we caused issue forth Summons under the Council's Signet against the whole Heritors within these Parishes, to appear before us upon the 23, 24 and 25 instant.

At our first Meeting, we called before us the said Sheriff deputes, for an Account of their Procedure and Diligence, who, by their Report subscribed with their Hands, gave us an Account, that they had caused cite the haill Tenants of these Parishes to appear before them at Hamilton and Lanerk, upon the 16 and 18 Days of this Instant, whereby we find that very few appeared, and these who have appeared, have treed themselves by their Oath, so that thereby no Discovery did arise, but do find, that the said Sheriff-deputes have done all that was possible for them in so short a Time.

We are informed that the Feuars of the Parish of Strevan, who belonged to the Duke of Hamilton, were Persons most guilty, who were not insert in the first Letters, but there being a great Multitude of them, it was not possible, in so short a Time, to cite them before us, and proceed against them in the Commission; and therefore did remit it to the Sheriff-deputes to proceed against them.

In the Tolbooth of Lanerk, these following Persons being Prisoners, viz. William Weir Servant to the Goodwife of Bowhouse, James Bailie of Glentwin, Joseph Thomson Chapman, Christopher Dick Weaver, and Tenant to Corhouse, William Cassils in Douglas, John Park in Lanerk, Francis Hastie there, William Laidlaw in Pittinane, John Williamson in Lesmahago, William Inglis in Douglas, and Robert Graham there, which Robert was apprehended at a Conventicle in Womens Clothes; and we being informed, that the said William Weir was at the Conventicle at Cumberhead, and was one of those that did invade and wound Lieutenant Dalziel, we were resolved to have processd him for his Life, and to have hanged him for a publick Example, and to have founded the Dittay upon the 4 Act, Parl. 16. James VI. anent invading the King's Officers; upon which Consideration we fenced a Justice-court, and called him before us, and having examined him judicially, as also Two of the Dragoons as Witnesses against him, it could not be made appear that he was either in Arms, or did invade or strike the Lieutenant; but it was clear that he did take hold of the Lieutenant's Horse, and hindred him to get off, and gave him ill Language, so that we could not be able to reach him upon the said Act as to his Life: Wherefore we have thought fit to send him in Prisoner, to be disposed upon as your Lordships shall think fit. The said William Cassils being taken at the said Conventicle in Arms, and so falling under the Compass of Law for his Life; but in regard, both by Lieutenant Dalziel's own Declaration, and otherwise, it was made appear to us, that he was the Person that saved the said Lieutenant's Life, we thought it not fit to process him, but ordered him instantly to be dismissed, that the whole Country might know the King and Council's Inclination for Mercy and Favour, to all such as give any Countenance or Assistance to Authority, and assist any of his Majesty's Forces when they are in Danger.

The rest of the Persons Prisoners being mean and inconsiderable, and not guilty of any extraordinary Thing, we did remit to the Sheriff-deputes to proceed against, and fine them according to Law. The said James Bailie having confessed himself to be at a Field-conventicle, and to have entertained Strangers at his House, being a private House, without enquiring what they were, in regard he promised to live orderly hereafter, and not to go to Conventicles, we ordered him to be set at Liberty, upon Caution to that effect, under the Pain of Five hundred Merks toties quoties.

The Heritors in the several Parishes, being called upon the 23, 24, and 25 of April instant, the far greater Part of them were absent, against whom the Certification of the Letter was granted, ordaining them to be denounced for their Contempt, conform to the Rolls and Executions: And as to these who did appear, his Majesty's Advocate declared, that he restricted the Libel to that Part thereof, that they themselves were guilty, accessory, Art and Part in the Violence committed upon his Majesty's Forces, and instead of all further Probation, referred the Verity thereof to their Oaths; who being all of them solemnly sworn thereupon, did clearly purge themselves by their Oaths; and it being intimate to them, that by the Law, and particularly the 6 Act, Parl. 3. James VI. in case of their Tenants guilty, they are obliged to exhibit them to Justice, or to be liable for their Fine, or to put them off their Ground, and in case they returned, to apprehend and present them; they all of them acknowledged the same, and undertook so to do. In regard that the Lord Carmichael who appeared, who is a Person of great Interest in the Shire, he was required and ordered apud acta, to attend your Lordships upon Wednesday next, to receive your Commands, and to be heard upon any Proposal he could offer for settling the Peace of the Country; upon that same Consideration, we did write a Letter to the Duke of Hamilton requiring him to attend your Lordships the said Day.

Having received frequent Informations from divers Places, of murdering some, wounding and robbing of others of his Majesty's Forces that were sent to bring in his Majesty's Cess and Excise, and particularly in the Parishes of Monkland and Strevan in Lanerk-shire, where the Soldiers were robbed and beaten, their Arms taken from them, and kept Prisoners, as appears by their Depositions herewith produced, and in the Parish of Newmills in the Shire of Air, Two of the Soldiers killed, and others wounded, as appears by Letters from the commanding Officers there, and of a Tumult and Insurrection made within the Town of Renfrew, upon the Sheriff-depute's taking of one Walter Scot, a late Magistrate, a noted Ringleader of Conventicles, and of such like Disorders, and of the beating and wounding of the Laird of Beltrees Sheriff-depute, to the Hazard of his Life, and deforcing them, and rescuing the Prisoner, as appears by the Depositions of the other Sheriff-depute, and Two other Persons.

For further Discovery of that Murder of the Soldiers at Newmills, we thought fit to require the Earl of Lowdon, who has the most considerable Interest in that Place, and on whose Ground it was done, by a Letter, to attend your Lordships upon Wednesday next, to give a full Representation and Discovery of that Matter upon his Allegiance.

By full and frequent Informations we find, that in the Shire of Lanerk, and other Shires adjacent, those Rebels who keep Field-conventicles, have formed a Design of keeping strong and armed Conventicles in many distant Places, of design to necessitate your Lordships to keep his Majesty's Forces together in considerable Numbers, that so they may, in all other Places, debauch the People at their Pleasure in the rest of the Kingdom; and are resolved to hinder the Inbringing of his Majesty's Cess, in the accustomed Manner by Parties, thinking that your Lordships cannot conveniently quarter great Parties upon Deficients, and if small ones be employed, to murder them, as they have actually done, intending thereby to obstruct the Payment of his Majesty's Forces, whereby we conceiving that these rebellious Courses are now come to that Height, we thought it our Duty to advertise my Lord Chancellor and remanent Lords of the Council, to meet upon Wednesday next, being the last of April, to deliberate and consult what is fit to be done in this juncture, for obstructing the Growth and Increase of these Disorders, now come to so great a Height, and for securing the publick Peace in Time coming. We have thought it also our Duty, in the mean Time, by a Letter to the Duke of Lawderdale his Grace, to give him a particular Account of the dangerous State of Affairs here, as we have now represented the same to your Lordships, and have sent him Copies of the Depositions and other Papers, for evincing the Truth and Verity of these Informations.

ON the Third of May, a Day remarkable in the Church Kalendar for the Invention of the holy Cross, this excellent Prelate found his, and I hope obtained his Crown, ( in which Month also, Henry IV. of France, and Cardinal Beaton, one of his Predecessors, were assassinated ) about Nine of the Clock in the Morning he took his Coach in Kennoway, a Village Ten Miles distant from St. Andrews, where he lay the Night before, accompanied only with Four of his Servants, and his eldest Daughter in the Coach with him. About Half an Hour before he was attacked, his great Soul, it seems, presaging what came to pass, he fell on a most pious and serious Discourse to his Daughter, giving her such pious Instructions and Directions, as he would have done, if upon his Death-bed, whereunto she gave such becoming and satisfactory Answers, that he embraced, and formally blessed her: Afterward coming near to a Farmer's House, called Magnus, he says, There lives an ill-natured Man, God preserve us, my Child. Within a very little Time after, the Coachman perceiving some Horsemen on the Spur after them, calls to the Postilion to drive on, for those Men had no Good in their Minds. My Lord finding the Coach run so hard, looked out to see what the Matter was, and then perceiving armed Men pursuing, he turning to his Daughter, said, Lord have Mercy upon me, my poor Child, for I am gone: Upon which, presently Three or Four of the Russians fired at the Coach, but touched neither of them in the Coach; the Coachman put faster on, and outrun the most Part of the Rogues ( my Lord's own Servants, of which the best armed was wounded in the Head by a Sword, being mounted on weak Hackney Horses, had fallen behind before this, and were disarmed at the first coming up ) while at last, one of the best mounted overhighed the Postilion, and by wounding him on the Face, shooting the Coach-horse which he led, in the Back, and cutting him in the Hams, turned the Coach out of the Way, and gave the rest the Advantage to come up. Then they fired again; one of them had his Pistol so near my Lord, that the burning Calving was left on his Gown, and was rubbed off by his Daughter, which wounded him Two or Three Inches below the right Clavicle, in betwixt the Second and Third Rib, and then another of them on the other Side of the Coach run him upon the Region of the Kidneys with a small Sword; thereafter they called, Come out, cruel and bloody Traitor, but not any offered to lay Hands upon, or drag him out of his Coach, as is falsly reported in the Relation, the Assassins being all yet one Horseback; whereupon, most composedly he opened the Door of the Coach himself, and slept out, and then said, Gentlemen, you will spare my Life, and whatever else you please to do, you shall never be questioned for it. They told him, there was no Mercy for a Judas, an Enemy and Traitor to the Cause of Christ. Well then, said he, I shall expect none from you, but promise to me to spare my poor Child, directing his Speech to one, whom it is suspected, by his looking him broad in the Face, he knew, and reaching forth his Hand to him, the bloody Villain starts back from my Lord, and, by a mighty Blow, cut him more than half through the Wrist: Then said my Lord, I hope ye will give me some Time to pour out my Soul to God, and I shall also pray for you; and presently falling on his Knees, he said, Lord, forgive them, for I do: Lord, receive my Spirit. While thus praying on his Knees (one of the Traitors standing some Paces off, called to the rest, Spare those gray Hairs) and his Hands lifted up, they struck furiously at him, and wounding him therein in Three Places, which nevertheless he kept up bleeding to Heaven, while one of them cut him to the very Bone, a little above the left Eye, whereupon my Lord said, Now you have done the Turn; then falling forward, he stretcht himself out, and laid his Head on his Arm, as if he had been to compose himself for Sleep, when some of the Villains from their Horses, and others a foot (having alighted) gave him about Fifteen or Sixteen Wounds in the Head, and in effect, the whole occipital Part was but one Wound; after which they rifled his Pockets, and took some Papers out of them; and so mad was their Spite and Rage, that even after he was dead, and the Murderers gone some Way from the Body, one of the furious and bloody Assassins returned, and thrust twice or thrice at him with a Sword. They robbed his Daughter of some Gold, and other Things she had in a little Box (they had wounded her, thrusting at her Father, betwixt whom and them she had interposed herself, by a Stab in her Thigh, and one of her Thumbs) then they took away my Lord's Night-bag, Bible, Girdle, and some Papers of Moment: They also robbed his Servants, and took their Arms from them, and then went away as they came, and encountered one of my Lords Gentlemen he had sent off some Time before, to salute the Earl of Crawford in his Name, having passed near to his House: One of them called to kill him, for he was one of Judas's Servants; others came and took his Papers in his Fore-pockets, and Arms, and bid him be gone, for his Master was gone home before him. The Place where this horrid Murder was committed, is called Magus-muir, within Two Miles, and in Sight of the Town of St. Andrews.

Thus fell that excellent Prelate (whose Character and worthy Acts deserve, and, no doubt, will find some excellent Pen) by the Hands of Nine fanatick Ruffians: That they were so, is not to be doubted, their Names being all now known, and all of them denounced or intercommuned, for frequenting Field-conventicles, and the known Champions of that Party in the Shire of Fife; besides their holy sanctified Discourse at the Time of their bloody Actings, shews what Temper of Spirit they were of. I have done with my Relation (attested to me before famous Witnesses by my Lord's Daughter, and those of his Servants that were so unfortunate to be Spectators of this execrable Villany) when I have observed how ridiculous the Author of the pretended true one is, where he endeavours to discover the Occasion of the Murder of the Archbishop of St. Andrews; for what need was there of any Thing more to provoke them, than his being an Archbishop, and the Primate of Scotland, and the most active, as well as the most reverend Father of this Church? Was it not for this Reason, that he was, on the Streets of Edinburgh, shot at by Mr. James Mitchel, while in his own Coach? Was not this the Reason that these fanatick Books from Holland, both some Time ago and of late, marked out his sacrum caput, as they termed it, and devoted him to a cruel Death, and gave out Predictions that he should die so? which they easily might, being so active in stimulating and prompting Instruments to fulfil their own Prophecies.

O Lord, how unsearchable are thy Judgments, and thy Ways past finding out!

Proclamation, May 4. for Discovery of the Murderers of the Archbishop of St. Andrews. N<sup>o</sup>. XI.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith &c.
To Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Macers, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. We being fully, and by legal Proofs, assured of the late horrid and bloody Murder committed upon Saturday last, being the Third of May instant, by Ten or Eleven fanatick Assassins, upon the Person of the most reverend Father in God, James late Archbishop of St. Andrews, Primate of all Scotland, which barbarous and inhumane Assassination and Parricide will (we doubt not) spread Horror and Amazement in all the Hearts of such as believe that there is a God, or a Christian Religion, a Cruelty exceeding the Barbarity of Pagans and Heathens, amongst whom the Officers and Ministers of Religion are reputed to be sacred, and are by the Respect born to the Deity which they adore, secured against all such bloody and execrable Attempts, a Cruelty exceeding the Belief of all true Protestants, whose Churches have justly stigmatized, with the Marks of Impiety, all such as defile with Blood those Hands which they ought to hold up to Heaven, and a Cruelty equal to any with which we can reproach the Enemies of this true and reformed Church: By which also, not only the Principles of human Society, but Our Authority and Government (the said Archbishop being one of Our Privy Council) is highly violated, and Example and Encouragement given for murdering all such as serve Us faithfully according to the Precept of Our Laws and Royal Commands, daily Instances whereof we are to expect, whilst Field-conventicles, those Rendezvous of Rebellion, and Forges of all bloody and Jesuitical Principles, are so frequented, and followed, to the Scandal of all Government, and the Contempt of Our Laws: And which Murder is, as for as is possible, rendred yet more detestable, by the unmasked Boldness of such, as durst openly with bare Faces, in the Midst of Our Kingdom, at Mid-day, assemble themselves together, to kill in Our Highway the Primate of Our Kingdom, and one of Our Privy Council, by so many Strokes and Shots, as left his Body, as it were, but one Wound, and many of which being given after they knew he was dead, were remarkable Proofs they were acted by a Spirit of hellish and insatiable Cruelty. We have therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, thought fit, hereby to command and charge all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Regalities, and Bailiaries, and their Deputes, Magistrates of Burghs, and Officers of Our standing Forces, to search, seek, take and apprehend the Persons guilty of the said horrid Murder, or any suspected by them, and to imprison them until they be brought to Justice, and all Our good and faithful Subjects to concur in the taking and securing, as far as is in their Power, these Assassins: And in respect there is a Company of vagrant and skulking Ruffians, who, to the great Contempt of all Government, do ride through this Our Kingdom, killing Our Soldiers, detorcing such as put Our Laws in execution, and committing such horrible Murders, who might be easily discovered, if all such amongst whom they converse, did, according to their Duty, endeavour to apprehend them, or give notice where they haunt or resort. We have therefore thought fit, conform to the 144 Act, Parl. 12. K. James VI. to command and charge all Our Subjects, that whensoever any unknown Men or Vagabonds shall repair amongst them, that they, with all possible Speed, certify any of Our Privy Council, Officers of Our Forces, or any having Trust under Us thereof; with Certification to them, that if they omit the same, they shall be punished with all Rigour conform to the said Act. And since several of the said Assassins are known to have been Tenants in the Shire of Fife, whose Faces will be known to such of the Witnesses as were present, We hereby require and command all the Heritors and Masters of the said Shire of Fife and Kinross to bring their Tenants, Cottars, and Servants, and others dwelling on their Lands, to the respective Towns at the Diets aftermentioned, viz. those within the Presbytery of St. Andrews, to the Town of St. Andrews, upon the Thirteenth Day of May instant; those within the Presbytery of Cowpar, to the Town of Cowpar, upon the Sixteenth Day of the said Month; those within the Presbytery of Kirkaldy, to the Town of Kirkaldy, upon the Twentieth Day of the said Month; and those within the Presbytery of Dumfermling, to the Town of Dumfermling, upon the Twenty third Day of the said Month, at Ten a Clock in the Forenoon, upon each one of the said Days, there to continue and abide till they be examined by the Sheriff-deputes of the said Shire, who are hereby commisionate to that effect, and to be seen by the said Witnesses; with Certification to such of the said Tenants, Cottars, Servants, and others foresaid, as shall be absent, they shall be reputed as accessory to the said Crime; and the Masters, if they produce them not, or if hereafter they harbour any that shall not compare, they shall be reputed Favourers of the said Assassination. And whereas there are some Persons under Caption or Intercommuning in the said Shire for several Causes, and lest Persons who are innocent of that horrid Crime, may be thereby debarred from appearing, and vindicating themselves, We have thought fit, hereby to sist and supersede all Execution upon any Letters of Caption or Intercommuning, or any other Warrant for securing of any Persons for any Cause, for the Space of Forty eight Hours before and after the said Diets of Appearance, that they may safely come and go without any Trouble or Impediment whatsoever. And to the end the said cruel Murder may be more easily discovered, We do hereby offer, and give full Assurance of Our Indemnity, to any one of the said Assassins who shall discover his Complices, and such as hounded them out, and of present Payment of the Sum of Ten Thousand Merks to any who shall inform who were the said Assassins, if upon his Information they or either of them can be apprehended, that they may be brought to condign Punishment. And ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and at the Market-crosses of all the Royal Burghs in the Shires of Fife and Kinross, and to be read at all the Parish Kirks of the said Shires, and Jurisdictions within the same, upon Sunday next, being the Eleventh of this Instant, immediately after the ordinary Time of Divine Service in the Forenoon, that the same may come to the Knowledge of all Persons concerned. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Fourth Day of May, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith:
To Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Macers of Our Privy Council, Pursevants, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. Forasmuch as, the bearing of, and shooting with Fire-arms, such as Hagbuts, Culverings, and Pistols, without Licence from Us, is prohibited and discharged by several Acts of Parliament, under divers great Pains and Penalties, especially by the Eighteenth Act of the First Parliament, Eighty seventh Act of the Sixth Parliament, and the Sixth Act of the Sixteenth Parliament of King James VI. And We taking to Our Consideration, what atrocious Facts are committed by rebellious and disorderly Persons, who go in Arms to Field-conventicles, these Rendezvous of Rebellion, and presume to make Resistance to Our Forces when they offer to dissipate them: Therefore We, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, do prohibit and discharge all Our Subjects of this Kingdom, except the Officers and Soldiers of Our standing Forces, and of the Militia, to travel with any Fire-arms, as Muskets, Hagbuts, Culverings and Pistols, unless they have a Licence from one of Our Privy Council, or the Sheriff of the Shire where they dwell, under the Pains and Penalties contained in the said Acts of Parliament: Likeas, We, with Advice foresaid, do hereby authorize and require all Sheriffs, Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies, Magistrates of Burghs, Justices of Peace, and Officers of Our Forces, that they take notice of all Persons whom they find travelling, not only carrying the said Fire-arms, but also carrying Swords, Durks, Whingers, Halbards, Poll-axes, or any other Weapons invasive, that they seize upon the said Fire-arms, and secure the Persons carrying the same, not having Licence from one of Our Privy Council, or from a Sheriff, or Stewart, granted to these within their Jurisdiction, until they give Bond and Caution to compare before competent Judges, and answer for their Transgression of the said Acts of Parliament; and in case the said Travellers be found to carry any of the said Arms, they not being Noblemen, landed Gentlemen, or their Children, or Servants travelling with them or their Children, and not having Passes, expressing whence they came, and whither they go, under the Hand of one of Our Privy Council, Lords of Session, Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Royalities or Regalities, Magistrates of Burghs, Justices of Peace, or Commissioners of Excise, granted in favours of these within their Bounds, that the said Persons be examined by Our said Judges and Officers in whose Bounds they shall be found; and in case they cannot give a sufficient Account of themselves, that they are none of these vagrant Persons, Disturbers of the Peace, and Committers of the said Insolencies, We do command Our said Judges and Officers to seize upon their Arms, and secure their Persons in the next Prison, and with all Diligence to send an Account of their Names and Examination to Our Sheriff-deputes specially commisionate for punishing of Conventicles, and other Disorders of that Kind, that without delay they may proceed to the Trial of the said Persons, according to their Commissions and Instructions. And We ordain these Presents to continue and endure until the first of November next. OUR WILL is herefore, and We charge you straitly and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and there make Publication of the Premises, that none may pretend Ignorance. And ordain these Presents to be printed. Given under Our Signet, at Edinburgh the Eighth Day of May, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith:
To Macers, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. Forasmuch as, albeit by the fundamental Laws of all Monarchies, the Power of Arms is lodged in the King, and the Rising in Arms be punishable as Treason, and that the Estates of Parliament of this Kingdom, reflecting with Horror upon the great Confusions and Distempers, and the execrable Rebellion of the last Age, occasioned by the unwarrantable Rising in Arms against Our Royal Father of blessed Memory, whereby, not only the Royal Government was endeavoured to be overturned, but the Properties and Liberties of the Subjects destroyed under the specious, but false Pretext of Religion and Conscience, did, by the First Act of Our First Parliament, declare, that it should be high Treason to the Subjects of this Kingdom, or any Number of them, more or less, upon any Ground or Pretext whatsoever, to rise or continue in Arms, without Our special Warrant and Authority first interposed thereto; and by the Second Act of the Second Session of that same Parliament, they likewise declared, that if any Person or Persons should levy War, or take up any Arms against Us, or any commissioned by Us, they should be declared and adjudged Traitors, and should suffer Forfeiture of Life, Honour, Lands and Goods, as in Cases of high Treason: Yet We being always most desirous to essay all Means of Clemency, for correcting such of Our Subjects as could be any Ways reclaimable, have not hitherto put those Acts into such Execution, as the Disorders and Irregularities of some of Our Subjects did require, hoping their going to Field-meetings, those Rendevouzes of Rebellion, with Arms, might have proceeded merely from Custom, or Mistake: But now finding by the frequent Opposition made in Arms to Our Forces acting in Our Name, the invading of Our Officers, and the exciting others to go to such Meetings in Arms, upon design to oppose Our Forces, that such as frequent these Meetings, do go there in Arms upon a criminal and treacherous Design, which grows to that same Proportion that We use Clemency; and We being desirous that none of Our Subjects should be led in a Snare by Our former Lenity, and to the end their condign Punishment according to these Laws, may be the more justly chargeable upon the Obduredness and Obstinacy of the Offenders, have therefore, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, after mature Deliberation, thought fit to declare, that We will hereafter order the Judges of Our respective Judicatures, and the Officers of all Our Forces, to proceed against all such who go with any Arms to those Field-meetings, as Traitors. And lest that any of Our Subjects may pretend, by the just Rigour We will use against such as do go to Conventicles in Arms, that We resolve to slacken Our Prosecution of other Field-conventicles, We have therefore thought fit, to require all Our Judges and Officers to put Our Laws and former Commands in vigorous Execution, even against those who frequent these Field-meetings without Arms, We being fully convinced both by Reason and Experience, that those Meetings do certainly tend to the Ruin and Reproach of the Christian Religion and Discipline, to the Introduction of Popery and Heresy, the Subversion of Monarchy, and the Contempt of all Laws and Government. OUR WILL is herefore, and We charge you straitly, and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and other head Burghs of the several Shires of this Kingdom, and thereat, in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises, that none pretend Ignorance. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Thirtieth Day of May, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.
C 2 flecting

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith: To all and sundry Our good Subjects, Greeting. Whereas by the clear and express Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Kingdom, it is declared to be high Treason, for the Subjects of the same, or any Number of them, more or less, upon any Ground or Pretext whatsoever, to rise, or continue in Arms, without Our special Authority and Approbation: Yet nevertheless, a Party of disloyal Persons, disaffected to Our Government and Laws, who have formerly tasted of Our Royal Bounty and Clemency, whereunto they owe their Lives and Fortunes, having forfeited the same by their former rebellious Practices, under the Cloak of Religion, the ordinary Colour and Pretext of Rebellion, have risen in Arms, in great Numbers, and upon the Twenty ninth of May, came to the Town of Rutherglen, head Burgh of the Shire, where they proclaimed their rebellious Covenant, and burnt Our Acts of Parliament, and at Lowdon-hill, upon the First of June instant, they did actually oppose, and fight Our standing Forces, and thereafter did pursue them to, and assault them within the City of Glasgow, and have seized upon the Persons of divers of Our good Subjects, plundered and robbed them of their Horses, Arms, and other Goods, and have done and committed many other Outrages, and treasonable Deeds and Attempts, against Our Authority, and against, and upon Our loyal Subjects: And We, out of Our Royal Tendernefs, for the Peace and Quietnefs of this Our ancient Kingdom, being careful to repress the said Rebellion, and that simple and unwary People be not ensnared by the said Rebels, and their Emissaries, and involved in their Rebellion, and to take off all Pretence of Ignorance, or Excuse, do therefore, with Advice of the Lords of Our Privy Council, declare the said Insurrection to be an open, manifest, and horrid Rebellion, and high Treason, and that the Authors and Actors in the same, and their Adherents, are, and ought to be pursued, as professed and declared Traitors to Us; and do hereby command and charge all Persons who are in Arms, against, or without Our Warrant and Authority, to desist from their Rebellion, and to lay down their Arms, and to render and present their Persons to the Earl of Linlithgow Our Major-general, and Commander in chief of Our Forces, or some other of Our Officers, or Magistrates, within Twenty four Hours, after Publication hereof, with Certification to them, if they continue in Rebellion after the said Time, they shall be holden, and proceeded against as incorrigible and desperate Traitors, and that they shall be incapable of Mercy and Pardon: And We do hereby prohibit and discharge any Person or Persons to aid, abet, assist, harbour, refer, or any ways supply the said Rebels, or any of them, under the Pain of Treason; and that they do not keep Correspondence, or commune with them, without Warrant of Our said Major-general, under the Pain foresaid. And We do expect in this Juncture, and do require and command all Our Subjects to be assisting to Our Major-general, and Our Forces under him; and being required by him, or others having Authority, to that effect, to rise in Arms with all their Power, and to joyn and concur with them, for suppressing the said Rebellion, under the Pain of Treason, if they refuse or disobey. And further, We do strictly enjoin, and command all Masters of Families, Heritors, and other Landlords, that they be careful and vigilant, that their Children, Servants, Domesticks, and their Tenants, and others under their Power, do not break out, and in that behalf, they shall be looked upon, and severely punished, as disaffected Persons, and favouring and complying with Rebels. And hereby We give Warrant and Command to Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Herald, Macers, Pursuivants, or Messengers at Arms, to pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and make Publication hereof; and that these Presents be printed, that none pretend Ignorance. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Third Day of June 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

C H A R L E S, by the Grace of G O D, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith & To
of Our Privy Council, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. Forasmuch as, there have lately appeared in Arms, and are now risen in manifest Rebellion, in some western Shires, great Numbers of Persons, who have had the Boldness to fight and oppose Our standing Forces: For pursuing and dissipating of which Rebels, We, with Advice of Our Privy Council, having issued forth several Orders to the Earl of Linlithgow Major-general, and Commander in chief of Our Forces, and to the Militia Forces, Horse and Foot, in divers Shires, to concur and joyn with Our Forces, as they shall be ordered. And whereas by the Second Act of the First Session of Our Second Parliament, and the First Act of the Third Session of that same Parliament, We, and Our Estates, have, for the greater Security of the publick Peace, settled a Militia in the several Shires, appointed Days of Rendezvous, and determined the Penalties of absent Officers and Soldiers, in Time of Peace and War; and particularly the Outriekers of Horse and Foot, are liable in Six Pounds Scots for the Absence of ilk Horseman, and Two Pounds Scots for ilk Footman, each Day of the Rendezvous in Time of Peace, and the Double thereof in Time of War; and the Officers of the Militia, to be liable to, and forfeit the Fines following, viz. A Major, and a Captain of Foot, and a Lieutenant, and Colonel of Horse, Fifty Pounds, and the other inferior Officers, Twenty four Pounds, for ilk Day's Absence, in Time of War, and the Half thereof in Time of Peace. And albeit We doubt not, but that the whole Officers and Soldiers of Our Militia will, upon this Occasion, when such a rebellious Rabble do presume to appear in Arms, attack, kill and invade Our Forces, cheerfully witness their Zeal for Our Service and their own Security, and come forth and joyn in Opposition to these Rebels, as they shall receive Orders: Yet We have thought fit hereby, in pursuance of Our said Laws and Acts of Parliament, to intimate and make known to the whole Officers and Soldiers of the Militia, that if they, or any of them shall refuse to come out, and keep their several Days of Rendezvous, and joyn and act with Our Forces, as they shall be required by Our Privy Council or Commander in chief, that they shall not only be fined in the particular Penalties above exprest, without Favour or Defalcation; but if they shall be negligent in their Duty herein, they shall be looked upon as disaffected Persons, and Favourers and Compilers with Rebels, and pursued and punished accordingly. And We ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places needful. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Fifth Day of June 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

Proclamation, calling out Heritors to attend the King's Host. June 7. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XVII.

*F*ORasmuch as the Infurrection in the western Shires is grown to an open Rebellion, and that the Number of these desperate Rebels do increase so, that all his Majesty's loyal Subjects in their several Shires, ought timeously to look to their own Security, and put themselves in a Posture to defend the King's Authority, and to oppose all Attempts of desperate and wicked Rebels: And albeit his Majesty's Privy Council have have already issued forth their Orders for drawing forth the Militia Forces, Horse and Foot, in several Shires, and appointed particular Days of Rendezvous, and upon such Occasions may require all fencible Persons, betwixt Sixty and Sixteen, to rise for suppressing of these Rebels; yet at this Time, they have thought fit only to call out and require the Regiments of the Foot Militia, in the Shires aftermentioned; and all Heritors and Freeholders, who are fencible Persons, and their Servants and Followers, to come out upon Horseback; and for this Cause, to forbear to require the Militia Troops, in these Shires underwritten, at this Time, notwithstanding of the Orders already issued forth, in so far as concerns the Horse Militia alienarly; and do hereby require and command all Heritors and Freeholders, who are fencible Persons, with so many of their Servants and Followers as they can bring on Horseback with Arms, within the Shires of Edinburgh, Linlithgow, and Peebles, Haddingtoun, Stirling and Clackmannan, Berwick, Roxburgh and Selkirk, Fife, Perth, Forfar, Kincardin and Marshal's Part of Aberdeen, Banff and Errol's Part of Aberdeen, Ross, Elgin, Forres, Nairn, and this Side Ness, to convene at the Places and Times aftermentioned, and to receive their Orders, and to be under the Command of the Persons underwritten, viz. And ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places foresaid, that none pretend Ignorance.

Tho. Hay Cl. Secr. Concilii.

God save the King.

Letter, June 7. 1679. Advice to a Gentleman going to the Army. N<sup>o</sup>. XVIII.

Opportunity is the Life of Action, without which the deepest and most subtilly devised Counsels prove abortive. Statesmen know, that for all Designs, which otherwise might be startled at, there is no Opportunity comparable to that of sudden Emergents, whether happy or unhappy, if they appear of any great Concern: For Mens Spirits, by those being set aloft, and so rendred unwary and inadvertent, fair Pretexes are then likely to take, if ever; because at such Times, Men have not, or take not Leisure to search to the Bottom of Things, or to consider them on all Sides, and according to all their present and future Importance. A recent Instance of this, are several Grants of the Parliaments, both of Scotland and England, to his present Majesty, upon the happy and amazing Surprisal of his Restauration, which neither he, nor King Charles I. nor yet King James his Fifty Years peaceable Reign, tho' all assisted with very wise and politic Counsellors and profound Devices, could ever be able to work out, till that opportune Juncture had made way for them. Of which I shall only say, that I wish they may prove as effectually beneficial for the true and lasting Interest of his Majesty and his Kingdoms, as I am bound in Charity to suppose they were affectionately meant for the Good of both.

To

To apply this to our present Commotions: Tho' I cannot positively charge those who are at the Helm, of any underhand Contrivance, or certainly conclude the same from the outward Appearance of their Actings, it being possible that such important Suddencies, as have now fallen out, may prompt them to over-reach themselves in their Commands, as well as us in our, may be more zealous and forward, than well advised and really dutiful Obedience: But, as long ago it was told me, by a Witness, of a certain great Man's Behaviour at the Engagement, Anno 1648. that he would not say, for all the World, that he had betrayed them, yet he could justly say, that if he had got a Houseful of Gold to betray them, he could have done no more; so I will not assert, with the Church or State Fanaticks of this Time, that our Counsellors are really designing to introduce upon us, Popery and arbitrary Government, and are catching the Advantage of the present Confusions in prosecution thereof; but in reason I may say, that had they the most real and forward Intention of so doing, they could hardly have fallen upon more likely and favourable Courses, for that end, than some of those they are taking.

There is much talking of a Popish Plot, and if there be such a Design of arbitrary Power, it being also a Work of Darknes, that dares not assault us with open Face, and meet to go in Hands with the other, I may call it another Plot, which must work underboard until Hell be prepared to defend it. And these Two Proclamations, the one for Voluntiers, whereby all the Papists in the Kingdom are armed, and called out to the Fields; and the other charging, under highest Pains, the whole Nobility, Gentry and Heritors to attend the Army, under the Command of Officers appointed by the Council, are like Two Mines sprung upon the chief Bastions of our Liberties and Religion, and we, like Fools, hear the Noise, and gaze upon the Smoke, but discern not, nor consider what it hath carried away with it.

For my own Part, to give you my Judgment freely, as you have desired it; amongst all the Grievances which we have been complaining so much of, these Years by past, there are but few, that either better deserve the Name, or are indeed of greater Weight than this; neither know I any one Step, whereby Popery and arbitrary Power have had Occasion of making swifter Progress towards their Settlement amongst us, or whereby they have gained more Ground of us, than by these Two Acts, however lightly regarded.

By the Constitution of our Government, we are not only ruled by Laws, but also by Customs, the Obligation whereof is many Times equivalent to that of our most positive Laws: Must it then be a Custom, and consequently a Law amongst us, that, to satisfy the Humour or Interest of a Court Favourite, we may be liable to most heavy Burdens, and Taxes upon our Estates, to furnish him with Power to oppress and crush all that will dare to oppose him? And notwithstanding that we bestow such large Parts of our Fortunes for the Maintenance of Soldiers for that end; yet, when by the long Continuance and Extremity of those Oppressions, which were enough to make even the soberest and wisest Men mad, he hath forced Wars and Disorders of the highest Nature and Consequence, it may be, designedly too, for ought that is seen, and as by no small Politicians is reasonably alledged, we nevertheless must be obliged also to come out in Person, with our Lives in our Hands, and serve as Soldiers under such Commanders, as the Council, being mostly his Creatures, think fit to appoint: Wherein these Things are noticeable, which Gentlemen would do well in Time seriously to consider, if they be indeed content that they go into a Law, lest afterward they repent too late.

That when we have granted never so large Taxations for paying of Soldiers, the Council, without a Parliament, or our own Consents, may nevertheless command us to serve as Soldiers our selves, tho' it were but to uphold some particular Interests amongst us, which, thus circumstantiate, will be found to be somewhat more than what either our old Custom of waiting upon the King and his Host with Forty Days Provision, or yet the late Offer of our Parliament of all betwixt Sixty and Sixteen, do import.

That they may impose Commanders upon us, without or contrary to our Choice or Consent, whom if we offer to reclaim, we may be obliged upon our Allegiance, to obey; as I hear they have done in the Case of the Gentlemen of East-lothian.

That they may so oblige us to serve under Popish Commanders, as they have done with Fast-lothian, Kincardin and Marshall's Part of Aberdeen, even tho' there are so many standing Acts of Parliament against them, and albeit by a late Proclamation they are all prohibited the wearing of Arms.

That those Commanders thus forced upon us, shall have the Power of nominating their own Officers.

And that, to all this Slavery we may be subjected, without any foreign Invasion, for the Destruction of our Fathers, Children, Brethren and Kinsmen, perhaps for no other Crime, than their standing to the just Defence of their and our Liberties, against the Incroachments of some Court Parasites, or whatever else it be, that yet his Majesty's Will being pretended, or at whatsoever Rate procured, it must be Presumption in us, or somewhat worse to inquire further into the Cause.

And after all this, what is ours? and what Privilege is there that we can lay claim to? If we will not think upon these Things, when represented to us, nor lay to heart our great Concernment in them, it may be said, without wronging us, that we deserve no less than all the Slavery and Misery, that by such Preparatives are designed for us. Are all the Nobility and Gentry of Scotland content to settle this Yoke upon us and our Posterity? Must we be the degenerate Succession of so noble and worthy Progenitors, by yielding, without a Testimony, those Liberties, which, with such Pains and Care, they retained through a Tract of so many Ages, and transmitted intire into our Hands? Were we born to be the Betrayers or Sellers of our own and our Successors Birth-rights? and so to be marked as the perpetual Shame and Opprobry of the History of our Nation, unto the End of the World?

As our Readiness to serve our Kings, to obey their just Laws, and to defend their Persons with our Lives and Fortunes, hath long Time been no small Part of the Glory of our Nation; so hath no less been the native Courage, and resolute Boldness of our Ancestors in resisting, and opposing to their Face, such Flatterers, as, preying upon the Goodness of their Prince, have at any Time, by Misrepresentations of Persons and Affairs, endeavoured to abuse his Authority, by forcing or insinuating upon his faithful Subjects, Customs different from, or contrary to their settled Laws, or derogatory to the Honour, and opposite to the true Interest of King and Kingdom.

The Cabal, who, it seems, knew well enough that their Counsels would never be Proof either of Law or Reason, and so believed only to be propagated by Authority and Force, had good Reason to obtrude upon the late Parliament of England, that Test, whereby they were to declare upon Oath, that it was unlawful to resist with Arms, any Person acting by the King's Authority, which they, seeing the Project, and foreseeing the Event, found no less reasonable, for the Good both of King and Country, unanimously to reject. For to say, that no Man acting by the King's Authority ought to be resisted, is all one as to say, that it is impossible that Kings can be abused; and all one as to say, that if a wicked Minister design the Ruin both of King and Kingdom, under Colour and Pretext of Authority, it is unlawful to hinder him, tho' it were in our Power. If Haman's Plot had taken Effect before Esther's Access to the King, who will judge it to have been a Crime, tho' the Jews had stood to their own Defence, until such Time, as his Treachery, their Innocence, and the King's Damage had been represented? tho' God in his Mercy and Justice provided a better Outgate for them, and a worse End for him; a dreadful Example, and which ought to strike with Horror all Abusers of their King's Favour and Authority.

He deserveth that a Tyrant should reign over him, and is not worthy of the Protection of a lawful Prince, that will not cheerfully hazard his Life and Fortune for the Defence of his Person, Honour, and just Laws. But what if the King's Name be made use of, to Acts manifestly contrary to his Interest in all these, and which, it may be, every reasonable Man, and loyal Subject is bound in duty to believe, his Majesty would abhor, if impartially consulted in them?

If this be not impossible, I hope our next Parliament will see to it, and consider what the former hath done; and till then, before you engage your self too deep in the Cause, you have good Reason to examine, both what are the true Causes of these poor People's appearing in Arms, and what they would be at; and if they be oppressed contrary to Justice, or demand not unreasonable Things, you would think, what may become of you and us all when they are broken.

They say, the Devil should have his Due; and to deal no worse with the Presbyterians, tho' they were as bad as he, I must confess, that never a People on Earth were dealt more hardly, or more unreasonably with than they. They stand upon a Scruple of Conscience, that they must have no meddling with the Bishops, and that both by Scripture, and their solemn Oath to God, which they think no Man can dispense with, together with an Opinion of more sensible Benefit to their Souls, they are bound to hear none other than those of their own Way; which being granted them, as it was once the utmost of their Aim, so, no doubt, would have as absolutely secured them to Peace, and Obedience to Magistrates, as any other Subjects whatsoever: But this not being allowed them, they, for avoiding publick Offence and the Reach of the Law, assembled themselves privately in Houses for hearing their Preachers; which, albeit the same be done openly, and without either Challenge or Punishment, in England and Ireland, yet here was looked upon, as so notorious a Crime, that strict and most severe Acts were immediately issued forth, and the poor People hunted from House to House, apprehended, imprisoned, some in close Prisons, some tortured for procuring Confessions from them, some weak or sickly Persons blocked up, till they died in Prison, others fined in great Sums of Money, some whereof paid again and again, to the great diminishing of their Fortunes, and Detriment of their Posterity, others not paying were kept still in Prison, some whereof have been Prisoners many Years bypast, and are yet so, who never saw a Field-conventicle.

Thus they were constrained to betake themselves to the Hills and Deserts in the Fields, for shunning of these Severities, for which they were more cried out upon than ever, as Persons not only disobedient to the King's Laws, but designing a Rebellion against his Person and Authority by these Field-meetings. They, like so many Roman Vindicators of their Liberties and Rights, knew that desperate Diseases required desperate Remedies, and therefore thought no Hazard too great for them to undergo, for preventing the Bondage threatened against them and their Posterity; while we, like so many Astes, crouch under the Burden: He must see to his Freedom, he to his Life, he to his Fortune: And tho' our Endeavours in those Methods befool us never so often, yet we'll sit still and see the publick Interest sink, rather than think of another Way. If our Wounds will not cure without Pain, we'll let them rot upon us. But behold the End of this sure Dealing, of this thin-skinned and effeminate Tendernefs. Fy upon it! it looks as if this Generation were made for no other End but to be trampled upon, then destroyed, and well to deserve both.

Upon this Head, the then armless Multitude was pursued from Hill to Hill, as so many Traitors; armed Men sent against them, by whom many of them were apprehended, some wounded, some killed, some imprisoned in close Prisons, some tormented, some sold as Slaves to foreign Plantations, tho', by the Providence of God, delivered in a strange Way, to the Shame of their Enemies. Some of their Women, both old and young, most barbarously used, being stript naked by the rude Soldiers, their Clothes carried away, and they left in that destitute Condition in the open Fields. And as if all this their patient Suffering, had served for no other End, but to incense their Adversaries Fury and implacable Malice the more against them, as a more eminent Proof of their Despise at them, they raised a great Army, with a sumptuous Train of Ammunition and Artillery, to fight against the very Wind of the west Country, as carrying alongst with it an infectious Presbyterian Air, whereby other Places might be endangered; for the poor People in the mean while were all sitting peaceably in their Houses.

This their Host mainly consisted of barbarous Highlanders, by whom, like as many Savages, Cruelties, Oppressions, Plunders, and other horrid Abuses were exercised upon them, too great, villanous and shameful to be named, by any Man who owns himself a Country Man of those who committed them, or of those State Ministers by whom they were authorized.

In the mean Time, by an Act of Non-addresses, and another of Intercommuning, whereby it is unlawful for the Son to give a Bit of Bread, or to speak to his Father, or the Wife to her Husband, tho' lying starving at their Doors, all Access by Supplication, or otherwise, either by themselves or their Friends, being cut off from them, either to his Majesty or his Council; and whatever Acts of Grace his Majesty was pleased to send in their Favours, the same being either so minced and clogged, or wholly suppressed by the Means and Power of the Bishops in the Council, that they were altogether deprived of the Benefit thereof, as was done with a late Order from his Majesty, for Liberty to them to preach in Houses: And after all this, a Proclamation being emitted, whereby it is declared Treason for them to be found at those Meetings with any Arms, and the standing Forces having received Orders of Fire and Sword against all that should withstand them; which being put in Execution by Captain Graham of Claverhouse, to the Effusion of much Blood, and the same Measure being declaredly appointed for the whole Remainder of that Party; let any sober and disinterested Man judge, if, with that wise and honourable Counsellor the Earl of Shaftsbury, it may not rather be be thought a miraculous Work of God, that these People, having the Hearts of Men in them, should have sitten and suffered so much and so long; than be thought strange, that now at length they appear in Arms flow in to them at such a Nick of Time, when both those of our own Nobility and Gentry, who have so much endeavoured to represent to, and convince his Majesty of our Grievances, have, by the Forgeries and misregardingly treated, as Persons opposite to his Majesty's Interest and Designs: And also by proroguing them, and the Succession of the Crown, as well here as there, is so likely to be devolved upon a known and avowed Papist.

Are you willing then to bestow your Assistance, for completing the Sum of all these Oppressions? Or do you think that your Loyalty engageth you so to do? Yet before you go, I would have you answer me seriously these Two or Three Questions.

Are you sure that your Loyalty would fortify you to suffer patiently all those Things, if the Burden were on your own Shoulders?

Have all these Arguments, that you are so well furnished with, against implicate Faith to Churchmen in Church-affairs, no proportionate Weight at all against implicate Faith to Statemen in State-affairs? Or can you not say that the Streams are muddy, unless you conclude the Fountain to be so also?

Who had greater Respect to the King's Honour, Interest and Laws, those, that without the Conditions required by the Law, in obedience to the Act of Council, found caution of Lawborrows for his Majesty's Safety? or they, who in obedience to Law, Reason, Conscience, and their Allegiance to their Prince, did altogether refuse it, both as a Thing wherein the Law could not be answered, and which they found exceeding derogatory to his Majesty's Honour, Dignity and sovereign Authority, which our Allegiance obligeth us, with our Lives and Fortunes, to the uttermost of our Power, constantly and faithfully to maintain, defend and advance against all and whatsoever Persons, Power or Estates, who shall presume in any ways to prejudice, hurt or impair the same? James VI. Parl. 18. cap. 1.

In which, by the way, it is worth the noticing how miserably those Patrons of Supremacy, those Champions of the arbitrary Letter Law over-reached and saltred themselves, by this their notable legal Invention for supplying the Room, and saving the Credit of their illegal Bond, in that, while they are contending so much to exalt the King above the Law, they, in the mean while, not only make him a Supplicant and Demeaner of himself to the Law, but subject him to so mean and humble a Degree of Necessity of supplicating, a Degree so far unsuitable to a supreme Governor over all Persons, and in all Causes, that not only he is the First of all Kings, that ever was made, by his own Counsellors, to stoop so low, and like to be the last; but, even amongst his own Subjects, there are many Thousands, that would think it very far below them to Lawborrows of such as his Majesty, at least his Council declareth him ready to take by that Act, yea, who have so much Honour to maintain, as would make them disdain the very Thought of such a Practice. We may judge then what a Shift our Council hath been put to for a Colour of Law to their Actings, when they behoved to make this their Choice.

Now this was a Proclamation and Act of Council, yet how contradictory, both to the true Honour and Interest of the King's Majesty, and to those fundamental standing Laws, whereby our whole Representatives have unanimously bound themselves and us, and their and our Successors to the perpetual and unalterable Maintenance of both, is evident to all that will not wilfully shut their Eyes.

Is it for us then, to take upon trust our King's Mind, Honour or Interest from such Lawgivers? Or if we do, may we not afterward be found as culpable in obeying, as they in commanding?

If this prevail not, consider but these Heads of the Oath of Coronation, wherewith, and whereupon our Kings receive the Crown of this Kingdom, that they shall rule the People committed to their Charge, according to the honourable Laws and Constitutions received in this Realm; that they shall procure to the uttermost of their Power, to the Kirk of God, and haill Christian People, true and perfect Peace in all Time coming; that they shall forbid and repress, in all Estates and Degrees, Resist, Oppression and all Kind of Wrong; that in all Judgments, they shall command and procure, that Justice and Equity be kept to all Creatures without Exception, as the Lord and Father of all Mercies be merciful to them. James VI. Parl. 1. cap. 8. Think then how deep it may draw upon their Score, not only before God, but before Man, who presume to take upon them to advise or perswade his Majesty to act, or to act themselves under Colour of his Authority, Things manifestly contrary and repugnant to this solemn Oath of God, and chief fundamental Law of our Nation; and of what fatal Consequence it may afterwards prove, not only to them, but also to their Abettors, Aiders, Encouragers in such wicked unlawful Counsels and Practices; at least, if ever Scotland be so happy as to return again to the unbiassed right Use of Law, Reason or Conscience; and yet more especially, when, to the Conviction of all Men, our King is of himself so naturally propense and inclinable to all Ways of Justice and Clemency.

It is known, that his Majesty, at his Restauration, declared himself resolved not to alter the Government of the Church then established. It is known, that of late also, a plenary and universal Indulgence was granted by him, in favours of the Nonconformists. These are the native Effects of our King's Inclination, Goodness and Clemency, by either of which all these imminent Mischiefs might have been prevented. Who then were the Obstructors? Ought they not now rather to be searched for, looked upon, and dealt with as the greatest Enemies of King, People and Government, than assisted in the Prosecution of such pernicious Counsels as have occasioned so unhappy and so unseasonable a Breach in our Peace and Safety?

Shall I ever believe that his Majesty, who, of his own Nature, is so wise, and so just a Pattern of Civility and Obligingness, and who ruleth by Compact betwixt him and his Lieges, would ever have forced Commanders upon the Nobility and Gentry? especially at a Time, when it appears, he needeth so much their Service, and they are so willing to bestow it. When the French King, who hath no other Law for his Actings but his own Will, yet doth not so much as propose any Officer to the Gentry, when he calleth them forth, but remitteth that Matter wholly to Lot.

Can it be supposed, that his Majesty, whose Life, Honour and Kingdoms are so hunted for, by Plot after Plot of these bloody Emissaries of Satan, the Papists, the greatest and most insolent Enemies of Monarchy, and the most incurable Plague and Bane of all human Society, and who therefore commanded lately his Proclamation to be issued forth, for apprehending or banishing many, and wholly disarming all of them within all the Corners of the Land, would ever not only have restored to them the Power of their Arms, but have put great Numbers of his faithful and honourable Protestant Subjects under some of their Commands?

Can any Man think it his Majesty's Will, that Bailie Baird's Son, who was never a Soldier, should be Cornet of a Troop where the Earl of Luthian, Earl of Dalhousie, Viscount of Oxford, Lord Torphichen, Balmerno, &c. are to ride as Troopers, and where his Grace the Duke of Buccleugh, when he arrives, can, according to the Proclamation, pretend no higher than the right Hand of the First Rank?

And since we have such Ground to doubt of these, and it is so well known, that his Majesty did not of himself intrude Bishops upon us, but only, by the selfish Treachery of some who were employed to secure us from them, he was persuaded, and made to believe, that that Government would best agree with us: Who, in reason, can, or ought to imagine that it proceedeth from his Majesty, that his Subjects of his Three Kingdoms should be engaged in Blood, Wars and Devastation of their Fortunes, whereby they may be rendered a Prey to foreign Enemies and lurking Papists, and unfit to serve his Majesty in a more necessary Cause, and of far greater Concern to King and Kingdoms, with the Uncertainty of what further Ruin these Evils may grow to, rather than part now with that Government of the Church, when he sees how far he hath been misinformed concerning it?

His Majesty's, both Mind and true Interest being thus cleared, this then, in plain Terms, as a Consequence clear enough of it self, must be the true State of the Affair. Duke Lawderdale is obliged to the Bishops, they helped well to uphold him when he was tottering, and yet help him, and therefore we must uphold them, tho' we should all fall in the Quarrel.

Is the Cause then sufficient? Can you take your Life in your Hand, and securely rest your Conscience upon it? Tho' you could, are you sure that his Gain shall be yours? And, pray, whether was it Interest or Conscience, that made that Statesman, when he was last amongst us, endeavour so much to have struck in with the Presbyterian Party, those Rebels against the King and Government, when he saw them growing so fast, and so difficult to be born down? which likely had taken effect, if he had not been checked in the Bridle at his first starting aside, and so behoved to renew his Engagements, with fresh and evident Testimonies of his Reality, not finding it fit to unhinge himself of the one Party, while he was yet unsure of the other.

If this then be the Sum of the Matter, that the Bishops serve Duke Lawderdale's Interest, and we therefore must serve the Bishops Interest at any Rate, lest otherwise we should seem weary of being tread upon; all I can say is, that Captain Carstairs, Bailie Carmichael, the Town-major and his Men, are like to come to no small Credit by so noble and numerous a Train of Assessors, as the whole Nobility and Gentry of Scotland; However on some Accounts, they must yield to them the Preheminence, those only having the Advantage of Profit for their Service, being mercenary Rogues, and having others also under them to wait their Commands, while these have the Honour to testify their Zeal, by far greater Condescendency of serving under Command, and some under those they hate, some under those that hate them, some under insignificant Green-horns, and others under worse than some that are, or have been their hired Servants, and all this not only gratis, but to their great Expence, and with the exposing of their Lives and Fortunes.

If you think this honourable for you, you may be doing as much, and as silent as any, albeit on all the forenamed Grounds you have so just and handsom a Way to retreat: If not, I freely give you my Advice, that, as I doubt not but you will both be as forward and cordial as any Man, in testifying your Affection for the real Maintenance of his Majesty's Authority; so, if you find not yourself indeed concerned to give Proof of it in this Quarrel, you disengage yourself in Time; or if otherwise, that yet you go not out, nor do any Thing without a Protestation of salvo jure, upon the forementioned Accounts, that, by a bad Preparative, you be not the Occasion of an irreparable Damage to your Country; which, at such a Time, were I of one of these Shires that are called out, you may believe me; I would think it my Duty and Honour to do, tho' with the greatest Hazard, and tho' there were not another to second me. When the publick Interest is like to suffer, by the Ignorance, Neglect or Cowardice of all, he meriteth double Glory, making all his Nation, and all their Posterity his Debtors, who steppeth in at such a Nick of extreme Need, with opportune Help and Assistance.

Take courage then, and regard not the Clamour of Court Sycophants, who live upon their Country's Ruin, and will be crying down such heroick Acts, as opposite and prejudicial to his Majesty's Authority. But be you confident, that it shall always, at long run, be found and seen, that he is the best Friend to his King, that is the best Friend to his Country, and to the Laws and Liberties thereof, which both King and Parliament have declared to be the Birth-right and Inheritance of the Subject, and the Security of their Lives and Fortunes, Charles II. Parl. 1. Act 17. and that these Two Interests are as indivisible in the Body politick, as are those of the Head and the Body natural.

For what is further, consult the Scripture and your Conscience, and be fully persuaded in your own Mind. For me you know, how much, and how often I have contended for Episcopacy: But now I have considered their partial Behaviour in the Matter of Danby and the Lords in the Tower, those arch Enemies of our King and Government. I see them both there and here so knit to the Bias of the Court, that they will rather sell their Souls, and the whole Interests of the Kingdom, than not swing to that Side right or wrong. I see them generally to be Men altogether set upon their own Profit and Advancement, and that, when once they can make their Court well, they little mind Religion, or the Care of Souls. I see they take no effectual Course for curbing of Profanity, and that, if a Man will but stand for their Grandeur and Revenues, they easily dispense with his being otherwise what he will. I see, that almost any scandalous Fellow that will own them, and hath but an M before his Name, may have a Kirk; too many whereof I know, and more here than with you. I have considered Bishop Sharp, as their Head and last Introducer, whose Reward hath been terrible in the Justice of God, whatever the Actors have been. And I have considered Bishop Paterfen as the Tail, whose Reward is, no doubt, waiting him also, if he mend not his Manners. I have not forgot their cruel, arrogant and blood-thirsty Stopping of his Majesty's gracious Bounty, and keeping up of his Remission after the Business of Pentland, which, with their torturing and hanging of the poor People, after

Quarters

Quarters given them in the Fields by General Daniel, as it was a singular Reward to him for his good Service done them, so may it, to all honest Hearts, be as palpable, as it is an odd Example of their Faith and Manners. I see the very Off-scourings of the Earth employed by them, as their Trustees and Herces, for propagating of their Conformity, and some of them, tho' base all over, and despicable above all Expression, yet owned and caressed by them, as brave Fellows, and chief Promoters of their Principles and Interest: Yea, so little Choice make they on this Head, whether as to Profanity, Popery, Atheism, or what else you can think on, that, for ought that appears, as many Devils out of Hell would be welcome to them, to prop their Dagon of Prelacy, and to be a Scourge to the Fanaticks. I see, Force and the Rigour of the Law are their Two grand Pillars, the Jachin and Boaz of their Temple; and that their whole Power, Interest and Endeavours are so joyntly and intirely bestowed upon the suppressing of Conventicles, and for hindring the Preaching of the Gospel, by those of the nonconformist Party, which renders it to me dreadfully suspicious, that their Cause must be but so and so, when themselves judge it the main Support and Security thereof, that it never come to a fair Hearing; for the Truth is, they reckon themselves undone, if ever the People get leave to hear these Men. I see, most of them look either with Affection or Indifferency upon Popery, that the Papists themselves favour them more than any other Government, that by their Slackness in prosecuting them, they are the Occasion of much Evil to these Lands; and that they give much Life to all their mischievous Plots, by the Hope they find of yet ascending up on that Step of their Hierarchy remaining amongst us. Whereas, on the other Hand, it cannot but be acknowledged by all, that be Presbytery else what it will, it is certainly the best Remedy against Popery in the World; the total Rooting out whereof amongst us, now after the Discoveries we have, ought, on many Accounts, to be esteemed the grand Interest, wherein the Power, Wit and Endeavours of every good Subject, every good Countryman, and every good Christian should terminate. And, in fine, since to all this may be added, the fatal Consequences of the former Establishment of Bishops amongst us, with the Appearance of what is like to be the End of the present; and that our Nation hath drunk in such an inbred and indelible Prejudice against them, that tho' these Fourteen Men, were as many Saints, neither can much Good be expected from them, under that Character, in this Place, nor yet they ever long settled without Blood and Confusion.

I wish only the Presbyterians would give some pithy and incontrovertible Testimony of their real Affection to his Majesty their lawful Sovereign, and to the true Line, in so far as by Popery it is not interrupted; with such a Proof of their Abhorrence of Episcopacy, as may make them take up an Antipathy at their prelatical Way of having no sooner Power in their Hands, but instantly, with Oaths, Declarations and Bonds, flying like as many wild Cats, in the Throat of our Consciences; and that they, Presbyterians, would rather take a more Gospel Way of instructing and perswading us in Love and Meekness, and in Patience wait, till by the Use of Means, and their affectionate Carriage towards us, we be won to the Discerning and Perswasion of those Things, that are not Fundamentals, wherein we differ, and may the King's Majesty say, Amen. Then welcom Presbytery, Unity and Peace; and farewell to Confusion, Schism, Prelacy and Popery for ever.

May it please your Grace,

UPON Thursday last, the 29 of May, a Company of Rebels came to Rutherglen, and there proclaimed the Covenant, and burnt the Acts of Parliament asserting his Majesty's Supremacy and Prerogative, the Act rescissory, the Act establishing Episcopacy, and appointing the 29 of May an anniversary Thanksgiving for his Majesty's Birth and Return, affixing an infamous Declaration to the Market-cross there, wherein they most traiterously assert our gracious and rightful Sovereign to be an Usurper, as your Grace will see more fully in the Double of that treasonable Paper herewith sent, and they intended to have done the same at Glasgow, had not Claverhouse his unexpected Arrival there, with his Troop and Company of Dragoons, luckily prevented them.

Saturday last, at Night, Claverhouse went to Rutherglen to discover and apprehend those insolent Rebels, and did seize Three of them, together with an intercommuned Preacher, named King, in or about Strevin, and on Sunday's Morning, went in Quest of Field-conventicles, and was not long in descrying one which proved indeed a Rendezvous of Rebellion, as will appear by his Letter herewith sent, directed to the Major-general.

Munday, the Committee of the Council met (before the Receipt of the inclosed from Claverhouse) by Two a Clock in the Morning, and by the Major-general's Consent, resolved that all the Forces should be immediately called, and ordered to joyn together for pursuing of those Rebels; which was immediately done, and the Forces which were in Teviotdale, are, and will be here this Night; these in Dumfries may be here to Morrow, and these in Fife will be this Night at Stirling, and the Major-general (who hath upon this Occasion been very vigilant) will, by Four a Clock to Morrow Morning, with all the Forces here, march towards Glasgow, to joyn those which are now there commanded by the Lord Ross, and the rather, that the Rebels having, by their Numbers, overpowered Claverhouse and his Party, and lodged that Night in Hamilton, were so bold and daring, as, yesterday at Eleven a Clock in the Forenoon, to assault the Lord Ross, and the Party commanded by him, in the very Town of Glasgow, whence they were repulsed in Manner mentioned in a Letter from the Lord Ross herewith sent. Their Number is credibly informed to be Fifteen or Sixteen Hundred, and that many flock in to them from several Corners.

Upon Advertisement from the Committee, we have this Day met, not suffering our Eyes to sleep till we came here to consult what was necessary to be done by us upon this Occasion, and accordingly we have emitted the Proclamation herewith sent, and called out the Assistance of the Militia in the Shires of East and Midlothians, Fife, Peebles, Stirling, Berwick, Perth and Angus; and as the Militia in Midlothian will be ready in a Day or Two, so we hope the Militia in all the other Shires shall be in a Readiness by the Middle of the next Week to joyn his Majesty's standing Forces, if Need be, for suppressing of this insolent and mad Rebellion. We have ordered the Town of Edinburgh to draw out their Militia to Morrow, for the more effectual securing of this Place, and Nothing shall be omitted by us, which may contribute towards the Quenching of this Flame, and for reducing of the furious Rebels; for this we shall not fail to stay together here, for consulting fit and proper Methods for doing hereof, and for asserting his Majesty's Authority and Government, against all Attempts which may be made by any whatsoever against it, and we shall not fail, from Time to Time, to give your Grace Advertisements, to be communicated to his sacred Majesty, of what passeth here concerning those Rebels, and our Endeavours for suppressing their Insolence, as becometh.

THE Fanaticks in the West and other Places, having formed themselves into a dangerous Rebellion, whose Numbers and Force do daily increase, we have thought fit to desire your Lordship may, with the greatest Expedition your Circumstances can allow, disintangle your self from your Expedition, for which you are commissioned against the rebellious People in the Highlands, to the end your Lordship may, with the greatest Diligence you can, repair to the King's Host, and to joyn the Forces under the Command of the Earl of Linlithgow, with your Friends, Vassals, Servants and Followers, well appointed and armed for assisting towards the Oppression of this treasonable Insurrection. We doubt not of your Lordship's Readiness, upon all Occasions, to give commendable Proofs of your Loyalty and Duty to his sacred Majesty, and you cannot give a more signal Testimony thereof, and of your Zeal for the Peace and Happiness of this Kingdom, than by a seasonable Assistance against these Rebels, and so we cannot but expect a cheerful and ready Compliance from your Lordship, with so just and necessary a Desire. May it please your Lordship,

HIS Majesty having fully considered all the Accounts sent to him by the Two last flying Packets, commands me to tell you, that he does heartily approve all that is already done by your Lordships of his Privy Council, in issuing out that Proclamation, in raising the Militia, in commanding all Noblemen, Gentlemen, and Heritors with their Servants and Followers, to attend the King's Host, and in advising the Major-general to bring back the Forces to Edinburgh, as also, to assure the Major-general, that his Majesty is very well satisfied with his great Diligence, Care and Conduct, for which the King returns him his Thanks, as he does likewise to the Lord Ross and Claverhouse, and will be very mindful of it upon all Occasions. I cannot sufficiently express the Obligations we have all to his Majesty for his Kindness to Scotland, which, as it has always been eminent, is signal upon this Occasion, in which he is most careful of the Peace of that Kingdom, and of the Honour of his Council there: And since, in order to our further Preservation, he resolves to assist you according to your Desire, with Forces both from England and Ireland, he recommends it to you, to endeavour to keep the Rebels as much as possibly you can, within their own western Shires, in which Case, that you shun to engage them without seen Advantage, till you get such Supplies, as you will judge sufficient. It is also his Majesty's Pleasure, that on this Occasion, wherein he is so much concerned, you take special Notice of the Fidelity and Readiness of such as serve his Majesty, and obey your Orders in attending his Host. His Majesty recommends also to your special Care, the supplying of the Castle of Stirling with Men and Provisions, as a Place which he knows to be of great Importance, and may be supplied by Water. It is expected that you send his Majesty full and frequent Accounts by flying Packets, or Expresses, of what occurs from Time to Time, bearing particularly the Motions and Numbers of the Rebels, with the Names of their principal Officers, the Progress made in raising the Militia, and Journals of what passes amongst you, to be communicated to his Majesty, at whose Command this is signified by

LAWDERDALE:

Council.

Council's Letter to Lawderdale, June 13. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXII.May it please your Grace,

WE are not able to express the Joy with which we received your last by the flying Packet, signifying the Continuance of his Majesty's Care and Concern for the Peace and Interest of this his ancient Kingdom, and his kind Acceptance and Royal Approbation of our Services and Endeavours for preserving his Authority and Government therein against the Attempts of such, who, shaking off all Fear of God, together with the grateful Sense of their Loyalty to his Anointed, have here risen in Rebellion.

That his Majesty may be acquainted with our Diligence and assiduous Endeavours in securing the Kingdom, and in providing of all proper Means for the suppressing of this Insurrection, we have herewith transmitted to your Grace the Journal of this Board, that therein he may perceive our frequent Meetings, and incessant Application for this End.

We have taken Care to supply the Castle of Stirling with Men, and to provide it with Victual, and other Necessaries competent for the Security and Defence thereof, and suitable to the Importance of that Place, according as his Majesty, in his Royal Wisdom, hath well ordered.

Beside his Majesty's standing Forces, the Number whereof is well known to your Grace, we have already here the Militia Regiments of Edinburgh, of Mid and East-lothians, and Berwick-shires, which make upward of Two thousand and Five Hundred; as also the Gentlemen and Heritors of the foresaid Shires, amounting upwards of Three Hundred and Twenty good Horsemen, Two Militia Regiments of Fife, one from Perth, and another from Angus, will be here to morrow, besides the other Militia Regiment of Perth, with that of Stirling-shire, we have ordered to quarter at Stirling, which, together with Three or Four Hundred raised by that Town, we have judged sufficient for the Security thereof. The Heritors also of Fife, Perth and Angus will be presently ready to come and march with the Host; as also the Militia, and Heritors in the more remote and northern Shires, are making all possible Haste for that same end, so that shortly we shall have a very considerable Force to march against these Rebels, which, by God's Blessing; may give such an Account of them, as may secure his Majesty's Government, our Religion, and the Peace of this Kingdom, from the tragical Effects of Faction and Schism, for many Years to come.

We are most sensible of his Majesty's eminent Kindness to Scotland, in declaring his Royal Resolutions to assist us with Forces from England and Ireland upon this Occasion, and crave leave by your Lordship to offer our most humble Acknowledgments for the signal Expression of it. We have already invited the Troop of Horse, and the Five Companies of Dragoons, under the Command of Major Main, to our Assistance, who will this Night quarter at Dalkeith, (and for the incalling whereof, we most earnestly desire his Majesty may renew his Warrant, and to give Orders to them to continue with the Forces of this Kingdom, till this Rebellion be crushed.)

We have Cause to hope well of the Issue from so promising Beginnings; for besides the Loss the Rebels sustained at Glasgow, whence they were shamefully repulsed, a considerable Company of them are beaten by a Party commanded by the Master of Ross, whereof Sixty were killed, and Ten taken Prisoners. As also a Number of the Rogues having gotten together in Fife, harassing and plundering that Shire of Horse and Arms, were, at their going out of Fife towards the Rebels, taken by a Company of the Earl of Murray's Men, under the Command of his Stewart-depute in Down, by whom they were dissipated, severals wounded, and most of them taken, Forty whereof are now Prisoners in Stirling: And also many are now come from Perth, who were seized by the Gentlemen of Srathern, among whom it is presumed, some of the Murderers of the Archbishop may be found.

The Design of these Rebels was to have hindred and disappointed the Rendezvous of the Militia and Heritors in the Shire of Fife; for which Cause we allowed the Lord Chancellor, upon his own Desire, to go thither, and use his best Means for securing that Shire, and for bringing the Militia and Heritors safely together, by whose happy Endeavours, both the Regiments of the Militia and Gentlemen in that Shire will be here to morrow, in order to their joyning his Majesty's other Forces, for extinguishing this present Flame. We shall also be careful to obey his Majesty's Commands, by taking special Notice of the Readiness and Fidelity of such as obey Orders in attending his Host, and in sending frequent flying Polls to acquaint him thereof, and of what occurs from Time to Time. The Rebels continue still about Glasgow, Hamilton, Bothwell, Sreuan, &c. Their Number is uncertain, increasing or decreasing by the coming or going of the Rabble, so that we can give no certain or determinate Account thereof; their Officers are as uncertain as they are obscure, no Commander of any Note being heard of amongst them. The Major-general will be careful to take such a Course in pursuing of them, as may keep them up, as much as is possible, within their own western Shires, which, with Teviotdale, are the principal Seat and Stock of this Rebellion.

As none can be more sensible of his Majesty's tender Care of Scotland, and kind Acceptance of our Endeavours, so none shall be more careful punctually to obey his Royal Commands, nor more ready, in his Service, to venture their Lives and Fortunes, than your Grace's most humble Servants.

Lawderdale's Letter to the Chancellor, June 11. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXIII.May it please your Lordship,

I Am commanded by his Majesty to acquaint you, that, in pursuance of his Resolutions, to send Supplies from hence to you, for suppressing the Rebellion now amongst the Fanaticks in the West of Scotland, he hath ordered one Regiment of Foot to be presently imbarqued, to go by Sea to Berwick, together with Cannon and Ammunition sufficient; and his Majesty has ordered Two Regiments of Foot more, to be presently levied, the one to be commanded by the Lord Cavendish, and the other by the Lord Gray of Wark. As also Three Regiments of Horse under the Command of the Duke of Monmouth, the Duke of Albemarle and the Lord Gerard, together with Eight Hundred Dragoons. There are likewise Three Troops of Grenadiers, and these last are to march towards Scotland to morrow. The King has also thought fit to name the Duke of Monmouth General, to command all his Forces, so long as his Grace shall remain in Scotland. His Majesty, by this Expedition, will be at the Charge of upwards of Five Hundred Pounds Sterling a Day, which is more than one Hundred and Fifty Thousand Pounds Sterling by Year, if they continue so long. And seeing the King has so early provided for the Preservation of his Royal Government, and your common Safety, he has just Reason to expect, that in the mean time you will bestow your utmost Care and Diligence, as far as is possible, to suppress that wild Rebellion. His Majesty presseth much, that frequent flying Packets may be sent, at least every other Day, that he may know all Things that pass, and that they may bear large and exact Accounts. All which, by his Majesty's Command, is signified to your Lordship by,

My Lord,Your Lordship's most humble,and most faithful Servant,

LAWDERDALE.

Letter from the Council to Lawderdale, June 15. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXIV.May it please your Grace,

AS his Majesty's Care and Concern for Scotland, so signally expressed in the Supplies and Assistance he intends for its Relief, do exceedingly both surprize and encourage, so the unseasonable Trouble and Charge this Rebellion occasioneth to him, creates a very just Affliction to us; the humble and dutiful Sense of both, we must beseech your Grace, in our Name, to offer to his Majesty.

The Journals transmitted from this Board will give his Majesty an Account of our uninterrupted Care and Endeavours for suppressing this Insurrection, to which we have little to add, save, that yesterday the Forces were drawn out, that they might be in the better Order and Readiness for their March to morrow towards the Enemy. The Militia Regiments, beside the standing Forces, are of Fife and Berwick-shires, of East and Mid-lothians, and that of Edinburgh, together with the Heritors of the foresaid Shires. One of the Militia Regiments of Fife came over yesterday, the other this Day, to joyn the Army to morrow: As also one of the Militia Regiments of Perth, the other being commanded to Stirling, where also is the Militia Regiment of Stirling-shire, with the Heritors. Here is also expected the Militia Regiment of Angus, which, with the Heritors and Gentlemen of Fife, Perth and Angus, will, we trust, make a very considerable Strength and Force, by which, through God's Help and Blessing, this abominable Rebellion may be broken and crushed.

The Forces march to morrow towards the Rebels, and as daily fresh Supplies will be coming up to them, so we shall be vigilant and careful to send them suitable Provisions, and we doubt not but the Almighty will give them such Advantage against the Enemy (without which they will be careful not to engage them) as may enable them to obtain the Victory, and so to extinguish this present Flame.

Since it hath pleased his Majesty to appoint the Duke of Monmouth to be General of the Forces here, during the Time of his Grace's Abode in Scotland, it was humbly proposed by the Earl of Linlithgow, that his Majesty may be pleased to establish General Dalziel Lieutenant General in this Expedition, and that we might recommend him to the King for this effect, with which Motion (his Experience and Fitness for such Service being so well known) we have complied, and therefore desire your Grace may be pleased to signify the same to his Majesty, which we do with the most humble and absolute Submission to his Majesty's Pleasure and Disposal, as he, in his Royal Wisdom, shall judge most convenient for his Service.

The Rebels continue still about Glasgow, Bothwell and Hamilton, and we can say nothing further of the Numbers than we did in our last. We hear of no Person of Interest, Conduct or Quality to be amongst them. Their best and greatest Officers being, Robert Hamilton, Balfour of Kilnoch, Hackstoun of Rathillet, Barjacob, Weir, Paton, and such other inconsiderable Persons, whose mad Zeal, broken Condition and bloody Fury have prompted and advanced to be the Leaders of this tumultuary Insurrection, so that we cannot doubt, but that that in a short Time his Majesty's Forces, by the Blessing of God assisting their Valour and Conduct, will make them reach the just Reward of their Folly, in their utter Overthrow and Destruction.

We shall not be wanting in our assiduous and most vigilant Care and Endeavours for doing every Thing in our Power, which may contribute to the Quashing and Suppressing of this Insurrection, whereof Accounts shall be frequently transmitted to your Grace, to be by you communicated to his Majesty, from

AS it is not unknown to a great Part of the World how happy this Church of Scotland was while she enjoyed the Ordinances of Jesus Christ in Purity and Power, of the which we have been deplorably deprived by the Establishment of Prelacy; so it is evident, not only to impartial Persons, but to professed Enemies, with what unparalleled Patience and Constancy the People of God have endured all the Cruelty, Injustice and Oppression, that the Wit and Malice of Prelates and Malignants could invent and exercise, and being most unwilling to act any Thing which might import Opposition to lawful Authority, or engage the Kingdom in War, altho' we have been all along groaning under the Overturning the Work of Reformation, Corruptions in Doctrine, slighting of Worship, despising of Ordinances, changing of the ancient Church-discipline and Government, thrusting out of so many of our faithful Ministers from their Charges, confining, straitly imprisoning, exiling, yea, and putting to Death many of them, and intruding upon their Flocks a Company of insufficient and scandalous Persons, and fining, confining, imprisoning, torturing, tormenting, scourging and stigmatizing poor People, plundering their Goods, quartering upon them by rude Soldiers, selling of their Persons to foreign Plantations, horning and intercommuning many of both; whereby great Numbers in every Corner of the Land were forced to leave their Dwellings, Wives, Children and Relations, and made to wander as Pilgrims, still in hazard of their Life, none daring to reser, harbour, supply (tho' starving) or so much as to speak to them, even on Death-bed, without making themselves obnoxious to the same Punishments; and these Things acted under Colour of Law, in effect tending to banish, not only all Sense of Religion, but also to extinguish natural Affection, even amongst Persons of nearest Relations, and likeways groaning under the intolerable Yoke of Oppression, in our civil Interests, our Bodies, Liberties and Estates, so that all Manner of Outrages have been most arbitrarily exercised upon us, through a Tract of several Years bypast, particularly in the Year 1678 by sending against us an armed Host of barbarous Savages contrary to all Law and Humanity, and by laying on us several Impositions and Taxes, as formerly, so of late by a Meeting of prelimited and over-awed Members, in the Convention of Estates in July 1678. for keeping up of an armed Force, intrusted as to a great Part of it, into the Hands of avowed Papists, or Favourers of them, whereby sundry Invasions have been made upon us, and most exorbitant Abuses and incredible Insolencies committed against us, and we being continually sought after, while meeting in Houses for divine Worship, Ministers and People frequently apprehended, and most rigorously used; and so being necessitate to attend the Lord's Ordinances in Fields, in the most desert Places, and there also often hunted out, assaulted to the Effusion of our Blood, and killing of some, we were inevitably constrained, either to defend our selves by Arms, at these Meetings, or be altogether deprived of the Gospel preached by his faithful Ministers, and made absolute Slaves; at one of which Meetings, upon the first Day of June instant (being the Lord's Day) Captain Graham of Claverhouse being warranted, by a late Proclamation, to kill whomsoever he found in Arms at Field-conventicles making Resistance, did furiously assault the People assembled; and further to provoke, did cruelly bind, like Beasts, a Minister with some other People, whom he had that very same Morning found in their Houses, and severals being killed on both Sides, and they knowing certainly, that by Law they behoved to die (if apprehended) they did stand to their own Defence, and continued together, and thereafter many of our Friends and Countrymen being under the same Oppression, and expecting the same Measures, did freely offer their Assistance. We therefore thus inevitably, and of absolute Necessity, forced to take this last Remedy (the Magistrate having shut the Door by a Law against any Application, that whatever our Grievances be, either in Things civil or sacred, we have not the Privilege of a Supplicant) do judge our selves bound to declare, that these, with many other horrid Grievances in Church and State (which we purpose to manifest more fully hereafter) are the true Causes of this our lawful and innocent Self-defence. And we do most solemnly, in the Presence of the almighty God the Searcher of Hearts, declare, that the true Reasons of our continuing in Arms, are candidly and sincerely these. 1st. The defending and securing of the true Protestant Religion, and Presbyterian Government founded on the Word of God, and summarily comprehended in our Confessions of Faith and Catechisms, and established by the Laws of this Land, to which King, Nobles and People are solemnly sworn, and engaged in our national and solemn League and Covenants, and more particularly the defending and maintaining of the kingly Authority of our Lord Jesus Christ over his Church against all sinful Supremacy, derogatory thereto, and intruding thereupon. 2<sup>dly</sup>. The preserving and defending the King's Majesty's Person and Authority in the Preservation and Defence of the true Religion and Liberties of the Kingdom, that the World may bear Witness, with our Consciences, of our Loyalty, and that we have no Thoughts nor Intentions to diminish his just Power and Greatness. 3dly. The obtaining of a free and unlimited Parliament, and of a free General Assembly, in order to the redressing of our foresaid Grievances, for preventing the Danger of Popery, and Extirpation of Prelacy. This therefore being the Cause we appear for, and resolved, in God's great Name, to own (hereby homologating all the Testimonies of our faithful Sufferers for Truth in Scotland, these Eighteen Years) together with Acknowledgment of Sins, and Engagement of Duties, we humbly request the King's Majesty would restore all Things as he found them, when God brought him home to his Crown and Kingdoms; and if that cannot be obtained, then we heartily and humbly invite, intreat, beseech and obtest, in the Bowels of Jesus Christ, all who are under the same Bonds with us, to concur in the Defence of this common Cause and Interest, and that they would not stand still, and see, not only us oppressed, but this foresaid Cause ruined, Adversaries highly and proudly insult against God and all good Men, Friends of the Truth discouraged, yea, the Protestant Cause in Britain and Ireland, and even your selves, within a little Time, made a Prey of, or else forced, when we are broken (which the good Lord prevent) dreadfully to wrong your Consciences. Finally. Because we desire no Man's Hurt nor Blood, we request our Countrymen, now the standing Forces of this Kingdom, some of them being our Friends and Kinsmen, not to fight against us, lest in so doing they be found fighting against the Lord, whose Cause and Quarrel we are sure he will own and signally countenance, seeing we fight under his Banner who is the Lord of Hosts.

I Am come to the Place of our liggering this Night in the Park of Kirkhill. Most of the Regiments and Troops with the Artillery and Ammunition are not yet come up. Since my coming here, I did send out a small Party of Horse and Dragoons towards Monkland, who has discovered a Party of the Rebels near West-caldor, they are about an Hundred Horse. So soon as all our Horse and Dragoons are come up, I intend to send a stronger Party out to engage them. The Gross of their Body is lying about the Hagg, from whence, as I am informed, they send Parties over all the Country. Most of the Heritors of the several Shires are at Linlithgow, with whom I have sent a Company of Dragoons to keep Guard with them. My Lord, it is very sad to have so many Militia Regiments here, and hardly one Bit of Bread to eat, which, if not remedied by your Lordship, I leave you to judge of the Event. I hope all of us here will do our Duty in our Stations but Men must eat. What Rout is to be taken to morrow must be according to our Intelligence this Night. But for the present I can say no more, but that I am,

Kirkhill-park, June 18. 1679.

I Received your Lordship's of yesterday's Date: And for to give your Lordship an Account of the State of our Affairs, and Numbers of the Militia Regiments; we have here the Regiments of East-lothian, the Merse, that Perth-shire Regiment commanded by the Marquis of Athole, the other was at Linlithgow last Night, and will joyn us this Morning; the Two Fife Regiments, the Regiment of Angus, I believe, will joyn us in our March this Day, and the Militia Regiment of the Town of Edinburgh; these of them that are here having joyned us late the last Night, and the others not being yet come up, makes me incapable of giving your Lordship an exact Account of their Numbers but as near as I can conjecture, the Eight Militia Regiments that we have, will make up about Five Thousand Men. The Heritors of the several Shires are not yet come up, except those that came from the East with us, who are lying in the little Towns most adjacent to this Place. Those that came from Stirling are lying at Linlithgow and Falkirk. So soon as we are all joyned, I shall not fail to give your Lordship a more exact Account of our Numbers, both Horse and Foot. We are to joyn at Blackburn, and from thence we will take our Measures according to our Intelligence. It is impossible to know the Number of the Rebels, until we force them to draw together, they being now dispersed over the Country. All the Account we have of them is, that their Body is lying about the Hagg. I am just now dispatching some intelligent Persons to go in to the Places where they are, for Intelligence. Yesterday I gave your Lordship an Account of a Party of the Rebels of about an Hundred Horse, that we saw, upon the left Hand, in our March. I commanded out a Party of Horse and Dragoons to go to them, but before they came within any Distance of them, they run for it. This is all the Account I can give for the present. I am

CHARLES R.

Right trusty and well beloved, &c. We greet you well. We are very well pleased, that Our Two last Dispatches, signed by the Duke of Lawderdale at Our Command, have given you that Satisfaction and Encouragement which are fit upon such Emergents. We are also very well satisfied with your prudent and exact Care in all the Particulars mentioned in your last Letter, dated the 13 instant, by which you advertise Us that you have supplied Stirling, provided for Our Forces, called in Major Mum, with some of Our English Troops of Horse and Dragoons under his Command, and that you are speedily, in Our Name, to cause all Our Forces to march; with which, it is Our Will and Pleasure, that you prosecute those Rebels with Fire and Sword, and all other Extremities of War, that others may be terrified by this just and deserved Severity, and We and Our good Subjects freed from these frequent Rebellions, which would necessarily follow their being spared at this Time: And to prevent their securing themselves by withdrawing to their skulking Holes after they have committed all Manner of Mischief, We require you to use your utmost Endeavours in getting the best Intelligence of all such as have been engaged in this Rebellion; being fully resolved to bring the Ringleaders, even amongst these, to condign Punishment, suitable to this notorious and insolent Rebellion.

We must likewise put you in mind, that all Care and Diligence be used for discovering the Murderers of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, by all the Severity that Law will allow, and that you punish, with all Rigour, the Actors in, and Accessories to that horrid Murder, by Assistance, resetting, or otherwise; all which shall for ever be debarred from Our Pardon. So expecting to hear frequently from you, We bid you heartily farewell.

Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the Sixteenth Day of June 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

May it please your Grace,

His Majesty's gracious Letter, of the Date June 16. did create an universal Joy amongst us, wherein his Royal Wisdom hath given such just Measures and Directions for suppressing of this Rebellion, as may secure his Government, together with our Religion, Lives and Properties, from being endangered by frequent Insurrections of this Nature, which would infallibly have followed, if the insolent Rebels, who now disturb this Kingdom, should have been spared at this Time, and not prosecuted with the utmost Severities.

A Double of his Majesty's Letter we transmitted this Morning betimes to his Grace the Duke of Buckingham, General of all his Majesty's Forces of this Kingdom. We sent yesternight the Laird of Linlithgow to wait upon and compliment him, and to know his Grace's Pleasure, who is now returned, bringing us a most just and encouraging Account. He tells us, that a Party being yesternight sent out to discover the Numbers and Strength of the Rebels, they did attack a Party of theirs, bearing them in to their Body, and killing one of their Officers upon the Place, and that the best Information relates their Number not to amount above Six Thousand; that their Horse are now quartered in the new Park of Hamilton, and their Foot in the Town thereof.

As for our Army, he tells us it lies within Two Miles of the Kirk of Shotts, and consists of about Ten Thousand, being in good Heart and Condition to engage the Rebels. Just now we have Advice from my Lord General, that, being supplied with necessary Provisions, he intends once to morrow to be within a Mile of the Enemy, so that comparing their Forces with ours, we cannot doubt, by God's Blessing and Assistance attending our Army and Endeavours, in a very short Time, by your Grace, to give his Majesty a good and satisfying Account of a happy Victory over them.

We have no Journals to transmit at this Time, worthy of your Trouble, or his Majesty's Perusal, we having, for these Two Days, been constantly employed in preparing and sending Supplies and Provisions towards the Army, and in ordering some other necessary Matters of lesser Concernment. That Nothing may be wanting which may encourage his Majesty's Forces in this Expedition, which so much imports the Security and Establishment of his Government, and the Honour of the Kingdom, shall be the zealous and assiduous Study and Care of

Your Grace's most humble Servants

Council's Letter to Lawderdale, June 22. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXIX.May it please your Grace,

WE send this flying Pacquet with great Joy, that your Grace may give his Majesty the good and happy News of a total and absolute Victory, obtained this Day over the Rebels, by his Majesty's Forces in this Kingdom, under the Conduct of his Grace the Duke of Buccleugh, which happened in this Manner.

This Morning, by Seven a Clock, our Army was drawn up at Bothwell-bridge, which the Enemy (lying on the other Side thereof) had barracadoed. Here a Supplication is brought to the Lord General by one of the Rebels, giving him Notice, that they would lay down their Arms upon no other Terms than these expressed in their large Declaration. His Grace told the Bearer, these were destructive to the King's Authority, and fundamental Constitution of this Kingdom, and that they were to expect no other Articles from him, but to lay down Arms, and render themselves to his Mercy. This they refused to do, and immediately the Guns began to play upon them, which did somewhat disorder them. Then a Party attacked the Bridge, and, after some short Dispute, carried it. The Rebels being beaten from it, retreated a little, and stayed at some Distance till most of his Majesty's Forces were got over that Pass. Soon after, by some more Play with the Guns, and another Assault, their Horse began to run, and scatter upon all Corners, leaving their flying Foot to the Mercy of our Army, who pursued them with all Diligence and Zeal, and have killed some Hundreds of them, and taken many Hundreds Prisoners. Many of the Foot fled into the Wood of Hamilton, which is surrounded by a Party of his Majesty's Forces; and a detached Party, under Lieutenant Colonel Douglas, is sent in after them, which will give a good Account of them. Our Army is still in Pursuit of the Rebels, when Lundin came away about Ten a Clock, who, having been sent from us to wait on the General, had the good Fortune to be an Actor, as well as a Witness in this Engagement, so that his Majesty may be assured, that this is a total Rout and Discomfiture of these insolent Rebels.

The Lord General hath behaved himself with exceeding great Conduct and Magnanimity, and all the Officers, Gentlemen and Soldiers have carried themselves with great Cheerfulness and Resolution against the Enemies of our Religion, King and Country; and above all, the Mercy of God hath been most signal and wonderful to us, even to a Miracle, in so much, that tho' the Rebels were near Seven Thousand, yet are they totally routed without any Loss to his Majesty's Forces, save of Two or Three common Soldiers. We doubt not but by God's Mercy and Blessing, and our gracious Sovereign his Royal Wisdom, this glorious Victory shall be so pursued, as that the Rebellion and Schism shall be pluckt up by the Roots in Scotland. A more full and particular Narration shall be sent to your Grace so soon as we receive it. Mean while, upon Receipt of the flying Pacquet, we met at Twelve a Clock, where the Lord Chancellor delivered the Commission sent from his Majesty to General Dalziel, who is immediately to repair to the Army, and to enter upon his Charge. Nothing shall be omitted by us for securing of all Ports and Passages, for seizing and apprehending such of the Rebels as may endeavour their Escape, or any Thing else which may contribute to the utter Extinguishing of this violent Flame, which may be expected from

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith: To all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects, whom these Presents do or may concern, Greeting. Forasmuch as, upon the first Notice given to Our Privy Council of the rising and gathering of these disloyal and seditious Persons in the West, who have of late appeared in Arms in a desperate and avowed Rebellion against Us, Our Government and Laws, We did declare them to be Traitors, and discharged all Our Subjects to assist, reset, supply, or correspond with any of them, under the Pain of Treason: And the said Rebels and Traitors, being now (by the Blessing of God upon Our Forces) subdued, dissipated and scattered; and such of them as were not either killed or taken in the Field, being either retired secretly to their own Homes and Houses, expecting Shelter and Protection from the respective Heritors, in whose Lands they dwell, or lurking in the Country; and We, being unwilling any of Our good Subjects should be ensnared, or brought into Trouble by them, have therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, thought fit, again to discharge and prohibit all Our Subjects, Men or Women, that none of them offer or presume to harbour, reset, supply, correspond with, hide or conceal the Persons of Robert Hamilton Brother German to the Laird of Prestoun, John Paton in Medow-head, alias Captain Paton, Joseph Learmond, alias Major Learmond, William Clelland, John Balfour of Kinloch, Whiteford of Balquhan younger, Mclellan of Barfoob, John Wilson Son to Alexander Wilson Town-clerk of Lanerk, Ross pretended Major, Thomas Weir Brother to Kirk-field, Hackstoun of Rathiller, Carmichael Son to the Earl of Wigtoun's Chamberlain, Cannon of Mardrogat, Mr. William Fergusson of Kaitloch, James Russel in Kingskettle, George Balfour in Gillstoun, Andrew and Alexander Hendersons Sons to John Henderson in Kilbraichmont, Andrew Guilan Weaver in Balmerino, George Fleming younger of Balbutby, Robert Dingwal Son to Dingwal in Caldhame, Mr. Samuel Arnot, Mr. Gabriel Semple, Mr. John Welsh, Mr. John King, Mr. Donald Cargil, Mr. George Barclay, Mr. John Rae, Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Forrester, Mr. Robert Muir, Mr. Lamb, Mr. Richard Cameron, Mr. David Hume, Ure of Shargartoun.

Forrester of Bankhead, John Haddoway Merchant in Douglas, James White Writer there, Cuninghame of Montgrenan, and Mr. John Cuninghame sometime of Bedland, James and William Clellands Brethren in Law to John Haddoway Merchant in Douglas, Thomas Bogle of Boglehole, alias Nether-carmile, Gordons of Earlstoun elder and younger, M'dougal of Freugh, the Laird of Ravensstoun Brother to the Earl of Galloway, the Laird of Castle-stewart Brother to the said Earl, Gordon of Craichley, Turnbull of Bewley, Thomas Turnbull of Standhil, Henry Hall, George Hume of Gredlin, Macky of Glencard, Mr. John Rae, Somerwel of Wratt, Mr. Archibald Riddel Brother to the Laird of Riddel, Cathcarrs, Two Sons of the Lord Cathcart, Blair of Fimick, Murdoch, alias Laird Murdoch, Rolland Retchison Feuar in Gilmertoun, and his Three Sons, or any others who concurred or joyned in the late Rebellion, or who, upon the Account thereof, have appeared in Arms in any Part of this Our Kingdom. But that they pursue them as the worst of Traitors, and present and deliver such of them as they shall have within their Power, to the Lords of Our Privy Council, the Sheriff of the County, or the Magistrates of the next adjacent Burgh-royal, to be by them made forthcoming to Law: Certifying all Persons, either Heritors, Tenants, or other Men or Women, as shall be found to fail in their Duty herein, they shall be esteemed and punished as Favourers of the said Rebellion, and as Persons accessory to, and guilty of the same. And to the end all Our good Subjects may have timeous Notice hereof, We do ordain these Presents to be forthwith printed, and published at the Market-crosses of Edinburgh, Linlithgow, Stirling, Lanerk, Air, Rutherglen, Glasgow, Irwine, Wigtoun, Kirkcudbright, Dumfries, Cowpar in Fife, Jedburgh, Perth, and remanent Market-crosses of the head Burghs of the several Shires of the Kingdom, by Macers or Messengers at Arms. King's Letter to Council, June 29. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXXI.

Right trusty and welbeloved, &c. We greet you well. After full Consideration of what is past since the first News of this Rebellion, We cannot but be highly satisfied with the great Care you have shewn, and the great Affection and Forwardness of Our Subjects in that Our ancient Kingdom, in suppressing those Rebels who endeavoured to strike at the very Root of Our Government. And therefore, as We return you Our hearty Thanks, so We do earnestly recommend unto you, that you may assure the Nobility, Gentry, and others who have so cheerfully, at this Time, attended Our Host, or were upon their March to it, that We will never forget this signal Testimony of their Loyalty and Kindness to Us, and that you will, in Our Name, return unto them Our hearty Thanks. And We being particularly informed of the great Vigilance and Care of the Magistrates and Council of Our good Town of Edinburgh, and the great Expences they have been at upon this Occasion, We do desire you to call them to Our Council Board, and give them Our solemn and hearty Thanks.

To the end that all Our Subjects may see the great Aversion We have for those Rebels and their Principles, and that We will not encourage others for the future, to disturb Our Government and good Subjects, by such extravagant Insolencies and Cruelties, We do require you to try out for such among all the Prisoners, as can most probably discover the Rise and Occasion of this Rebellion, the Means by which it was carried on, and the Correspondence which they had or entertained any where for that Purpose, but particularly in this Our Kingdom of England: For discovering of all which, We do ordain you to offer them Our Royal Pardon, if they discover and make out their Information, and that you put them to the Torture if they refuse to inform in what you have pregnant Presumptions to believe they know. When this is done, We do in the next Place approve the Motion made by you, of sending Three or Four Hundred of these Prisoners to the Plantations, for which We authorize you to grant a Warrant in order to their Transportation, and We will thereafter send another Warrant from hence for receiving them in that Plantation for which they are to go, you giving Information to Our Secretary of the Place to which they are to be sent. It is likewise Our Pleasure, that you cause prosecute as Traitors immediately, the Heritors, Ministers and Ringleaders of this Rebellion, these only excepted who shall discover in Manner above related. And as to the rest of those who are taken Prisoners, We desire that they may be set at Liberty, upon their enacting themselves not to take Arms against Us, nor Our Authority: But to prevent their doing Mischief for the future, We desire that there may be an Act of Council made and intimated unto them, that if ever they, or any of them shall be hereafter in Arms, or at Field-conventicles, the Persons so taken shall forfeit the Benefit of this Our Pardon and Indemnity. You will receive from the Duke of Buccleuch and Monmouth Our further Pleasure in a Proclamation, which We have sent unto him, to be presented unto you, to the end it may be published in Our Name. And so We bid you heartily farewell. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 29 Day of June 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

CHARLES R.

CHARLES II. by the Grace of God, King of Scotland, England France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all and sundry Our good Subjects whom these Presents do or may concern, Greeting. The just Resentments We have of the rebellious Courses taken by some in that Our ancient Kingdom of Scotland, by poisoning Our People with Principles inconsistent with true Piety, and all human Society, as well as with Our Royal Government, and of the humorous Factions of others, who (under Pretext of representing Grievances to Us) have most unjustly, both in Scotland and England, demeaned Our Judicatures of Scotland, and thereby weakened Our Authority therein represented; all which, did not hinder Us from endeavouring to quiet the one by Our late Proclamation, and the other by a publick Hearing and Debate: And being most desirous to cover all the Imperfections of Our Subjects, and to remove the Fears and Jealousies whence they proceed, We have therefore, by Our Royal Authority, and the undoubted Prerogative of Our Crown, thought fit (with the Advice of Our Privy Council) to indemnify, remit and pardon (with the Exceptions after specified) all such as have been at Field or House-conventicles, all such as are guilty of irregular Administration of the Sacraments, and other schismatick Disorders, all such as have been engaged in the Rebellion, 1666. or the late Rebellion this present Year of God 1679. all such as have spoken, written, printed, published or dispersed any traiterous Speeches, infamous Libels, or Pasquils, all such as have misrepresented any of Our Judicatures, Servants, or Subjects, or have advised any Thing contrary to Our Laws, all such as have malversed in any publick Station, or Trust; and generally, all such as are liable to any Pursuit, for any Cause, or Occasion, relating to any publick Administration, by Contrivances, Actings, Oppositions, or otherways, preceeding the Date hereof: Declaring the Generality of these Presents, to be as effectual to all Intents and Purposes, as if every Circumstance of every the foresaid Delinquencies, or Misdemeanours were particularly and specially here inserted; and as if every of the Persons that might be challenged and pursued for the same, had a Remission under Our great Seal, or an Act of Indemnity past in his Favours: Discharging any of Our Officers, or Subjects, to pursue any Person or Persons upon any such Accounts, either ad vindictam publicam vel privatam, or to upbraid them therewith: And commanding all Our Judges to interpret this Our Remission and Indemnity, with all possible Latitude and Favour, as they will be answerable to Us upon their highest Perils: Excepting such as are already forfeited by Our Parliaments, or Our Criminal Court, fined by Our Privy Council, and such, who being fined by inferior Judicatures, have paid, or transacted for their Fines, in so far as concerns their respective Fines, so imposed: Excepting also, all such Heritors and Ministers, who have been in the late Rebellion, or were Contrivers thereof, and such Heritors as have contributed thereto, by Levies of Men or Money: And excepting likewise such as obeyed not Our, and Our Council's Proclamation, in assisting in Our Host, to be pursued for that their Delinquency, according to Law; and such Persons as have threatened or abused any of the orthodox Clergy, or any of Our good Subjects for assisting Us in suppressing the late Rebellion; and that, since Our Proclamation, dated the 29 Day of June last past. Which Indemnity We do grant to those who were engaged in the late Rebellion, provided that they shall appear before such as Our Privy Council shall nominate, betwixt and the Diets following, viz. these that are within this Kingdom, betwixt and the Eighteenth Day of September, and these that are forth thereof, betwixt and the Thirteenth of November next to come, and enact themselves, never to carry Arms against Us, or Our Authority, and with expresse Condition, that if ever they shall be at any Field-conventicle, or shall do any Violence to any of Our orthodox Clergy, this Our Indemnity shall not be useful to such Transgressors any manner of Way, as it shall not be to any for private Crimes, such as Murders, Assassinations, Thefts, Adulteries, the Fines and Denunciations thereof, and such like as never use to be comprehended under general Acts of Indemnity, and particularly the execrable Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, nor to such as were appointed to be carried to the Plantations, by Our Letter, dated the Twenty ninth Day of June last, tho' their Lives be, by this Our Royal Proclamation also, secured unto them, in Manner, and upon the Conditions abovementioned. But lest the Hope of Impunity should embolden the Malicious to future Disorders, We do hereby command Our Privy Council, and all Our other Judicatures, to pursue and punish with all the Severity that Law can allow, all such as shall hereafter threaten or abuse the orthodox Clergy, murmur against Our Judicatures, or Officers, or shall make, publish, print, or disperse Libels, or Pasquils, these being the Forerunners of all Rebellions, and which, by defaming Authority, do disappoint all its just and necessary Methods. And to the end all Our good Subjects may have Notice of this Our Royal Will and Pleasure, We do hereby command Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Macers, Pursuivants, and Messengers at Arms, to make timeous Intimation hereof, at the Market-places of Edinburgh, and other Places needful. Given at Our Court at Windsor-castle, the 27 Day of July 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

By his Majesty's Command,
LAWDERDALE.

God save the King.

Letter from the King to the Council, August 15. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXXIII.

CHARLES R.

Right trusty, &c. We greet you well. Whereas by Our Letter of the 26 Day of July last past, We did (upon the Considerations therein mentioned) command you to cause process before the Criminal Court, Nine of those who were in the late Rebellion, with the additional Aggravation of having owned the Murder-

Murderers of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, whom We did thereby except from any Indemnity We should grant. And that besides the Persons who are to be excepted therein, these Nine being to be executed merely upon that account, and they being convicted, We did order that they be hanged in Chains upon the Place where that horrid Murder was committed; amongst whom We did recommend unto you to include such as appeared not upon the Places of Trial, in Fife, appointed by Our Proclamation, and that you should not let out such of the Shire of Fife as were then in Custody, till they be purged of their Accusation thereto; and that you should take all Courses consistent with Law, for the further Discovery of such as are guilty of that inhumane Crime. And whereas now, by the Examination of some Prisoners in the South Gray-friar Yard of Edinburgh, anent their being in the late Rebellion, and concerning the said horrid Murder (taken by some of your Number the 5 instant) We find, that several of them do not own the late Rebellion to be a Rebellion, nor the Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews to be a Murder. Some of them do not acknowledge the said Murder unlawful, and others say it is not sinful. These are therefore to authorize and require you, to cause the Persons mentioned in the inclosed List, to be pursued criminally, and to cause speedy Justice to be done on them, according to Law. For doing whereof this shall be your Warrant. And so We bid you heartily farewell. Given at Our Court at (ut supra) and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

By His Majesty's Command,
LAWDERDALE.

be brought to condign Punishment, and all legal Courses taken for that effect: Therefore We, with Advice of Our Privy Council, do ordain Justice-airs, or Circuit-courts to be holden by the Commissioners

Our gracious Proclamation, within the Diets therein mentioned, and particularly against the Murderers of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews; and that the said Commissioners issue Citations against all the said Rebels, and specially against the said Murderers, containing a particular Description of these Murderers; which Citations are to be executed at the Market-crofs of the head Burghs of the Shires where these Persons dwelt, or formerly dwelt, or where they ordinarily haunt and resort, to the effect that none may supply, harbour, commune or correspond with the said Murderers, nor with any other of the Rebels, before these other Rebels, not accessory to that horrid Murder, enact themselves, conform to Our Act of Indemnity; and in case any Person shall contravene, they shall be proceeded against with all Rigour, as accessory to the said Rebellion and Assassination. And further, We, with Advice foresaid, do ordain the Heritors and Masters of the Acts of Parliament. And the Clerks of the Justice-court, are hereby ordained to go before the said Diets, in due Time, and take up a porteous Roll of the Names and Designations of the said Rebels, already known and contained in Our Proclamation, or that shall be delated upon Oath to have been in the Rebellion, or to have harboured the Rebels before enacting themselves (as said is) or the Murderers of the late Archbis hop of St. Andrews, or have been at Field-conventicles since Our last Proclamation of the Twenty ninth of June last, or that since the said Day have threatned, abused, or robbed the orthodox Clergy, and that they cause cite the Persons guilty of the said Crimes, to the said Justice-airs, and that they take Information upon Oath, of the Lands, Sums and Moveables belonging to the Rebels, and that they cause arrest the Reits of their Lands, Sums and Moveables, and put the Moveables upon Inventar and Bond in the Custody of their Masters; and in case their Masters refuse, in the Custody of some other sufficient Person, to be made forthcoming, in case they shall be condemned guilty of the said Rebellion, and that they return an exact Account thereof, and of their Diligence, to Our Council at their next Diet, being the Eighteenth Day of September next. And We, with Advice foresaid, do hereby require the said Commissioners of Our Justiciary, to proceed against such of the said Murderers as were in the Rebellion (tho' in Absence) and that it be a Part of their Sentence, to be hanged in effigie, in all the Shires of Scotland, that they may be more easily discovered and apprehended, that none be deceived in harbouring of them, or communing with them, under false Names and Designations. And for the Encouragement of any Person or Persons to apprehend the said Murderers, We do hereby give Assurance to any who shall apprehend them, and present them to our Council, dead or alive, or shall so discover them, as that thereby they be apprehended, they shall be indemnified, and rewarded in the Sum of Ten Thousand Merks Scots Money; and in case of the Concourse of more Persons, by discovering, or joyning in the apprehending of them, the said Sum shall be divided amongst them; and in case any of the said Murderers be apprehended and taken, or discovered, so that thereby they may be taken by any Persons excepted in Our Acts of Indemnity, they shall also be indemnified (notwithstanding they fall within the Exception) and a Pardon shall be past for them under Our great Seal; and in case they apprehend John Laifour of Kinloch, and David Hackstoun of Rathillet, dead or alive, they shall not only have their Pardon

Pardon, but also the Reward aforesaid. Our Will is herefore, and we charge you straitly, and command that incontinent, these our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, as also to the Market-crofses of the head Burghs of the Sherifdoms, Haddingtoun, Linlithgow, Perth, Roxburgh, Selkirk, Berwick, Peebles, Dumfries, Stirling, Dumbartoun, Clackmannan, Lanerk, Renfrew, Air, Wigtoun, Fife, Stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and other Places needful, and there by open Proclamation, make publication of the said Circuit-courts to all Our Lieges and Subjects, wherethrough none pretend Ignorance of the same, that the said Circuit-courts are to be holden upon the Days, and at the Burghs and Places respective abovementioned; and that ye command and charge all Dukes, Marquisses, Archbishops, Earls, Lords spiritual and temporal, Barons, and others of Our Freeholders, who hold Lands of Us in chief, and ow Suit and Presence within the several Bounds, Shires and Precincts belonging to the said respective Circuit-courts, to compear before the said Commissioners, at the said Courts, upon, and at the Days and Places foresaid, with Continuation of Days, to do whatever in Law is incumbent, and ought to be done by them in that behalf: As also that ye command all and sundry the said Dukes, Marquisses, Earls, Lords spiritual and temporal, as also Lords of Regalities, Stewarts, Barons, Sheriffs, Justices of Peace, Bailies, Chamberlains, Magistrates and Ministers of Our Laws, and all subordinate Judges within Our Sherifdoms abovementioned, and whole Lieges of the same, that they, and every one of them, give all due Respect to Our Commissioners and Justices foresaid, and such special Assistance as to their Offices and Duty appertains, and as is incumbent to them by the Laws and Acts of Parliament of this Our ancient Kingdom, as they, and every one of them will answer upon the contrary, and under all highest Pain and Charge that after may follow. And particularly that ye command Our Sheriffs, that they cause sufficient and legal Men compear before Our said Commissioners at the foresaid Diets, and such Diets and Places as the said Commissioners shall appoint for Assizes and Witnesses, as they shall be cited to that effect. As also, that the said Sheriffs and Freeholders within the said Shires and Bounds, meet Our said Justices, at their Entry into the same, and convoy them into the same, and accompany them during their remaining there, ay and while they be received by Our next Sheriff and his Deputes, into the next Shire. And we ordain these Presents to be printed. Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Fourteenth Day of August, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

Supplication of the Presbyterians to the Duke of Monmouth, 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXXV.

AS we cannot but, in all humble and grateful Sense of his Majesty's Grace and Clemency, acknowledge God's Goodness to the poor distressed People of this Kingdom and Church, that he has put it in his Majesty's royal Heart to invest and authorize a Prince of your Grace's excellent Wisdom, heroick Valour, gracious Moderation, and sincere Affection to the true Protestant Religion, with Power to express and exercise his gracious royal Condescensions of Favour to his suffering and much afflicted Subjects here: So next to his gracious Majesty, whose Goodness and Clemency we most thankfully acknowledge in all the Favours conferred by your Grace, we judge our selves much obliged, with all dutiful Thankfulness, to testify our great and deep Sense of the gracious Favours your Grace has already manifested in your excellent Moderation, by the Tender of his Majesty's gracious Concessions for Peace, as also your tender Compassion to that pitiful broken Company, in hindring the Effusion of much Christian Blood, a Conjunction of Excellencies which is very rare in Persons of Power, and yet where it is, makes them most like to God, who, when he hath Power to destroy, yet is merciful and ready to pity and forgive; and does truly entitle your Grace to that noble and heroick Elogy, which Darius when conquered gave to Alexander, that he was most valiant valiant in the Fight, and moderate and merciful in the Victory: Whereas it is contrary with Men of baser Spirits. These signal Evidences of your Grace's Moderation and Clemency, do encourage us to lay down some Teaches of our great Grievances and Pressures at your Grace's and Excellency's Feet, that, through God's good Hand, you may mediate with his Majesty for some Ease and Redress of them, most of the saddest and heaviest of which are wholly unknown to his Majesty.

All nonconformist Ministers, a very few excepted, were turned out from their Charges, Dwellings and Livelihoods, for no other Cause than that they could not comply with Prelacy, against which they were engaged under so many strong and high Bonds, they found themselves under a Constraint of preaching the Gospel through an Obligation from their Office, without the least Disrespect to his Majesty's Authority or Laws; for the which Exercise of their Ministry some were taken, and kept long in hard and expensive Prisons. People, for hearing them, besides Imprisonment, pressed with great and exorbitant Fines; other Preachers, without any Citation known to them, were denounced, inter-communed, fined, confined, and banished; many, after long and grievous Imprisonments, sent away as Slaves to foreign Parts, and to serve in the Wars under the French King.

And when all these sore Pressures were laid upon Protestants for hearing and preaching of the Gospel, without any Disturbance of the Peace, there was a general Connivance at Popish Meetings very open and avowed, without the least Check and Controul.

There being several times some killed, only for hearing Sermon, when they had no Arms for their own Defence, and many taken; by the long Continuance of these Oppressions, which make wise Men mad, some were provoked to take Arms to the Fields, only for their Defence when they went to hear: But as we did not expect there should have been such a Rising in Arms, so we never counted our selves bound to approve the same as to any Extremities run to by some heady and turbulent Men, tho' many simple well-meaning People, under great Oppression were drawn in to joyn with them; for we are far from Jesuitick Principles, or German, Anabaptistick, fanatick Fury, and abhor all Assassinations and Murders made by private Persons, acted with such Principles of heady Violence. Such disorderly Practices are not to be imputed to Presbyterians or their Principles, all which are not only consistent with all due Subjection and Respect to Authority and Peace, but also do religiously tie and oblige thereto, according as it is held forth in the Scriptures of Truth, our Confession of Faith, and Catechisms, unto which we constantly adhere.

And it may be upon good Grounds averred, that neither the Persons running to any of these Extremities, nor the People who joyned with them, would ever have been so disorderly, if there had been any Allowance of Liberty for preaching and exercising of Discipline over these who were of the Presbyterian Way, as is allowed in some other of his Majesty's Kingdoms: Which as it can be no more inconsistent with Prelacy in Scotland than where it is granted; so there is far stronger Reasons for it from his Majesty's Interest here, and the Condition of his Subjects, who have had it confirmed by lawful Authority, have been under so many and strong Engagements to adhere thereunto, and have had so much Experience of the Good thereof, by their long continuing and merciful Enjoyment of it.

May it therefore please your Grace, out of the Bowels of Pity and Goodness, to commiserate our deeply distressed Condition, and improve the Favour you have with his Majesty, that we may yet breathe under the Shadow of his gracious Condescendence, in allowing Exemption from the grievous Pressures we are under, of oppressive Sentences, Imprisonments, and other grieving Executions of the Law; and that his Majesty may grant Liberty of preaching the Gospel, and Exercise of Church Order and Discipline, towards and over these of our own Perswasion, which will not in the least be prejudicial to civil Peace, or his Majesty's settled and quiet Government, but will be a Mean of preventing Church Disturbance, and Contusions which tend to the breaking of the civil Peace.

Which if the Lord shall incline his Majesty to grant, through your Grace's interposing, will bring the Blessings of many who are ready to perish, upon his Majesty and your Grace: And you shall be called the Repairers of the Breaches, and the Hearts of the good People of the Land will be so much the more knit and engaged to his Majesty's Person and Government, and to your Grace, as the Instrument whom God hath stirred up to effectuate it, and render his Majesty glorious, and your Grace renowned to all Generations.

N<sup>o</sup>. XXXVI.

CHARLES II. by the Grace of God, King of Scotland, England, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. To all and sundry Our good Subjects, whom these Presents do or may concern, Greeting: We having, with the Advice and Content of Our Parliaments, past so many Acts in favours of the Protestant Religion, against Field-conventicles, whereby our Subjects were withdrawn from publick Ordinances, in such ways as exposed them to hear Jesuits, or any other irregular Preachers, and were at last debauched to meet with Arms in formed Rebellions, We might have expected a most hearty Concurrence from all such as resolved to live religiously and peaceably in suppressing those Disorders: In place whereof, Magistrates having by their Negligence, and Masters by their Connivance, heightened those Distempers into a formed Rebellion, founded upon Extravagancies, inconsistent with the Protestant Religion and our Monarchy; which We having by the Mercy of God, and the Affection of Our Subjects, overcome so totally, that Our Clemency cannot be liable to any Misconstruction : We have therefore thought fit, with the Advice of Our Privy Council, to re-commend the vigorous Execution of all Our former Laws and Proclamations against such Removances of Rebellion; commanding hereby Our Judges, Magistrates and Officers of all Ranks and Degrees, to apprehend, condemn and punish all such as frequent any Field-conventicles, the Ministers by Death, and the Hearers by fining and otherwise, according to the Prescript of Our Laws; such as bear Arms there being to be demeaned as Traitors, conform to Our former Proclamation, dated the 13 Day of May last, and ordaining that all Masters shall be liable for presenting such of their Tenants, and such as live upon their Ground, to underly the Law in Our Justice-airs, conform to the sixth Act, Parl. 3. James V. As also We most peremptorily command all in Office under Us, to prosecute with all legal Rigour, those inhumane and execrable Murderers of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, and all such as have had Accession thereto, by concealing or resetting the Assassins. But we, being desirous to reclaim all such in that Our ancient Kingdom, as have been misled by Ignorance, or blind Zeal ( the Pretexes of Disorders ) and to convince all indifferent Persons, that too great Severity is as far from Our Design, as Our Inclinations, have, according to the Power reserved to Us by the Fifth Act and Second Session of Our Second Parliament, suspended the Execution of all Laws and Acts, against such as frequent House-conventicles in the low Countries, on the South-side of the River of Tay only, excepting always the Town of Edinburgh, and Two Miles round about the same, with the Lordships of Musselburgh, and Dalkeith. the Cities of St. Andrews, and Glasgow, and Stirling, and a Mile about each of them; being fully resolved, not to suffer the Seat of Our Government, nor Our Universities to be pestered with any Irregularities whatsoever. And for a further Evidence of Our Protection to all who resolve to live peaceably, We hereby suspend all Diligences for Fines upon the account of Conventicles, except such Fines as are imposed by Our Privy Council, and such Fines of inferior Judicatures, as were uplifted or transacted for, prior to the Twenty ninth of May last, and all Letters of Intercommuning, and other Executions, except in so far as concerns those who were Our actual Servants, or in publick Trust. But to the end, that none whom We may justly suspect, shall, under the colour of this Favour, continue to preach Rebellion, Schism and Heresie, We hereby ordain all such as shall be suffered to preach, to have their Names given in, and Surety found to Our Privy Council for their peaceable Behaviour, only one Preacher being allowed to a Paroch; and none to be allowed who have appeared against Us in this late Rebellion, nor none who shall be admitted by the unconform Ministers in any Time hereafter: Assuring all those to whom We have extended this Favour, that if they, or any of them, shall for the future frequent any Field-conventicles, or disturb the Peace of these Our Kingdoms; We will secure Our People, and maintain Our Authority and Laws by such effectual Courses as, in ruining the Authors, cannot be thought rigid, after so insufferable and unnecessary Provocations. This our Forbearance being to continue in force only during Our Royal Pleasure, as We shall see those Dissenters deserve Our Favour. And to the end all Our good Subjects may have notice of this Our Royal Will and Pleasure, We do hereby command Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Macers, Pursuivants, Messengers at Arms, to make Proclamation hereof, at the Market-cross of Edinburgh. Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the Twenty ninth Day of June, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

CHARLES, by the Grace of GOD, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To Macers, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: Forasmuch as We by Our gracious Proclamation of the Twenty ninth of June last, and a Letter under Our Royal Hand, direct to Our Council, relative thereto, of the Eleventh of July thereafter, having signified Our Desire to reclaim all such as have been misled by Ignorance, or blind Zeal, the Pretexes of Disorders, and to convince all indifferent Persons, that too great Severity is as far from Our Designs as Our Inclinations, We did, according to the Power reserved to Us by the first Act of the Second Session of Our Second Parliament, suspend the Execution of all Laws against such as frequent House-conventicles in the low Countries on the South-side of the River of Tay only, excepting always the Town of Edinburgh, and Two miles round about the same; with the Lordships of Musselburgh and Dalkeith, and the Cities of St. Andrews, Glasgow, and Stirling, and a Mile about each of them; and did suspend all Diligence for Fines upon the account of Conventicles, except such as were imposed by Our Privy Council, and such Fines of inferior Judicatures, as were uplifted or transacted before the Twenty ninth of May last, and all Letters of Intercommuning and other Executions; and did ordain, that all such as should be suffered to preach, to have their Names given in, and Surety found to Our Council for their peaceable Behaviour, only one Preacher being allowed to a Parish, and none to be allowed who appeared against Us in the late Rebellion, nor none who should be admitted by the unconform Ministers in any Time thereafter; which Ministers so allowed to preach, are also allowed to administrate the Sacraments. And where-as We are firmly resolved to have all the Acts of Our Grace and Mercy made effectual ( in the most favourable Sense ) to all these for whom they were intended by Us; and as already from Time to Time Caution hath been received for such Ministers, whose Names have been given in to Our Council; and upon Application to be made to them, Caution is to be received for such of the said Ministers, as are qualified conform to the Terms of Our Proclamation, who are desired to preach and administrate the Sacraments in any Parish in the Bounds therein express: So we thought fit hereby to declare, that We will not permit nor allow any to preach by Virtue of the Indulgence or Connivance contained in that Our Proclamation, unless their Names

Names be given in, and Caution found for them to Our Council, as aforesaid ; but will look upon and esteem them, and such Persons as resort to such irregular Meetings, as Persons disaffected to Our Authority, and Centemners of Our Grace and Clemency, and will proceed against all such with the utmost Severity of Law. Our Will is herefore, and We charge you strictly, and command that, incontinent these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and thereat in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises, that none may pretend Ignorance. Ordains these Presents to be printed. Given under Our Signet, at Edinburgh the Thirteenth Day of November, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

Proclamation anent the Rebels who have not yet taken the Bond, November 13. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXXVIII.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, To at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting: The rebellious and insolent Rising at Bothwell-bridge, was so far from hindring Us from continuing Our Clemency and Indulgence, to such as had so ill deserved of Us formerly, then when it was in Our Power to have extirpated that insolent and vitious Crew ; yet to convince the World and them, that Our former Favours had not proceeded from Force, but from Clemency, and being desirous that this Our Clemency should have at last convinced them, whom We were unwilling to destroy, because they were Our ancient and native Subjects, who if they were not strangely misled, should rather venture their Lives and Fortunes for Us, than for these vain and giddy Preachers, whom all the rest of the PROTESTANT Churches disown, and whose only Quarrel is, that We will not allow them to be themselves chief Rulers : We did by a most remarkable and unexpected Proclamation, not only enlarge Our Indulgences to those who had not been engaged in that execrable Rebellion, but even to those engaged therein ; requiring only of such as were not Heritors, or Ministers, that they should oblige themselves not to rise in Arms against Us or Our Authority. Notwithstanding whereof, a great Part of the said Rebels have not as yet taken the said Bond, though conceived in so gentle and easie Terms, and in which We designed as much the Security of their native Country as of Our own Authority. But because many of these who have not taken the Bond, do profess that their not taking of it was occasioned by Want of lawful Intimation, or by their Sickness, and that they have other legal Defences or reasonable Excuses ; and We being equally unwilling to preclude Our People from any legal Defence, and from offering their reasonable Excuses and Verifications thereof, or, on the other Part, to have Our Authority baffled by such as have even contemned Our Clemency : Therefore to prevent both these, We hereby command all Our Officers, both in Burgh and Land, and the Officers of Our Militia, and standing Forces, to seize and apprehend, and Our respective Judges competent to proceed according to Law, against such as were in the Rebellion, and who have not yet given in the said Bond before the Diets mentioned in Our last Proclamation, dated the Twenty seventh Day of July last ; or who shall not give in to Our Justices, betwixt and the first Day of January next, in the Year 1680. the said Bond with the Verifications of their reasonable Excuses, and thereby satisfy the Lords of Justiciary, that their not taking of it at the former Diet proceeded not from their Contempt ; indemnifying hereby fully such as not being Ministers or Heritors, and others not excepted in Our former Proclamations, as shall satisfy the Commissioners of Our Justiciary, and shall be allowed by them to take the said Bond in manner foresaid, and for ever excluding all such from Our Mercy and Favour, as have been in the said Rebellion, and have not either taken the said Bond before the Diets contained in Our last Proclamation, or shall not take the same betwixt and the Time foresaid : And We are confident all honest Men and good Christians will concur against those obstinate Rebels, as Enemies not only to Us, but to all human Society, and who now want the least Shadow of Pretext for Disobedience, or Irregularity. Certifying likewise hereby all Heritors who shall keep any of the said Rebels upon their Ground, or all others who shall harbour or reset them, that they shall be proceeded against with all the Severity that Law can allow, as Enemies to Us and their native Country. Our Will is herefore, and We charge you strictly, and command, that, incontinent these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-crofs of Edinburgh, and other Places needful, and there in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises, that none pretend Ignorance ; and ordain these Presents to be printed. Answer

Answer out of the West to a Question out of the North, 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XXXIX.

Wherein the Earth is opened, and the Napkin found; in which the trading Talent of the Nation hath been tied up, and lien hid for some Years last past; for Want of which, all Persons in England, from the Tenant to the Landlord, from the Weaver to the Merchant, have languished of a deep Consumption.

Sir Fr. Bacon, Ess. of Sedition and Troubles, Chap. 15. Pag. 85.

'Above all things good Policy is to be used, that the Treasure and Moneys in a State be not gathered into few Hands, for otherwise a State may have a great Stock, and yet starve; and Money is like Muck, not good except it be spread.'

Idem, Pag. 172. The Blessings of Judah and Issachar will never meet, that the same People or Nation should be both the Lion's Whelp, and the Ass between Two Burdens: Neither will it be, that a People overlaid with Taxes, should ever become martial and valiant.

Hist. of Bell and the Dragon, Ver. 8. So the King was wroth, and called for his Priests, and said unto them, If ye tell me not who it is that hath devoured these Expences, ye sha'l die. Ver. 20, 21. And the King said, I see the Footsteps of Men, Women and Children: And the King was angry, and took the Priests with their Wives and Children, who shewed him the privy Door where they came in, and consumed such things as were upon the Table.

S I R,

I Must beg your Pardon that I have so long tired your Expectations, and which is worse, have altogether failed them. except the few Scrapes you find in this Reply will stop the Mouth of your first Query; for as to the Four last, I have neither Time nor Capacity to send you any Thing that may claim the Title of a Resolve.

Yet that others more able, may contribute towards an Answer to your so seasonable and rational Demands, and that you may not think I have forgot them, I shall here insert them in Order, as you proposed.

Query 1. Whether the great Cause of impoverishing the Nation, Ruin of Trade, and general Consumption of Comfort, Settlement and Content, which hath brought the Land to a mere Anatomy, is not caused by the Pomp, Pride, Luxury, Exaction and Oppressions of the Prelates?

Query 2. Whether, since all other Reformed Churches in Europe did, upon the first Reformation and Departure from Popery, cast out all Diocesan Bishops, Name and Thing, Root and Branch, as an Office altogether Popish, together with all their Hierarchical Appurtenances, and do to this Day esteem of them no otherwise; why did not, or doth not England also do the like?

Query 3. Whether the several Reformed Countries beyond the Seas, did not take into the Hands of their Supreme Governors all the lordly Revenues of the Prelates, and reserve them for publick Use, or dispose Part of them to such Persons as had well deserved of them in the faithful Service of their Country; and if so, whether it might not be of good and great Concern to this Kingdom, for the Lordships and Baronies belonging to so many useless Persons, to be disposed of by publick Authority, for publick Good; and more especially for the honourable Maintenance of those worthy Persons and their Posterity, who have lost their Blood and Estates in the King's Service, and at present ly under great Discouragements, and bleeding Wounds in their Temporals, for Want of a suitable Recompence; whilst these, who, put them all together, never did half the Service, nor, if Occasion should require, never can, as one of these heruck Gentlemen, yet, as Ecclesiasticks, are rewarded with 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 Thousand Pounds per annum, a Man?

Query 4. Whether, in those Kingdoms and States where Prelacy is extirpated, and a Presbytery only retained, there be not as godly, able, orthodox Preachers, and as constant Preaching as in this Kingdom; and more especially, whether their Subjects are not as cordially obedient, and as free from any Rebellion, as in these Places, where Bishops are retained? and also, whether their Councils are not more free from Malediction, their Nobility and Gentry free from Affronts, and the Commonalty more free from Oppression, where the Prelates are disabled from sitting in Council, from pearking above the Nobles, and from imposing upon the Commons?

Query 5. Whether the present State of Affairs in our neighbour Nations, especially of France, who have a prodigious victorious Army, a Fleet still lying at Rochel, a fit Place from whence to invade us, and the great Industry of the Pope employed to divert their Arms from Spain, and turning them upon some other Design; whether, I say, it be not reasonable to consider of some Way to engage all Hearts and Hands in this Nation unanimously to oppose all Invasions, rather than to multiply Discouragements, upon the Body of the People by Episcopal Oppressions?

In answer to your first, I am by many Reasons induced to conclude in the Affirmative, that the Cause of impoverishing the Nation, Ruin of Trade, and general Consumption of Comfort, Settlement and Content, is caused by the Pomp, Pride, Luxury, Exaction and Oppression of the Prelates.

It is a true Maxim of the Learned Verulam, A smaller Number that spend more, and earn less, do wear out an Estate sooner than a greater Number that live lower, and gather more: So it is with an over-grown Clergy, for they bring nothing to the Stock.

That the trading Stock of the Nation is devoured in this Prelatical Gulf, I shall demonstrate, by laying open to View the black Back-door, and Sink that hath drained the trading Purse dry.

First. The Revenues, Pomp and State of the Prelates.

There are Two Provincial Archbishops, Canterbury and York; with their princely Retinue, domestick Chaplains, Chaplains, Officers for temporal Tithes, their spiritual Officers, Vicar-general, Guardian of the Spiritualities, Dean of the Archies, with all their Under-officers and Attendants.

Secondly. His Courts.

Court of Faculties. Court of Audience. Prerogative-court. Delegates.

There are Four and Twenty Bishops Diocesan, with their Trains, domestick Servants, Chaplains, Officers, and Courts.

To these belong 26 Chancellors, and their Attendants, 24 Registers with their Clerks, 24 Gentlemen Apparitors, 120 inferior Apparitors, 48 Proctors.

There are under these Bishops, 60 Arch-deacons, and these have 60 Courts, to which belong Commissaries, Officials, Surrogates, 60 Registers, 120 Proctors, 200 Apparitors.

So that the Number belonging to Archbishops, Bishops, Arch-deacons, and their Trade, are judged to be no less than Ten thousand Persons; which will require, for their Maintenance, Two hundred thousand Pounds per annum, reckoning them at Twenty Pounds a Man; whereas some of them have One hundred Pounds, some Two hundred Pounds, some Four hundred Pounds, squeezed out of the poor People. As for their standing Rents, they are well known.

Their lordly Palaces, sumptuous Houses, Ecclesiastical Dignities, Baronies, &c. viii & modis, such is their Income, that it amounts at least to Four hundred and fifty thousand Pounds a Year.

They have many other Ways to enrich themselves, and impoverish the Nation; as

First. By ordaining Deacons and Ministers Four Times a Year for Money, by which they put up yearly Hundreds of Pounds.

Secondly. By instituting and inducing Parsons and Vicars to Benefices when they fall; for every such Institution and Induction they have Three Pounds at least. And in England there are 9285 Parishes; so that at the rate of one in a Parish, it amounts to Twenty seven thousand eight hundred fifty five Pounds.

Thirdly. By making rural Deans yearly, and for the Oath taking, they pay Eight Shillings and Six pence.

Fourthly. By granting Licences to beneficed Ministers, to preach in their own Cures: Though they be ordained before, and strictly commanded to preach, yet they must not do it without a Licence, and this Licence costs them Ten Shillings, so that in 9285 Parishes, this comes to Four thousand six hundred forty two Pounds ten Shillings.

5. By granting, {
     1. Licences to Curates to preach;
     2. Licences for Schoolmasters to teach School.
     3. Licences for Parish-clerks.

     4. Licences to Physicians to practise Physick.
     5. Licences to Midwives to do their Office.
     6. Licences to marry, which Thing of it self arileth to a vast Revenue.

For absolving excommunicated Persons.

For putting Men to clear themselves by Oath, with their Compurgators.

For Commutation of Penance; for so the Rich come off with a round Sum of Money, but the Poor doing their Penance in kind, must stand excommunicated until they have paid their Fees.

Sixthly. By Probates of Wills, and granting Letters of Administration, which brings in constantly great Sums of Money.

Seventhly. By framing new Articles, and forcing Church-wardens to present upon Oath, whereby many innocent Persons are brought into their Courts, and squeezed both in Conscience and Purse; and so is the Church-warden also, if he do not take the Oath prepared for him.

By their Visitations for Money.

First. Church-wardens of every Parish in England and Chapel, are called, who receive a Book of Articles to present by; if any are wanting, they are warned to appear at their Courts with Costs: These Church-wardens pay for their Book of Articles every Year, (though the very same) as also for writing their Presentments by a Clerk (which they themselves could do, but are not permitted) Two Shillings four Pence; which in 9285 Parishes comes to One thousand fifty eight Pounds odd Money, yearly.

Secondly. Ministers that are licensed, pay one Shilling eight Pence, or thereabouts, for shewing their Licence to preach, to the Register, at every Bishop's Visitation, though seen and allowed before; after that Four Shillings for Procurations, to the Bishop; and to the Gentleman Apparitor eight Pence, though most pay twelve Pence.

I shall omit the poor Curates Suit and Service at this Court, only let you know, that when any Archbishop comes newly to York, all the Parsons and Vicars in his Jurisdiction, though never so poor, and their Charge never so great, give him a Tenth of their Livings for a Benevolence, to help the poor Bishop to settle himself in Five or six thousand Pounds a Year; and if any, yea, the meanest Vicar, whose poor Children want Bread, do through Poverty omit the Payment, this Reverend Father doth pitifully whip him to the very Bones, in his merciless spiritual Court.

By Arch-deacons Visitations.

These are Twice a Year. At Easter-Visitation the Ministers pay their Paschal Rents, or Synodals, which Sums are not alike to all; some pay 56, some less.

At Michae'mas they pay Procurations; some seven Shillings, some ten Shillings, some less. But it is judged that Ministers pay yearly at Visitations, Five thousand Pounds, and upwards.

By

By the vast Charges in collegiate Churches.

There are Twenty six great Deans with their Attendants and Servants, Five Hundred and Forty four Canons, Residents and Prebendaries, with a numerous Train of Vicars, Petty-canon, singing Men and Boys, Choristers, Organists, Gospellers, Epistlers, Virgers.

Now this jovial Crew have belonging to them, about Four Hundred thousand Pounds yearly, in Lands, Rents, Leases, and other Revenues and Profits thereunto belonging.

The excessive Expences that many Thousands of the trading People of the Nation are put unto, by the rigorous and tyrannical Proceedings of the Bishops, in excommunicating Persons, for Threepence, Sixpence, and very trivial Things.

A Catalogue may shortly be presented to you of the many Families already undone by them; wherein it will be made manifest, that more Families have been ruined, more Persons imprisoned, more Money spent by the Cruelty of the Prelates Proceedings, than by all Law Suits in all Courts of Judicature, all Payments and Taxes whatsoever, except upon the late extraordinary Occasion.

The vast Sums of Money that the Bishops, Deans, &c. have treasured up, extorting it from the Subjects for Fines.

You know, that for Twenty Years, some Time bypast, their Revenues were alienated, and sold for great Sums of Money to the Natives of England. Those who bought them had greatly improved them, who, being some Thousands of Families, are undone by being turned out without any Consideration. The Bishops enter at a Time when most of the old Leases were expired, they proclaim their Markets; he that gives most, Friend or Foe, he shall be taken Tenant. They screw up the Value to the Height; and hereby they have drained out of the People's Purses, such Sums of Money, that amounts to so monstrous a Mass, that scarce any Prince's Treasury in Europe is able to balance it. In the mean Time, the Money that before ran current in trading, is dammed up in their Coffers.

Hereby the Money that should carry on Trade, is ingrossed into the Hands of a few rusty Ecclesiasticks, who neither serve our Lord Jesus Christ, nor their Country, but their own Bellies; and hoard up the Riches that should be, as the Blood in the vena porta, to be distributed into every Vein and Part of the Body; but by being choked up in their Corban, brings the whole Nation into a Consumption.

And it is very considerable, that, in all other Trades, Men have Something for their Money. The Farmer hath good Lands for his Money from the Gentleman; the Clothier hath good Wooll from the Farmer for his Money; the Merchant hath good Cloth from the Clothier for his Money, and thus it goes round to every one's Benefit: But pray, what have we from the Bishops for our Money? The Answer will readily be made by the major Part of the Land.

First. We have all our able, godly, orthodox Ministers turned out, ruined and beggared, and no Manner of Supply provided for the Maintenance of them and their Families; and in their Rooms, in many Places, a Company of debauched, illiterate, superstitious, profane Priests; which blind Guides must needs lead them that follow them, to Hell.

Secondly. We have gotten most of our Church-wardens perjured, that do swear to present according to their Visitation Articles, and most of them undone that do not swear; altho' the imposing of such an Oath is a Breach of the fundamental Laws of the Land. Those Church-wardens that are not perjured, but pursue the Oath in persecuting their Neighbours, are plunged into such horrid Guilt, that, without serious Repentance, they must perish eternally; for they persecute the godly for Godliness sake, the righteous for Righteousness sake, as will appear in these following Instances.

1<sup>mo</sup>. If a Minister, never to godly and able, yea, tho' ordained, preach without a Licence from the Bishop, the Church-warden is bound to present him, and bring him into Trouble: If he preach in a Cloke, and not in a Garment canonical, he is bound to do the like.

2<sup>do</sup>. If any Person go to hear a Sermon from his own Parish Church, tho' there be no preaching Minister there, nor no Sermon at all, and tho' he be bound by his Vow in Baptism to hear Sermons, this Man is to be presented.

3<sup>tho</sup>. If a poor Man, that hath not Bread for his Family, but what he earneth by his daily Labour; if he work upon a holy Day, appointed by Romish Institution, he is to be presented.

4<sup>tho</sup>. If any Person, coming to Church to their Service, do not stand up at the Creed, do not bow at the Name of Jesus, do not keep off his Hat all the while, he must be presented.

Now there are in all, Threescore and Fourteen thousand Church-wardens and Sidesmen in England every Year, and what a dreadful Thing is it to have all these yearly, either perjured, Persecutors or persecuted?

Thirdly. We have gotten most of the sober trading Part of the Nation discouraged by Citations, Excommunications, Writs to take them excommunicated, Imprisonments upon ecclesiastical Accounts: By this Means, Thousands of Families are already ruined, and many Hundreds are ready to leave the Land, and remove into some other Country, where they may have Liberty of Conscience, and Freedom from these devouring Harpies.

Fourthly. We have got, instead of the Gospel in the Power and Purity of it, a Service collected out of the Romish Books, the Mass, Breviary, &c. which Service of ours King James called an ill sung Mass. We have got Surplices, Caps, Tippetts, Cringings, &c. out of the Romish Rituals, insomuch that the Papists themselves call it, an apish Imitation of the Mass.

Fifthly. We have gotten a Swarm of ecclesiastical Officers, which the Scriptures never knew, nor reformed Churches ever owned.

Sixthly. We have got a Sort of proud Prelates, of mean Extract, not of the highest Rank for Godliness, Learning and Labour in the Word, nor the greatest Champions for the Protestant Religion; witness their Silence at such a Time, when Popery hath so travailed to bring forth so many Popish Books printed and published in England, in Affront and Contempt of the reformed Religion, yet few of our Bishops have stood up in Opposition to their Design, nor printed any Caution against Popery, or Answer to the Popish pernicious Pamphlets. However very elate they are, affronting our Nobility, trampling upon our Gentry, grinding to Powder all that put not into their Mouths, or offer not at their Shrine: Insomuch, that a Gentleman of Quality, a Person of 3000 L. per annum, speaking to one of the said Prelates (lately dead) boldly, but with due Respect; the Prelate, in a Fume, answered, What, Sir, do you think that it is fit for every Jack-gentleman to speak thus to a Bishop? deriding the Gentry of our Land, as not worthy to speak to a peevish Prelate. Surely a Gentleman of 500 L. per annum would have fallen under Censure for presuming to speak to his Postillion.

We have gotten all Manner of Misery to Soul and Body, Plague, Fire, Sword, universal Beggary, and, without seasonable Mercy, the total Ruin of the whole Kingdom: But I know you will question, whether our Miseries do arise from the Cause assigned?

To this I answer. The manifold provoking Sins of the Land, as Adultery, Blasphemy, Swearing, Idolatry, Perjury, and Contempt of God and Godliness, do pull hard with Heaven to bring down desolating Judgments. But that the nearest Cause of our Impoverishments ariseth from the Particulars forementioned, will appear, if you weigh the Premises before inserted, and give them Leave to speak their own Conclusion. If Perjury causeth a Land to mourn, if Oppression and rigid Persecution upon the trading Part of a Land beggers Discontent and Deserting of Trade; if rigorous Exacting, and sordid Hording up the Money that should run current in Trade, and that by such who contribute Nothing to the publick Weal, be the Bane of Traffick, and the Famishment of the poor Handicraftsman, then we may lay all our Calamities at the Bishops Doors.

I shall call in some credible Witnesses, Divines and Martyrs, to confirm this Truth, and so leave it with you. Bishop Jewel on Hag. i. records out of Johannes Parisiensis, and others, That when Constantine the Great advanced Bishops, and endowed the Church with Lands and temporal Possessions, there was a Voice of Angels heard in the Air, saying, Hodie venenum infunditur in Ecclesiam, This Day Poison is poured into the Church.

Bernard writes, Since Prelates increased in worldly Pomp, chusing the first Places in the Church, they have been the chiefest in persecuting Jesus Christ, and have ever shewed themselves not Teachers but Deceivers, not Pastors but Impostors, not Prelates but Pilates, succeeding, not Peter in teaching, but Romulus in murdering.

Lord Cobham, that faithful Martyr, faith to the Bishops, No Ground have ye in all the Scriptures, so lordly to take it upon you, but in Annas and Caiaphas, who sat in Judgment upon Christ and his Apostles; of them only have you taken it to judge Christ's Members as ye do.

Mr. Tindal, that godly and learned Martyr, writeth, Wo to the Realm where Prelates are of the Council! As profitable is the Prelacy to the Realm with their Council, as Wolves to the Sheep, or Foxes to the Geese; for there is no Mischief or Disorder, whether it be in the temporal Regiment, or Spiritual, whereof they are not the chief Causes, and even the very Fountain and Spring; so that it is impossible to preach against any Mischief, except thou begin at them, or to set up any Reformation in the World, except they are first reformed. They are as obdurate as Pharaoh, and therefore persecute they God's Word, and the Preachers thereof. They stir up Mischief in the World, setting Princes to War. They get into the Consciences of Kings, and persuade them what they list, neither can any King have Rest for them. They pretend they are for God and the Church, but their secret Intent is to bring all under their Power; and when they once are set high, then are they Tyrants above all Tyrants.

Mr. John Frith, that worthy Martyr, in his Answer to Mr. Moor's Preface. Since Sylvester received such Possessions, hath the Canker so crept into the Church, that it hath almost left never a sound Member: Then, instead of God's Word, they preached their own Commandments, and made Laws to have all under them: And even, as in the Rooms of Moses, Aaron, Joshua, Caleb, and other such faithful Leaders, came Herod, Annas, Caiaphas, Pilate, and Judas, which put Christ to Death; so now instead of Christ, Peter, Paul, James, John, and the faithful Followers of Christ, we have Popes, Cardinals, Archbishops, and proud Prelates, with their Proctors, and malicious Ministers of their Master the Devil, whose End shall be according to their Works.

Dr. Barnes, in his Supplication to Henry VIII. Now it is so far come, that whosoever he be, high or low, rich or poor, wife or foolish, that speaketh against the Prelates, and their vicious Living, he is either made a Traitor to your Grace, or an Heretick, Enemy, or Schismatick against holy Church; as tho' the Prelates were Kings or Gods: And if any Man, out of God's Law and right Conscience, speak against their damnable Tyranny, little will they stick to make him an Heretick; and if that will not help to colour and maintain their Oppression, then add they Treason, Sedition, Rebellion, and Contempt of your Grace, tho' he be never so true a Subject.

I shall conclude with a Passage of learned Mr. Tindal, in his Obedience to a Christian Magistrate, p. 114, 128, 146. As thou canst heal no Disease except thou begin at the Root, even so canst thou preach against no Mischief, except thou begin at the Bishops. Whether Judas was a Priest or no, I care not; but of this I am sure, that he now is not only Priest, but also a Bishop, Cardinal and Pope. Bishops that preach not, or that preach ought save God's Word, are none of Christ's, nor of his Anointing, but Servants of the Beast whose Mark they bear, whose Word they preach, whose Law they maintain, clean against God's Law. Bishops they are that can only minister the temporal Sword, [their Office, the preaching of God's Word laid aside; which they will neither do themselves, nor suffer any Man else to do, but slay with the temporal Sword (which they have gotten out of the Hands of all Princes) them that would. The Preaching of God's Word is hateful to them. Why? for it is impossible to preach Christ, except thou preach against Antichrist, that is to say, them who, with their false Doctrine, and Violence of Sword, enforce to quench the true Doctrine of Christ. Our Prelates ought to be our Servants, as the Apostles were, to teach us Christ's Doctrine, and not Lords over us, to oppress us with their own Doctrines and Inventions.

Letter, Council to the King, July 11. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XL.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

AS our Zeal and Faithfulness, in your Majesty's Service, shall ever be valued by us, as our greatest Honour, as well as most bound Duty, so we most humbly acknowledge your Majesty's gracious against all Manner of Difficulties and Opposition. A fresh and signal Instance of your Royal Justice, Wisdom and Goodness in owning your Majesty's Authority and Judicatures, we have this Day received by a Letter from the Duke of Lawderdale, wherein your Majesty is graciously pleased to order us to enquire after the Authors, Contrivers, Writers, Spreaders, and other Accessories to a late infamous Libel, whereby the Proceedings, both of the Privy Council and of the Session, are grossly misrepresented, defamed and slandered, and to proceed against them according to Law and Justice; whereunto (as to all other your Royal Commands) we shall be careful to pay diligent and exact Obedience, and to return your Majesty a clear Account thereof.

Upon this Occasion we must crave Leave to flee to your Majesty's Justice, that you would not suffer our Integrity and Zeal in your Service to be, with Impunity to the Defamers, represented to the World as our greatest Crimes, nor allow private Subjects to assume to themselves the Boldness of arraigning your own Prerogative, and of judging the Actings and Proceedings of your eminent Judicatures, as criminal, without receiving Punishment due to such hainous Offences.

Your Majesty's Royal Ancestors have piously and prudently provided against all such scandalous and dangerous Attempts upon the Monarchy and Government, by making good and wholsom Laws against all Calumny and Slanderers (by Word or Writ) of the King's Person or Government, or of his Privy Council, or their Proceedings, and against all such as endeavour (by Word or Writ) to misconstrue, or misrepresent publick Administrations, as thereby stirring up the Subjects to Milking, Sedition and Unquietness.

And therefore a scandalous and calumnious Libel, under the Title of Some particular Matters of Fact, relating to the Administration of Affairs in Scotland under the Duke of Lawderdale, &c. having been some Weeks ago dispersed here in Writing, many Copies whereof are now sent hither, published and printed, from London; which, tho' it would seem, by its Title, to be levelled against the Duke of Lawderdale, (of whose great Usefulness, Integrity and Faithfulness for the Interest of this Kingdom, and your Majesty's Service in it, you have had so long Proof and Experience) yet, in its whole Strain, we humbly conceive, it tends to the Defamation of your Majesty's Government in this your ancient Kingdom, and doth highly reflect on your Majesty's own Royal Wisdom and Actings, as well as on these Proceedings of your Council here, which your Majesty hath graciously owned and authorized, which therein are represented as illegal and arbitrary; and that in another Kingdom, the Subjects whereof may be as easily abused and deluded by such Misrepresentations, as they are utterly unacquainted with the Laws and Customs by which we are governed. We therefore, unless we would tamely betray your Majesty's Authority, and expose your eminent Judicatures to Contempt, and so render both useless for serving the Ends of Government, cannot, but with great Grief, complain to your Majesty of this high Injury and Affront done to your Privy Council, and most humbly supplicate and beseech your Majesty's Justice against the Authors, Contrivers, Framers, Writers, Spreaders, Printers, and all others who shall be found accessory to this calumnious and injurious Libel.

We shall not doubt but your Majesty will be graciously pleased to command this Justice to be done to your faithful Servants and Judicatures, so insolently invaded, when it is so humbly prayed by us, who shall never fail to observe the Prescript of the Laws in all our Actings and Proceedings towards your Subjects, as to maintain your Majesty's just Authority, and Royal Prerogative inviolable, against all the Adversaries thereof. Thus, praying for your Majesty's long, peaceable and prosperous Reign over us, we beg Leave, in all Humility, to subscribe our selves and most loyal Subjects and Servants.

Your Majesty's most humble, most faithful,

And your Majesty ordains this Commission to continue during your Majesty's Pleasure alienably, and ordains these Presents to be extended, &c.

Proclamation against the Murderers of the Archbishop, September 20. 1679. N<sup>o</sup>. XLII.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith: To Our Lovely
Maces, Pursevants, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. We taking to Our Consideration, how much the Protestant Religion, and the Honour of this Our ancient Kingdom are stained by that barbarous and horrid Assassination and Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, whereof We have, by several Proclamations, expressed Our Abhorrency, and prohibited the Reset of these Murderers, whom We have excepted from Our late gracious Pardon and Indemnity: And albeit it was the Duty (not only of those in Authority under Us,) but of all Our Subjects, to use their Endeavours for discovering and bringing to Justice these execrable Persons, Enemies to all humane Society; yet We understand, that these Murderers, and likewise divers Heritors and Ministers, who were engaged in the late Rebellion, and are excepted from Our Indemnity, have been harboured and reset in some Places of this Kingdom, to the great Reproach of the Nation, and Contempt of Our Authority and Laws. Therefore, We, with Advice of Our Privy Council, do command and charge all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Regalities and Bailiaries, and their Deputes, Magistrates of Burghs, and others in Authority under Us, to search for, seek, take and apprehend the Persons afternamed, viz. John Balfour of Kinloch, David Hackstoun of Rathillet, George Balfour in Gilstoun, James Russel in Kettle, Robert Dingwall a Tenant's Son in Caddam, Andrew Guilan Webster in Balmerinloch, Alexander and Andrew Henderson Sons to John Henderson in Kilbrachmont, and George Fleming Son to George Fleming in Ba'butly, who did perpetrate and commit the said horrid Murder; and also, any Heritors and Ministers who were in the late Rebellion, and any Persons who have reset and harboured these Murderers and Rebels, wherever they can be found within the Bounds of their respective Jurisdictions, and put them in sure Ward and Firmance, until they be brought to Justice; and in case these Persons flee out of the Shire, that they give Notice thereof to the Sheriff, or other Magistrate of the next Shire or Jurisdiction, that they may, in like Manner, search for, apprehend, and secure them, until they brought to Justice. With Power to the Sheriffs, and other Magistrates aforesaid, if they shall find Cause, to call to their Assistance Our Subjects within their Jurisdiction, or such a Number of them as they shall think fit, who are hereby required to concur with, and assist them, under all highest Pain and Charge. And We expect, that the Sheriffs and other Magistrates aforesaid, will use exact Diligence in the Premises.

Premises, as they will be answerable on their highest Peril. And seeing, by the Fifth Act of the Second Session, and the Second Act of the Third Session of Our First Parliament, the Magistrates and Councils of Burghs are ordained, at and before their Admissions to the Exercise of their Offices, to sign the Declaration appointed to be signed by all Persons in publick Trust, under the Certifications therein exprest: Therefore We, with Advice foresaid, do command and require the Magistrates and Councils of the respective Burghs of this Kingdom, who shall be chosen at the next ensuing Elections, to sign the foresaid Declaration, as is prescribed in the said Acts, and to return the Declarations, so signed by them, to the Clerks of Our Privy Council, betwixt and the Third Thursday of November next; certifying such as shall not give Obedience, that they shall be proceeded against, and censured conform to the said Acts of Parliament. Our Will is herefore, and We charge you strictly, and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and remanent Market-crosses of the head Burghs of the several Shires of this Kingdom, and other Places needful, and there, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises, that none may pretend Ignorance of the same. And We ordain these Presents to be printed.

Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the Twentieth Day of September, 1679. and of Our Reign the Thirty first Year.

Will. Paterson Cl. Secr. Councili.

God save the King.

Report about the Model of the Militia, December 18. 1679. No. XLIII.

THE Report underwritten, anent the new Model of the Militia, being read, was approven, and it was recommended to the Committee appointed to consider that Affair, to meet and see what is further to be done thereanent, in pursuance of his Majesty's Commands, signified by his Letters to the Council, of which Report the Tenor follows.

The Committee finds, that, by Two several Acts of Parliament, there is Offer made to his Majesty, of 20000 Foot, and 2000 Horse; that the Privy Council did enact several Things, by way of Instructions, concerning this Militia, in the Year 1668. and especially, that they should rendezvouze for Exercise, Five Days ilk Year: The Committee considered, that no less than Ten Days was possibly necessary for Five Days Exercise, in respect of coming and going, and that Eighteen Shillings Scots is appointed for ilk Horseman, and Six Shillings Scots for ilk Footman of the said Days. They find these Instructions approven and ratified in Parliament, in the Year 1669. and, by the same Act, further Power is granted to the Council, to appoint Rendezvouzes as they should find expedient; yet they do not find, that the Council has hitherto added any more Days than formerly.

They likewise find, that his Majesty, by his gracious Letter the 26 of October 1678. looking on the 22000 Men, as too great a Number to be frequently withdrawn from their Employments, did, for the Ease of the Subjects, propose that only 5000 Foot, and 500 Horse, should rendezvouze for Exercise; and, to the end those might be effectual, and fitted for the King and Country's Service, proposed, that they should exercise Four Days each Month: But, in his Royal Wisdom and Goodness, taking Care that the Subjects should not be put to more Expence, than by their own Consent in Parliament they had already consented to, hath not proposed that the Council should add any more Expences upon the account of Rendezvouzes, but that the Days already appointed for the 22000. may be converted to maintain 5500 for an equivalent Number of Days; and if more Days be requisite for Exercise, that his Majesty is to pay therefore. As also, that, out of his Majesty's Treasury, he will order yearly Salaries for such Officers as shall be necessary for exercising these Regiments and Troops in military Discipline, for the common Safety of King and Country. To the which Proposal the Committee find, that the Privy Council, on the 14 Day of November 1678. did give their unanimous Approbation, and dutifully returned the same with a just Cast of the said 5500 Men on the several Shires of the Kingdom, in the Proportion of the Militia, according to the Act of Parliament; and likewise his Majesty, by his Letter of the 10 of December instant, hath recommended the said Proposition to the Privy Council, with his Royal Pleasure, desiring the same to be made speedily effectual; which being committed, it is the humble Opinion of the Committee, that the Proportions already casten on each Shire are just and equal; and as to the Expences to be paid by the Country, in respect that his Majesty proposes that the whole should rendezvouze Two Days each Year, so that there remains only Eight Days of the Number hitherto appointed, and that his Majesty has signified his Royal Will, not to burden the Subjects with any Addition to what is already appointed.

It is their Opinion, that, in place of the Eight Days for 22000 Men, the Country should pay Thirty two Days to 5500 Men, according to the Rates allowed in the Act of Parliament; and if his Majesty appoint any more Days, that they be paid by his Majesty; and that his Majesty would commission such Officers as he thinks fit, and that so soon as his Majesty pleases; that after they are appointed for their several Charges, they may receive Instructions from the Council to the Commissioners of the Militia in the several Shires, to make the said Model effectual, as is proposed; and if his Majesty pleases to dispense with the Two Days of the general Rendezvouze of the whole, in that case that the Country should pay Forty Days to the Model, at the foresaid Rates, which is, with all Humility, left to his Royal Pleasure.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ire'land, Defender of the Faith:
To all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects whom it effeirs, Greeting. Forasmuch as We, by Our gracious Act of Indemnity of the 27 of July last, did indemnify, remit and pardon all such as were guilty of Field-conventicles, all such as were in the Rebellion in the Year 1666. or in the late Rebellion, in the Year 1679. Which Indemnity contains divers Exceptions; and particularly, that these who were in the Rebellion should, within the Space therein exprest, enact themselves never to carry Arms against Us, or Our Authority; and with exprest Condition, that, if ever they should be at any Field-conventicles, or should do any Violence to Our orthodox Clergy, Our said Indemnity should not be useful to such Transgressors any manner of way, as in the said Act, at more length, is contained: And whereas We are informed, that, since the granting of Our said Indemnity, divers Persons who were in the Rebellion, and did not enact themselves in manner foresaid, and others who have enacted themselves, have, notwithstanding thereof been present at Field-conventicles, whereby they have forfeited the Benefit of Our Indemnity, and deserve to be exemplarily punished; and considering, that, by the great Throng of Affairs now in Dependence before Our Justice-court at Edinburgh, the said Persons cannot be so soon and readily brought to a Trial; We therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, do hereby make and constitute

Our Justices in that Part, to the Effect underwritten, with Power to them, or any of them, to call before them any Person or Persons apprehended, or that shall be apprehended within for being at any Field-conventicles, who were in the late Rebellion, and did not take the Bond within the Time limited to that Effect, or, having taken the Bond, have forfeited Our Indemnity by being present at any Field-conventicles; as also any Person or Persons, who, albeit they were not in the Rebellion, are taken, or shall be taken at a Field-conventicle in Arms, excepting only such Heritors who are to be forfeited in the Justice-court at Edinburgh, and to put the said Persons to the Trial and Knowledge of an Assize, and according as they shall be found innocent or guilty, that they cause Justice be administrate upon them, conform to the Laws of this Our Realm; and for that Effect to fence and hold Courts, create Sergeants, Dempsters, and other Members of Court needful, to call Assizes and Witnesses as oft as need is, Absents to amerciate, Unlaws and Amerciaments to uplift and enact, and this Our Commission to continue and endure until . . . It is hereby declared, that this Our Commission shall be good and valid to the Effect foresaid, notwithstanding the Persons to be judged are guilty of Acts of Treason and Rebellion, and that the same shall no ways be prejudicial to any Right, Power, or Privilege of Jurisdiction competent to Our Justices, Sheriffs, Stewarts, and other Judges, as accords of the Law.

Edinburgh, eodem die & anno.

Tenor of the Commission for proceeding against Persons guilty of Field-conventicles, and other Disorders mentioned in the said Letter.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith:
To all and sundry Our Lieges and Subjects whom it effeirs, Greeting. Forasmuch as We, by Our gracious Proclamation of the 29 of June last, having signified Our Desire to reclaim such of Our Subjects as have been misled by Ignorance or blind Zeal, did, conform to the Power reserved to Us by the First Act of the Second Session of Our Second Parliament, suspend the Execution of all Laws against such as frequent House-conventicles within the Bounds and upon the Limitations therein exprest, and ordained, that all such as should be suffered to preach, by Our Indulgence, to have their Names given in, and Surety found to Our Council for their peaceable Behaviour; and, by another Proclamation of the 13 of November last, as We declared that We would have all the Acts of Our Grace and Mercy made effectual in the most favourable Sense to all for whom the same was intended, so We would not permit any to preach by virtue of the Indulgence or Connivance contained in Our said Proclamation, unless their Names were given in, and Caution found, as aforesaid, but would look upon and esteem them, and such as should resort to their irregular Meetings, as Persons disaffected to Our Authority, and Contemnners of Our Grace and Clemency, and proceed against them in the utmost Severity of Law. And whereas We are informed that, in divers Places of the Kingdom, several outed Ministers take upon them to preach without having their Names given in to Our Council, or Caution found for their peaceable Behaviour; and some of them have proceeded to that Height, as again to preach in the Fields, in great Contempt of Our Authority and gracious Proclamations; and to the effect these disorderly Persons, both Preachers and Hearers of them, may be brought to Justice, and suffer condign Punishment according to Our Laws, We, with Advice of Our Privy Council, do hereby give and grant full Power, Authority and Commission to Our Justices of Peace within the Shire of . . . or any . . . of them, to put in Execution the several Laws and Acts of Parliament made against Field-conventicles, and disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, and particularly the Fifth and Sixth Acts of the Second Session of Our Second Parliament, and, to that effect, to call before them the Persons, within the said Shire, guilty of the contravening thereof, since Our late gracious Act of Indemnity, or that shall happen hereafter to contravene the same, at such Times and Places as they shall think expedient, create Clerks and other Members of Court needful, to issue forth Precepts and Citations against the Persons guilty, Probation to receive and adduce, Decrees and Sentences to pronounce, and the same to due Execution cause be put, by Precepts and Charges thereupon, Poynding and other Diligence, according to Law: And for their Encouragement in the said Service, to uplift and apply the said Fines for defraying their own, and the Charges and Expences of the Court, and this Our Commission to continue and endure . . . And it is hereby declared, that this Commission, Power and

and Jurisdiction therein granted, is cumulative, and not privative of the Sheriff of the Shire, or other Judges within the same, their Power and Jurisdiction, but that they may proceed, and try, and judge in the Cases foresaid, if they shall prevent the said Commissioners in Diligence, by prior Citations and Sentences.

Letter, Council to the King, anent Lord Cardross, February 12. 1680. N<sup>o</sup>. XLV.

Most sacred Sovereign,

HAVING seen a Paper presented to your Majesty by the Lord Cardross, entituled, A short Account of his Sufferings, in which he represents, among other Articles, that he was fined in considerable Sums through the Misrepresentation of some, for his Lady's hearing her Chaplain only preach in her own House; which Chaplain, we cannot forbear to inform your Majesty, was one Mr. John King, a Person so eminently seditious, that he was one of the prime Incendiaries and Ringleaders of the late Rebellion, and for which Treason he was forfeited and executed. To satisfy your Majesty, in what was clearly proved against the said Lord Cardross, we have sent to you the Sentence of Council pronounced against him, whereby your Majesty will clearly perceive the Equity of our Procedure, and the Unreasonableness of his Clamour against us. This being the true State of this Affair, in which there was but too much to be said against the Lord Cardross, and in which there was more Care and Pains taken, and Endeavours used by the Council, than in most Cases of that Nature (we being only concerned in asserting your Royal Authority) we humbly conceive, that when your Majesty considers the Sentence of Council pronounced against that Lord, you will find how much he hath suppressed the Truth, and suggested that which is false, and humbly remit to your Majesty's great Prudence, what Course is fittest for vindicating of your own Authority, and for preventing such Misrepresentations of us your Servants, we being, in all Humility,

Your Majesty's most humble, most faithful,

and most obedient Subjects and Servants.

WE Undersubscribers, for our selves, and all that shall adhere to us, or joyn with us, being put to it by God, our own Consciences, and Men, and following the Examples of God's People, registrate in his Word in such Cases; we are resolved (having acknowledged and obtained Mercy, we trust, for our former Breaches of Covenants with God) to bind our selves with a solemn and sacred Bond, lest upon the one Hand, we should be carried away with the Stream of the Defection of this Time, that neither minds bypast Vows, nor intends Performance, but are going a quite contrary Way of seeking their own Things: And on the other Hand, lest we should wander, vanish into Vanity, and come to nothing, not having any fixed Limits and End proposed to our selves; and as we resolve to covenant with and before God, so to declare before the World, what are the Designs we propose to pursue, if God shall give us Power and Success, that Men (knowing) if they will know, our inward Thoughts and utmost End, and our Way from the one to the other, may not be at a Trouble or Uncertainty to find us out, and may have no Occasion to misjudge, nor misrepute us that are Friends, and those that have the Glory of God before their Eyes (as we may have no Cause to be jealous of our Intentions) and that our Enemies with their associate Backsliders (sometimes professed Friends) may not have Ground to load us with foul and odious Aspersions, but that all knowing the Truth of Things, those who oppose the Kingdom of God with us, may do it without Excuse, and those who joyn with us, may do it on solid Grounds and in hazarding their perishing, or Lives, may know they do not die as Fools: It is true the Unmindfulness, Failing, Counteracting, and Mocking that has been in our former Vows and Covenants with God, together with great spiritual Judgments that have followed both upon Professors and Ministers, and the great temporal Judgments that are like to follow follow, puts us to some Stop; so that we cannot but with much Trembling of Heart renew our Covenant, or engage a new, especially considering our own Weakness and Hazard; yet the clear Conviction of Duty, Zeal to God's Glory, and Love to Christ's reigning, which is the highest and greatest Duty that a Man can perform to God, trusting in his Mercy, who knows the Integrity and Rightness of our Intentions, will both instruct, enable, accept, preserve and prosper us: We go on declaring those, and nothing but those to be our present Purposes.

First. We covenant and swear, That we acknowledge and avouch the only true and living God, Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, to be our God, and that we cleave with his Way of Redemption by his Son Jesus Christ, and rely upon his Righteousness, as that Righteousness only whereby a Man can be justified before God; and that we acknowledge the Scriptures of the Old and New Testament to be by divine Revelation, and to contain the Will of God to Man, and anent Men; and that we take those Scriptures to be the only Object Matter of our Faith, and Rule of our Conversation in all Things, and that we do give up our selves to God, to be renewed, instructed by his Grace, and ruled in all Things by his Spirit according to his Word, and shall earnestly endeavour to render him that Love, Worship and Obedience that his Word requires, and his Goodness obliges us to.

Secondly. That we shall, to the utmost of our Power, advance the Kingdom of God (if at any Time God shall give us Power) by establishing throughout the Lands, Righteousness, and the true reformed Religion, in the Truth of its Doctrine, in the Purity and Power of its Worship and Ordinances, its right Government and Discipline, and that we shall free the Church of God from the Tyranny and Corruption of Prelacy on the one Hand, and the Thralldom and Encroachments of Erasianism upon the other Hand; and that we shall, to the utmost of our Power, relieve the Church and our Brethren, the Subjects of this Kingdom (God authorizing and calling us to this, by his raising us up, and giving us Power and Success in removing those who by their Transgression have forfeited their Authority) of that Oppression that hath been exercised upon their Consciences, civil Rights and Liberties, that Men may serve God holily without Fear, and possess their civil Rights peaceably without Disturbance.

Thirdly. That we confess with our Mouth, and believe with our Hearts, that the Doctrine of the reformed Churches, especially that of Scotland, contained in the Scriptures, summed up in our Confessions of Faith, and engaged to by us in our Covenants, is the only true Doctrine of God, and that we purpose to persevere in it to the End; and that the pure Worship required and prescribed in the Scriptures, without the Inventions, Additions, Adornings, or Corruptions of Men, is the only true Worship of God, and the Presbyterian Government, exercised by lawful Ministers and Elders in Kirk-sessions, Presbyteries, Synods and General Assemblies, is the only right Government of the Church, and that this Government is a distinct Government from the Civil, and ought distinctly to be exercised, not after a carnal Manner by the Plurality of Votes, or Authority of a single Person, but according to the Word of God; so that the Word makes and carries the Sentence, and not Plurality of Votes.

Fourthly. That we shall endeavour, to our utmost, the Overthrow of the Kingdom of Darkness, and whatever is contrary to the Kingdom of Christ, especially Idolatry and Popery in all the Articles of it, as we are bound in our National Covenants, Superstition, Wilt-worship and Prelacy, with its Hierarchy, as we are bound in our solemn League and Covenant, and that we shall with the same Sincerity endeavour the Overthrow of that Power (it being no more Authority) that hath established, and upholds that Kingdom of Darkness, that Prelacy, to wit, and Erasianism over the Church, and hath exercised such a lustful and arbitrary Tyranny over the Subjects, taking all Power in their Hand, that they may at their Pleasure introduce Popery in the Church, as they have done arbitrary Government in the State. And in a Word, that we shall endeavour the Extirpation of all the Works of Darkness, and the Relicks of Idolatry and Superstition (which are much enlarged and revived in those Times) and execute righteous Judgment impartially (according to the Word of God, and Degree of Offences) upon Committers of those Things, especially, to wit, the Blasphemy, Idolatry, Atheism, Sorcery, Perjury, Uncleanness, Profanation of the Lord's Day, Oppression and Malignancy, that thus being zealous of God's Glory, he may delight to dwell in the midst of us.

Fifthly. Seriously considering, that the Hand of our Kings, and Rulers with them, hath been of a long Time against the Throne of the Lord, and that the Lord, upon this account, has declared that he will have War with them for ever, and has commanded his People utterly to root them out; and considering that the Line and Succession of our King and Rulers hath been against the Power and Purity of Religion, and Godliness, and Christ's reigning over his Church, and its Freedom, and so against God, and hath degenerate from that Virtue, Moderation, Sobriety and good Government, which was the Tenor and Right by which their Ancestors kept their Crowns (for when they left that, they themselves were laid aside, as our Chronicles and Registers do record) into an idle and sinful Magnificence, where the all and only Government is to keep up their own Absoluteness and Tyranny, and to keep on a Yoke of Thralldom upon the Subjects, and to squeeze from them their Substance to uphold their lustful and pompous Superfluities: We having no better nor greater Way at this Time of manifesting our publick siding with, and loving of God, nor seeing a more speedy Way of Relaxation from the Wrath of God (that hath ever lien heavy on us, since we engaged with him) but of rejecting of them, who have so manifestly rejected God (especially of late) and his Service and Reformation, as a Slavery, as they themselves call it in their publick Papers, especially in their late Letters to the King and Duke of Lawderdale, disclaiming the Covenants with God, and blasphemously enacted it to be burnt by the Hand of the Hangman, governed contrary to all right Laws divine and humane, exercised such Tyranny and arbitrary Government, so oppressed Men in their Consciences and civil Rights, used free Subjects, Christian and reasonable Men, with less Discretion than their Beasts, and so not only frustrate the End of Government, which is, that Men may live peaceably and godly under them (this being the End of Government, to maintain every one in their Rights and Liberties against Wrongs and Injuries) but have done directly opposite to it, by enacting and commanding Impieties, Injuries and Robberies, to the denying of God his Due, and the Subjects their Godliness and Peace: So that instead of Government, Godliness and Peace, there is nothing but Rapin, Tumult and Blood; so that now it cannot be called a Government, but a lustful Rage, exercised with as little right Reason, and more Cruelty nor in Beasts; and they themselves can no more be called Governors, but publick Grasslators, and publick judgments, which all ought to set themselves against, as they would do against Pestilence, Sword and Famine raging raging among them ; for they are like those, and bring those : And as they have exercised no good Government, nor administered Justice, so on the other Hand, they have stopped the Course of Law and Justice against Blasphemers, Idolaters, Atheists, Sorcerers, Murderers, incestuous and adulterous Persons, and other Malefactors ; and instead of rewarding the Good, have made Butcheries and Murders upon the Lord's People, sold them as Slaves, imprisoned, forfeited, fined, banished, &c. and that upon no other Account, but for maintaining Christ's Right of ruling over their Consciences, against the Usurpations of Men, for fulfilling their Vows, repelling unjust Violence (which innocent Nature allows every Creature) of all which Particulars we can give (we speak before God) innumerable and sure Instances.

But that we may see if there be any Thing that stands in our Way, there are but three Things that seem to have Weight that we know. First. Whether the Deed and Obligation of our Ancestor, can bind us. Secondly. Whether the Covenant doth bind us either to this Man or his Posterity. And Thirdly. Whether there yet be any Hope of them and their Posterity.

1. As to the First. Our Ancestors their Transactions and Obligations neither did, nor could bind us, they did not buy their Liberty and Conquest with our Thralldom and Slavery ; nor could they, Liberty and Freedom being a Benefit next to Life, if not in some Regard above it, that they could not give it away more than our Lives, neither is it in the Power of Parents to bind their Posterity to any Thing that is so much to their Prejudice, and against their natural Liberty. It is otherwise indeed in Things moral. Neither did they bind us to any Thing but to a Government, which they then esteemed the best for the Common-wealth and Subjects ; and when this ceaseth, we are free to choose another, if we see it more conducive for that End, and more free of these Inconveniencies. 2dly. The Covenant doth not, for it only binds us to maintain our King in the Maintenance of the true established and covenanted Religion ; and this we have not : Neither can they require Homage upon the account of the Covenant, having renounced and disclaimed that Covenant : And we being no otherwise bound, the Covenant being the Coronation Compact, without the swearing and sealing of which our Fathers, or rather we our selves refused to receive him for King, and them for Rulers ; and if they were free to refuse him for King, upon the account of not subscribing of that Covenant, we are much more free to reject him upon his renouncing of it, this being the only Way of receiving the Crown of Scotland ; and reigning also, not being an Inheritance that passes from Father to Son without the Consent of Tenants, but an (and the more Men plead for this, the more we are concerned to look to it) Office, which, all say, is given ad culpam, non ad vitam. And for the 3d. Neither is there any Hope of their Return from these Courses, having so often shewed their Natures and Enmities against God and all Righteousness, and having so oft declared and renewed their Purposes and Promises of persevering in those Courses ; and suppose they should dissemble a Repentance of those Things, and profess to return to better Courses, being put to Straits, and for their own Ends (for upon no other Account can we reasonably expect it : ) Supposing also, that there might be Pardon for that which is done, which we cannot see can be, without the Violation of God's Law, and the laying on of a great Guiltiness upon the Land, for the omitting of the Execution of so deserved and so necessarily requisite a Justice, from which Guiltiness the Land cannot be cleansed or made free, but by executing of God's righteous Judgment upon them : But supposing that it might, they cannot now be believed, after they have violated all Ties that human Wisdom can devise to bind Men. And besides, who sees not somewhat of Folly to be in this, to think to bind a King that pretends to Absoluteness ? The Way being thus cleared, and we being sure of God's Approbation and Mens, whose Hearts are not utterly biased, and Conscience altogether corrupted, and knowing assuredly, the upholding of such, is to uphold Men to bear down Christ's Kingdom, and to uphold Satan's, and to deprive Men of right Government and good Governors, to the ruining of Religion, and undoing of human Society. And seeing also the innumerable Sins and Snares that are in giving Obedience to their Acts upon the one Hand ; and upon the other Hand, seeing the endless Miseries that will follow if we shall acknowledge their Authority, and refuse Obedience to their sinful Commands ; we then upon those, and the following Grounds, do reject that King, and those associate with him in the Government (stated and declared Enemies to Jesus Christ) from being our King and Rulers, because standing in the Way of our right, free and peaceable serving of God, propagating his Kingdom and Reformation, and overthrowing Satan's Kingdom according to our Covenants, declare them to be henceforth no lawful Rulers, as they have declared us to be no lawful Subjects, upon a Ground far less warrantable, as Men unbiassed will see : And that after this, we neither own, nor shall yield any willing Obedience to them, but shall rather suffer the utmost of their Cruelties and Injuries (until God shall plead our Cause) being no more bound to them, they having altered and destroyed the Lord's established Religion, overturned the fundamental and established Laws of the Kingdom, taken away altogether Christ's Church-government, and changed the civil Government of this Land, which was by a King and free Parliament, into Tyranny, where none are associate to be Partakers of the Government but only those who will be found by Justice to be guilty of Criminals, and where all others are excluded, even those who by the Laws of the Land, and by Birth, have a Right to, and a Share in that Government, and that only because they are not of the same Guiltiness and mischievous Purposes with themselves. and where also all free Elections of Commissioners for Parliaments, and Officers for Government, are made void, they making those the Qualifications for Admission to those Places, which by the Word of God, and the Laws of the Land, was the Cause of their Exclusion before. So that none can say that we are now bound in Allegiance unto them, unless they will say, we are bound in Allegiance to Devils, whose Vicegerents they are, having neither Authority from God (because it is by their Sinfulness forfeited) nor yet judging nor ruling for God.

We then being made free by God and their own Doings, (he giving the Law, and they giving the Transgression of that Law, which is the Cause) and being now loosed from all Obligations both Divine and Civil to them, knowing also, that no Society of Men, having Corruption in them (which always is ready to beget Disorder, and to do Injuries, unless restrained and punished by Laws and Government) can be without Laws and Government, and withal desiring to be governed in the best Way that is least liable to Inconveniencies, and least apt to degenerate into Tyranny : We do declare, That we shall set up over our selves, and over what God shall give us Power of, Government and Governors according to the Word of God, and especially that Word, Exod. xviii. 21. Moreover thou shalt provide out of all the People, able Men, such as fear God, Men of Truth, hating Covetousness, and place such over them, to be Rulers of Thousands, and Rulers of Hundreds,

Rulers of Fifties, and Rulers of Tens. That we shall no more commit the Government of our selves, and the making of Laws for us, to any one single Person, or lineal Successor, we not being by God, as the Jews were, bound to one single Family; and this Kind of Government by a single Person being most liable to Inconveniencies, and aptest to degenerate into Tyranny, as sad and long Experience hath taught us.

Moreover we declare, That those Men whom we shall set over us, shall be engaged to govern us principally by that civil and judicial Law (we think none will be so ignorant as to think, by the judicial Law we mean that which is ceremonial or typical) given by God to his People of Israel, no Man, we think, doubting, but it must be the best so far as it goes, being given by God; and we having no Body of Law of our own, but some few imperfect Acts of Parliament, and sometimes following the Canon, and sometimes the Feudal, and sometimes the Civil, which occasions great Contentions among the People, especially those who are naturally litigious, to the exhausting and inhancing of the Substance of the Kingdom to some few Men, and squeezing of its Inhabitants, but especially that we shall be governed by that Law in Matters of Life and Death, and all other Things also, so far as they reach, and are consistent with our Christian Liberty established in all Christendom (only violated by our Tyrants and some others of late) excepting only that of Divorce and Polygamy, the one being not a Law, but a Permission granted upon the account of the Hardness of their Hearts, the other being a sinful Custom, contrary to the first Institution of Marriage, crept into the Church. We know that Men of malignant and perverse Spirits, who have not a higher God than a wicked King, which suits only with their lustful Licentiousness, and it may be others with them, that seemed to be of better Principles, will raise an ignorant Clamour upon this, that it is a fifth Monarchy, and we fifth Monarchy Men, and will labour to amuse the People with strange Terms, and put odious Names on good Things to make them hateful as their Way is; but it this be their fifth Monarchy, we both are, and ought to be such, and that according to God's Word.

Sixthly. It being the Work of the Ministers of the Gospel to preach, propagate and defend the Kingdom of God, and to preserve the Doctrine, Worship, Discipline, Government, Liberties and Privileges of the same from all Corruptions and Encroachments of Rulers and all others; and seeing that the Ministers of the Church of Scotland, at least the greatest Part of them by far, not only were defective in preaching and testifying against the Acts of Rulers, for overthrowing Religion and Reformation, abjuring our Covenant with God, establishing a Government in the Church, which their King calls his own Government (and so is not God's) contrary to our Covenant, against enacting of that blasphemous (so Calvin calls that Supremacy of Henry VIII. upon which this Prerogative is formed, and from which it is derived, and is no less, if not more injurious to Christ, and enslaving to his Church) and sacrilegious Prerogative, given to a King over the Church of God, and against their other Acts and Encroachments upon his Church, and hindred others also who were willing, and would have testified against them, and censured some that did it (for which, together with other Faults in their Trust and Administration, we may say God hath left them to do worse Things) but also have voted in that Meeting (which they are pleased to call An Assembly of Ministers, but how unjustly, let Men judge) an Acceptation of that Liberty founded upon, and given by virtue of that blasphemous, arrogated and usurped Power, and has appeared before their Courts to accept of that Liberty, and to be enacted and authorized their Ministers, and so have willingly (for this is an elicite Act of the Will, and not an Act of Force and Constraint) translated the Power of sending out, ordering and censuring (for, as they accepted the Liberty from them, so they are answerable and submit to their Censures and Restraints, at least, all of them who were yet tried with it, and others of them appeared, and acknowledged before their Courts, that they would not have done these Things that they were charged with, if they had thought it would have offended them) Ministers from the Court of Christ, and Subjection to the Ministry to the Courts of Men, and Subjection unto the Magistrate (which had been impious and injurious to Christ, tho' they had been righteous and lawful Rulers) and by their changing of Courts (according to common Law) have changed their Masters, and of the Ministers of Christ are become the Ministers of Men, and bound to answer to them, as they will; and as, by the Acceptance of this Liberty in such a Manner, they have translated the Power, so they have given up and quit utterly the Government, and a Succession of a Presbyterian Ministry, for as those were not granted them of their Masters, so they received their Ministry without them, and by this (as the ecclesiastick Government is swallowed up in the civil) if the rest had followed them, the Ministry should have been extinct with themselves, and the whole Work of Reformation had been buried in Oblivion, and not so much as the Remembrance thereof kept up. Those, together with the other of their Commissions, in preaching the Lawfulness of paying that Tribute, declared to be imposed for the bearing down of the true Worship of God (which they falsely termed Seditious Conventicles, Rendezvous of Rebellion) and their advising those poor Prisoners to subscribe that Bond, and consequently could not but so advise others, if put to it (for the Hazard Men were in will not make a real Change of the Morality of the Action) and besides, the rest may be put to it upon the same Hazard; and if the one should advise (which consequently they must do) and the other should subscribe, this would altogether close that Door, which the Lord hath made use of in all the Churches of Europe, for casting off the Yoke of the Where, and restoring the Truth and Purity of Religion and Reformation, and Freedom of the Churches, and should also have stopped all Regrets of Men, when once brought under Tyranny, to recover their Liberty again. Those Ministers then not being Followers of Christ, who, before Pontius Pilate, gave a good Confession, which was that he was a King (and no King, if he have no Power to order his House and Subjects) and they not following him nor his Ministers, they not asserting and maintaining this his kingly Power, against all Incroachments and Usurpers of it; and besides, we being commanded, if any Brother walk disorderly, from such to withdraw: And altho', in the Capacity that we are now in, we neither have, nor assume to our selves Authority to give out definitive and authoritative Sentence of Deposition against those Ministers; yet we declare (which is proper for us to do) that we neither can nor will hear Preaching, nor receive Sacraments from any of those Ministers that have accepted, and voted for that Liberty, nor from any who have encouraged and strengthened their Hands by hearing and pleading for them, all those who have trafficked for an Union with them, without their renouncing and repenting of those Things, all that do not faithfully testify against them, and after do not deport themselves suitably to their Testimonies, all who joyn not in publick with their Brethren, who are testifying against them.

We declare, that we shall not own, &c. at least till they stand in Judgment before those Ministers, and be judged by them who have followed the Lord, kept themselves free of those Defections, or at least have repented; and as our Hearts have cleaved to those Ministers, while they were on the Lord's Side, and subjected to them, so we shall still cleave to those that abide following him, and shall be subject to them in the Lord.

Seventhly. Then, we do declare and acknowledge, that a Gospel Ministry is a standing Ordinance of God, appointed by Christ to continue in the Church until the End of the World; and that none of us shall take upon him the preaching of the Word, or administering of the Sacraments, unless called and ordained thereto by the Ministers of the Gospel: And, as we declare, that we are for a standing Gospel-ministry, rightly chosen and rightly ordained, so we declare that we shall go about this Work in Time to come with more be chosen and ordained, the Want of which formerly has been a great Sin, both in Ministers and People, which hath not been the least Cause of this Defection. This will meet with the same Measure as the former. The former was a Fifth Monarchy, so this will be a Separation. There is both Malice and Ignorance in this Calumny. Malice in striving to make us odious; for there is Nothing that will make us more odious to the World, than to tell them we think our selves more holy than all, and will have no Communion with others: But we abhor such Thoughts, and whatever we know of our Sincerity, yet we know Nothing of our Perfection, and so see Nothing whereupon we may compare, much less exceed others, but the contrary; and if any were to be shut out upon that account, we judge our selves would be the first. There is Ignorance in it, if not a deep Deceit; for Separation, as the Scripture and Divines take it in an evil Sense, cannot be attributed to us; for if there be a Separation, it must be where the Change is, and that is not in us; we are not separating from the Communion of the Church, and setting up new Ordinances, and a new Ministry, but cleaving to the same Ministers, and following the same Ordinances, when others have slidden back to new Ways, and have a new Authority superadded, which is like the new Piece in the old Garment.

Eighthly. We bind and oblige our selves to defend our selves, and one another in our worshipping of God, and in our natural, civil and divine Rights and Liberties, till we shall overcome, or send them down under Debate to the Posterity, that they may begin where we end; and if we shall be pursued or troubled any farther in our worshipping, Rights and Liberties, that we shall look on it, as a declaring War, and take all the Advantages that one Enemy doth of another, and seek to cause to perish, all that shall, in an hostile Manner, assault us, and to maintain, relieve and right our selves of those that have wronged us, but not to trouble or injure any, but those that have injured us, those being most lawful for us, being many that are wronged upon such an account, and by such Persons who have Nothing now over us, but Power and usurped Authority, which we shall neither answer nor acknowledge, if we can do otherwise, hoping that God shall break off that Part of the Yoke, and free us of that Power and Tyranny, that we have cast off upon his account, and will give us Judges as we had at the Beginning, and Counsellors as we had at the first.

Sanquhar Declaration, 1680. N<sup>o</sup>. XLVII.

IT is not amongst the smallest of the Lord's Mercies to this poor Land, that there have been always some who have given their Testimony against every Course of Defection, (that many are guilty of) which is a Token for Good, that he doth not as yet intend to cast us off altogether, but that he will leave a Remnant in whom he will be glorious, if they, through his Grace, keep themselves clean still, and walk in his Way and Method, as it has been walked in and owned by him in our Predecessors of truly worthy Memory, in their carrying on of our noble Work of Reformation in the several Steps thereof, from Popery, Prelacy, and likewise Erastian Supremacy, so much usurped by him, who ('tis true so far as we know) is descended from the Race of our Kings, yet he hath so far deborded from what he ought to have been, by his Perjury and Usurpation in Church Matters, and Tyranny in Matters civil, as is known by the whole Land, that we have just Reason to account it one of the Lord's great Controversies against us, that we have not disowned him and the Men of his Practices, (whether inferior Magistrates or any other) as Enemies to our Lord and his Crown, and the true Protestant and Presbyterian Interest in thir Lands, our Lord's espoused Bride and Church. Therefore, altho' we be for Government and Governors, such as the Word of God and our Covenant allows, yet we for our selves, and all that will adhere to us, as the Representative of the true Presbyterian Kirk, and covenanted Nation of Scotland, considering the great Hazard of lying under such a Sin any longer, do by thir Presents disown Charles Stuart, that has been reigning (or rather tyrannizing, as we may say) on the Throne of Britain these Years bygone, as having any Right, Title to, or Interest in the said Crown of Scotland for Government, as forfeited several Years since, by his Perjury and Breach of Covenant both to God and his Kirk, and Usurpation of his Crown and Royal Prerogatives therein, and many other Breaches in Matters Ecclesiastick, and by his Tyranny and Breach of the very leges regnandi in Matters Civil. For which Reason, we declare, that several Years since he should have been denuded of being King, Ruler or Magistrate, or of having any Power to act, or to be obeyed as such. As also, we being under the Standard of our Lord Jesus Christ, Captain of Salvation, do declare a War with such a Tyrant and Usurper, and all the Men of his Practices, as Enemies to our Lord Jesus Christ, and his Cause and Covenants; and against all such as have strengthened him, sided with, or any wise acknowledged him in his Tyranny Civil or Ecclesiastick, yea, against all such as shall strengthen, side with, or any wise acknowledge any other in the like Usurpation and Tyranny, far more against such as would betray or deliver up our free reformed Mother-kirk unto the Bondage of Antichrist the Pope of Rome. And by this we homologate that Testimony given at Rutherglen the 29 of May 1679. and all the faithful Testimonies of these who have gone before, as also of these these who have suffered of late. And we do disclaim that Declaration published at Hamiltoun June 1679. chiefly because it takes in the King's Interest, which we are several Years since loosed from, because of the foresaid Reasons, and others, which may after this (if the Lord will) be published. As also, we disown, and by this resent the Reception of the Duke of York that profest Papist, as repugnant to our Principles and Vows to the most high God, and as that which is the great, tho' not alone, just Reproach of our Kirk and Nation. We also by this protest against his succeeding to the Crown; and whatever has been done, or any are essaying to do in this Land (given to the Lord) in Prejudice to our Work of Reformation. And to conclude, we hope after this none will blame us for, or offend at our rewarding these that are against us, as they have done to us, as the Lord gives Opportunity. This is not to exclude any that have declined, if they be willing to give Satisfaction according to the Degree of their Offence.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith :
 Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Macers, Purservants and Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting, Forasmuch as Mr. Richard Cameron, Cameron his Brother, Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Donald Cargil, and others their Accomplices, have now at last shaken off all Respect to Our Laws, and their Allegiance it self to Us their undoubted Sovereign, and have entred into expresse and open Combinations and Covenants, wherein they most sacrilegiously do by a solemn Oath, engage themselves to disown Us and Our Authority, and declare it not only lawful, but a Christian Duty upon all Our Subjects, to rise in Arms against Us, and to murder such as are in any Trust or Employment under Us, declaring Us an Usurper, and that none should obey them who are in Authority under Us, but such as would obey the Devil and his Vicegerents, and that they will choose and set up Magistrates who shall govern them according to the judicial Law of Moses, and not according to the Laws made by Us or any of Our Predecessors: Which Covenant, with several most impious, scandalous and seditious Pamphlets, were taken from the said Mr. Donald Cargil (one of their Preachers) at the Queensferry, upon the Third Day of June instant. Likeas, the said Mr. Richard Cameron, and his Brother, and Mr. Thomas Douglas, accompanied with several Ruffians, and particularly John Vallange, Brother in Law to Robert Park one of the Bailies of Sanquhar, Dame Macmitchel in Lorgfoot, Thomas Campbel Son to Campbel late of Dalblair in Auchinleck Parish, John Moodie Brother to the Miller at Cubs-mill in the same Parish, John Fowler sometimes Servant to the deceased Lindsay of Coxington, Patrick Gamil Son in Law to Charles Logan Messenger at Cummock Mains, James Stuart Son to Archibald Stuart at Causey-end, near to the Earl of Galloway's House, Alexander Gordon called of Kisture, Francis Johnston Merchant in Chydale, Crichton Son to Robert Crichton of Auchintinch, now in Water-head, and others, to the Number of Twenty one Persons, did, upon the 22 of June, enter within the Burgh of Sanquhar, with drawn Swords and Pistols in their Hands, and after a solemn Procession through the Town, did draw up at the Cross, and published and affixed upon the Cross and other publick Places thereof, a most treasonable and unparalleled Paper, disowning Us to be their King, and defaming Us with the very same Names and Designations used by the Usurpers in their greatest Rage, after they had murdered the King. Our Royal and blessed Father of eternal Memory, and overturned all the fundamental Laws and Rights belonging to Us and Our Subjects, whose Principles and Footsteps they exactly renew and follow. The reading and affixing of which Proclamation, by these Traitors and Rebels, being clearly proved to Our Privy Council by Witnesses upon Oath; and it being notour and undeniable, that these Traitors, to the Number of Seventy, or thereby, continue in Arms, committing all Manner of Outrages and Insolencies: We have therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, thought fit, as Use is in such Cases, to declare the said Mr. Richard Cameron, Cameron his Brother, Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Donald Cargil, John Vallange, Daniel Macmitchel, Thomas Campbel, John Moodie, Patrick Gamil, James Stuart, Alexander Gordon, Francis Johnston and Crichton, open and notorious Traitors and Rebels against Us and Our Authority, empowering and requiring all Our good Subjects to treat them as such; and particularly we hereby require and command all our good Subjects, as they will be answerable upon their Allegiance, to do their utmost Diligence to discover the said Traitors, and to give timely Intimation with all possible Speed, in case they be not able to seize and apprehend them themselves, to the nearest Officer of Our standing Forces, (if any be within Twelve Miles) and if none be within the said Distance, to the next Magistrate, commanding all Persons to concur with Our Forces for apprehending the said Traitors. And to the effect the Harbourers and Refetters, or those who neglect to discover them, may be known and punished, We do require the heirs, or their Bailiffs, or Chamberlains in case of the Heirs Absence, to cause call and cite before them in a Court, all Persons living upon their respective Lands, Men or Women, above the Age of Sixteen Years, in all the Parishes underwritten, viz. Carsphairn, Balmacellan, Dalry, Kells, Bar in Carrick, the Moor-kirk of Kyle, Gallstoun, Lowdon, Tindergarth, Strerian, Leismahago, Sanquhar, Irongray, Glencairn, Cummock, Manigaff, and Penningham, upon the second and last Tuesdays of July and August next; and to take the Oaths of all the said Persons living upon the respective Lands, whether any of these Traitors foresaid were in that Parish, and where and when: And lest they may pretend not to know the said Traitors, that they discover upon Oath any skulking or lurking Persons, which they have known to have been in that Parish, after the Publication hereof in the respective Shires, and the Heirs or their Bailiffs, and Chamberlains in their Absence, to give an Account of their Diligence in Writing, within Eight Days after each Diet foresaid, to the Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Regalties, Magistrates of Burghs, and shall adjoyn thereto the following Declaration upon Oath.

I do solemnly swear by the eternal God, that I have truly and faithfully examined upon Oath, the whole Persons, Men and Women, living upon my Lands, who compeared, who are above the Age of Sixteen Years, whereof I am Heritor, Bailiff, or Chamberlain, within the Parish of _____, and that I caused my Officer give Execution upon Oath, that he did cite all the said Persons to the foresaid Diets, and have given an Account of the Persons who compeared not, or, compearing, refused to give Oath.

And in case the said Traitors should leave and dishaunt the abovenamed Parishes, and repair to other Parishes or Places, that immediately, upon Notice from the Lieutenant General, or any authorized by him, the said Magistrates are ordained to make Intimation to the Heritors, or their Bailiffs, or their Chamberlains in their Absence, to the end they may make the same Enquiry after the same Way and Method, and to return an Account of their Diligence, within Two Months after such Intimation from the Lieutenant General, as aforesaid; with Certification to such as compear not and depone, shall be holden and repute as Connivers at, and Concealers of the said Traitors; and that the Heritors, or, in their Absence, their Bailiffs and Deputes, and the said Magistrates, who shall not return their Accounts to the said respective Magistrates, as aforesaid, or their Day in August, for their Diligence in July, and the first Council Day of September, for their Diligence in August, shall be proceeded against with all Rigour, as Connivers at, and Concealers of the said Traitors. And further, We do hereby require and command all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Regalities, and Magistrates of Burghs where the said Traitors use to haunt or resort, to raise such Persons in their respective Jurisdictions, as they shall find necessary for that Service, for whom they will be answerable; and that the Sheriffs and other Magistrates aforesaid, require the Assistance of the Commissioners of the Militia, in their respective Jurisdictions; and to search for, take and apprehend the said Traitors in their respective Bounds; and in case they flee forth thereof, to advertise the neighbouring Sheriffs, and other Magistrates, who are appointed to do the like Diligence, conform to the 144 Act, 12 Parl. King Jam. VI. And if in pursuit of the said Traitors, they resisting to be taken, any of Our said Magistrates, or other Our good Subjects, shall happen to kill or mutilate them, or any of them, We do hereby declare, that they, nor none assisting them, shall ever be called in question, or pursued civilly or criminally therefore in Time coming; but that these Presents shall be as sufficient for their Exoneration, as if they had Our special Remission, and that their doing thereof shall be repute good and acceptable Service done to Us. And for the better Encouragement of such as shall apprehend and bring in the said Traitors dead or alive, the Apprehender of Mr. Richard Cameron shall, as a Reward, have Five Thousand Merks; and for Mr. Thomas Douglas, Mr. Donald Cargill, and for the said Cameron Brother to Mr. Richard, who read and affixed the said traiterous Declaration at Sanquhar, Three Thousand Merks for each of them, and One Thousand Merks for each one of the rest of the Traitors abovementioned, to be instantly paid to them by the Commissioners of Our Treasury. And ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and Market-crosses of the remanent head Burghs of the several Shires of this Kingdom on the South Side of the Water of Tay, and other Places needful, by the Sheriffs of the respective Shires aforesaid, that none pretend Ignorance.

Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh, the last Day of June 1680. and of Our Reign the Thirty second Year.

Rathillet's Account of Airs-mofs. N<sup>o</sup>. XLIX.

WE, getting Notice of a Party out seeking us, sent Two, on Wednesday Night late, to know their Motion, and lay on a Moor-side all Night, and Thursday, about Ten Hours, we went to take some Meat, and sent out other Two, and desired them to consult with the first Two, who had not come to us, but were lying down to sleep, who all Four returned and told us, it was unnecessary to send any for Intelligence, they having secured it. Whereupon, after we had gotten some Meat, we came to a Piece of Grass, and lay down, and presently we were all alarmed that they were upon us, and so making ready, we saw them coming fast on, and that about Three or Four Hours in the Afternoon, and each one resolving to fight, I rode off to seek a Strength for our Advantage, and being desired by a Country Man to go into such a Place for the best Strength, I went, and they followed; but coming to it, I found we could go no further, and so turning and drawing up quickly, Eight Horse on the right Hand with R. D. and Fifteen on the left with me, being no more, the Foot not being Forty, and many of them ill armed, in the Midst, I asked all if they were willing to fight, who all said, Yes, especially J. G. The Enemy advanced fast, whom I took to be above an Hundred and Twelve, well armed and horsed, who sending first about Twenty Dragoons on Foot, to take the Wind of us, which we seeing, sent a Party on Foot to meet them, and the rest of us advanced fast on the Enemy, being a strong Body of Horse coming hard on us, whereupon, when we were joyned, our Horse fired first, and wounded and killed some of them, both Horse and Foot. Our Horse advanced to their Faces, and we fired on each other; I being foremost after receiving their Fire, and finding the Horse behind me broken, I then rode in amongst them, and went out at a Side without any Wrong or Wound. I was pursued by severals, with whom I fought a good Space; sometimes they following me, and sometimes I following them. At length my Horse bogged, and the foremost of theirs, which was David Ramsay, one of my Acquaintance; we both being on Foot, fought it with small Swords without Advantage of one another; but at length closing, I was stricken down with Three on Horseback behind me, and received Three sore Wounds on the Head, and so falling he saved my Life, which I submitted to. They searched me, and carried me to their Rear, and laid me down, where I bled much, where were brought several of their Men sore wounded. They gave us all Testimony of brave resolute Men. What more of our Men were killed I did not see, nor know, but as they told me after the Field was theirs. I was brought toward Douglas. They used me civilly, and brought me Drink out of an House by the Way. At Douglas Janet Clellan was kind to me, and brought a Chirurgeon to me, who did but little to my Wounds, only stanch'd the Blood.

Next Morning I was brought to Lanerk, and brought before Dalziel, Lord Ross, and some others, who asked many Questions at me: But I not satisfying them with Answers, Dalziel did threaten to roast me; and carrying me to the Tolbooth, caused bind me most barbarously, and cast me down, where I lay till Saturday Morning, without any, except Soldiers, admitted to speak to me, or look my Wounds, or give me any Ease whatsoever. And next Morning they brought me and John Pollock, and other Two of us, near Two Miles on Foot, I being without Shoes, where that Party, which had broken us at first, received us. They were commanded by Earlsball. We were horsed, civilly used by them on the Way, and brought to Edinburgh, about Four in the Afternoon, and carried about the North Side of the Town, to the Foot of the Canongate, where the Town Magistrates were who received us; and setting me on an Horse with my Face backward, and the other Three bound on a Goad of Iron, and Mr. Cameron's Head carried on an Halbert before me, and another Head in a Sack, which I knew not, on a Lad's Back; and so we were carried up the Street to the Parliament-clofs, where I was taken down, and the rest loosed.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith: Our Lyon King at Arms, his Brethren, Heralds, Macers To of Our Privy Council, Pursevants, or Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. Forasmuch as, since the extraordinary Mercy of God in Our wonderful Restauration, We have taken all Care to preserve Our Subjects in Peace, and the Protestant Religion in its Purity, by such wholsom Laws, as at the Desire, and with the Consent of Our Parliaments have been enacted; yet such hath been the impious and unwearied Attempts of a schismatical and ungovernable Party of Our undutiful Subjects, to disturb the former, and to overturn the latter, that they have often engaged themselves in open Insurrections, and avowed Rebellions, against Us and Our Authority, pretending to found these their Rebellions upon their treasonable Covenants; and particularly, after the horrid and cruel Murder of the late Archbishop of St. Andrews, a violent and execrable Rebellion was commenced in the Year 1679. which was declared, by them who raised it, to be undertaken and carried on, for promoting the Ends of their seditious Covenants. After the suppressing of the which Rebellion, by the Blessing of God upon Our Arms, such was Our princely Clemency, as by solemn Acts of Grace, not only to pardon and indemnify the guilty, but even to indulge them to keep House-conventicles, upon the easy Terms and Conditions contained in Our Royal Proclamation, of the Date, at Whitehall the 29 of June 1679. whereby We might reasonably have expected, that their Minds being eased, they might have been brought, if not to a regular and dutiful Obedience to Our Laws, yet to a quiet and peaceable Submission to Our Government: Notwithstanding whereof, and of Our gracious Indemnities, Favours and Indulgences, which have been as oft renewed, as their Insolencies, Murders and Treasons have been repeated, such hath been the Perverseness of some turbulent and sanatical Persons, that many of them continue and persist, according to their old dangerous Principles, not only to frequent seditious Field-conventicles, which, as Our Laws have declared, so in Experience have they been found to be the Rendezvous of Rebellion, (their Insurrections against Us and Our Authority in the Years 1666 and 1679. having been Nothing else but so many running and continued Field-conventicles) but also having, together with the Fear of God, shaken off the Sense of their Allegiance unto Us, and the Reverence and Regard they owe to Our Laws and Government, have entred into an execrable Plot and Conspiracy, to murder Our Royal Person, Our dear and only Brother, with Our chief Ministers of State, Our Privy Counsellors, and Bishops, and all such as are employed in any Trust and Authority under Us, to subvert Our Monarchy and Government, to destroy this Protestant Church with its Officers and Ministers, to introduce a new Model of civil and ecclesiastick Government, and to alter and innovate the fundamental Laws of this Our ancient Kingdom, being prepared and instructed to this hellish Conspiracy, by these treasonable Pamphlets, intituled, Nephthali, Jus populi, The apologetick Narration, &c. whereby they have been taught to take up Arms against Us, as being loosed from their Allegiance, and empowered by the mistaken Example of Phinehas, to kill all such as differed from them, and opposed their Covenants, and thereby allowing, not only open Rebellions, but (which is more terrible) even private Murders and Assassinations; and upon which, they have proceeded to wound, rob, and assassinate Our orthodox and Protestant Ministers, merely for preaching Protestant and loyal Doctrine, and in cold Blood (with a Cruelty exceeding that of Heathens) to murder the late venerable Primate of that Our Kingdom, as also Our Soldiers for levying the Supply granted by Law unto Us; of which hellish Plot and Conspiracy We have sufficient and convincing Evidence, particularly from their prodigious and treasonable Covenant, found with Mr. Donald Cargil (one of their most seditious Preachers) on the Third of June last; wherein they declare Us an Usurper, and the Devil's Vicegerent, and that the Laws and Acts of Our Parliaments were Invasions and Inroachments upon Jesus Christ, and that they would set up new Rulers, to govern by the

the judicial Law of Moses, from their treasonable Declaration affixed upon the Market-cross, and other Places of Our Burgh of Sanquhar, on the 22 of June last, wherein they disown Us to be their King, and calling themselves The Representatives of the true Presbyterian and covenanted People of Scotland, declare an open War against Us, and all Our loyal and dutiful Subjects, from a most treasonable Bond and Combination, found among the Papers of that arch Traitor, Mr. Richard Cameron, at his Death, at the Fight at Airs-moss; wherein they declare Us an Usurper, and themselves loosed from their Allegiance unto Us, because We will not promote the Ends of their seditious Covenants; which seditious Bond is signed by Thomas Douglas, pretended Minister of the Gospel, Cameron Brother to the said Mr. Richard, John Vallange, Daniel Macmurel, Thomas Campbe, John Moodie, Patrick Gamil, James Stuart, and many others their Accomplices; and by their unexampled and sacrilegious Excommunicating of Us, Our dearest Brother, and Our chief Ministers and Officers, by the said Mr. Donald Cargil, at a numerous Field-conventicle at the Torwood in Stirling-shire, in the Month of October. Which impious Mock-sentence of Excommunication they caused affix upon some publick Places in Our City of Edinburgh, and which is clearly proven by the Depositions of many of their Associates, and the judicial Confessions of some of their Ringleaders, before Our Privy Council, to have been pronounced by the said Cargil, Day and Place aforesaid; and by which Mock-excommunication, and the foresaid Declaration of War at Sanquhar, they endeavour to justify the Lawfulness of killing Us, and Our faithful Ministers and Subjects. The Originals of all which Papers herein mentioned ly in the Hands of the Clerks of Our Privy Council, and Justice-court, to be forthcoming, for the satisfying of all Our good Subjects, concerning the Truth of the Premises. Moreover, the Truth and Reality of this cruel, bloody, treasonable and horrid Plot and Conspiracy, is further evident, by the Declaration, and free Confession of James Skene Brother to the late Laird of Skene, Archibald Stuart in Borrowstounness, John Potter late Servant to the Lord Cardross, who, openly, and in the Face of Our Privy Council, have avowed and declared their owning of, and Adherence unto the treasonable Covenant aforesaid, found with Mr. Donald Cargil, that credible Declaration at Sanquhar, and Bond of Combination aforesaid, (which Bond of Combination hath been owned by the said John Potter, in presence of Our Privy Council, and his Subscription subjoyned to it) and that treasonable and impious Excommunication at Torwood, and, with bare Faces, assert the Lawfulness of killing Us their Sovereign, Our dear and only Brother, Our Ministers, Bishops and Judges; and that it is their Duty to kill Us and them, according as they shall have Power and Opportunity; and who seemed to have met together, in Our City of Edinburgh, on Thursday the 11 of this instant November, to consult with Mr. Donald Cargil, the best Methods for putting the said abominable and hellish Plot in Execution. Therefore, and to prevent the imminent Danger, to which Our Royal Person, Our dear and only Brother, Our Government, Ministers, and Laws, the Church and Protestant Religion are exposed, by the bold and incessant Attempts, and the bloody Artifices and Contrivances of these villainous and fanatical Conspirators, do hereby, with Advice of Our Privy Council, declare all these forenamed Conspirators and Plotters, to be open and notorious Traitors, and Rebels against Us and Our Authority, they having been in Arms against Us, for which they were declared Traitors, by Our Proclamation, dated the last of June, 1680. empowering and requiring all Our good Subjects to treat them as such. And We do hereby require and command all Our loving Subjects, as they will be answerable to Us, on their Allegiance, to do their utmost Diligence to discover and search out this fanatical and bloody Plot to the Bottom, and to seize and apprehend these Traitors, Conspirators and Plotters, and all their treacherous Associates and Accomplices, particularly such of them as are named and mentioned in this, and in Our foresaid Proclamation of the last of June, 1680. and to imprison them in the next convenient Prison, that they may be brought to condign and exemplary Punishment, according to the Prescript of Our Laws, and the Demerit of their prodigious and unparalleled Treasons. And We further require and command all Our Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Regalities, and Magistrates of Burghs, and other Ministers of the Law, where the said Traitors and Conspirators use to haunt or resort, to imploy their utmost Power and Vigilance, in their respective Jurisdictions, for searching, seizing and apprehending of them, that they may be presented to Justice: And if, in seizing and apprehending the foresaid Traitors and Conspirators, and their Associates and Accomplices, (they resisting, or refusing to be taken) any of Our said Magistrates, or others Our good Subjects, shall happen to kill or mutilate them, or any of them, We do hereby declare, that they, nor none assisting them, shall ever be called in question, or pursued civilly or criminally therefore, in Time coming; but that these Presents shall be as sufficient for their Exoneration, as if they had Our special Pardon and Remission; and that their doing thereof shall be reputed good and acceptable Service done to Us. And for the better Encouragement of such as shall apprehend and bring in the said Traitors and Conspirators, dead or alive, the Apprehender of Mr. Donald Cargil shall have, as a Reward, the Sum of Five Thousand Merks, and for Mr. Thomas Douglas, the Sum of Three Thousand Merks, and for each one of the rest of the said Conspirators and Plotters, the Sum of one Thousand Merks, instantly paid to them by the Lords Commissioners of Our Treasury. And We ordain these Presents to be printed, and published at the Market-cross of Edinburgh, and remanent head Burghs of this Our Kingdom: And also We ordain the several Sheriffs, and Stewarts, &c. to cause make Intimation hereof, at the several Parish Kirks of the Kingdom, after divine Worship, that none pretend Ignorance.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

WE being informed that Mr. Donald Cargil had, to the great Astonishment of all honest Men, proceeded to the Excommunication of your sacred Majesty, your Royal Brother. and some of your Servants, and that he had continued to preach that horrid Principle, of the Lawfulness of assassinating those that differed from them in their Covenant and Principles, did, after some Pains and Search, get James Skene, Archibald Stuart, Robert Hamilton, John Potter, and John Spreul brought in as Prisoners to us, and at our Bar Skene, Stuart and Potter owned the new Covenant and Declaration at Sanquhar, in which your Majesty is declared a Tyrant, and your People declared free from their Allegiance to you, and wherein it is declared a Duty upon all good Christians to dethrone and murder you, and such as serve under you: But because Stuart, Spreul and Hamilton refused to satisfy this your Judicature in discovering their Designs and Accomplices in Crimes of so high Importance, and which tended so much to the future Security of your sacred Person, your Royal Government, and the Preservation of your People, we did subject them to the Torture, as is usual to do here in the like Case, having first, in full Council, found, by their own Confessions, and by sufficient Proofs and Presumptions, that they were able to clear us in these weighty Questions that were to be put to them, and which Questions were, after serious Debate and Consideration, agreed to in full Council: And tho' some of them did most disingenuously conceal what was in their Power to have discovered, their Ministers having, for their own Security, taught them, that they would be damned if they discovered what concerned their Neighbours; yet Archibald Stuart, one of their Number, did freely discover their Design of killing all that were opposite to them, particularly the Judges and Bishops, and descended upon some particular Ministers and others. And we do very clearly find from their voluntary Confessions, and the Papers that we have intercepted, that those of their Principle would think it a great Duty to kill your Majesty, or any serving under you, and that they are but too much favoured by those in your other Kingdoms, who are Enemies to your sacred Person and Government, and to the just and lawful Descent of your Royal Family. And, from the whole Tract of this Affair, your Majesty may easily judge how just and necessary it was for us to endeavour to hinder the Growth of those fanatical Principles, which, tho' they seem at first to be the Sentiments of tender Consciences, yet are, in effect, but disguised Humour and Faction, tending necessarily to the Destruction of all human Society, as well as established Government. We have, for the Satisfaction of your Majesty's Subjects, emitted the Proclamation herewith sent, and what further Discoveries we can make, shall be transmitted to your Majesty, with all Care and Faithfulness, by

Your Majesty's most faithful, most humble,

and most obedient Subjects and Servants

Subscribed ut fuderunt, except his Royal Highness.

Council's Letter, Nov. 2. 1680. N<sup>o</sup>. LII.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

WE have good Reason to believe, that Your Majesty's just Commands shall never be obstructed by the Unwillingness, nor retarded by the Negligence of the Subjects of this your Majesty's ancient Kingdom, being fully convinced, that nothing is required of us, save that we may preserve our selves, by suitable and easie Means, against those formidable and imminent Dangers, which threaten us now from the same Principles, by which we were formerly ruined: So that the only Thing which is forced upon the worst of your Subjects, is, that they must unavoidably confess, that nothing can lessen their Happiness, except their being insensible of it, and unthankful for it. And your Majesty, by dispensing for our Protection, all the Revenue which is raised in this your Majesty's ancient Kingdom, lets us see, that all you crave of us, is, that we would be true to our own Interest, and all that you get by us, is the Care of governing us to our own Satisfaction. That profound Respect, and sincere Kindness, Sir, which we observe in your Majesty's Subjects here, to your Royal Brother the Duke of Albany and York, assure us, that we want nothing but Occasion to hazard for the Royal Family, these Lives and Fortunes which you have made so sweet and secure to us. And as our Esteem for his Royal Highness at his last being here, grew daily with his Stay, so our Expectations of Security and Satisfaction, return naturally with him. And therefore we are obliged with all Zeal and Sincerity to return your sacred Majesty, our most humble and hearty Thanks for securing the just and natural Descent of that Royal Family, which is the chief Glory and only Security of this Kingdom, upon which the least Invasion would be so great an Invitation to all Insolence and Arbitrariness in your Subjects, as could not but procure us a civil War in every Age; for Men of Parts and Interests being discontented or factious, would, by promoting colourable Titles and Pretences, make the Body of your People the Price of their Avarice, and the Prey of their Ambition, and rent not only these Kingdoms from one another, but amongst themselves: Nor can we see why every Man may not pretend to be King, when the lawful Successors are debarred, nor how we can be fixed in any Thing, when we loose this great Fundamental. And in the next Place, we do likewise return your Majesty most humble and hearty heartly Thanks for sending your Royal Brother to be an Example to, as well as a Witness of our Loyalty; and affording us in him, the renewed Occasion of letting the World see that no Humour nor Jealousies shall for the future divert that Dutifulness to the Royal Line, which our Predecessors have maintained for so many Ages. Nor doubt we very shortly to let your Majesty find what happy Effects his Stay here will produce for promoting your Service, and cementing our Differences; in all which his Royal Highness shall be most obsequiously assisted, by Edinburgh, Nov. 2. 1680.

May it please your Sacred Majesty,

and most obedient Subjects and Servants.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, King of Great Britain, France and Ireland, Defender of the Faith &c.
To Our Lyon King at Arms, and his Brethren, Heralds, Maces of Our Privy Council, Pursuivants, Messengers at Arms, Our Sheriffs in that Part, conjunctly and severally, specially constitute, Greeting. Forasmuch as Field-conventicles, which were in Our Laws, by the universal Consent of all the Representatives of this Our Kingdom, declared to be the Rendezvous of Rebellion, are now found, by the undeniable Experience of all sober Men, to have bred up the unwary Commons unto a most atheistical Giddiness, to the owning of those murdering Principles, which are a Reproach to the Protestant Religion, and inconsistent with the Security of every private Man, and to the contemning of their own Masters and Landlords: We therefore, with Advice of Our Privy Council, resolving to secure, not only Our Government, and such of Our Subjects as live peaceably under it, but even to restore these very Masters and Landlords to their just Rights over these their Tenants and Servants, which they so justly lost by suffering them to frequent Field-conventicles, in which they were so debauched in their Duty to them, do hereby command and ordain, that how soon soever any Field-conventicle, or other Conventicles, understood to be Field-conventicles by Construction of Law, shall be kept, the Heritor in whose Lands or House the same is kept, whether the Lands belong to them in Property or Common, if they be present, or their Bailies or Factors, if they be absent, or their Tutors or Curators, and their Bailies or Factors, if they be Minors, shall immediately advertise the Sheriff of the Shire, Lords of Regality, Stewart of the Stewartry, Bailie of Bailiary, and the Magistrates of the Burghs, within whose Jurisdiction the said Field-conventicle was kept, within three Days after the same is kept; certifying them, if they fail to give the said Advertisement, they shall be fined in the Fourth Part of their valued yearly Rent: Upon which Information, the said Sheriffs, and other Magistrates foresaid, shall be obliged, and are hereby commanded and required, to order the Heritors of the Parish to meet, and to take Trial who were at, or in Accession to the said Conventicle. And to the end they may be the better able to proceed in the said Trial, the said Heritors are hereby impowered to examine upon Oath such as they shall suspect, or who shall be best able to give Information therein, and to return to the Sheriff, or other Magistrates foresaid, the Trial so taken by them, and that with all possible Expedition; and which Trial, the said Sheriffs and Magistrates, or their Deputes, are hereby required immediately to cite before them those contained in the said Return, or any others whom they have reason to suspect to have been at the said Conventicles, and to fine such of them as compear, and amerciate such as are absent, as accords of the Law: Upon which Sentences Hornings and Captions being raised, under the Signet of Our Privy Council, by the said Sheriffs, and the other Officers foresaid, (to whom the Half of the said Fines and Amerciaments are, for their Pains and Expences, hereby declared to belong) the Heritors and Masters of the said Rebels, are hereby obliged to concur with the Sheriff or other Officers, their Deputes or others whom they shall name, to the poinding the said Rebels Goods, apprehending their Persons, and that under the Pain of being liable to the Fine and Penalties imposed upon the Delinquents. Likewise, the said Sheriffs and others foresaid, are hereby required to give an Account of their Diligence in the Premises, to Our Privy Council, upon the first Council of July and December yearly, under the Pains contained in the Eighteenth Act of the Third Session of Our Second Parliament; all which shall be without Prejudice to Us; and Our Officers of State, in Our Name, to raise Pursuits before the Lords of Our Privy Council against such who have been present at Field-conventicles (though without Arms) for an arbitrary Punishment, or to insist before Our Criminal Court, against such who have been thereat in Arms, for underlying the Crime of Treason, conform to the Fifth Act of the First Session of Our First Parliament, and Our Proclamation, dated the Thirteenth Day of May, One thousand six hundred seventy and nine Years. And to the effect Our Pleasure in the Premises may be made known, Our Will is, and We charge you strictly, and command, that incontinent, these Our Letters seen, ye pass to the Market-cross of Edinburgh, burgh, and Market-crosses of the Head Burghs of the several Shires within this Kingdom, and other Places needful, and there in Our Name and Authority, by open Proclamation, make Publication of the Premises, that none pretend Ignorance, according to Justice, as ye will answer to Us thereupon. The which to do, We commit to you conjunctly and severally, Our full Power, by thir Our Letters, delivering them by you duly executed, and indorsed again to the Bearer. And ordain these Presents to be printed.

Given under Our Signet at Edinburgh the Eighth Day of April, One thousand six hundred eighty and one, and of Our Reign the thirty third Year.

CHARLES, by the Grace of God, &c. Greeting. Forasmuch as almighty God, who since his wonderful restoring of Us to Our Royal Rights and Government, and Deliverance of this Our ancient Kingdom from the tyrannical Usurpation under which the late fatal Rebellion enslaved it, hath been mercifully pleased to preserve its Peace, and blest it with Plenty, doth now, by his Warnings and Judgments incumbent and impendent, manifestly discover his Anger and Displeasure against the grievous Sins thereof, committed by the Abuse of both, in permitting many who have departed from the Communion of this national Church, to give themselves over to embrace and believe sad, blasphemous, sanguinary and treasonable Delusions, to the great Scandal and Reproach of the Protestant Name and Religion, and inflicting a long scorching and threatening Drought, whereby the Fruits of the Ground, the necessary Provision for the Life of Man and Beast, are in Danger to be burnt up and consumed, the Lord, for the luxurious Abuse of our Plenty, having so long in his righteous Judgment bound up the Clouds, making the Heavens Brass and the Earth Iron, thereby threatening us with pale Famine: And now having called a Parliament to assemble at Edinburgh on the Twenty Eighth of July next, for consulting and establishing the civil and religious Interests of this Kingdom, and for suppressing, by good and wholsom Laws, such wicked Principles and Disorders, which tend to the Subversion of both; therefore We, out of Our religious Disposition, have thought fit, with Advice of Our Privy Council, by this Our Proclamation, to indict a general and publick Day of Fasting and Humiliation, that all Our loving Subjects may be moved heartily to turn speedily to God by a true Repentance, and to send up their fervent Prayers and Supplications for wise and pious Directions unto, and a Blessing upon the ensuing Parliament, for healing the Breaches, and pardoning the Sins of the Kingdom, especially the Contempt and Disobedience of the holy Gospel, the great Prevalency of Atheism, Error, Schism and Profaneness and Irreligion, together with the unthankful Abuse of Peace, with which God hath so long Time blessed Our Government; that by serious Mourning for, and sincere turning from them, the Lord may graciously pardon them, and open the Clouds for preserving the Fruits of the Ground for the Comfort of Man and Beast. Our Will is herefore, and We straitly command and charge, that the said Fast be religiously and solemnly kept throughout this Kingdom, by all Subjects and People within the same; requiring hereby the Archbishops and Bishops to be careful that the Fast be duly observed in their respective Dioceses, viz. the Archbishops of St. Andrews and Glasgow, the Bishops of Edinburgh, Dunkell, Dumblain and Brechin, to cause it to be intimated in the several Parish Churches within their Dioceses, upon Sunday the Twenty sixth Day of June instant, to be observed on Wednesday thereafter the Twenty ninth Day of the said Month; and the remanent Bishops whose Dioceses are more remote, to cause it be intimated on Sunday the Third Day of July next, and observed on Wednesday thereafter, the Sixth Day of the said Month. Which Intimation is to be made by the Ministers reading this our Royal Proclamation from the Pulpit, and in exhorting a serious and devout Performance of the Duties and Devotions becoming Fasting and Humiliation, as they tender the Favour of almighty God, the Safety and Honour of the Protestant Religion and established Government, and as they would avoid the Wrath and Indignation of God against this Kingdom; certifying all such as shall contemn such a religious and necessary Duty, they shall be proceeded against as Contemnners of Our Authority, as well as Neglecters of so religious a Duty.

THIS is the most joyful Day that ever I saw in my Pilgrimage on Earth; my Joy is now begun, which I see will never be interrupted. I see both my Interest and his Truth, and the Sureness of the one, and Preciousness of the other. It is near Thirty Years since he made it sure, and since that Time (tho' there has fallen out much Sin) yet I was never out of an Assurance of mine Interest, nor long out of Sight of his Presence; he has dandled me and kept me lively, and never left me behind, tho' I was oft-times turning back. O! he has shewed the wonderful Preciousness of his Grace, not only in the first receiving thereof, but in the the renewed and multiplied Pardons. I have been a Man of great Sins, but he has been a God of great Mercies. And now, through his Mercies, I have a Conscience as sound and quiet as if I had never sinned. It is long since I could have ventured on Eternity through God's Mercy and Christ's Merit, but Death remained somewhat terrible, and that now is taken away; and now Death is no more to me, but to cast my self into my Husband's Arms, and to lie down with him. And however it be with me at the last, tho' I should be strained by God, or interrupted by Men, yet all is sure and shall be well. I have followed Holiness, I have taught Truth, and I have been most in the main Things; not that I thought the Things concerning our Time little, but that I thought none could do any Thing to Purpose in God's great and publick Matters, till they were right in their Conditions. And, O that all had taken this Method, for then there had been fewer Apostacies. The Religion of the Land, and Zeal for the Land's Engagements are come to nowhere People meet with Persecution, and want Heart-renewation. My Soul trembles to think how little of Regeneration there is amongst the Ministers and Professors of Scotland. O! the Ministers of Scotland, how have they betrayed Christ's Interest, and beguiled Souls! They have not entered in themselves, and them that were entering in they hindered. They have sold the Things of Christ and Liberties of his Church, for a short and cursed Quiet to themselves, which now is near an End. And they are more one, and at Peace with God's Enemies after they have done all their Mischiefs, nor they were at first when they had put Hand to them; and I much fear, that tho' there were not one Minister on all the Earth, he will make no more use of them; but there will be a dreadful Judgment upon themselves, and a long Curse upon their Posterity.

As to our Professors, my Counsel to them is, That they would see well to their own Regeneration, so the most Part of them has that yet to do; and yet let never one think, that he is in the right Exercise of true Religion, that has not a Zeal to God's publick Glory. There is a small Remnant in Scotland that my Soul has had its greatest Comfort on Earth from. I wish your Increase in Holiness, Number, Love, Religion and Righteousness; and wait you, and cease to contend with these Men that are gone from us, for there is nothing that shall convince them but Judgment. Satisfy your Consciences, and go forward; for the nearer you are to God, and the farther from all others, whether stated Enemies, or lukewarm Ministers and Professors, it shall be the better. My preaching has occasioned Persecution, but the Want of it will (I fear) occasion worse. However I have preached the Truths of God to others, as it is written, I believed, and so I preached, and I have not an ill Conscience in preaching Truth, whatever has followed; and this Day I am to seal with my Blood all the Truths that ever I preached; and what is controverted of that which I have been professing, shall ere long be manifested by God's Judgments in the Consciences of Men. I had a sweet Calmness of Spirit, and great Submission as to my Taking, the Providence of God was so eminent in it; and I could not but think that God judged it necessary for his Glory to bring me to such an End, seeing he loosed me from such a Work. My Soul would be exceedingly troubled anent the Remnant, were it not that I think the Time will be short: Wherefore hold fast, for this is the Way that is now persecuted.

As to the Cause of my Suffering, the Main is, not acknowledging the present Authority as it is established in the Supremacy, and explanatory Act. This is the Magistracy that I have rejected, that was invested with Christ's Power, and seeing that Power taken from Christ, which is his Glory, made the Essential of the Crown, I thought this was as if I had seen one wearing my Husband's Garments, after he had killed him. And seeing it is made the Essential of the Crown, there is no Distinction we can make that can free the Conscience of the Acknowledger from being a Partaker of this sacrilegious robbing of God. And it is but to cheat our Consciences, to acknowledge the civil Power, for it is not civil Power only that is made of the Essence of his Crown, and seeing they are so express, we ought to be plain, for otherwise it is to deny our Testimony, and consent to his Robbery.

Don. Cargil.

Mr. James Boig his Testimony, in a Letter July 27. 1681. N<sup>o</sup>. LVI.

Dear Brother,

I Have not now Time to write that which I would; but, to satisfy your Desire, and the Desire of others who are concerned in the Cause and Work of God, that is now at this Time trampled upon, I have given out my Indictment to a Friend of yours, and now I shall give an Account of the Enemy's Prosecution thereof against us. My Indictment did run upon Three Heads. 1. That I had disowned the King's Authority. 2dly. That I said the Rising in Arms at Bothwell-bridge was lawful, and upon the Defence of Truth. 3dly. That I owned the Sanquhar Declaration in the whole Heads and Articles thereof. And having again owned this before the Justiciary and Assizers, I held my Peace and spake no more, because I saw what was spoken by others was not regarded either by our unjust Judges or mocking Auditors; all that our speaking did was the exposing of us to the Mockery of all present. But the Reasons that were given in thus for our Defence in the first Head, were, That we could not own the Authority as now presently established, unless we should also own the Supremacy which the King hath usurped over the Church. By our doing of this we should rob Christ of that which is his Right, and give that unto a Man which is due to no Mortal; the Reason is, because the Supremacy is declared in their Acts of Parliament, to be essential to the Crown; and that which is essential to any Thing, is the same with the Thing it self; so that in owning the Authority, we are of Necessity obliged to justify them in their Usurpation also. But there is another Argument which to me is valid, tho' I spake it not before them, and it does not a little trouble me that I have passed it. The Advocate in his Discourse to the Assizers, among other Things, said, That we were overturning these Acts and Laws which they (the Assizers) had consented to, and were owning. Now, I suppose, their Consent to the present Acts and Laws, was never formally required of them, but that which is taken for their Consent is their simple Silence, when these Acts were made made and published, and owning these Parliaments as their Representatives, so that I may clearly argue from this, that even in their own Sense, my owning of the present Authority now established as lawful, and the present Magistrates as my Magistrates, is a giving my Consent to the present Acts and Laws, and so consequently to the robbing Christ of that which is his Right. As to the Second, it being but one particular Fact deduced from that Principle of the Lawfulness of Self-defence, and this Principle being as positively asserted by all of us, I look upon the Principle to be as expressly sealed with our Blood, as that particular Fact of rising in Arms at Bothwell-bridge is. As to the Third, it being a Deed consequential from the first, I look upon them both to stand and fall together, and he that owneth the first, must of Necessity own the last also. And as to that of the declaring of War, I did always look upon it to be one and the same, tho' differently expressed, with that contained in the Paper found at the Ferry, and that the main Design of it, was to vindicate us before the World, in our repelling unjust Violence, and clearing us of these Aspersions that were cast upon us, viz. The holding as a Principle the Lawfulness of private Assassinations (which we disown) and murdering all those who are not of the same Judgment with us. These are the Truths which we are to seal with our Blood, to Morrow in the Afternoon at the Cross of Edinburgh. As to other particular Actions, we declined to answer positively to them, as that of the Bishop's Death; we told them, we could not be Judges of other Mens Actions. As to the Excommunication, because we declined them as not competent Judges to cognosce upon an Ecclesiastick Matter, they did not proceed upon it.

And now, dear Brother, you may see our Quarrel clearly stated, to be the same that Mr. James Guthrie laid down his Head for; beside whose mine and my other Two Friends Heads are to be set. There were many other Things past in private betwixt me and Mr. William Paterson, sometime my Regent, now Council-clerk, with some others who strongly assaulted me with their Snares; but now I hope I may say, that my Soul hath escaped like a Bird out of the Snare of the Fowler. And as to your second Desire of knowing how it went with my Soul; many and strong have been the Assaults of Satan since I came to Prison, but Glory to God who hath not been wanting to me in giving me Assistance, yea, many Times unsought, and he is yet continuing, and, I hope, shall do to the End, to carry me above the Fear of Death, so that I am in as sweet a Calm, as if I were going to be married to one dearly beloved. Alas, my cold Heart is not able to answer his burning Love! But what is wanting in me, is, and shall be made up in a Saviour, complete and well furnished in all Things, appointed of the Father for this end, to bring his straying Children to their own Home, whereof (I think I may adventure to say it) I am one, tho' feckless. Now I have no Time to enlarge, else I would give you a more particular Account of God's Goodness and Dealing with me; but let this suffice, that I am once fairly on the Way, and within the View of Emmanuel's Land, and in hopes to be received an Inhabitant there within the Space of 26 Hours at most. Farewel, all earthly Comforts, farewell, all worldly Vanities, farewell, all carnal Desires, welcome Cross, welcome Gallows, welcome Christ, welcome Heaven and everlasting Happiness, &c. I have no more spare Time. Grace, Mercy and Peace be with you. Amen.

Jam. Boig.

King's Letter to the Parliament, read July 28. 1681. N<sup>o</sup>. LVII.

CHARLES R.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

Our Inclination to embrace all Opportunities to express Our constant Care of, and Affection to Our ancient Kingdom, hath moved Us to call you together at this Time, to advise with Us, what may truly conduce to the Security and Interest thereof; and as We have ever judged Our own, and the Interests of Our Subjects to be inseparable, and such as would divide them, to be, in their Hearts, Enemies to both, (Experience having sufficiently evinced, that all Invasions upon, or Diminutions of the Rights and Prerogatives of Our Crown, prove fatal and destructive to the Security and Property of Our People, which can only thereby be protected,) so are they then best managed and secured, when provided for by unanimous Counsels and joynt Resolutions. And, as it is one of Our greatest Satisfactions, that We have been always careful of that Our ancient Kingdom, with a Tendernefs suitable to Our great Interest in it: So when We remember the firm and dutiful Constancy which it hath always paid to the Royal Line and Family, and that now it is your Interest, as well as Duty, to adhere unto it, with unshaken Loyalty, as much as ever, We cannot doubt of your ready and zealous Compliance at this Time, with what shall be proposed as fit for Our Service, which can never be divided from the Happiness of Our People.

And since some (corrupted with the rebellious Principles of the last Age, or the blind Zeal of this) have at first raised Schisms and Separation in the Church, and afterwards frequent Rebellions against Us, We cannot but expect, from your prudent Consultations, effectual and adequate Remedies for curing these violent Distempers at present, and preventing them for the future; and that you will not despise or connive at the smallest Appearances of these wicked and seditious Principles, which (how plausibly soever they may be disguised, under the old Pretences and fallacious Masks of Liberty and Religion, which are ever least minded by the most clamorous Pretenders to them) yet, in the Issue, lead to such monstrous Effects, and rebellious Extravagancies, as necessarily tend to the Dissolution of all Government and Order, and of which you cannot choose but be deeply sensible.

This being once effectually done, We may reasonably hope, that Our Government in Church and State, as by Law presently established, shall receive its due Reverence and Obedience; and that all Our good Subjects shall be preserved in Peace, Tanquillity and Happiness. For promoting these great Ends so necessary cessary to the securing the Protestant Religion, Our Authority and Government, and the common Interest of Our People, by your joynt Advice, who are so much concerned; and for enacting of such Laws, as Experience hath discovered to be wanting for Distribution of Justice in several Cases, which have emerged since Our last Parliament, We have called this. And as an eminent Expression of Our Favour to you, have named Our most dear, and most intirely beloved Brother, James Duke of Albany and York, &c. to be Our Commissioner therein, whom We have found so affectionate to you, and to whom you have testified so much Duty during his long Stay amongst you, which hath enabled him so well to understand the Affairs and Interest of that Our ancient Kingdom. And since his Interest is so inseparable from Ours, We shall not doubt of your ready and cheerful Concurrence, to render his Endeavours amongst you successful for securing Our Government, and your own Peace and Happiness. By doing whereof, you will answer the intire Confidence We have in your Prudence and Loyalty. And so We bid you heartily farewell.

Given at Our Court at Windsor-castle, the Twelfth Day of July, 1681. and of Our Reign the Thirty third Year.

By his Majesty's Command,

MURRAY.

Duke of York's Speech to the Parliament. N<sup>o</sup>. LVIII.

My Lords and Gentlemen,

AS I have had the Honour to serve his Majesty in other Capacities, so I esteem it a great Honour and Happiness that he hath been pleased to make choice of me to serve him, as his Commissioner, in this his ancient Kingdom; since it shews to all the World, the Goodness he hath for me, as well as the Trust and Confidence he hath in me; and puts me, not only in a Capacity of serving him, as becomes a dutiful and loyal Subject, but also gives me the Opportunity of letting you all see the real Concern I have for the Good of this Country, and my Readiness to serve it, and promote its true Interests.

I do not doubt but that this will be a happy Meeting, and end to the Satisfaction of his Majesty, and all his loyal Subjects, which I say with the greater Confidence, having now been so long amongst you, and found so great a Readiness in all of you, for the advancing of his Majesty's Service.

You have heard, in his Majesty's gracious Letter, the Reasons of his calling you together at this Time, and what he doth, and may expect from this his ancient Kingdom, of whose Loyalty and Affection to his Service, he doth in no Manner doubt.

He hath commanded me to assure you, that he will inviolably maintain and protect the Protestant Religion, as now established by Law in this his Kingdom; and that he will, upon the same Account, protect and maintain the Government of the Church by Archbishops and Bishops, and will take their Persons and all other their Concerns, into his Royal Care and Protection; and doth seriously recommend to you to fall upon effectual Courses for suppressing those seditious and rebellious Conventicles, from whence proceed all Disorder and Confusion, and these horrid and extravagant Doctrines, which are a Scandal to Christianity, and tend to the Subversion of all publick and private Interests.

I am also to declare to you, in his Majesty's Name, that it is, and was always his Intention, that Law should have its due Course, for the Security of his Subjects Properties and Rights; and that he will always discountenance all Courses contrary to, and inconsistent with the Laws of this Kingdom, none being so much concerned for their due Observance as himself.

And now he doth expect, you will not be short of the Loyalty of your Ancestors, in vigorously asserting and clearing his Royal Prerogative, and in declaring the Rights of his Crown in its natural and legal Course of Descent; that you will take Care to settle and provide such seasonable and necessary Supplies, as the Support and Interest of his Government call for and require.

And now I hope, that, as the Council hath already begun to do their Parts, to promote the Trade of this Kingdom, that you will also do yours, that it may flourish.

My Lords and Gentlemen, As the Inclination I had to serve and promote the Interest of this Kingdom, hath been the chief Inducement to his Majesty to give me this Opportunity to convince you of it; so you may be sure, I shall do what becomes me to satisfy you of the Truth of it; and I hope you will have that Consideration and Kindness for me, as to enable me to perform his Service.

Parliament's Letter to the King, August 1. 1681. N<sup>o</sup>. LIX.

May it please your sacred Majesty,

THe manifold sad Experiences of the fatal Mischiefs and Calamities which attend Rebellions, must needs, in due Proportion, dispose all your Majesty's Subjects to higher Measures of Loyalty, more particularly us in this your ancient Kingdom, being sensible, as we have a more special Interest in your Majesty's sacred Person and Family, so must we inevitably share the more deeply in all the Inconveniencies which may disturb disturb or subvert your Royal Government. And therefore, as, by our Allegiance, we own it to be our Duty to be obedient and loyal to your Majesty, and your lawful Heirs and Successors, so your Majesty's extraordinary Kindness to such as have continued in their Duty, and your wonderful Clemency by your repeated Indemnities to such as have fallen from it, cannot but kindle in us strong and ardent Desires to serve your Majesty, with all the Courage and Alacrity of which we are capable, and to let your other Kingdoms, and all the World see, that we esteem our Lives and Fortunes to be best employed in maintaining of the just Rights and Prerogatives of your Majesty's Crown and Monarchy, the native Succession whereof cannot be invaded, without utter Subversion of the fundamental Laws of this your Majesty's ancient Kingdom. And this our Loyalty we esteem our alone Security, to avoid these Confusions and Slavery, which distracted and ruined us in the last Age, and seemeth to threaten us so apparently in this.

Sir, Tho' some rebellious and deluded People have disturbed your Majesty's Government there, yet their Principles are so extravagant, and so few Persons of any Note or Quality are engaged with them, that we may justly hope their Crimes cannot be imputed to this Kingdom, whose Representatives, in this your Majesty's Parliament, will no less for their Vindication as to what is past, than for their own Security for the Time coming, cheerfully provide suitable and sufficient Remedies; all of us being very sensible, that these Distractions and Disorders would, in the Issue, tend to the Dissolution, not only of your Majesty's Government in the Church and State, as the same is by Law established, but even of all human Society.

It is a great Satisfaction to us, to find your Majesty so concerned for the Protestant Religion, not only in your gracious Letter to us, but in the whole Conduct of your Royal Government. And we shall, with all Christian Care and Duty, endeavour to confirm it, so as it may become a solid and pious Support to your Royal Family and Monarchy, and a sure Fence, in this disturbed and divided Church, against all Usurpations and Disorders of Popery and Fanaticism, that, for the future, the Pretence of its Insecurity may not be made (as formerly) an Engine for carrying on disloyal Designs and Practices.

We offer our most humble and hearty Thanks to your most sacred Majesty, for calling us together at this Time, to consult jointly the Interests of your Majesty's Government, and of your Subjects in this your ancient Kingdom, which we trust shall never be divided: And therefore, as the Prerogatives and just Rights of the Monarchy, are absolutely necessary for the Defence of our Properties and Liberties, so, in pursuance of our own Interest, and for further clearing of our Duty and Allegiance, by positive Laws, we shall not fail to declare our humble and hearty Acknowledgments of the just Rights and Prerogatives of your imperial Crown, in its just, native and lineal Course of Descent; and to secure the just Rights and Liberties of your Subjects, so as may fully demonstrate our unalterable Resolutions, never to depart from our Duty to your Royal Family, and your lawful Heirs and Successors, to whom we are tied by so many sacred Obligations.

We do also, with all humble Gratitude, acknowledge the Grace and Honour done to this Kingdom, in naming your Royal Brother to be your Majesty's high Commissioner in this present Parliament. And indeed the beholding a Son of our ancient Monarchs, under whom we and our Ancestors have been so long and so happily governed in this Character, doth vigorously awaken in us the Remembrance of our native Kindness and Obligations, as his just Temper and steady Equality in all our Concerns, cannot but extinguish in us all Fears and Jealousies of Severity or Partiality, his Interest being inseparable from your Majesty's; and he being well acquainted with all our Concerns, and so affectionate to, and careful of them, your Majesty may justly expect from a Parliament, under the Conduct of such a Commissioner, all that can be judged necessary for the Honour and Support of your Royal Government and Authority, and for securing the just Rights and Liberties of your Subjects, and that with all the Loyalty, Readiness and Sincerity which can be expressed by us.

At Edinburgh, the Thirteenth Day of August, One thousand Six hundred and Eighty one.

THe which Day, our Sovereign Lord, with Advice and Consent of the Estates of Parliament, ratifies and approves all and whatsoever Laws, Acts and Statutes, made by his Royal Grandfather and Father of blessed Memory, or made and past in any of his Majesty's former Parliaments, for settling and securing the Liberty and Freedom of the true Kirk of God, and the Protestant Religion presently professed within this Realm, and all Acts made against Popery; and ordains the same to stand in full Force and Effect, and to be put to Execution, according to the Tenor and Purport of these Acts, as if they were specially mentioned and set down herein.

THe Estates of Parliament, considering that the Kings of this Realm, deriving their Royal Power from God Almighty alone, do succeed lineally thereto, according to the known Degrees of Proximity in Blood, which cannot be interrupted, suspended, or diverted by any Act or Statute whatsoever, and that none can attempt to alter or divert the said Succession, without involving the Subjects of this Kingdom in Perjury and Rebellion, and without exposing them to all the fatal and dreadful Consequences of a civil War, do therefore, from a hearty and sincere Sense of their Duty, recognize, acknowledge and declare, that the Right to the imperial Crown of this Realm, is, by the inherent Right, and the Nature of the Monarchy, as well as by the fundamental and unalterable Laws of this Realm, transmitted and devolved by a lineal Succession, according to the Proximity of Blood; and that, upon the Death of the King, or Queen, who actually reigns, the Subjects of this Kingdom are bound, by Law, Duty and Allegiance, to obey the next immediate and lawful Heir, either male or female, upon whom the Right and Administration of the Government is immediately devolved; and that no Difference in Religion, nor no Law nor Act of Parliament made, or to be made, can alter or divert the Right of Succession and lineal Descent of the Crown to the nearest and lawful Heirs, according to the Degrees foresaid, nor can stop or hinder them in the full, free and actual Administration of the Government, according to the Laws of the Kingdom. Likeas, our sovereign Lord, with Advice and Consent of the said Estates of Parliament, does declare it is high Treason in any of the Subjects of this Kingdom, by writing, speaking, or any other Manner of Way to endeavour the Alteration, Suspension, or Diversion of the said Right of Succession, or the debarring the next lawful Successor from the immediate, actual, full and free Administration of the Government, conform to the Laws of the Kingdom; and that all such Attempts or Designs shall infer against them the Pain of Treason.

Act for securing the Peace of the Country, August 29. 1681. N<sup>o</sup>. LXII.

Our sovereign Lord, and the Estates of Parliament, do ratify and approve all Laws and Acts of Parliament, made for securing the Government of the Church, as it is now established by Law. And for the further Security of the Peace of Church and State, as it is now established, they do hereby statute and ordain, That where any Persons who are Tenants, as well in Burgh as Land, or Servants, being delated upon the Oath of Calumny of the Informer, shall be found guilty, or holden as confessed, before any competent Judicatory for Field-conventicles, or for resetting Preachers who are, or shall be intercommuned, or declared Fugitives, upon a Process intended against the said Tenants and Servants, within Three Months after committing of the said Crimes, that their Names, with their Sentence, be intimate, by the Judge who pronounced the same, under Form of Instrument, to the Master, if the Delinquent be a Servant, or to the Heritor and Landlord, in whose Land and Houses he lives, if he be a Tenant or Cottar; which Master or Heritor shall be obliged, within a Month after the said Intimation, either to pay the Delinquent's Fine, there being sufficient Goods to satisfy the same, by and attour a Year's Rent to the Master, or if he have not sufficient Goods, to put him and his Family out of his Land or House, if he be a Tenant or Cottar, and if a Servant, out of his Service, or present him to Justice; providing always that the Libel, whereupon the foresaid Sentence proceeded, be special as to a certain Place, where the Field-conventicle was kept, or thereabout, and also be special as to the Time, viz. a certain Day of such a Week, or one or other of the Days of that Week. And his Majesty, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, declares, that in this Case, it shall be lawful to Heritors, to put their Tenants out of their Lands, or out of their Houses possessed by them, at any Time of the Year, and that without any Warning or Process of removing, and that notwithstanding of any Tacks set to the Tenants for Years, or Terms to run, which, in this Case, are hereby declared to be void and null: And the Masters and Heritors, are hereby authorized and allowed to retain as much of the Goods and Gear belonging to the said Tenants, Cottars and Servants, as may satisfy and pay the last Year's Rent due by the Tenants, and relieve them of the said Fines. And his Majesty, with Consent foresaid, declares, That if any Man shall reset, or entertain any Servant, Tenant or Cottar, who is so put away, he shall be liable to pay Three Years Fee to the Master who did put him away, and Three Years Duty to the Heritor who put away his Tenant or Cottar, if the said Tenants or Cottars, so put away, be reset or harboured by any other Heritor, as said is, and shall likewise be liable in one Hundred Pounds Scots, to be paid to the King. It is also hereby statute and ordained, That the Fines imposed by former Laws upon Field-conventicles, shall be doubled, each Person being, by this Act, finable in twice as much as he was finable by the former Laws, except as to Burghesses of Burghs Royal, Regality and Barony, who, besides the incurring the same Fines for Field-conventicles, are, for the future, to lose their Burghships and Liberties, and to be banished from the Town where they lived. And to the end that all the Laws against Conventicles may be the better put to Execution, it is hereby declared, that it shall be lawful to his Majesty to nominate Sheriff-deputes, Justices of Peace, or other Commissioners for punishing Conventicles, and such as are guilty of irregular Marriages, Baptisms, and invading of Ministers.

THE which Day, our sovereign Lord, with his Estates of Parliament, considering, That albeit by many wholsom Laws made by his Royal Grandfather and Father of glorious Memory, and by himself, in this and his other Parliaments since his happy Restauration, the Protestant Religion is carefully asserted, established and secured against Popery and Fanaticism; yet the restless Adversaries of our Religion do not cease to propagate their Errors, and to seduce his Majesty's Subjects from their Duty to God, and Loyalty to his Vicegerent, and to overturn the established Religion, by introducing their Superstitions and Delusions into this Church and Kingdom: And knowing that nothing can more increase the Numbers and Confidence of Papists and schismatical Dissenters from the established Church, than the supine Neglect of putting in Execution the good Laws provided against them, together with their Hopes to insinuate themselves into Offices and Places of Trust and publick Employment. Therefore his Majesty, from his princely and pious Zeal to maintain and preserve the true Protestant Religion, contained in the Confession of Faith, recorded in the First Parliament of King James VI. which is founded on, and agreeable to the written Word of God, doth, with Advice and Consent of his Estates of Parliament, require and command all his Officers, Judges and Magistrates, to put the Laws made against Popery, and Papists, Priests, Jesuits, and all Persons of any other Order in the Popish Church, especially against Sayers and Hearers of Mass, Venders and Dispersers of forbidden Books, and Resettlers of Popish Priests, and excommunicate Papists; as also, against all fanatick Separatists from this national Church, against Preachers at House or Field-conventicles, and the Resettlers and Harbourers of Preachers who are intercommuned, against disorderly Baptisms and Marriages, and irregular Ordinations, and all other schismatical Disorders, to full and vigorous Execution, according to the Tenor of the respective Acts of Parliament thereanent provided. And that his Majesty's princely Care to have these Laws put in Execution, against those Enemies of the Protestant Religion, may the more clearly appear, he doth, with Advice and Consent foresaid, statute and ordain, That the Ministers of each Parish, give up, in October yearly to their respective Ordinaries, true and exact Lists of all Papists, and schismatical Withdrawers from the publick Worship in their respective Parishes; which Lists are to be subscribed by them, and that the Bishops give in a Double of the said Lists subscribed by them, to the respective Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Royalty and Regality, and Magistrates of Burghs, to the effect the said Judges may proceed against them according to Law: As also, the Sheriffs, and other Magistrates foresaid, are hereby ordained to give an Account to his Majesty's Privy Council in December yearly, of their Proceedings against those Papists, and fanatick Separatists, as they will be answerable at their highest Peril. And that the Diligences done by the Sheriffs, Bailies of Regalities, and other Magistrates foresaid, may be the better enquired into by the Council, the Bishops of the respective Dioceses are to send exact Doubles of the Lists of the Papists and Fanaticks to the Clerks of Privy Council, whereby the Diligences of the Sheriffs, and other Judges foresaid, may be comptrolled and examined. And to cut off all Hopes from Papists and Fanaticks, of their being employed in Offices and Places of publick Trust, it is hereby statute and ordained, that the following Oath shall be taken by all Persons in Offices and Places of publick Trust, Civil, Ecclesiastical and Military, especially by all Members of Parliament, and all Electors of Members of Parliament, all Privy Counsellors, Lords of Session, Members of the Exchequer, Lords of Justiciary, and all other Members of these Courts, all Officers of the Crown and State, all Archbishops and Bishops, and all Preachers and Ministers of the Gospel whatsoever, all Persons of this Kingdom, named, or to be named Commissioners for the Borders, all Members of the Commission for Church Affairs, all Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Royalities and Regalities, Justices of the Peace, Officers of the Mint, Commissars and their Deputies, their Clerks and Fiscals, all Advocates and Procurators before any of these Courts, all Writers to the Signet, all publick Notars, and other Persons employed in writing or agenting, the Lyon King at Arms, Heralds, Pursuivants, and Messengers at Arms, all Collectors, Sub-collectors and Farmers of his Majesty's Customs and Excise, all Magistrates, Deans of Gild, Counsellors, and Clerks of Burghs Royal and Regality, all Deacons of Trades, and Deacon-conveeners in the said Burghs, all Masters and Doctors in Universities, Colleges or Schools, all Chaplains in Families, Pedagogues to Children, and all Officers and Soldiers in Armies, Forts, or Militia, and all other Persons in publick Trust or Office within this Kingdom, who shall publickly swear and subscribe the said Oath, as follows, viz. The Archbishops, chief Commander of the Session, and all Members of the College of Justice, and others depending upon them, before the Session: The Lords of Justiciary, and those depending upon that Court, in the Justice Court: The Lords, and other Members of Exchequer, before the Exchequer: All Bishops, before the Archbishops: All the inferior Clergy, Commissars, Masters and Doctors of Universities and Schools, Chaplains and Pedagogues, before the Bishops of the respective Dioceses: Sheriffs, Stewarts, Bailies of Royalty and Regality, and those depending on these Jurisdictions, before these respective Courts: And Provosts, Bailies and others of the Burgh, before the Town Council: All Collectors and Farmers of the King's Customs and Excise, before the Exchequer: The Commissioners of the Borders, before the Privy Council: All Justices of Peace, before their Conveener: And the Officers of the Mint, before the General of the Mint: And the Officers of the Forces, before the Commander in Chief, and common Soldiers, before their respective Officers: The Lyon, before the Privy Council; and Heralds, Pursuivants and Messengers at Arms, before the Lyon. And his Majesty, with Consent of the Estates of Parliament, shall take and subscribe the following Oath, in one of the foresaid Offices, in manner before prescribed, betwixt and the first of January next, which is to be recorded in the Registers of the respective Courts, and Extracts thereof under the Clerk's Hands, to be reported to his Majesty's Privy Council, betwixt and the first of March next, One thousand six hundred eighty two, and thereafter in any other Courts, whereof they are Judges or Members, the first Time they shall sit, or exerce in any of these respective Courts: And ordains, that all who shall hereafter be promoted to, or employed in any of the foresaid Offices, Trusts or Employments, shall at their Entry into, and before their exercising thereof, take and subscribe the said Oath, in Manner foresaid, to be recorded in the Registers of the respective Courts, and reported reported to his Majesty's Privy Council, within the Space of forty Days after their taking the same. And if any shall presume to exercise any of the said Offices or Employments, or any publick Office or Trust within this Kingdom ( the King's lawful Brothers and Sons only excepted ) until they take the Oath foresaid, and subscribe it, to be recorded in the Registers of the respective Courts, they shall be declared incapable of all publick Trust thereafter, and be further punished with the Loss of their Moveables and Liferent-estate, the one Half whereof to be given to the Informer, and the other Half to belong to his Majesty. And his Majesty, with Advice foresaid, recommends to his Privy Council to see this Act put to due and vigorous Execution.

WE do not hereby swear to all the particular Assertions and Expressions of the Confession of Faith mentioned in the Test, but only to the uniform Doctrine of the reformed Churches contained therein.

2. We do not hereby prejudice the Church's Right to, and Power of making any Alteration in the said Confession, as to the Ambiguity and obscure Expressions thereof, or of making a more unexceptionable Frame.

3. When we swear that the King is supreme Governor over all Persons, and in all Causes, as well Ecclesiastick as Civil, and when we swear to assert and defend all his Majesty's Rights and Prerogatives, this is reserving always the intrinsic unalterable Power of the Church immediately derived from Jesus Christ, to wit, the Power of the Keys, consisting in the preaching of the Word, Administration of the Sacraments, ordaining of Pastors, Exercise of Discipline, and holding of such Assemblies as are necessary for Preservation of Peace and Unity, Truth and Purity in the Church; and withal, we do hereby think, that the King has a Power to alter the Government of the Church at his Pleasure.

4. When we swear that it is unlawful for Subjects to meet or convene, to treat or consult, &c. about Matters of State civil or ecclesiastick, this is excepting Meetings for Ordination, publick Worship and Discipline, and such Meetings as are necessary for the Conservation of the Church, and true Protestant Religion.

5. When we swear there is no Obligation on us, &c. to endeavour any Change or Alteration in Government either in Church or State, we mean by Arms, or any seditious Way.

6. When we swear that we take the Test in the plain and genuin Sense of the Words, &c. we understand it only in so far as it does not contradict these Exceptions.
